Mr. HALE. I am sorry to interfere with so interesting a debate, but I must remind the Senate that the appropriation bills ought to be passed as soon as possible, and if this question is likely to lead to much more debate, no matter how interesting or how lurid that debate may be, I must move to take up the naval appropriation bill.

Mr. TELLER. I shall not object to the naval appropriation bill being taken up now.

Mr. HALE. On that suggestion of the Senator that this debate is likely to consume more time, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

Mr. TELLER. I take the floor on the resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10556), laying aside the pending resolution.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills, and agreed to the same:

A bill (H. R. 1426) supplementary to the act of July 1, 1862, entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," and also of the act of July 2, 1864, and other acts amendatory of said first-named act; and

A bill (H. R. 10573) to provide for one additional associate justice of the supreme court of Dakota, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 10128) to authorize the construction and maintenance of a railroad bridge by the Birmingham, Atlantic and Air-Line Railroad and Banking and Navigation Company across the Oconee River, in Laurens County, State of Georgia;

A bill (H. R. 7438) granting to the Aberdeen, Bismarck and Northwestern Railway Company the right to construct and maintain a bridge across the Missouri River, near Winona, Emmons County, Dakota;

A bill (H. R. 7899) authorizing the construction of a bridge over the Tennessee River at or near Lamb's Ferry, Alabama, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 3070) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, in Montana;

A bill (H. R. 5095) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Ocmulgee River, in the State of Georgia, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 3523) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, and to establish it as a post-road;

A bill (H. R. 6699) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at Forest City, Dak., by the Forest City and Watertown Railway Company;

A bill (H. R. 8355) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the St. John's River between De Land Landing and Lake Monroe, in the State of Florida;

A bill (H. R. 9079) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Tennessee River at or near Knoxville, Tenn.;

A bill (H. R. 9086) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Oostenaula River at or near Rome, Ga.;

A bill (H. R. 9420) authorizing the Houston, Central Arkansas and Northern Railway Company to construct and maintain bridges across Bayou Bartholomew, and across Ouachita, Red, Little, and Sabine Rivers, in Louisiana;

A bill (H. R. 10524) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Chattahoochee River, in the State of Georgia;

A bill (H. R. 10538) to authorize the construction of bridges across the Flint and Chattahoochee Rivers;

A bill (H. R. 8353) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Hillsborough River at a point in the town of New Smyrna, in the county of Volusia and State of Florida;

A bill (H. R. 2625) authorizing the erection of a bridge across the Missouri River at Ponca, Nebr.;

A bill (H. R. 2170) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Burlington, in the State of Iowa; and

A bill (H. R. 10527) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Alabama River.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills, with amendments in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (S. 2252) to incorporate the Georgetown Barge, Dock, Elevator, and Railway Company; and

A bill (S. 2742) to incorporate the Brightwood Railway Company of the District of Columbia.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 1051) to amend the act giving the approval and sanction of Congress to the route and termini of the Anacostia and Potomac River Railroad in the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 1099) for the relief of the Church of the Ascension, in the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 1612) to provide for the closing of parts of two alleys in square 132, in the city of Washington, D. C., and for the relief of Charles Early and Corbin Warwick;

A bill (S. 1727) to grant to the trustees of the German Lutheran Trinity Congregation of Washington, D. C., the right to sell a portion of their cemetery lands;

A bill (S. 2307) to correct the records of the District of Columbia relative to certain real estate therein;

A bill (S. 2493) to perfect the quarantine service of the United States; and

A bill (S. 3303) amendatory of "An act relating to postal crimes, and amendatory of the statutes therein mentioned," approved June 18, 1888.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 7083) to regulate the powers and duties of the board of trustees of the Industrial Home School of the District of Columbia in respect to infant wards and scholars, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7785) for the relief of attendants on the insane at Hospital for the Insane in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 7864) to reappropriate to pay for alley condemned in square numbered 493;

A bill (H. R. 8272) to provide for the payment of F. H. Bates as military instructor at the Washington High School, District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 9769) to punish public drunkenness in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 9977) to authorize the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company to extend a side-track into square No. 1025 in the city of Washington;

A bill (H. R. 10758) to amend the charter of the Capitol, North O Street and South Washington Railway Company; and

A bill (H. R. 8990) to provide for the adjudication and payment of claims arising from Indian depredations.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 692) granting an increase of pension to Enoch G. Adams;

A bill (S. 749) granting a pension to Louise Paul;

A bill (S. 842) granting a pension to Julia A. Rhoads;

A bill (S. 896) for the relief of Mrs. Louise Silvers;

A bill (S. 1110) granting a pension to Mrs. Fredericka Hauser;

A bill (S. 1629) granting a pension to Erastus B. Burnham;

A bill (S. 1716) granting a pension to Mary L. Williams;

A bill (S. 1867) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary L. Ristine;

A bill (S. 1884) granting a pension to Louise Provost;

A bill (S. 2105) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Verbisky; and

A bill (S. 2652) granting a pension to Gustave E. Peters.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 10556) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations will be acted on as they are reached in the reading of the bill.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill. The first amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "Pay, miscellaneous," on page 2, line 31, after "courts," to strike out "martials" and insert "martial;" and in the same line, after the words "prisoners and," to strike out "prison" and insert "prisons;" so as to read:

Expenses of courts-martial, prisoners and prisons, and courts of inquiry, boards of investigation, examining boards, with clerks' and witnesses' fees, and traveling expenses and costs, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to line 93.

Mr. HALE. In line 89, I move to strike out the words "for training naval officers," before "at;" so as to make the clause read:

Training station, Coasters' Harbor Island, Rhode Island: For repairs and improvements on buildings at Coasters' Harbor Island; heating, lighting, and furniture for same; books and stationery; freight and other contingent expenses; purchase of feed and maintenance of horses and mail-wagons, and attendance on same, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. And at the end of the paragraph I offer the following amendment in the form of a proviso, to come in after "dollars" in line 93.

Provided, That the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to consolidate and place under one command the torpedo station and the Naval War College at Newport, R. I.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the appropriations for "civil establishment, Bureau of Navigation," on page 6, line 114, after the word "clerk," to strike out "(when required), three hundred" and insert "one thousand;" and in line 115, after the word "all," to strike out "nine thousand three hundred" and insert "ten thousand;" so as to make the clause read:

Training-station: One clerk, $1,000; in all, $10,000. And no other fund appropriated by this act shall be used in payment for such services.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "Bureau of Ordnance," on page 6, after line 133, to insert: "For torpedoes adapted to naval warfare and experiments with torpedoes, $100,000;" and in line 136, after the word "all," to strike out "two" and insert "three;" so as to make the clause read:

For torpedoes adapted to naval warfare and experiments with torpedoes, $100,000; in all, $353,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "Civil establishment, Bureau of Ordnance," under the head of "Torpedo Corps," on page 9, after line 185, to insert:

Quarters for surgeon, $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 189, under the head "Torpedo Corps," before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifty-seven" and insert "sixty-five;" so as to make the clause read:

For correcting the sanitary condition of the cottages used as quarters at the station, $5,000; in all, $65,700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting," on page 9, line 201, to increase the item for "equipment of vessels" from $600,000 to $650,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, to strike out the parenthetical marks before the word "and," in line 244, and after the word "services," in line 246.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Bureau of Yards and Docks," in the appropriations for "Public works.—Navy-yards and stations," in line 275, after the word "dollars," to insert "reconstructing building No. 7, partially destroyed by fire in January, 1888, $60,000;" and in line 278, before the word "thousand," to strike out "eighty-three" and insert "one hundred and forty-three;" so as to make the clause read:

Navy-yard, Brooklyn, N. Y.: Repairs to building on cob-dock now used as recreation hall by enlisted men, $5,000; boiler-shop and wing to machine-shop, $68,340.47; one building for quarters for civil engineer, $10,000; reconstructing building number 7, partially destroyed by fire in January, 1888, $60,000; in all, $143,340.47.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to strike out the clause from line 309 to 314, inclusive, on page 14, as follows:

For the expenses of a commission of three officers, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Navy, to report as to the most desirable location on or near the coast of the Gulf of Mexico for a navy-yard and docks for shipping and for the expenses of sounding and surveying and estimating expenses, $50,000.

Mr. PASCO. I should like to ask the Senator who has charge of this bill to state briefly the reasons for striking out this provision.

Mr. HALE. The Government already has a navy-yard at Pensacola, Fla. The committee was not prepared to agree to appropriate $50,000 to send out a commission to search for a site for another navy-yard in that vicinity, believing that it was better in any work which shall be done hereafter in fitting up or completing a navy-yard in the Gulf, at any rate from the information we have now, we had better utilize the yard that is there. Therefore in that conservative interest the committee struck out this appropriation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BERRY in the chair). The question is on the amendment proposed by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. CALL. I am very much gratified to hear the statement of the Senator from Maine. The appropriation by the House of $50,000 for a commission to look over the Gulf States to select a navy-yard in the waters of the Gulf, when already at Pensacola we have a navy-yard, is certainly a very unwise one. It has long been an established fact in the history of this country that there was but one harbor in the Gulf of Mexico, whether within our own dominions or outside of them, that was an appropriate place for a navy-yard for the repair and construction of ships, easy of access and egress, amply protected from storms, with fresh and salt water of any depth that may be desired for any ships now known to naval warfare or that in all probability will ever be known.

From the time of the Spanish occupation of the shores of the Gulf of Mexico to the present day, the ample capacity and the superior advantages of the harbor and bay of Pensacola have been recognized, and this recognition of its superior advantages has continued through the entire naval history of this country. Its geographical position towards the West Indies and the coasts of the Gulf of Mexico is superior to that of any other possible location, besides the natural advantages of a supply of water and an ample anchorage ground greater than is to be found anywhere else upon the southern coasts of the United States or of Central America.

In recent years the connection of the port of Pensacola by rail with the now rapidly being developed iron industries and steel manufactures of Alabama, with the ample supply of coal, point to the harbor of Pensacola as the proper place for the construction of ships of war necessary for the defense of this country or for its commercial relations with South America or the West Indies.

It may be safely asserted that in the present condition of the development of the steel and iron industries of Alabama, the port of Pensacola furnishes the best opportunity for the safe, efficient, and cheap construction of naval vessels to be found anywhere upon the Southern coast or the coast of the Gulf of Mexico belonging to the United States.

It is therefore entirely unnecessary that a commission should be appointed to select a site for a navy-yard in the presence of these established facts relative to the geopraphical position of the country, relative to the well-known character of the harbors upon the coast, and to the great development of the mining industries of Alabama, which are now in both iron and coal within a few hours' reach of the harbor of Pensacola; they present every facility that may be required for the repairing and construction of ships, and for a safe rendezvous for the ships necessary for the defense of the Gulf of Mexico and our Gulf coasts in time of war. With this magnificent Bay of Pensacola and its railroad connections with the interior there can be no question that the expenditure of money to search for another harbor for a naval station is an unwise expenditure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Committee on Appropriations.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 14, after line 314, to insert:

Adjustable stern-dock: For one adjustable stern-dock, to be constructed at such place as the Secretary of the Navy may determine, $30,000.

Mr. CALL. I should be glad if the Senator in charge of the bill would consent to change this amendment so as to make this appropriation available for the construction of a dock at Key West, designating that place.

This is recommended, I am sure, by the acting Secretary of the Navy, Commodore Harmony, and Admiral Luce, who, when he was in command of the West India squadron, was obliged to seek for repairs in some extreme southern point, and he found that Key West, as he reported to the Department and as he stated to me, was the only point at which the naval vessels and the commercial vessels of the United States could conveniently go for repairs in case of necessity, and in the present condition of that port there is not now, as there was not then, the proper conveniences and facilities for that purpose, thus necessitating a long and expensive voyage to some northern port.

There is now no advantage or means there by which these ships can be repaired, and they have to come either North or to the West Indies to some of the British ports there for this purpose. The location of Key West, it is apparent, very near the Island of Cuba, far to the south, and exactly in the line of all the vessels going to Europe or coming to New York, or Boston, or Baltimore, or Philadelphia, or anywhere upon the northern coast of the United States, is such as would render it very convenient to them in case of necessity to find these repairs at that place.

This small amount of money, I am informed by the Department, would be efficacious to render this necessary assistance and to save the long voyages which these vessels are now compelled to make.

For that reason I should prefer, if it is agreeable to the committee, inasmuch as these facts are entirely apparent, that Key West should be designated as the place for the expenditure of this money.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senate agree to the amendment proposed by the Committee on Appropriations?

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 14, line 325, at the end of the clause appropriating $50,000 "for continuing the erection of the new Naval Observatory and necessary buildings upon the site purchased under the act of Congress approved February 4, 1880," to add the following proviso:

Provided, That the work upon the domes, piers, transit-shutters, and floors of the observing-rooms, and the necessary elevators in the building, and the fittings of the library and of the temperature-room may be done by the Secretary of the Navy without contract, or in such manner as he shall deem most advantageous to the Government, but the total cost of said observatory, including the aforesaid items, shall not exceed the limit of $400,000 fixed by the act making appropriations for the naval service, approved March 3, 1887.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 15, line 337, before the word "thousand," to strike out "twelve" and insert "fifty-two;" so as to make the clause read:

Total public works under Navy Department, $1,352,156.47.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, being the bill (S. 12) to provide for the formation and admission into the Union of the state of Washington, and for other purposes.

Mr. HALE. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be laid aside informally.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection the unfinished business will be laid aside and the naval appropriation bill continued.

Mr. STEWART. That is, by unanimous consent.

Mr. HALE. Certainly.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 15, line 344, after the words "one clerk," to insert "to civil engineer;" so as to make the clause read:

Civil establishment, Bureau of Yards and Docks: Navy-yard, Portsmouth, N. H.: For one clerk to civil engineer, at $1,400; one mail messenger, at $900 per annum; one messenger, at $900 per annum; one foreman laborer, at $4 per diem; one janitor, $660; one pilot, at $3 per diem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 15, line 349, after the words "one clerk," to insert "to civil engineer;" so as to make the clause read:

Navy-yard, Boston, Mass.: For one clerk to civil engineer, at $1,400; one foreman-laborer, at $4 per diem; one messenger to commandant, at $1.75 per diem; one messenger, at $1.75 per diem; one mail-messenger, $900 per annum.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 15, line 355, after the words "one clerk," to insert "to civil engineer;" so as to make the clause read:

Navy-yard, Brooklyn, N. Y.: For one clerk to civil engineer, at $1,400; one writer, at $1,017.25; one foreman-laborer, at $4.50 per diem; one mail-messenger, at $600 per annum; one messenger to commandant, at $2.50 per diem; one messenger to captain, at $2.25 per diem; one draughtsman, at $5 per diem; one superintendent of teams or quarterman, at $4 per diem; one messenger to civil engineer, at $2 per diem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 16, line 366, after the words "one clerk," to insert "to civil engineer;" so as to make the clause read:

Navy-yard, League Island, Pennsylvania: One clerk to civil engineer, at $1,400; one messenger, at $1.75 per diem; one foreman-laborer, at $4 per diem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 16, line 371, after the words "one clerk," to insert "to civil engineer;" and in line 373, after the word "at," to strike out "$3.50" and insert "$4;" so as to make the clause read:

Navy-yard, Washington, D. C.: For one clerk to civil engineer, at $1,400; one messenger, at $1.75 per diem; one foreman-laborer, at $4 per diem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 16, line 375, after the words "one clerk," to insert "to civil engineer;" so as to make the clause read:

Navy-yard, Norfolk, Va.: For one clerk to civil engineer, at $1,400; one writer, at $1,017.25; one foreman-laborer, at $4 per diem; three messengers, at $2 per diem each; one pilot, at $2.25 per diem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 16, line 381, after the words "one clerk," to insert "to civil engineer;" so as to make the clause read:

Navy-yard, Pensacola, Fla.: For one clerk to civil engineer, at $1,200; one mail-messenger, at $600 per annum.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, line 384, after the words "one clerk," to insert "to civil engineer;" so as to make the clause read:

Navy-yard, Mare Island, California: For one clerk to civil engineer, at $1,400, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, line 396, after the words "forty-six thousand," to strike out "four hundred and thirty dollars and seventy-three" and insert "five hundred and eighty-seven dollars and twenty-three;" so as to make the clause read:

In all, $46,587.23.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "Naval Asylum, Philadelphia, Pa.," on page 17, line 403, before the word "hundred," to strike out "hour" and insert "four;" so as to read:

One steward, at $480.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 18, line 425, after the words "female employés," to strike out "seven" and insert "seventeen;" and in line 429, after the word "all," to strike out "seventy-two" and insert "eighty-two;" so as to make the clause read:

Transportation of indigent and destitute beneficiaries to the Naval Asylum, $500; erecting brick building for kitchen, laundry, and dormitories for female employés, $17,500; removing range and laundry machinery to same, $400; fitting up bath-rooms for beneficiaries, $800; support of beneficiaries, $46,100; in all, $82,367, which sum shall be paid out of the income from the naval pension fund.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Bureau of Medicine and Surgery," on page 20, after line 466, to insert:

For continuing the improvement of the naval-hospital park at Portsmouth, Va., $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, line 471, before the word "thousand," to strike out "forty-two" and insert "forty-seven;" so as to make the clause read:

For repairing granite sea-wall at naval hospital, Norfolk, Va., $20,000; in all $147,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Bureau of Provisions and Clothing," after the words "Provisions, Navy, Bureau of Provisions and Clothing," on page 20, line 474, to strike out:

For provisions and commutations of rations for 8,250 men and boys and 1,000 marines, 3,376,250 rations, at 30 cents each, and commutation of rations for 225 naval cadets and 712 officers on sea duty, 242,095 rations, at 30 cents each; in all, $965,000.

And to insert in lieu thereof:

For provisions for the seamen and marines, commuted rations for officers, naval cadets, seamen, and marines, and commuted rations stopped on account of sick in hospital and credited to the hospital fund, $965,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 23, line 550, before the word "clerk," to insert "receiving;" in the same line, after the words "one thousand," to strike out "two hundred;" and in line 552, after the word "shipping," to strike out "and receiving;" so as to make the clause read:

Navy-yard, Washington, D. C.: In general store-houses: One book-keeper, $1,200; one receiving clerk, $1,000; one bill clerk, $1,000; one shipping clerk, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, line 583, after the words "sixty-six thousand," to strike out "three" and insert "one;" so as to make the clause read:

In pay office: One writer, $1,017.25; in all, $66,125.53. And no other fund appropriated by this act shall be used in payment for such services.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, after line 586, to insert the heading:

Bureau of Construction and Repair.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, line 592, before the word "other," to strike out "the;" and in line 599, after the word "drawing-room," to strike out "seven hundred and seventy-five" and insert "eight hundred and sixty;" so as to read:

Bureau of Construction and Repair: Construction and repair of vessels: For preservation and completion of vessels on the stocks and in ordinary; purchase of materials and stores of all kinds; for steam-steerers, pneumatic steerers, steam-capstans, steam-windlasses, and other steam auxiliaries; labor in navy-yards and on foreign stations; purchase of machinery and tools for use in shops; wear, tear, and repair of vessels afloat, and for general care, increase, and protection of the Navy in the line of construction and repair; incidental expenses, such as advertising, freight, foreign postages, telegrams, photographing, books, plans, stationery, and instruments for drawing-room, $860,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Bureau of Steam Engineering," on page 27, line 649, after the word "launches," to strike out "three hundred and seventy" and insert "four hundred;" so as to make the clause read:

Steam-machinery: For completion, repairs, and preservation of machinery and boilers of naval vessels, including cost of new boilers, preservation of and small repairs to machinery and boilers in vessels in ordinary, receiving and training vessels, repair and care of machinery of yard tugs and launches, $400,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 654, after the words "two hundred and," to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "seventy-five;" so as to make the clause read:

For purchase, handling, and preservation of all materials and stores, purchase, fitting, repair, and preservation of machinery and tools in the navy-yard and stations, and running yard engines, $275,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 659, before the word "thousand," to strike out "five" and insert "eighty-five;" so as to read:

For incidental expenses for naval vessels, yards, and the bureau, such as foreign postages, telegrams, advertising, freight, photographing, books, stationery, and instruments, $10,000; in all, $685,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, after the word "dollars," at the end of line 674, to insert:

One assistant draughtsman, at $1,100.

So as to make the clause read:

Civil establishment, Bureau of Steam-Engineering: Navy-yard, Portsmouth, N. H.: For clerk to department, at $1,200; one assistant draughtsman, at $1,100; messenger, at $600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 29, line 686, after the word "Florida," to strike out "One" and insert "For writer, one;" so as to make the clause read:

Navy-yard, Pensacola, Fla.: For writer, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 29, line 691, after the word "all," to strike out "fifteen thousand nine hundred" and insert "seventeen thousand;" so as to make the clause read:

Navy-yard, Mare Island, California: For clerk to department, at $1,400; draughtsman, at $1,500; messenger, at $600; writer, at $1,000; in all, $17,000. And no other fund appropriated by this act shall be used in payment for such services.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Naval Academy," on page 31, line 745, after the word "per," to change the word "diam" to "diem."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Marine Corps," on page 34, line 827, after the words "one thousand," to strike out "five hundred and forty dollars and eighty cents" and insert "six hundred dollars;" so as to read:

In the office of the adjutant and inspector: One chief clerk, at $1,540.80; one clerk, at $1,496.52. In the office of the paymaster: One chief clerk, at $1,600; one clerk, at $1,496.52; one clerk, at $1,257.12.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 35, line 832, after the words "one thousand," to strike out "five hundred and forty dollars and eighty cents" and insert "six hundred dollars;" so as to read:

In the office of the Quartermaster: One chief clerk, at $1,600; one clerk, at $1,496.52; one clerk, at $1,257.12.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 35, line 838, after the words "one thousand," to strike out "two hundred and fifty-seven dollars and twelve cents" and insert "four hundred dollars;" so as to read:

In the office of the assistant quartermaster at Philadelphia, Pa.: One clerk, at $1,400; one messenger, at $1.75 per diem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 35, line 842, after the word "one," to insert "clerk, at one;" and in line 843, after the words "seventeen thousand," to strike out "$435" and insert "$696.28;" so as to read:

In the office of the assistant quartermaster, San Francisco, Cal.: One clerk, at $1,400; in all, $17,696.28.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 36, line 854, after the word "all," to insert "for pay of the Marine Corps;" and in line 855, after the word "thousand," to strike out "and twenty-one dollars" and insert "two hundred and eighty-two dollars and twenty-eight cents;" so as to make the clause read:

Commutation of quarters: For commutation of quarters for officers on duty without troops where there are no public quarters, $4,000; in all, for pay of the Marine Corps, $674,282.28.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the clause making appropriations for contingent expenses, Marine Corps, on page 39, line 932, before the word "classify," to strike out "of" and insert "or;" so as to read:

And for all emergencies and extraordinary expenses arising at home and abroad, but impossible to anticipate or classify.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 40, line 953, after the words "nine hundred and seventeen thousand," to strike out "one hundred and fifty-four dollars and fifty-seven" and insert "four hundred and fifteen dollars and eighty-five;" so as to read:

Total for the Marine Corps, $917,415.85.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Increase of the Navy," on page 40, line 966, after the word "dollars," to insert:

Also three gunboats, or cruisers, neither of which shall exceed 1,700 tons in displacement, nor $500,000 in cost, including any premium that may be paid for increased speed and excluding the cost of armament; said vessel to be built either wholly of steel or with steel frames.

And in line 971, after the words "steel frames," to strike out:

And one armored cruiser of about 7,500 tons displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament, not more than $3,500,000.

So as to read:

INCREASE OF THE NAVY.

Construction: That for the purpose of further increasing the naval establishment of the United States, the President is hereby authorized to have constructed, by contract, two steel cruisers of about 3,000 tons displacement each, at a cost, exclusive of armament, and excluding any premium that may be paid for increased speed, of not more than eleven hundred thousand dollars each; one steel cruiser of about 5,300 tons displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament, and excluding any premium that may be paid for increased speed, not more than eighteen hundred thousand dollars; also three gunboats, or cruisers, neither of which shall exceed 1,700 tons in displacement nor $500,000 in cost, including any premium that may be paid for increased speed and excluding the cost of armament; said vessels to be built either wholly of steel or with steel frames.

Mr. GRAY. In line 967, before the word "tons," I move to strike out "seventeen hundred" and to insert "two thousand;" so as to read:

Also, three gunboats, or cruisers, neither of which shall exceed 2,000 tons in displacement.

Mr. HALE. If that carries, the Senator, I take it, has in contemplation also increasing the maximum cost from $500,000 to some other sum. That would follow.

I wish to say for myself that I think the suggestion of the Senator from Delaware is a good one. I have given some attention to the subject of the construction of naval war-ships abroad during the last year, and it is a fact that fast vessels of a little less than 2,000 tons are now being constructed by foreign governments, especially by the French Government, that will command a speed of 19 knots an hour. They are some of the most valuable ships in the world.

The attention of the naval authorities abroad is being largely turned now to the construction of very fast cruising ships. The steps taken by us to pay premiums for increased speed have attracted great attention abroad, have stimulated foreign powers in that direction, and they are turning their artention now from the construction of great unwieldy armored ships, which are experimental in their kind, involving an immense expenditure with a doubtful result, to the construction of fast cruisers ranging from 1,500 tons up to as high as 5,000 tons.

That is the theory upon which the Committee on Appropriations has gone in this bill, and the Senator from Delaware is proceeding in his mind in the same direction. He has gone a little further and has, I think, struck a plan that is better than that of the committee. I will not say it is a different plan, but his suggestion to increase the size of these smaller ships is a good one. It is the same plan, but varying in detail.

The committee has gone upon the plan, not of involving us in any more costly experiments with great armored ships, but to do what the powers of the world who are interested in navies are doing now everywhere. We are building two costly armored ships. Nobody can tell what they will cost, and what is worse than that, nobody can tell what they will be worth when they are through. They are not being constructed on a basis of sufficient speed, and it is wholly experimental. But the suggestion of the Senator from Delaware I am for one willing to agree to. I think it is an improvement on the proposition of the committee.

Mr. BECK. Then the appropriation of $500,000 ought to be increased to $600,000 or $700,000.

Mr. HALE. I should say $700,000.

Mr. GRAY. I intend to follow my amendment, if it is agreed to, by a motion to substitute for the word "five" in line 968 the word "seven," so as to read "$700,000."

Mr. HALE. Let it be treated as one amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The print of the bill leaves the intention of the committee somewhat obscure, the part to be inserted appearing before the part to be stricken out. Is it the intention of the committee to report an amendment to strike out and insert, or to insert the part in italics as entirely independent matter?

Mr. HALE. The clause in italics is intended to be inserted in place of the words stricken out which follow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then the matter in italics should have been placed after the part proposed to be stricken out. It will be treated as one amendment.

Mr. HALE. The clerk of the committee, who deals a good deal with conference reports, had his attention called to the matter and stated that he put it in this way to avoid trouble.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The additional amendment of the Senator from Delaware to the amendment of the committee will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 968, before the word "hundred," it is proposed to strike out "five" and insert "seven;" so as to read:

Also three gunboats, or cruisers, neither of which shall exceed 2,000 tons in displacement nor $700,000 in cost.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will treat the propositions of the Senator from Delaware as one amendment, if there be no objection. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Delaware to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, in regard to the amendment of the committee I wish to say a single word.

I entirely agree with what has been said by the Senator from Maine, a member of the Naval Committee, in regard to the policy which should govern us in rebuilding or increasing the strength of our Navy. The amendment of the committee, it seems to me, is one which should commend itself to all who are in favor of an intelligent building up of our naval establishment.

These small cruisers will prove themselves, I think, most efficient schools for our officers and seamen, and will serve, with a moderate expenditure of money on the part of the Government, to keep our Navy, officers and seamen, afloat, and thus to maintain for both that school of seamanship which is so absolutely necessary to the efficiency of our Navy.

There is but one place in the world where practical seamanship can be acquired, and that is upon the ocean itself, battling with wind and wave. That school is, as I have said, a necessary one, in which all who belong to our Navy must graduate if we are to have an efficient personnel of the Navy.

These small vessels will also take the place of the old wooden vessels which are fast becoming useless by reason of age and need of repairs, and will serve at a comparatively small cost to represent our Navy upon the foreign stations where we must be represented. Their cost will be very small in comparison with what it would require to send one of the great armored cruisers abroad with a full complement of men and officers.

I think the amendment of the committee is exceedingly wise, building these serviceable and inexpensive cruisers instead of spending at once a sum so much larger for experiments which are at best of doubtful utility. These experiments are now being made by the great naval powers of the world, the benefit of which we are receiving, and we can well afford to wait awhile for the results.

In connection with the armored vessels provided for in the bill, I think the provision for these light cruisers will serve to keep our Navy afloat in time of peace and also for a very useful purpose in time of war, as commerce-destroyers if nothing else. This is an exceedingly wise provision and one that should receive the approval of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] to the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations to insert the matter in italics in place of what the committee propose to strike out. If there be no objection, the amendment of the Senator from Delaware will be agreed to, and the amendment of the committee as amended agreed to, and it will stand as a motion to strike out and insert, not as a motion to insert and strike out.

Mr. MORGAN. Do I understand that the action taken by the Senate is to strike out from line 971 to 974, inclusive?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes, beginning with the word "and," in line 971, and down to and including the word "dollars," in line 974, in the following words:

And one armored cruiser of about 7,500 tons displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament, not more than three millions and a half of dollars.

The Committee on Appropriations report to strike out this clause.

Mr. MORGAN. I am entirely willing that the Senate should adopt the provision for building of three additional light cruisers of 2,000 tons, as I believe it is now. I think that would be a very valuable addition to the navy; but I do not agree that we ought to strike out the armored ship. The other House have considered that subject very maturely. We have two armored ships building now, the Maine and the Texas, and we have to lay the foundation, and lay it pretty broadly, of a Navy we may call respectable, a Navy for the defense of our ports, our bays, and our harbors.

We can not defend our ports with the fast steel cruisers. These heavy armored ships would operate as a battery to retire before an enemy and draw him into narrow straits, into difficult ground. They have a very much more salutary operation in the defense of our large cities, I think frequently so at least, than even heavy shore batteries.

I think that when we are laying the foundations of our Navy we ought to have at least as many as three of these great armored ships. I know it is objected that we have not built any yet. Some Senators desire to wait to see whether we can build them or not.

I submit, if we expect to build these three light cruisers and to get 20 knots speed out of them, and if we expect to do it in American shops or American navy-yards, and with the assistance of American workmen, we can quite as easily venture to put upon the stocks the heavy armored ship which is provided for in the text of the bill as it came from the House.

We need not distrust our skill or our capacity in building these ships. We must learn how to do it at all events. We are learning how to do it. We know how to do it. There is no difficulty on that point, and it is not logical to say that we can build the three cruisers provided for in the early part of the bill, and the three additional cruisers of 2,000 tons each with a speed of 20 knots an hour, and that we can not build a heavy armored ship. We have money in the Treasury which can not be applied to any better purpose than to lay the foundations of a respectable American Navy.

I want a navy, Mr. President, not because I anticipate the coming of war, at least, not immediately, or anything like that, but I want it to give force and effect, moral force and moral effect, to the power of the American people among the nations of the earth. A nation without the capacity to equip itself with arms and with a navy, if it is a maritime power, is lying out of the use of some of the most essential advantages of its sovereignty. The absence of these elements is felt in every department of our Government, and especially is it felt in our foreign diplomacy and in our foreign relations.

Whoever has been upon the Committee on Foreign Relations (and I have had the honor of being there now for some years), must have felt very sensibly at almost every meeting of that committee that there were questions presented which we did not feel it was best to take hold of and to assert ourselves in the manner that is required of a government with the power that this one possesses, merely because in doing so we might expect some resistance, some controversy, and that it might plunge the country into some quick and immediate necessity for arming itself; that we were not provided with the facilities for doing so; that we did not have the workshops necessary to put up large ships and large guns; that we were not in a state of preparation to provide for the defense of our own country. We have felt that continually, and I regard it as a detraction from the moral power and force of the Government of the United States.

We know that within a very short time we shall not have a ship afloat of the old régime. They are all wearing out in the course of nature. They have outlived themselves. The term of their life as the term of life of a ship, as is well known, is expiring; and very soon, if we stand still, we shall have no navy at all. It is time we were making preparation to get a navy; and the more encouragement that is given on the part of Congress to the building of vessels of a proper character the sooner will our people come up and respond to our demands and provide all the necessary means of constructing a navy.

It happened in a committee-room the other day when I was in conversation with some of my friends who are present at this moment, that a subject was suggested. It was in reference to the steel-producing capacity of the State of California. I happened to be on that coast, a member of the Committee on War Ships and Ordnance, and having an opportunity to make some investigations, I did so. I came in contact with steel-producers and manufacturers and with the builders of steel ships, colliers, and other ships that run up and down the coast of the Pacific. They were building them at San Francisco. I went down and examined the works that they had. In the works there was found every modern improvement.

There was a very enlightened man, who was raised at a lathe or in a machine-shop in Baltimore, and who had gone over to the Pacific coast. The gentlemen who were the stockholders in that enterprise had sent him abroad through the world for the purpose of ascertaining the condition of the machinery which was employed in the construction of great ships and great guns in every nation of the earth. Being very active and a very enlightened man he gained all the information that was necessary. He came back, and they sold out their old plant, moved a little farther up the bay, and built an establishment there which utterly astonished me, both for its capacity and for the splendor of its arrangement. He was then about to launch a caisson, which he was building for the dock at Mare Island navy-yard, a very beautiful and splendid structure of California steel.

In conversation with him about his capacity for building on the coast I said to him, "Why do you not attempt to build some of the iron ships on this side of the continent?" "Why," he said, "we have had no opportunity to do it. If you make your provision of law and authorize the Secretary of the Navy to make contracts, we will inform him of our capacity, and doubtless we can get contracts for building ships." So when a naval appropriation bill came up I venturned to offer an amendment to it, which passed and was adopted by both Houses, requiring that the Secretary of the Navy, in his offer of biddings for ships, should offer to have at least one of them built at San Francisco. The result was that the contract was taken, and I believe a second one is now being constructed there. Within a few days past the Charleston has been launched from the ways in the Bay of San Francisco, and that is the first steel or iron ship for the navy that has ever been built on the Pacific coast.

Mr. President, that all resulted from the fact that there was a man of enterprise there and there were gentlemen of capital to back him. They had confidence in him, and he had confidence in his ability to build a ship. We have now started that enterprise on the Pacific coast, and after this time the Pacific coast will yield her quota of vessels to the American Navy just as rapidly as we desire that they shall be produced.

There was but one element in that, and that was the faith in the capacity of the people engaged in steel production and steel manufacture over there to build a great iron or steel ship—a cruiser. That man can take this ship and build it in the Bay of San Francisco. It is to be an armored ship. In order to prove the capacity of his works to do that particular thing, he rolled a billet of steel which was brought here and deposited in the rear of the Capitol. My recollection is that it was about 5 feet long, about 2 or 2½ feet in width, and it was probably 8 or 9 inches thick at the thickest part. It was a beautiful armor-plate, all that could be found requisite for the armor of any ship that we might desire to send to sea. That man can take the same rolling-mill in which he made that plate and produce the armor for a ship that will do credit to American genius and American enterprise.

How long are we going to be in building up the navy? How much time are we going to take? We shall launch the Maine and the Texas, and then we shall have to try them to see whether or not they will float, as some Senators say. That same question was asked about the monitors, whether they were going to float or not. They never failed to float. There is no difficulty about constructing ships to float. It is a matter of close mathematical calculation as to whether the displacement of a ship is sufficient to cause her to float in the sea.

I do not at all agree with that spirit or that feeling which discredits American enterprise and American genius in these matters. I want the Government to go to work and take hold of these subjects. We have the material and the men and the money with which to do the work, and there is no better use to which to apply them. Why we should begrudge the matter of expenditure I can not understand, unless it is based entirely upon a want of faith in American enterprise and American genius, for we certainly have the material and we have the money.

I therefore hope that the Senate will not strike out this provision put in the bill by the House. I am entirely willing to put in the three additional cruisers. I am glad the committee have put them in the bill, but I do not wish the Senate to disagree to the provision the House has made for the building of an armored ship.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I shall not take much time of the Senate in replying to the Senator from Alabama, because I have already touched upon the reasons which actuated the committee. I do not want the Senate to feel that the question of our building one more of these great, heavy, unwieldy armored ships raises the point whether we are willing to build up the navy. That question is not involved in the mere proposition whether we shall build this additional armored ship.

We are building up the navy. We are reconstructing it. We have already provided for the construction of twelve new first-class ships. We are completing the iron-clad monitors, and in this bill, as the Senate Committee on Appropriations proposes, we give two first-class steel cruisers of 3,000 tons, a great steel cruiser of 5,300 tons, and three fast cruisers of 2,000 tons. We have authorized the expenditure in the past and in this bill of more than $40,000,000 in building up a new Navy.

So what the Senator says generally about it being the policy of the country to build a new navy is what I agree to, and am as firmly in favor of as he is. It has been my fortune heretofore to report to the Senate every bill that has finally passed and become a law for the construction of new ships, and early and late, as some Senators may think "in and out of season," I have importuned the Senate in that direction.

But in this work of building up the navy, in which I am interested and to which I am glad to give time and labor, I am not in favor of putting any more money at present in the construction of these heavy armored unwieldly ships. We are, as I said a few minutes ago, building two of them now. They will cost $5,000,000 apiece, instead of two millions and a half, as was originally estimated. They are doubtful structures at the best. I do not want to see another of those ships built until we know what we shall get out of the experiment.

But I do want to go on from year to year as we have been doing, adding fast cruisers and large cruisers and steel cruisers that shall be available to us in war, and available as a deterrent to war, to prevent another power making war upon us, and getting for reasonable sums of money a good, strong, swift navy for the United States.

I am in favor of appropriating from year to year for the construction of the two experimental ships that we are now building, the Maine and the Texas; and no Senator here will fail to see his term expire, I do not care how long he is going to serve, before those ships are completed, and no Senator here can tell what they will be worth when they are turned out with all that cost of money.

England, France, Italy, and Russia have all embarked in those experiments, and we have been learning from their experiments and their failures in the past. As I have said, the attention, the ingenuity, and the wit of the nations which are constructing war-ships to-day are not turned in the direction of heavy-armored ships as much as to fast cruisers, building them with wonderful horse-power, ships of 3,000 tons displacement with 9,000 horse-power, that will run 20 knots an hour, that will take coal enough to run the circuit of the globe, like the Magician, which the English are now constructing; like the Cécile, which the French have constructed, somewhat larger; like the Korniloff, which Russia is now building. They have taken lessons from us in the matter of premiums for speed.

I should like the Senator from Alabama to feel that the committee here in recommending that we do not build another of these great heavy armored ships is not in any way discouraged with the work of building up the navy. We are doing it, as we believe, in the best fashion. I have myself no doubt whatever about it.

As to the armored ships, let us see what we get out of the two ships we are now building. Let the wit of the country, let the steel-producing power, let everything we have be turned in directions where we know that we have sure ground to go upon.

These are the reasons, Mr. President (and I shall not take up longer the time of the Senate because I am desirous of getting the bill through), why the committee has substituted the three new 2,000-ton ships for this great heavy structure that no man can tell about. I hope the Senate will sustain the committee, and that we shall go on with the work of building up the Navy.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I certainly would not vote to retain the provision inserted by the House of Representatives if it was to throw out the provision for the three new gun-boats of 2,000 tons, but I am quite willing, and I wish the committee might be willing, to agree with the Senator from Alabama.

I think, with due respect to the Senator from Maine, who has considered this subject very thoroughly without doubt, that he is mistaken in supposing that a heavily armored vessel of 7,500 tons is in any proper sense an experiment. Experiments were made by Great Britain and by other nations in armored ships, and they did not prove to be successful. One of them incontinently rolled over and went to the bottom. But they are not duplicating those experiments, but building vessels like the Rodney and others of her class, for those vessels are very heavily armored in the sense of parts of the vessel in such a manner as to protect the guns. They are in no danger whatever of the mishap that befell the Warrior.

I should not regard a 7,500-ton heavily armored ship, if designed with any reasonable regard to experiments that have been made elsewhere, as in any sense an experimental ship. I will hail all new cruisers with pleasure, for they are exceedingly valuable in a large part of the field of naval warfare. But the heavily armored vessels are indispensable in their way. It takes longer to build them, and I shall be glad after building these cruisers to begin more of the heavily armored vessels. The others against a third of the British navy, against its first-class ships, must run. That is the reason why they are valuable and why their 20 knots an hour are valuable. It is because they can run away from a fleet or a more dangerous vessel. They could not stand five minutes; they could not stand five discharges from first-class ships that are known and classed as first-class ships of the British navy.

They are not armored at all, or very slightly armored. Against mere artillery I do not think they would stand a fight with an English or French ship, that is to say, with any prospect of throwing off its shot. If it is your theory that the world is coming to comparatively thin armored fast cruisers, and is to fight each expecting to be pierced through and through, or make it a deadly duel, I should say it is not worth while to build any heavily armored vessels at all, provided other peoples will do the same; but against the first-class vessels of Europe we have not anything that will stand. These cruisers can only fight vessels of their own class or of smaller size of other classes. They are not for first-class work, and we must have some ultimately for first-class work for the defense of harbors where ships must be stationed that are not expected to run away.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to ask the Senator what would be the value of these cruisers if they are only made to run away?

Mr. HAWLEY. They will be very effective in destroying an enemy's commerce, and they will answer for that service called the police of the seas excellently well.

Mr. TELLER. They would not be as good as the fastest, then.

Mr. HAWLEY. They are not good fighting vessels against the first-class ships of the British navy, as the Senator would see in a very few moments if he took the book before me and read the figures of the heavy vessels of the British navy. They are valuable; I do not wish to spare a single one of them.

Mr. TELLER. I am quite well aware that we are in no condition to compete with Great Britain on the ocean with her ships. I am quite in favor myself of having not only this great ship built, but several more if we could build them now.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Connecticut has an entirely correct view, as I apprehend, of the use that is to be made of what we call a steel cruiser. A steel cruiser, to be of any use at all, must have heavy guns and very rapid movement, because in conflict with any foreign ship the steel sides of these cruisers afford almost as little resistance to a shot as the wooden sides of the vessels we have now in the navy. They are valuable, however, as commerce-destroyers. To us they are very valuable as carrying our flag rapidly in far distant ports of the earth, and keeping in check those minor governments which sometimes have to deal with our citizens and are not very particular about how they do it.

I spoke of the moral effect of having a navy. The opportunity of visiting the different coasts of the earth with our flag and for the protection of our people is something that is valuable to the individual liberties of every man who goes abroad to engage in commerce. But the nations of the earth spoken of by the Senator from Maine, who are now engaged in the building of rapid cruisers, and who are trying to get as much speed as they can get, vessels that will carry as much coal as they can, so that they can make long voyages, and when brought into action can move with great rapidity—those nations which do that have at home a reserve of the heavy iron-clad ships. France has such a reserve; England, Germany, and Italy, all of them have hovering about their own coasts and in easy command of their home government heavy-armored ships, which operate for the protection of the coast just if they were floating batteries.

They are not unwieldy ships. It is true that they very rarely exceed 17 knots of speed, but the speed is not so necessary in respect of those ships as it is in regard to the cruisers that go out as commerce destroyers.

I will take the harbor of New York as a place of defense. If you have very large, powerful guns you can protect them behind a sufficient quantity of earthwork to make them as secure as a gun can be made in an action. All you have there to do is to pile the sand and earth up in front of your guns until you get it so thick that the shots of the enemy can not go through. It is not necessary to build great fortresses in order to mount the very heavy guns and to make them entirely effectual.

The point in the coast defenses in order to get absolute security against an attack from heavy ironclads or ships bearing very heavy and powerful guns, is to have your artillery of sufficient strength to reach the enemy at the distance from which he will deliver his shot against your fortifications. That is the whole question. The balance of it is all done with the spade and the shovel, and it is done very rapidly, as we all know.

But suppose that we had fortifications now in front of Brooklyn or at any other place there for the defense of the approaches to the city of New York, and they were of the description that I speak of, and that we had guns of sufficient power and range to meet any enemy who might come along that coast for the purpose of bombarding the city.

Suppose we were provided with all of these necessary elements of the defense of the city of New York; and by its defense I do not mean merely to prevent its capture, but I mean also to prevent its being burned or destroyed by a fleet which might be besieging that city. Yet, if we have not heavy iron floating batteries or steel floating batteries in the waters through which New York is approached, we miss a very essential element of our defense, for the ships can change their position on the ocean and can run in rapidly by the shore batteries and get to the city or get to a place of security before any shore battery can sink them or even check them.

We tried that in the South, in the Bay of Mobile, when Admiral Farragut sailed by with a wooden fleet. He sailed by Fort Morgan and another fort just opposite, about 3 miles away, not heavily armored, however. There we had water batteries, and we had batteries en barbette. They were batteries whose guns were just as powerful as Admiral Farragut's batteries; but what did he do? He put his ships in line, put on all steam, and moved rapidly up the channel into the interior bay. Some of his ships were sunk; others were hurt, but Admiral Farragut got inside of the bay, and when in there he came nearer meeting a disaster from a little gunboat which had been built at Selma and which was an armored vessel than he did from the great fortress by which he sailed.

Unless we have some heavy floating battery with powerful guns to shift position and to defend the flank of these works and to meet the enemy in his attack, any admiral will pass in to the port of New York, I do not care how strong the batteries are, for it is a mere question of time when he is to get out of the range of our guns. He can move with such rapidity that you can not stop him.

I hold that it is an essential part of the defense of any of these great harbors of ours that we shall have heavy iron-clad ships. Great Britain, France, and Germany would not think a moment of putting their money in the building of steel cruisers, swift cruisers, to go out like a toy navy over the earth until they had first made the necessary preparation in building the best kind of armored iron-clad ships or steel-clad ships for the purpose of assisting in the defense of the great harbors of their own coasts.

If we had a ship of this kind at San Francisco, another at Boston, two of them at New York, another at the mouth of the Chesapeake, and another off the mouth of the Mississippi River, we should have the country protected, and the rest of the protection that is necessary could be done merely by making the guns and having them in position, and then with the spade and the pick throwing up defenses, the best that the art of man has ever devised as yet. No defense that engineering skill has ever yet conceived is equal to that of an earth or a sand battery.

With protection of that kind, and heavy guns, and then the armored ships to go upon the flank, you have all that you can do in the way of engineering or military skill for the defense of your harbors. But unless you do that, I do not care how strong you make your batteries or how big you make your guns, you will expose your cities to the rapid raids of foreign navies, which can come in and get behind your breastworks and cause your cities to be destroyed.

It is for this reason that I claim that "the great, unwieldly armored ship" the Senator from Maine speaks about is a ship that is absolutely necessary for our coast defenses. More than that, I do not see why our ships should be unwieldly. Before the war our skipper ships were not unwieldly. During our struggles here with each other, North and South, both sides had ships which were improvised for the occasion that were not unwieldly. Sir, there never was such a development of ship-building genius in the world as occurred during the period of the civil war in the United States. It proved the existence here of as much capacity on the part of our mechanics, our engineers, our shipbuilders of every class as has been developed in any era of history, I care not what era it may be, and more too. The fact is that we laid down there the predicate for all of the ironclads and all the swift-going navies of the world at this day. While we were engaged in our mutual struggles with each other, the light of genius flashed from our sabers and lit up the world with its glow.

I am not afraid to venture $2,500,000 or $5,000,000 to build a ship that may be necessary for the defense of Boston, or New York, or Delaware Bay, or of the Chesapeake, or San Francisco, or the mouth of the Mississippi River. I would feel much more comfortable if we had such an armament as that. I believe, sir, that the nations of the world would have more respect for us than they have now, for, after all, we ourselves are not angels, and we certainly have not angels to deal with; we have men of flesh and blood like ourselves, with the same passions and motives and emotions, and they will take advantage of occasion to do things in reference to our country which shame us oftentimes, because they think we can not afford to go to the expense of a sudden and immediate armament.

Let us broaden our conceptions of advantage to this country, Mr. President, and with a Treasury overflowing let us not fail to bestow money in the building of a navy in such a way as the careful committees of these two bodies may think is best to be done. The House committee have looked this matter through and through.

The Senate need not be astonished if I state, on my own responsibility—I do not state it on anybody else's—that the plans for building that ship are already arranged, and that it is believed a better plan was never devised by human ingenuity. I very much hope the Senate will not consent to take a different view of this question from the House, but will adhere to what the House has done.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, one word more. The Senator now is confusing the question of the defense of our harbors against the great ironclads of the world with the question whether we shall construct this particular kind of an ironclad. If we are going into that subject, and if we are to have ships that will carry guns that shall protect our harbors from the immense ironclads of other powers of the world, we must build a ship entirely different from the one provided for here. She stands where she is good for nothing, either in cruising or in defending harbors.

The great war ships that are iron clad from 11 to 18 inches in thickness and carry the enormous guns that modern gunnery has invented and placed upon the decks of those ships would treat this ship as but a toy, and she would be of no account against them. She stands in the middle where the experience of the world has shown that she is good for nothing. The Italians, the British, the French, and the Russians, who are spending millions of dollars, or who have in years past until they have been stopped largely, lately turning their plans to building cruisers, have been building ships that are twice as large as this ship, and there would be no doubt of the result of a conflict by this ship against them.

If we are to defend our harbors—and we ought to do so—the Navy Department ought to spend the money that was given years ago, $2,000,000, in the building of plain rams, which present such a surface that they can not be struck and sunk, and with a prow that, running into a ship, will sink her, no matter how heavily she is plated above the water line. That is what we should have for harbor defense. That is what the Navy Department ought to give us. They have $2,000,000 now to be expended in that way. I would rest more securely, to use the metaphor employed by the Senator from Alabama, if those rams were in construction, and if we could have one of them at New York, and others at Boston, Philadelphia, the Southern cities, and on the Pacific coast. But this ship would be a bagatelle compared with the great armored ships of the Old World. She stands, as I say, in the class that is not important either way, and yet she will sink $5,000,000.

The Senator says he is willing to try the experiment. We have tried it. We have two of them now being built. Nobody knows what will come of them.

The Senator says the plans of this ship have already been made, and she will be a fine ship. It may be that she will, but it is two years since we appropriated for the construction of the other ships we are now building, and they have barely the plans of those ships. It takes time.

These ironclads are intended for cruising, not for harbor defense. England employs them; so do Italy, France, Germany, and Russia. I had occasion to see some of the experiments last year, and no man ever saw so mortified and humiliated a people as the English people after their experiments with the ironclads. The naval officers declined to discuss the subject at dinner tables or anywhere else. They went out on a cruise in the channel and the vessels exploded, they ran into each other, they ran aground, they got tangled, torn up, and everybody was afraid of them. The British officers felt as Lord North did about his army, that if the enemy had half as many fears about them as he had the battle was won.

The two ironclads to-day upon which the Secretary of the Navy has been spending his wits and devices and those of experts and officers under him for the last two years, are at this very moment the nightmare of the Navy Department. They are the bug-bear of everybody who approaches them, and that will be the case until they are finished, a time that, as I have said, will be further off than the expiration of the term of any Senator who sits in this Chamber.

Some investigation possibly may have been made into this subject aside from the House committee, which the Senator from Alabama says has given so much time to the subject. It is not to be assumed that the members of the Senate committee have not given some attention to this subject.

I say that in the wise task we have embarked in for the last few years of building up the American Navy, the worst thing we can do for years to come is to spend any more money upon the class of ships that is covered by this provision, reaching no purpose that will be valuable, spending immense sums of money and getting nothing, it may be, out of it, while there is before us a field that other nations are employing, which we have tried, that will give us such a navy as we ought to have.

I would give $5,000,000 a year if a board of experts in the Navy, the best that can be chosen, would take up the subject of harbor defenses, which does not involve the question of ironclads but of rams and torpedoes and the things that defend harbors, and spend the money there. Then give us in addition fine cruisers which can go everywhere as fast as the fastest merchant-ships almost, and you will have such a condition of things that no power in the world will venture to assail us. You will have the cruisers to destroy the commercial marine, that will chase and catch nine out of ten of the merchant-ships that float the sea. You will have a system of harbor defenses that will protect life and limb and property, and we should be impregnable. Every dollar that we spend on the class of vessels that is struck out here by the Committee on Appropriations is money lost, reaching neither purpose.

So, in opposition to what the Senator from Alabama says, I venture to hope that the Senator will let us go on in accordance with the provisions of the bill as reported.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, when the naval appropriation bill was under discussion at the last session of the last Congress I ventured to make an effort to divert part of the appropriation which was incorporated in that bill for the building of just such a ship as is provided for here. I do not remember whether I advocated the building of two, but certainly of one.

I do not quite agree with the Senator from Maine in his statement of the present naval establishments of the great nations of the world. Unless I have been very much misinformed it is this class of vessels upon which they rely in case of a naval conflict on the high seas with other nations.

I did not understand my friend from Alabama to confine his observations to a mere question of harbor defense. He said very properly and very truly that vessels of this character would be very powerful and effective and useful in case of an attack upon any of the large cities on our coast, and I entirely agree with him in that view.

I do not understand, as I have said, from my knowledge and information upon the subject of the naval establishments of the great nations of the earth, that this class of vessels has been found to be useless. We recall the late conflict between the French and the Chinese, in which the French used their armored vessels to such an extent as to absolutely destroy the Chinese, and yet the Chinese, I believe, had some good naval vessels of their own.

I am quite willing, as far as my judgment extends, to permit the amendment made by the Senate committee, for the building of three gunboats or cruisers, to remain in the bill; but I submit that if we are going to build a navy worthy of the name we ought to have some ships upon which we can rely in a naval contest on the high seas.

The fast cruisers for which we have provided are very useful in their way. They can be used for the destruction of the commerce of a belligerent; but I submit to the Senator from Maine, and to the Senate of the United States, and to the Government of the United States, that that, it seems to me, is a very insignificant kind of guerrilla, bushwhacking warfare, which is unworthy of a great nation like this. In my opinion, not one of the ships that we have built, or which is being built, would be, I will not say useful, but effective in a naval fight upon the high seas with any foreign power in the world pretending to have a navy.

Mr. HALE. Let me ask the Senator if he has in his imagination built up a naval conflict at sea between two great fleets of ironclads? If that is what he is thinking of, and if he wants ships to figure in such a conflict, how long would such a ship as this float upon the water when brought into conflict with the great ships which have been built abroad, which are twice her size, the Italian, the Danish, the Russian, the English, and the French ships? She would be good for nothing against them. If we go into that field of constructing immense ironclads to get a fighting fleet we should have to spend $100,000,000, and such a vessel as this does not answer that purpose, either.

Mr. BUTLER. This clause of the bill provided for "one armored cruiser of about 7,500 tons displacement." I do not understand why the Secretary of the Navy has not absolute discretion to make that ship just as strong as he pleases. There is no restriction put upon him as to how much armor he shall put on it.

Mr. HALE. The Senator knows very well, of course, that the armament of a ship and the armor of a ship both depend largely upon the size of the ship.

Mr. BUTLER. Precisely; they must be regulated by the size.

Mr. HALE. A ship of 7,000 tons does not carry either such armament or such armor as a ship of 14,000 tons.

Mr. BUTLER. I understand that.

Mr. HALE. The Senator can not find that anywhere this year any power in the world is constructing such a ship as this. All have rejected them. They are either constructing immense ones, twice as large, or the cruisers to which I have referred. Such a ship is an anomaly in naval architecture.

Mr. BUTLER. I suggest that we double the capacity of this cruiser, if that be the case. But I think the Senator is entirely mistaken in saying that a ship of this description would not be very effective in a naval conflict upon the high seas with one of the navies of the great nations.

Mr. HALE. Not against their great ironclads.

Mr. BUTLER. I take it for granted that they would have some other kind of vessels in a naval fight besides their great armored ships. I am in favor of going ahead and building as strong, as powerful, and as heavily armored ships as are built anywhere in the world. We must make a beginning, and this is the beginning. I believe we have provision now for building perhaps one or two ships of this character.

Mr. HALE. Two.

Mr. BUTLER. One, I believe, is being built in the navy-yard at Norfolk, the Texas, and there is one other in process of construction.

Mr. HALE. The Texas and the Maine.

Mr. BUTLER. The Texas and the Maine are, I believe, to be ships of this kind. In my judgment, to have anything like a respectable navy in addition to the swift cruisers for which we have provided, we ought to have not less than ten or a dozen heavily armored ships, such as this is proposed to be; of course, armored and armed in accordance with the displacement. I take it for granted that nobody supposes we should put armor and arms upon a ship of 7,000 tons displacement that would be intended for 14,000 tons displacement, but we can never cut a respectable figure unless we have some such ships as are provided for in the clause which the Senate committee proposes to strike out.

As the Senator from Alabama has stated, this is a matter which has been thoroughly, exhaustively, and completely investigated by the House committee. I assume, after conference with the Navy Department, the provision has been inserted deliberately, and I can not understand how it is that we expect to have a respectable Navy by simply building what are called fast cruisers to run down the commerce of an enemy.

If we should have the misfortune of becoming involved in a war with a foreign government, the swift cruisers we have provided for, in the language of the Senator from Maine, would be a mere toy before the great armored ships of even the Government of Chili, to say nothing of Italy, France, Germany, Russia, and Great Britain.

If we are going to have a navy at all, if our purpose is to have a fighting navy, it seems to me the sooner we begin to build vessels of this kind the better, even if it requires $100,000,000 to get such a navy as we ought to have. I would supplement the fast cruisers that we have already provided for, and which are provided for in this bill, with at least a dozen of the best fighting ships that the world could produce.

I therefore trust that the Senate committee's amendment will not be agreed to, but that the Navy Department will be invested with the power, as provided in the bill, to proceed to build a ship such as is contemplated in the provision proposed to be stricken out.

Mr. HAWLEY. Do I understand the Senator to say that he would dispense with the three cruisers of 2,000 tons and take the other vessels?

Mr. BUTLER. Not at all.

Mr. HAWLEY. He would have them additional?

Mr. BUTLER. Certainly. I think it very desirable that those three additional cruisers of 2,000 tons displacement should be provided for.

Mr. GIBSON. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine how long it would take to complete this armored cruiser of 7,500 tons displacement if it were ordered now?

Mr. HALE. I have said that the two of this same type which are now being built in the navy-yards will not be built before the expiration of the term of the Senator upon this floor who has the longest time to serve.

Mr. TELLER. Why not?

Mr. HALE. In the first place they are experimental. We have never built such a ship in the past.

Mr. GIBSON. That would be at least six years?

Mr. HALE. That would be at least six years. We have no armor. We must provide for all of that; but that does not trouble me so much as the uncertainty about them when they do come out. Great Britain has built this class of ships by the dozen, and they lie up now in the British yards and are not worth anything except for old iron; and for us to start in on precisely what are rejected by old powers is an amazing folly. If our Government wants to start in and build ships that will compete with the tremendous ironclads of the world, let it do so; but this does not accomplish that end.

Mr. STEWART. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Maine if this class of ironclads have been a success?

Mr. HALE. If the Senator should ask that question of a naval officer abroad, where they have tried them, he would be answered in a very hesitating fashion. They have not been fully tried. They were tried to some extent in the bombardment of Alexandria, and they made no great show. They do not try them now.

Mr. PLUMB. Were not the guns effective?

Mr. HALE. That is another question. The guns are of value, and warfare between one kind of gun and another and between guns and fortifications is going on all the time; but the whole question of the construction of iron-clad ships, these great armored ships, is a question that every nation in the world is handling in a most gingerly fashion.

Mr. STEWART. They are building some of larger size?

Mr. HALE. They are building some of larger size. It takes from four to seven or eight years to build them.

Mr. PLUMB. Was not one of those large ironclads put on the stocks in the last year or two?

Mr. HALE. Yes; one or two have been put on that are twice as large as this.

Mr. PLUMB. In the last year or two?

Mr. HALE. Yes; within the last two years. I went over one in the harbor of Naples, the largest ship in the world. She would not consider this as an antagonist.

Mr. STEWART. What was her size?

Mr. HALE. Between 15,000 and 16,000 tons.

Mr. STEWART. Suppose we amend this provision and make the ship larger?

Mr. HALE. Then there is another reason why we should not go into it. The ironclads that the other powers are building now are ships that they claim to get 19 and 20 knots out of, and out of this kind only 17 knots can be had. That is another reason why we ought not to go on with the construction of such a ship. If we are going to put immense sums of money into this feature of naval ships, let us get the biggest and the fastest and the best, but the two that we are now building are certainly enough to try the experiment on.

Mr. MORGAN. I should like to ask the Senator before he takes his seat why he says the ships we are building are experimental. In what sense are they experimental?

Mr. HALE. Certainly the Senator sees that so far as we are concerned they are experimental. We have never before built anything of the kind here. What they can do, what we can get out of them, is a pure question of experiment. I do not believe that the naval officers have in their own minds any assurance that in the future the Texas and the Maine will be successful ships. It is all experimental.

Mr. HAWLEY. Will the Senator give me the tonnage of those ships? I have forgotten it.

Mr. HALE. They are about the same size of this one, about 7,000 tons.

Mr. MORGAN. If I understand the Senator from Maine he characterizes these ships as experimental ships, or the construction of them as being experimental, merely because we have not built any heretofore. That is all of it.

Mr. HALE. That clearly makes it an experiment.

Mr. MORGAN. There is no trouble about the plan, is there?

Mr. HALE. Two years have elapsed since the appropriations were made, and the Senator can not find the form and semblance of the Texas and Maine to-day.

Mr. MORGAN. We can get as good a plan for a ship, I suppose, as any other people.

Mr. HALE. There is the fact. I say again these two ships are the nightmare of the Navy Department to-day.

Mr. MORGAN. But they might not be the nightmare of the American mechanics. Very likely they would chill the Navy Department without producing any impression at all upon our workmen.

Mr. HALE. I hope the Senator will be with me on the question of constructing the ships by private contract instead of at the navy-yards. I agree with him there. We have enough to do to construct the others.

Mr. MORGAN. I wish to ask the Senator one other question, if he pleases. He says it will be at least six years before either of these ships, the Maine or the Texas, is completed. I should like to know what it is that retards the building of those ships, if I can find out. What reason exists why they should be six years building them unless the Government merely wants to take six years to do it?

Mr. HALE. Two years have already passed.

Mr. MORGAN. Six more would be eight. I want to know if there is any fact within the Senator's knowledge that would justify the statement that these ships can not be built within six years.

Mr. HALE. We have been trying to armor and arm and fit ready for the salt water the iron-clad turreted monitors. We have been at that work between five and six years, and not one of them has poked her nose in the water yet nor got any armor on.

Mr. MORGAN. Has the failure been on account of the want of material, the want of men, or the want of money?

Mr. HALE. It has been on account of want of material; and then it is a new matter. I would not be arguing this question if we had not already made the experiment and provided for two such ships, but to be crowded now with another when nobody knows about the two not yet built is nonsense. Let us see what we get out of the two.

Mr. MORGAN. I should like to ask the Senator if he does not think we should increase the progress of the building and facilitate the building of those ships if we should build more of them and create a greater market for the armor. If the American producers and manufacturers of iron and steel had a larger market for their products than they have now would they not supply us with all that we need for the armament or armoring of these ships? It would seem to me that they would do so, and that unless we begin we shall never have any American production of iron or steel armor. We have got to begin some time.

I have been listening to this matter now for six or eight years, and at every session of Congress when this subject is mooted it is always said, "Let us wait until we try something that is on hand; let us wait until some experiment has been demonstrated by actual practice to be a beneficial thing;" and so we have waited on from year to year and we have made no beginning.

Mr. HALE. I will not interrupt the Senator if it incommodes him.

Mr. MORGAN. Not at all.

Mr. HALE. So far from not having made a beginning we have provided for great contracts for the developing of armor and of gun-metal, amounting to millions upon millions of dollars; the work is going on just as fast as possible, and it is a subject of pride to those, I think, who have helped to bring it about that this work is going on. But you can not annihilate time; you can not do it all at once. We shall do better, if we are going to build more ironclads in the future, by not embarking now in any more of them until we see what can be done by those we are building. We shall get a better ship in better time if we wait two or three years, or one or two years, and see how those other vessels develop and see how the armament develops. If we wait to see what is done in that direction we shall get better ships and quicker ones than to go on now with any more experiments.

Mr. MORGAN. I am very glad that the Senator from Maine and myself are entirely in accord, both in our feelings and in our judgment, about the development that has already taken place. I feel that sense of pride to which he refers, about which the Secretary of the Navy spoke with a good deal of exultation when he learned that he could get from different American shops or foundries gun-metal, gun material, ship armor, shafting—whatever was necessary for the building of very high class vessels and very high class guns. We are now progressing, it seems, according to his more recent statement, very rapidly and very satisfactorily in the production of the material that is necessary for the building of heavy steel ships and for the arming and armament of them.

I think if we shall go and spend some more money and build some more ships and increase the enterprise of our producers and our manufacturers, they will yield a much larger quantity and perhaps a very much better quality of armor and of the other necessary steel or iron which may be used in the construction of a vessel.

Mr. President, this matter is very far from being experimental. So far as our work is concerned in making appropriations, or so far as the supply of the necessary steel for the work is concerned, or so far as the ability to lay down proper plans for ships and their engines and machinery and armament is concerned, it is very far from being experimental.

I must say that I look to the future in respect of the American production of ships and guns with as much confidence as I do in respect of its production of woolen goods or cotton goods, and with just as much safety and security. I have not any doubt about it; and when we come to consider what there is in the way of experiment, what element of experiment exists in this project for the building of ships and the arming of them—when we get to the facts, there is really no experiment about it; it is a mere want of experience, that is all. We have not as yet built the ships, but we know we can do it. They might as well have told us twenty-five years ago that we could not build a locomotive engine in the United States, or that we could not roll steel bars for railways, or that we could not build Pullman palace cars.

They might as well have told us forty or fifty years ago that we could not invent and put in operation this system of electricity about us, or that the telephone system could not be invented by an American and put into successful operation.

The truth is that this is the home of inventive and mechanical genius. No people in this world, either by their laws, by their social instincts, by their necessities, by the encouragement that they are in, by enterprise and by capital, compares with us to-day in respect of anything that concerns the development of that which is hidden and unknown and desirable in mechanic arts, and in science also. We need have no fear about this matter.

I am very tired of stopping upon the center and looking to the front and rear and saying, "We are afraid to go any further." Let us make an experiment. We of all people in the world ought to make experiments. We of all people in the world ought to lead the genius of mankind in every enterprise, political as well as industrial.

I have not any fears or apprehensions about the wasting of a little of the enormous mass of money in the Treasury of the United States in building up a navy. Here are our officers scattered about the coast organizing one little society and another, hunting places to go to to have something to do to rid themselves of the ennui of existence, merely because we will not supply them with ships upon which they can go out upon the seas.

If we had to-day a really respectable and strong navy upon the ocean, a fighting navy, we should have more power at home and a great deal more power among the nations of the earth. We could have higher moral power. I will recur to that again. We should have it, and without it, Mr. President, we can not have it in that sense that we ought to possess it. We know we are entitled to it, and the world knows it. If they put us upon our mettle, we can very quickly get into good fighting shape, but the danger to us is, and they know it as well as we do, that the cost of a sudden preparation is so great that we allow many questions to have the go-by which ought to be considered with strength and purpose and energy that we do not now consider at all.

I do not think that Germany to-day would be sweeping the Pacific Ocean as with a broom if we had a real good fighting navy; not that Germany is afraid of us, but Germany knows that we are not well enough armed for the purpose of protecting the Pacific Ocean. She understands that we can not afford to do it, can not afford to spend the money to do it, to arm ourselves for the purpose of protecting what are our natural commercial rights, to say nothing of our political rights, in the Pacific Ocean. What is the meaning of that great establishment the Senator from Nevada referred to on Vancouver Island, that magnificent naval establishment just north of San Francisco, lying between Alaska and Washington Territory?

What is the meaning of it? It means, as a matter of course, that we must prepare ourselves in due season to offset the power that is there displayed; otherwise aggressions upon our commerce will be of such a character at least as to become very attractive to the lesser nations, as we call them, of the earth, for those people with whom we desire to trade abroad, and with whom we have really the richest expectations of trade, are the people who most respect power wherever it is displayed; and unless they see some display of power they are not very apt to yield their respect to any nation in the world. They do not count up the reserve. They look at the actual display. They look at what you have got in hand and what you have to show, and no nation that goes about on the earth with its hands tied behind it, or which carries guns in rotten ships, can ever command confidence or gain respect or establish commerce among people of that kind. Build a good fighting navy and you will do more for the commerce of this country than you will do with almost any other matter you can set on foot.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, this is not large enough. I think we had better amend the bill and make it larger. It will take but a few words to put in a description of those vessels that are now being built abroad. I move, in line 972, to strike out "seven thousand five hundred" and insert "fifteen thousand," and in line 974 to strike out the words "three millions and a half" and insert "seven millions."

Mr. HALE. It would take almost $9,000,000.

Mr. STEWART. I will say "$9,000,000." I make that motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment of the committee has been agreed to in Committee of the Whole. The amendment of the Senator from Nevada will be in order when the bill is reported to the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. I hope there will be no objection on the ground of mere time. We can have unanimous consent, because it is obviously agreeable to the Senate to deal with the matter while it is being debated, and then it can be voted on in the Senate. I hope the Chair will ask consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. By unanimous consent, then, the vote by which the amendment was agreed to will be reconsidered.

Mr. HALE. Let it all stand open.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. And the proposition will stand open. The Chair would also call the attention of the Senate to the embarrassment that will result unless this proposition is considered as two amendments, the motion to strike out and insert not being divisible. The Chair would suggest that if it is desired to test the sense of the Senate on the two propositions independently, they had better be treated as two separate amendments, and not as a motion to strike out and insert.

Mr. STEWART. I move, then, in line 972, after the word "about," to strike out "seven thousand five hundred" and insert "fifteen thousand;" and after the word "than," at the end of line 973, to strike out "three millions and a half of dollars" and insert "ten million dollars."

Mr. HALE. That is right; we shall get a ship out of that equal to any in the world.

Mr. PLUMB. While the Senator is about it, why not make it better than anybody else's? Why not make it twenty millions?

Mr. HALE. No; that would not be so wise a thing as to provide for two. Fifteen thousand tons is large enough. Nobody can deny that a ship of 15,000 tons heavily armored and armed would be such a ship that no naval power perhaps would dare to come here; and it may be well to build two of them at a cost of $20,000,000. I am by no means certain that I would not. It is a great deal better than spending and wasting money on little things that are good for nothing when you get them.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 972, before the word "tons," it is proposed to strike out "seven thousand five hundred" and insert "fifteen thousand;" and in line 974, before the word "dollars," to strike out "three million and a half of" and insert "ten million."

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I am not quite willing that the observations of the Senator from Maine shall go unanswered in regard to the building of these ships being merely experimental, and his further statement that it will require six years to complete one. He referred to the delay that has been occasioned already in the building of the Texas and the Maine, and he further stated, as I remember, that these two ships were the nightmares of the officers of the Navy.

I beg to differ from the Senator in that respect. My information is that very great things are expected of these two ships that are now being arranged for. The Navy Department has, I think properly, exercised very great caution and circumspection in procuring the very best designs that can be found in the civilized world, and my information from the naval constructors is that these two ships will be the best of their kind in the world when completed. So far from it requiring six years, I think it not at all unlikely that both those ships will be launched inside of eighteen months.

Mr. HALE. The Senator can not believe that himself, I think.

Mr. BUTLER. I do, at least unless I am very much misinformed.

Mr. HALE. Is the Senator ready to make a prediction that they will be launched in twice the time he has stated, or in three times the time he has stated? I would not venture that.

Mr. BUTLER. I am very sorry to differ with so able a naval constructor as my friend from Maine who has so much knowledge on the subject; but, unless I am very much misinformed by those who have charge of those ships, the preparations are almost complete to begin the construction of the Texas certainly; I am not so sure about the Maine.

Mr. HALE. So far as naval constructors go there is not a naval constructor in the service of the United States who has ever had anything to do in his life with constructing an armored ship. He knows nothing about it. He has to go abroad to get his plans.

Mr. BUTLER. That is a misfortune.

Mr. HALE. He has to pay for them and he is groping all the while. The Senator may say that the constructors who have these in charge have great hopes of the Texas and the Maine, and expect to get them out in eighteen months. I am not going to quote anybody in the Navy Department against that. I wish the Senator himself would talk to the Secretary of the Navy about that. Some Senators have.

Mr. BUTLER. I have not talked with the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. HALE. He has the responsibility. I am not going to quote him here, but I would like to have any committee or any Senator confer with the head of the Department that has the responsibility about building these ships, and one result he will find——

Mr. BUTLER. I have not talked with the Secretary of the Navy, but I have talked with some of the officers connected with the Navy Department; and whilst I have no authority to state that these vessels will be launched within eighteen months, I repeat, if the present plans are carried out—and I see no reason why they should not be—the Texas certainly will be in a condition to be launched inside of eighteen months. But the very argument offered by the Senator himself in opposition to the building of this ship is the strongest one in favor of making a beginning.

The Senator says there is nobody connected with the Navy Department who has ever constructed a ship of this kind, who can construct one; that our officers have to go abroad to get their plans and their designs and everything on the subject. It is a very humiliating position for a government like this to be in, a very humiliating admission to make, and I agree with the Senator from Alabama the sooner we make a beginning in the proper direction the better.

There certainly is no lack of material. It has been demonstrated beyond peradventure that this country can produce as fine steel and in as large quantities as can be produced in the world. I think already this Government has demonstrated that it can build cannon for the armament of these ships as fine as can be made in the world, and it was suggested to me by a friend awhile ago that one of the Krupp guns upon one of the great naval vessels of Great Britain would send a shot through a vessel of this kind. Why can we not get Krupp guns and put them on this ship, or guns as good as Krupp guns? We can do it if we give the proper authorities the necessary amount of money to do it, and I think that it is time, high time, if we are going to build a navy, that we should relieve ourselves of this dependent, humilitating attitude of having to depend upon foreign governments for information. Why, sir, there is as much talent in this country as there is in any country in the world.

Mr. HALE. Let me ask the Senator a question before he leaves that point. Why does he now say, as others have said, arguing as he does, that we ought to begin, we ought not to put off the day of beginning, if we are in this hampered condition? That is just what we have done, to begin. We have tried these two ships; we are trying them now; and is it not folly, when we are simply trying, when we have embarked in that experiment, to crowd now another one, next year another one of the same kind, and next year another, and nobody knows about the two we are building.

Mr. BUTLER. That is a presumption I am not prepared to admit, that nobody knows about the two we are building. It is a violent presumption to suppose that there is not talent enough and sagacity enough in this country among the naval constructors to know what will be the result of a certain performance.

Mr. HALE. Let me tell the Senator what I believe about that. I believe you may take one of these ships, just such as is provided for here, and put it into a navy-yard and build it; it will cost 50 per cent. more than it would by private contract, it will take twice as long to build it, and when it gets through it will not be half as good a ship.

Mr. BUTLER. I understand——

Mr. HALE. The naval constructors can not do it. The Navy does not produce them.

Mr. BUTLER. I understand that there is a provision in this bill which requires that it may be built by private contract. I admit the force of the Senator's statement that it costs more to build a ship in a Government navy-yard than it does by private contract, but we must legislate on these subjects like sensible business men, and if we leave it to the Secretary of the Navy to submit his plans simply to private contractors, there is a possibility of private contractors combining against the Government and compelling the Government to pay any price they please to exact. Hence I think the provision in former bills on this subject for a certain number being built in the Government navy-yards, provided suitable contracts can not be made with private contractors, was a very wise and judicious one, and I think it ought to be in this bill. There is no doubt, in my opinion, about the fact that private contractors can and will perhaps build cheaper and better, but that is no argument against the building of this ship and a half-dozen others of this kind.

Mr. President, when a few years ago an effort was made by Congress to provide for the building of fast cruisers, the very argument which the Senator is using against this ship was used upon the floor of the Senate and of the other House against fast cruisers. It was said again and again that they were experimental, that nobody knew what they could accomplish, and therefore we ought not to spend any money to build them. Now, the Chicago, the Charleston, and the Baltimore have been built, and I understand, perhaps with the exception of the Chicago, have been entirely satisfactory of their class. Now, the effort seems to be to get fast running ships, and if the argument of the Senator from Maine is worth anything, it goes to prove that great wars and great naval conflicts are settled by foot-races on the high seas; the nation that can run the fastest can win the fight. I have never known a war to be determined except by hard blows face to face, and I want to see the American Navy in a condition where it will be prepared to strike back when a great naval power strikes at it with heavy armored vessels, and not simply make it a question of speed on the high seas as to which can outrun the other. That is all there is in that argument.

I admit that these fast cruisers are as essential for a navy as light cavalry is for an army. They are efficient and important for outpost duty, an admirable purpose in naval conflict. But to say that you are going to depend upon cavalry alone in a great war, is assuming a state of things which I think will never exist. And so in regard to our Navy, if we do not have some, say a dozen, heavily armed and heavily armored fighting ships of war, we should be at a disadvantage in a naval conflict with a foreign power, which would bring humiliation and disgrace and untold loss upon the country before we could provide for the emergency.

Now, sir, with regard to the amendment of the Senator from Nevada, I tell him very frankly that if I had the power to provide in this bill or any other for voting $20,000,000 for the construction of two ships as he describes them, I would so vote without the slightest hesitation, but it does not seem to me in accordance with the general scope and scheme and object of this bill to provide for a ship of that kind, and therefore I think his amendment had better not pass. I would try this;

I would supplement the Maine and the Texas by this, and unless all signs fail and all predictions are false, they will be found to be, in my judgment, the best ships of their kind, and will serve a good purpose for the United States Navy.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, I shall favor the retention of the provision of the House bill for building an armored ship, and if the amendment of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] shall be rejected, and it seems to me it is safe to do so, I will propose another amendment to strike out of line 972 the word "about" and insert the words "not less than;" so that the provision shall read:

And one armored vessel of not less than 7,500 tons displacement.

That would leave the Navy Department, in view of the facilities they have for building large ships, and in view of the kind of material they can obtain for large ships, to determine whether they would build a ship larger than the minimum so specified.

It is suggested by the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] that the ship is not large enough if it is to be an armored ship. About that I am not prepared to speak, but I would say that I would leave the discretion to the Navy Department to make the ship of the amount of displacement named or larger if circumstances rendered the enlargement of it necessary; and the three and a-half million dollars would certainly answer for the beginning of such a ship, and if it was found necessary to build a larger ship that appropriation could be supplemented when it should be found necessary hereafter.

I agree with the Senator from Alabama and the Senator from South Carolina that this country ought to be placed in a better condition of defense than it is. I know it has been argued on the floor of the Senate that no power on earth will go to war with the United States, and the argument in that line, which was repeated by more than one Senator, seemed to go upon the idea that the millennial era had arrived; that men were prepared to adopt in its fullest and largest extent the doctrine of the Savior of mankind; that no evil or wrong should be inflicted upon mankind again.

I submit that that sort of talk is not practical, it is not sensible. We live in a world where struggles are for power and to build up wealth, which this country is building up with increasing millions of people. If we are not prepared for defense, we only invite the well-equipped and well-provided powers of the world to aggression and to plunder. That is the history of the nations of the earth. The more a nation is without the means of defense, the more certain it is to be the sufferer from unlawful and unconscionable aggression.

And, Mr. President, I never, in considering the question of the defense of the territory of the United States and the rights of the United States, fail to remember the position which this country occupies among the nations of the earth. I repeat what I said on a former occasion, that it is now a country of more population than any European government save Russia. Its commerce is now larger than that of any country save Great Britain. It lies here contiguous to the active, energetic powers of Western Europe, who are in the best possible state of preparation for war, growing out of their peculiar condition. It lies on the path of the great populations and the wealth of Asia. Already a large commerce is finding its way either around Cape Horn or across the Isthmus or across the railroads of the United States between Europe and Asia.

One project is already considerably advanced for a transit across the Isthmus of Darien. Another, and perhaps two more, are likely in the near future to be built nearer this way, either by canals or ship-railways, so that when constructed their influence upon the commerce of the world will be greater than the influence of the construction of the Suez Canal. Infinitely more important its influence will be upon the commerce of the world than the construction of the Suez Canal, bringing the commerce between Western Europe and Asia by our very doors.

When we contemplate our long line of Atlantic and Pacific seacoast and the number of cities which would be exposed to aggression and to destruction by a great power, who can doubt the duty which devolves upon us of being prepared to take care of our interests against such contingencies?

We can not ignore the fact that the United States is placed in the condition of a first-class power. We dare not ignore that fact unless we disregard the duties of patriotism and the obligations we owe to the American people.

It is idle to talk to me about the fact being that no nation will make war upon us. Year by year our commercial intercourse is being enlarged with the nations of the earth. As it is enlarged, complications must of necessity arise, and disputes and controversies will have to be settled—let us trust settled by peaceful negotiation; but we can not so far rely upon the improvement of human nature as to suppose that we can secure just settlements by negotiation unless we have the power available to back the judgment of our diplomats. Give us a respectable navy; give us guns such as we ought to have, and such as I trust the vote of the Senate will provide for before it adjourns. Let us start with the appropriation to put this country in a condition of appropriate defense.

Why, sir, suppose to-day that by any conjuncture of circumstances we were forced into conflict with any one of the great naval powers of the earth. In sixty days every seacoast city on our borders could be laid waste. It could be done by Great Britain, or by France, or by Germany, or by Italy, and the destruction of one of these great cities would be at a cost to the country infinitely more than the navy and the fortifications necessary to defend it against such a calamity would cost.

I see my friend from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] smiles. He thinks that nobody will dare to go to war with the United States. He relies upon the patriotism and the courage of the American people to keep other nations from coming here and fighting us.

Mr. COCKRELL. The common sense of nations.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, the Senator is old enough and has had a character of experience which has taught him that mobs can not resist organized power, that organized power must be met by organized power with equal means and equal skill, and it will not do to talk about the courage of men and the patriotism of men in a disorganized state and without the means of defense resisting the power of aggression of great organized powers with ample means of prosecuting their purpose.

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator permit me there?

Mr. REAGAN. Certainly.

Mr. COCKRELL. Would not that statement demand of the United States to maintain a standing army and navy equal to all the other great powers?

Mr. REAGAN. I do not think so, and I am not proceeding on that idea at all. Our attitude to the other great nations of the earth renders less certain military conflict. We have a skeleton of an army; we have trained and educated officers who can take command and instruct an army very rapidly. Experience has demonstrated that. Our people have an aptitude for arms and for war when occasion calls for it.

We do not need a navy to guard against attacks constantly, like the powers of Europe have, where they do not know what day a war may be inaugurated which may settle the fate of nations and change the geography of Europe. They stand guard to-day for the want of sense enough to agree to disarmament among themselves. They stand there taxing the people to their utmost and involving those nations in debts they will never pay, in order that each may protect itself against the others.

We are not in that condition. We do not need that character of preparation. But I insist, as a matter of prudence, as a matter of precaution, as a matter of public safety, as a matter of national self-respect, that we shall place ourselves in such a position as that in case of dispute we can assert and enforce those principles of right that ought to prevail in international conferences.

I did not expect, when I rose, to say so much, but I intended simply to say that I hoped the amendment of the Senator from Nevada would be voted down; and if it is I shall then move to strike out the word "about," in line 972, and insert the words "not less than;" so as to make the clause read:

Not less than 7,500 tons displacement.

And with that amendment I would like to see the provision of the House bill retained.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MANDERSON in the chair.) The Chair does not understand the Senator from Texas as offering that amendment at this time?

Mr. REAGAN. I do not offer it now, but I propose to offer it if the amendment of the Senator from Nevada is voted down.

Mr. GIBSON. I suggest to the Senator from Nevada that he strike out in line 972 the words "one armored cruiser" and insert "two vessels of war," and that instead of "7,500 tons" he insert "15,000 tons each," and that he strike out the words "not more than three millions and a half of dollars" and insert "not more than $20,000,000."

Mr. STEWART. I will accept the modification if it be in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada modifies his amendment.

Mr. STEWART. Will the Secretary report the amendment as modified?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment as modified at the suggestion of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GIBSON] will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 972 it is proposed to strike out the words "one armored cruiser" and insert in lieu thereof the words "two vessels of war;" in the same line to strike out "seven thousand five hundred" before the word "tons" and insert "fifteen thousand;" after the word "tons" in the same line to insert "each," and in line 974 to strike out "three millions and a half of dollars" and insert "$20,000,000;" so as to read:

And two vessels of war of about 15,000 tons each displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament, not more than $20,000,000.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, I believe it is conceded by all, except the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL], that we ought to have a navy. It is stated by the gentleman representing the committee that the vessels provided for here, either those in the bill as it came from the House, or those provided for in the committee's amendment, are not in a proper sense war vessels which will be capable of being successfully arrayed against the armored vessels of the different nations of Europe. It does seem to me that if Italy, Spain, and Chili can afford to have first-class vessels the United States can afford to have two. If they have a large number the United States ought to have as many as two. So I have accepted the modification suggested by the Senator from Louisiana, and I believe this is money well expended.

If we desire peace, we must be in a position to command peace. This is an age of war. All the nations of the earth are preparing for war and expending vast sums of money for that purpose beyond what they ever did in any preceding age, and what may happen it is impossible to foresee. War has always prevailed. Civilization has not checked, but it has increased the number of wars and their destructiveness. The last generation has been the most warlike in all history, and we are here with all our vast interests, with our vast possessions on the Pacific and on the Atlantic, with our cities all exposed, relying upon the generosity of the other nations, not being in a position to command respect from any, it requiring years to build one of these ships.

The representative of the committee says that none of these larger ships can be built in six years, and we have got to remain in the defenseless position we are now for a number of years, and we put off action from session to session. So it will go on, and the evil will be more and more aggravated, until the time comes when we have actual war; and how are we to build ships then? It takes five or six years to prepare for it, and how can we prepare for war with great vessels if we have actual war on our hands while we are making the preparations?

It seems to me the way to deal with this question is to build a few ships and build good ones. The United States ought to be able to build a few first-class ships. If we are not, we must submit to all manner of treaties that are proposed, we must allow European nations to take islands of the Pacific, to dominate South America, and to dominate countries on the north. You must allow foreign nations to do that. To talk about the Monroe doctrine without a gunboat that could go to sea, when all other nations are armed, seems to me all nonsense. They are not afraid of our talk. The talk of the Senator from Missouri does not scare a foreign nation. They will not fight us in that way. They will not fight us with declamation. If they would fight us with declamation, of course we could easily whip them. If they would fight us with boasting, of course we should whip them. But they would fight us with guns, and then where would the Senator from Missouri be?

The Chinese tried that, but it was not successful. They made great gongs to scare away the enemy and made a noise to frighten the enemy from their borders, but American civilization has adopted a different means.

Mr. HOAR. How about the Chinese on the Pacific coast?

Mr. STEWART. They do not fight with gongs there, but they have another mode of fighting which we can not resist very well with arms. They will stay, they will eat, and you have got to kill them to keep them out. They will eat up everything and starve you to death. You can not raise fighting men in the Chinese fashion. If you let the Chinese come here they will come and eat up everything like locusts, but in war their methods have not been a success; but I suppose just about as successful as our boasting that we can whip all the world without guns.

We put this off from session to session, and as the Senator from South Carolina very properly suggested, there must be a beginning. We must commence to build ships or we shall never have ships, and if we wait until the genius of mankind is exhausted before we commence we shall wait a long while, for man is progressive. A hundred years from now they will build very much better ships than they do now, and if you wait until that has culminated, until the best ship is perfected, you will wait many generations. We shall not reach perfection for ages to come. We can not wait for that. We want ships now. There will be many wars and much destruction of life and property by war before you will have the best ships, before any nation builds the best ships that can be built.

We shall continue to improve and it will always be the condition of things. If you wait until that condition of things comes to pass, until the best ships are invented that can be made, you will never have a navy, because they will be always making improvements. If you wish to defend the honor of this country you must go along with other nations and you must improve and build and at all times be in a position to defend our country, to defend its honor, to make treaties on a basis of equality, and not be in a condition to submit to all demands that may be made and be at the mercy of all nations.

There is talk about universal peace by peace societies, and we are told there will be no more war; but that talk all evaporates with the first gun, and it will evaporate again, and the American people will be engaged in war again. There is no doubt about that. The only safe mode is to do as other nations do. We must do so from necessity. One nation alone can not disarm. The United States with as much noise as it can make can not afford to disarm alone, which she is doing and having a different policy from all other nations of the earth.

It is unsafe. Our rights are in danger. Our citizens are unprotected, and we have no power to protect them. It is impossible, I say, for us to be in an isolated condition different from the other nations and expecting to enforce our rights. If we enforce our rights at all, we must enforce them by the same means that other civilized nations do, and if we are prepared to assert our rights, we shall have no war. It is want of preparation that endangers the country.

I expect that we shall have war ultimately with Great Britain, prepared or not prepared, on the northern border, as I remarked yesterday, unless there is wise statesmanship to rise above small considerations and readjust the boundary. We must have the Arctic Ocean for a boundary, or war. That is inevitable; that is destiny. Nobody can prevent it. The irritation of this long boundary between us, the complications that will grow up from time to time will ultimately lead to the firing of a gun, and the firing of a gun between us and Great Britain means the setting back of civilization a hundred years.

It means nearly a destruction of the Anglo-Saxon race, and such a war as that could not stop for years and years, until both nations were practically exhausted; and in view of the terrible consequences of such a war it is to be hoped that the statesmen of the two countries will rise to the importance of the occasion and suggest some plan of removing this constant source of irritation.

There is an unsettled boundary between Alaska and British Columbia involving a vast and important territory. Both nations now have fixed upon that boundary according to their own notions.

There is a question with regard to the open sea there, how it shall be treated, in addition to the fishery question. There are unsettled questions all the way from Halifax to Victoria constantly arising. Your line of custom-houses and fortifications will have to be constructed. Canada, backed by Great Britain, will be much more aggressive than Great Britain would be herself. This cause of estrangement still increases, and it will ultimately result in war, especially if we are entirely unprepared for the event. If we are prepared we shall be in a position to negotiate, and negotiate in safety.

As to the present treaty that we are discussing here, all parties feel that it was negotiated under circumstances entirely unfavorable to the United States. Those who support it and those who oppose it feel that it is unfortunate that we should be driven into the position of making a treaty under such circumstances, and all because we are unwilling to spend money as other nations do to keep themselves in a position to defend their rights and dignity.

There must be a beginning, and I hope these two ships will be built and give the world to understand that we, too, while we are for peace, will be prepared for any emergency or any exigency that may arise between us and any other country; that while we will be generous and keep out of war, we will demand our rights, and that we will protect this continent from foreign aggression.

It is the grandest thing in the world for the United States to stand and proclaim on this hemisphere the Monroe doctrine, that we will protect from European aggression the weak powers of this continent; that this continent shall be dedicated to the institutions of freedom and free men and free government, and no foreign power shall gain a further foothold here. How proud every American citizen is of such a declaration of the Monroe doctrine. How feeble we are now. We can not even protest against its daily violation. We can not protest against France, if she pleases, taking the Isthmus. We were unable to protest against Germany taking the Samoan Islands and removing, as it were, our inhabitants therefrom. We had built up almost a government there, but we had to yield when the first ironclad came.

We could not help it. We were helpless, and the Administration was right in not involving us in war, because we had no means of asserting our well-known rights. We had planted a colony, and we ignominiously surrendered it for want of a few ironclads to let the world know that we could protect it; and so it will go on, and our vaunted Monroe doctrine will be despised by all the people of this hemisphere. How little and mean it is for us to occupy that position!

We invite the republics of South and Central America to meet and consult about common interests. They look to us to maintain the Monroe doctrine. They come to us and find we are in a helpless condition, feebler than they are so far as foreign aggression is concerned, and less able than they are to defend the Monroe doctrine.

If we can not afford to build a few ships, let us renounce the Monroe doctrine; let us admit that we will not defend ourselves or our neighbors; that we will abandon the traditions of the fathers; that we will no longer proclaim that this hemisphere shall be governed by the people who live here without foreign domination. Let us abandon that or prepare in a dignified way to occupy the position which nature, our resources, and our rights have conferred upon us in these things. With a larger extent of fertile soil than in any other land on earth, with greater natural resources, mineral, agricultural, and commercial than any other three nations combined, with sixty millions of people capable, willing, independent, and free, it seems to me that we might with some propriety not only declare the Monroe doctrine, but prepare to vindicate it and have all countries respect it, and let us do something for freedom and for man on this hemisphere.

But if we can not afford to build a ship until all the genius of the world is exhausted—and no better ship can be built if we wait for Italy and for Chili and for Spain to exhaust their genius in building ships before we can build them—if that is to be our position, it is to be our position for all time, because, as I said before, the time will not come whilst civilization lasts that the genius of man for making improvements will be exhausted.

So I say, let us commence these two ships. Nothing would please the American people better, nothing would be more useful, more acceptable to the people, both North and South. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GIBSON] voice the true sentiment of the South, and I know it is the sentiment of the North, and it has been voiced on this floor by several Senators, and each man feels that we ought to do something in this direction, and it seems the least we can do is to commence to build a few ships to show that we intend to defend the flag and the honor of our common country.

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, I do not know that I can say anything to re-enforce the observations which have fallen from the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART]. I think instead of talking about fighting and war that we had better make timely preparation.

We are warned by the information that the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] gives us that it will take six long years or more to build one of these cruisers; that we can not extemporize a navy, we can not within that time even place upon the sea one of these pigmy vessels of war in comparison with the great vessels of foreign powers.

We do not need merely swift raiders upon the ocean, but enormous vessels, so as to be enabled not only to protect and defend our own territory and commerce, but, if necessary, to carry the war, when once embarked in it, to the territories and seats of power of the offending nation. No nation like ours can afford to indulge in a mere war of defense. We must have the means to punish and cripple and destroy the armed forces on land and sea of the nation that appeals to arms against us.

We know very well, Mr. President, that we can extemporize an army. We know very well that if we had a war with Great Britain we could within sixty days or ninety days place 500,000 men under arms in Canada to take possession of Canada and hold it against any force that Great Britain possibly could send to the Dominion of Canada. We know very well that we could assemble an army in Mexico or in Cuba in sixty days or ninety days that would overwhelm any force that any nation in Europe could concentrate against us.

But we are powerless if we are attacked on the sea; our mastery ceases at our shores. We have a vast commerce; we have the most extensive coast line of any nation in the world; we have the largest cities of any nation in the world exposed upon that coast line. They are utterly defenseless. Hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of property are concentrated in these great cities upon the Pacific and upon the Atlantic Oceans liable at any time to be devastated and destroyed by even such a nation as Italy or Chili.

Now, the amendment which I proposed, to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to construct two vessels of war that shall cost not more than $10,000,000 each and that shall not exceed 15,000 tons each, appears to be justified by the present state of naval construction, and to be demanded by a proper regard for the national safety and the national honor.

Italy has a vessel of war, as my friend, the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] tells me, of 13,200 tons.

Mr. HALE. They are building now two or three ships that are 14,000 tons.

Mr. GIBSON. And other ships are being built, as the Senator from Maine says, of 14,000 tons. Why should not the United States have one or two ships of 14,000 tons, or 15,000 tons, or 16,000 tons? We have the greatest continuous empire in the world with the longest coast line, and our countrymen are scattered throughout every nook and corner of the globe in various pursuits. Our intercourse with foreign powers is wholly by the sea and upon the sea. We have no territorial neighbors. Why should not this nation put upon the broad Atlantic and the Pacific vessels of war that shall be at least symbolical of its vast power, of its resources, of its scientific genius for war on the sea?

Sir, I can not understand how any Senator who feels his heart beat responsive to the destiny of our country, doubling in population every twenty-five years, soon to be 100,000,000, should not wish to put great ships upon the sea to guard our continental empire and that will be emblematic of our Union at home and of our power to protect American rights everywhere.

It would require eight or ten years to construct such vessels, and the work of construction would of itself constitute a school for the development of our skill and genius, and afford the stimulus and opportunity for excelling all other nations in the organization of our power on the ocean.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART].

Mr. HALE. Let that be reported from the desk so that we may see just what it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 972 it is proposed to strike out the words "one armored cruiser" and insert "two vessels of war;" in the same line, before the word "tons," to strike out "seven thousand five hundred" and insert "fifteen thousand;" after the word "tons," in the same line, to insert the word "each," and in line 974 to strike out the words "three millions and a half of" and insert "twenty million;" so as to read:

And two vessels of war of about 15,000 tons each displacement, to cost exclusive of armament not more than $20,000,000.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, there is certainly no reason why this country should not have ships which are quite equal in every quality of excellence to those possessed by any other country in the world, but I think there is very great reason why the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations to this bill should stand as it is, and that reason is that in all the speeches that have been made urging the change of the provision as reported from the committee there has not been furnished to the Senate nor to myself as one of it, speaking of my own judgment, any fact ascertained to be a fact upon which a reasonable judgment in favor of the change could be predicated.

It is an open question whether or not ships of this magnitude are the most efficient for the purposes of war. One Senator has an opinion that they are; another Senator to the contrary; but none of these Senators is an expert, none of them are acquainted personally and practically with the principles upon which this question must be determined in the construction of ships, and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate asserting the fact that the vessels proposed to be built are accepted everywhere as useful for certain purposes, but until it is ascertained in some definite shape, and until the Senator who proposes this change can come here with ascertained facts from authorized sources, to prove that the large ships are a success, it is unwise in the Senate to vote an appropriation of $20,000,000 to be expended for a purpose as to which they have no definite or practical knowledge, and for that reason I think the committee ought to be sustained.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment. [Putting the question.] The noes seem to have it.

Mr. STEWART. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HAWLEY. I supposed I was willing to go as far as the farthest in building a navy, and I think I am, but I am not prepared to order two vessels of 15,000 tons each, and yet I should very gladly avail myself of the feeling on this subject in the Senate to increase the appropriations of the Appropriations Committee very decidedly. There is no vessel so large as 15,000 tons in the world. The largest of which there is any record, unless something has been projected very lately, is——

Mr. GIBSON. The Senator from Connecticut will permit me. The language is "not to exceed 15,000 tons."

Mr. HAWLEY. Certainly. I would make a much lower limit. The largest in any published list—I think I have the latest authority—is 13,281 tons. There are two vessels of the Italian navy of 13,851 tons, and now they are building three more of 13,251 tons. Remember that those vessels, the largest built by the British navy running up to 11,940 tons, are built by nations that already have an excellent navy of the smaller sizes, and that while some of the continental nations, Russia to some extent, Germany to some extent, and Italy especially, are building these enormous vessels, others are turning their attention very closely to large fleets, or very considerable fleets in number, of a rapid cruiser style, and partially armored cruiser style.

Now the question is whether in beginning a navy we shall begin with the enormous expenditure upon two vessels just a little ahead of anything in the world, when we have none of the light cavalry, and scarcely any of the smaller fighting ships. When I originated this debate I did not think of its extending so long.

Mr. BLAIR. Will the Senator allow me to ask him one question?

Mr. HAWLEY. Certainly.

Mr. BLAIR. Is it not the fact that these smaller vessels can carry just as formidable an armament, and so, by reason of their swiftness and deftness of motion, become relatively to their cost much more formidable than the tremendous vessels we are talking about, which I understand the nations of Europe are about abandoning?

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator will not find in the list of foreign navies that any of these cruisers carry guns of the heaviest class. Their frames are not built to sustain the vast shock, the heavy armament, etc. They are not deemed fitted to the large guns.

Mr. BLAIR. Is it not the fact, nevertheless, that many of them can carry a smaller number of the very large guns?

Mr. HAWLEY. They do not think of putting a 16-inch, that is to say, a 110 or 118 ton gun upon them; but only a 12-inch gun.

Mr. BLAIR. How many of these larger guns are placed on these large vessels?

Mr. HAWLEY. Only perhaps two on the very largest, and those ordinarily they expect to put en barbette, behind for protection, or in turrets, or in the central citadel, not protecting the whole body of the ship, but the citadel, near the middle of it—central battery ships they are called.

I rose in the first place to protest mildly against the intimation of my friend from Maine that the larger vessels are antiquated and that people are abandoning them. Now the British are not within the last year laying down any more of them, and they are devoting their attention to swift cruisers, and so are some of the others, and the reason the British authorities give is that they have a pretty good supply of that character of ship now either finished or about being launched, and within the last eighteen months or so, are building the 7,500-ton size, and here is a long list that I have before me of the British vessels.

They have the Achilles. They launched in 1886 the Anson, of 10,000 tons, and launched in 1887, not completed yet, of course, the Aurora, of 5,000 tons. They launched in 1885 the Benbow, of 10,600 tons, which I had the great pleasure of walking through and over, and the Camperdown, of 10,000 tons, launched in 1886; the Collingwood, of 9,500 tons, finished in 1886; the Colossus, of 9,150 tons, finished in 1886; the Edinburgh, of 9,150 tons, finished in 1886; the Howe, of 9,700 tons, finished in 1887, and fourteen ships of that large class, and there are many others of those sizes built before that.

But I think I certainly would not undertake to put up two 15,000-ton ships at a cost of nobody knows what, though a limit of $20,000,000 is proposed, until I had provided for a considerable number of not only such as the committee propose to order, but even of the 7,500-ton type. There are some of the nations abroad that consider the 7,500-ton type a very valuable ship, indeed. It avoids the extremes of great weight and heavy armament.

Mr. HALE. Let me ask the Senator if he finds anywhere a record of a single war power that is now building armored ships of this 7,500-ton kind? What I said was that they are building and finishing the larger ones ranging about 10,000 tons, and Italy up to 14,000 tons, or else they are building fast cruisers. I find no record anywhere of any power that is building iron-clad ships now of this 7,500-ton class, which belongs to neither. It is not good for harbor defense, for battle, or for cruisers. That was my point. We are to build two of them experimentally—what no other power is doing now. The Italian ships that are being built—I have the record here—are very large, 14,000 tons. The Italia is almost as large as that. They have had her for several years, and I went all over her last year. She is 13,851 tons. The British are now building and finishing up (but ordering no new ones of this class) a class of vessels ranging between 10,000 and 11,000 tons. I can not find anywhere any war power that is building this armored class of ships of 7,000 tons.

Mr. HAWLEY. I will show the Senator that a nation that is studying and working very hard upon this is coming so near it that it would not take much of a figure to make such a ship. Among the vessels that Russia considers very valuable—these Russian names are too much for me—their length is about 300 feet, displacement 5,796 tons. Those are armored cruisers, but the Senator speaks of armored vessels. Lord Brassey—and this is "the Naval Annual," published by Lord Brassey—says:

The Admiral Nachimoff is 330 feet long (the Impérieuse is 315 feet), 61 feet broad (the Impérieuse is 62 feet), and has a displacement of 7,782 tons as compared with the 7,600 tons of the English vessel, as designed.

These vessels are built of iron and steel, sheathed with wood, and coppered.

Mr. HALE. I know about that ship. That is not what is called one of these armored ships.

Mr. HAWLEY. That is a very powerful ironclad.

Mr. HALE. I know, but Russia is building to-day of the iron-clad armored ships the Tcherma, 10,181 tons; the Sinope, 10,181 tons, and the Catherine II, 10,181 tons. Several of the European powers are building to-day ships ranging from 5,000 to about 6,000 tons and from that up to 7,000 tons; but they are not armored ships. They are fast ships.

They are building sometimes to the extent of a dozen at a time of fast ships. Russia is building four. They are iron ships, but they are not what we call armored ships. They do not go into that. They are ironclads, and that is another field, as the Senator from Connecticut knows just as well as I do. Nobody knows it better than he. These iron ships that are for speed, that are strong, that are good in battle, good in cruising, are very different from what are called technically and known as the ironclads. All of those that are building to-day are Russian.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator is quite correct in that, unless he means to rule out vessels of 8,000 tons. He makes a distinction between ironclads and armored ships, but an iron-clad ship is intended to do the heaviest kind of fighting with protected batteries and heavy turrets.

Mr. HALE. They do not armor them up to from 8 to 11, 14, and 16 inches in plate.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Alexandra and the Anson are examples of that class. They have a belt line each 9 inches in depth, and thickness in the center 12 inches. That is pretty good armor and broad belt.

Mr. HALE. Some ships have twice that.

Mr. HAWLEY. Of course. I know if you are going to build 10,000-ton ships, while they are building that class of vessels perhaps it would be better to say 8,000 tons than 7,000 tons that are iron-clad and good for the heaviest kind of fighting. I do not believe that even the 11,000-ton ship is regarded as antiquated or as a failure to be laid aside at all. It is simply because Great Britain has a good supply of them that she is now turning her attention to another class that is becoming popular among foreign nations, a class of swift fighting ships that will get hurt if they get into a fight; but they expect it, as it is part of their business, as our forefathers did in the war of 1812.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada asks that upon this question the yeas and nays may be entered on the Journal.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GEORGE. I should like to have the amendment read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read. The Secretary will first read the part proposed to be stricken out.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, in line 971, after the word "frames," to strike out down to and including the word "dollars," in line 974, as follows:

And one armored cruiser of about 7,500 tons displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament, not more than three millions and a half of dollars.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is a provision in the House bill which the committee propose to strike out. The Senator from Nevada moves to amend the part to be stricken out so as to read as follows.

The Chief Clerk read:

And two vessels of war of about 15,000 tons each displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament, not more than $20,000,000.

Mr. GIBSON. The amendment I suggested was "not more than 15,000 tons displacement and to cost not more than $20,000,000." It might be as much more as the Navy Department desire, 12,000 or 15,000 tons, as one Italian vessel of war is.

The CHIEF CLERK. So as to read:

And two vessels of war not less than 15,000 tons each displacement.

Mr. GIBSON. "Not more than fifteen thousand."

Mr. STEWART. "Not more."

The CHIEF CLERK. So as to read:

And two vessels of war not more than 15,000 tons each displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament, not more than $20,000,000.

Mr. PLUMB. Let the question be stated again.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The proposed amendment will be again read.

The CHIEF CLERK. So as to read:

And two vessels of war not more than 15,000 tons each displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament, not more than $20,000,000.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I would like to inquire if that amendment makes provision as to the size of the vessels and as to the amount of money that is to be expended?

Mr. GIBSON. It leaves everything to the Navy Department.

Mr. STEWART. If that language is not specific enough we had better have it "not more than $10,000,000 each."

Mr. SAULSBURY. That is a very large sum.

Mr. STEWART. Not more than $10,000,000 each.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment as proposed to be modified by the Senator from Nevada will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

And two vessels of war of not more than 15,000 tons each displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament, not more than $10,000,000 each.

Mr. SAULSBURY. It seems to me that the amount proposed by that amendment is too large. I do not see why a 15,000-ton vessel should cost that sum, nor do I see any necessity of expending $10,000,000 upon any one vessel. No two ships should cost as much as the whole United States Navy cost prior to 1832. I shall vote against the amendment. I think we had better pass the clause as it came from the other House. I am in favor of making some progress in the creation of a navy, but I am not in favor of expending the whole surplus in the public Treasury in constructing these two vessels.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FAULKNER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. I do not know how he would vote. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]; but knowing, as I do, if he were here that he would vote "nay," I will record my vote "nay."

Mr. MANDERSON (when Mr. PADDOCK'S name was called). My colleague [Mr. PADDOCK] is paired generally with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. EUSTIS]. I do not know how he would vote on this proposition.

Mr. PUGH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS]. I have no idea that he would vote for this amendment, if present. I therefore record my vote "nay."

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WILSON]. I do not know how he would vote if he were present, but I should vote "nay."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. ALDRICH. My colleague [Mr. CHACE] is paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT].

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. DOLPH] is detained from the Senate by sickness in his family. He is generally paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BROWN]. I am not advised how either Senator would vote if here; but I am inclined to think that my colleague would vote "yea."

Mr. KENNA. I am generally paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SABIN], but I voted on this question because I feel at liberty to do so. I announce the pair, though.

The result was announced—yeas 9, nays 41; as follows:

YEAS—9.

Butler,	Gibson,	Mitchell,	Stewart,
Cameron,	Hampton,	Platt,	Teller.
Evarts,

NAYS—41.

Aldrich,	Cullom,	Hiscock,	Ransom,
Allison,	Davis,	Ingalls,	Reagan,
Bate,	Dawes,	Jones of Arkansas,	Saulsbury,
Beck,	Farwell,	Kenna,	Sawyer,
Berry,	Frye,	Manderson,	Spooner,
Blackburn,	George,	Morgan,	Stockbridge,
Blair,	Gorman,	Palmer,	Turpie,
Call,	Gray,	Pasco,	Walthall.
Chandler,	Hale,	Payne,
Cockrell,	Harris,	Plumb,
Coke,	Hawley,	Pugh,

ABSENT—26.

Blodgett,	Edmunds,	Morrill,	Vance,
Bowen,	Eustis,	Paddock,	Vest,
Brown,	Faulkner,	Quay,	Voorhees,
Chace,	Hearst,	Riddleberger,	Wilson of Iowa,
Colquitt,	Hoar,	Sabin,	Wilson of Md.
Daniel,	Jones of Nevada,	Sherman,
Dolph,	McPherson,	Stanford,

So the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the amendment proposed by the committee to strike out the lines which have been read.

Mr. BUTLER. Let us have the yeas and nays on that question.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the amendment be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the committee is to strike out the words which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. After the word "frames," in line 971, it is proposed to strike out all down to and including the word "dollars," in line 974, as follows:

And one armored cruiser of about 7,500 tons displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament, not more than three millions and a half of dollars.

Mr. HAWLEY. I move to strike out the word "cruiser," and insert "vessel," so as to give a wider discretion to the Secretary of the Navy. He may want a vessel for harbor defense.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The language proposed to be stricken out has been amended so as to read as follows:

The CHIEF CLERK:

And one armored vessel of about 7,500 tons displacement, to cost, exclusive of armament, not more than three millions and a half of dollars.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the motion to strike out.

Mr. STEWART. I desire to amend that further by saying "not less than 8,000 tons."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The proposed amendment will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 972 it is proposed to strike out the words "of about 7,500" and to insert "not less than 8,000;" so as to read:

And one armored vessel of not less than 8,000 tons.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the proposed amendment of the committee to strike out.

Mr. HALE. I only wish to say that the whole discussion, as the vote that was just taken, shows how uncertain this whole domain of building armored ships is. One man wants one thing and another wants another. I am not going to repeat the style of arguments we have been treated to. The committee has substituted three good war ships of 2,000 tons each and recommends that, and I hope that the Senate will sustain the committee and let the work go on as it is now, with the two ships we are building of this kind, and not embark in the experiment of another. I hope we shall strike this out.

Mr. MORGAN. This amendment comes from the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, for whom we all have, of course, the very greatest respect, and they are diligent and attentive and able, but as I understand it the text of the bill that the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate moves to strike out was matured by the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House, and after very careful study. We know the composition of that committee. I know the chairman of it well, a gentleman from my own State, and I think there is not a more conscientious legislator in the American Congress than the chairman of the Naval Committee of the House.

This subject has been studied to the bottom, and there is no uncertainty about it. It comes from a committee charged with the investigation of the very subject, the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House, and I think the Senate can afford to rely upon the judgment of that committee quite as well as it can upon the opinion of any other body in the Senate except the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HALE. Let us have a vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The roll-call will proceed.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FAULKNER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. If he were here I should vote "yea."

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). Not knowing how the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL] would vote on this question, I withhold my vote. If he were here I would vote with the committee.

Mr. PUGH (when his name was called). I am paired.

Mr. COCKRELL (when Mr. VEST'S name was called). My colleague [Mr. VEST] has been called home by the illness of his wife and is paired with the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] on general questions, but my colleague would vote as the Senator from Kansas would on this question.

Mr. ALLISON (when the name of Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, was called). My colleague [Mr. WILSON] is temporarily absent from the Chamber, and is paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WILSON]. My colleague would vote "yea" if he were here.

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. ALDRICH. My colleague [Mr. CHACE] is paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT].

The result was announced—yeas 37, nays 11; as follows:

YEAS—37.

Aldrich,	Cockrell,	Hampton,	Ransom,
Allison,	Coke,	Hoar,	Saulsbury,
Bate,	Cullom,	Ingalls,	Sawyer,
Beck,	Dawes,	Jones of Arkansas,	Spooner,
Berry,	Farwell,	Kenna,	Stockbridge,
Blackburn,	Frye,	Manderson,	Turpie,
Blair,	George,	Mitchell,	Walthall.
Call,	Gorman,	Palmer,
Cameron,	Gray,	Payne,
Chandler,	Hale,	Plumb,

NAYS—11.

Butler,	Gibson,	Pasco,	Stewart,
Davis,	Hawley,	Platt,	Teller.
Evarts,	Morgan,	Reagan,

ABSENT—28.

Blodgett,	Edmunds,	McPherson,	Sherman,
Bowen,	Eustis,	Morrill,	Stanford,
Brown,	Faulkner,	Paddock,	Vance,
Chace,	Harris,	Pugh,	Vest,
Colquitt,	Hearst,	Quay,	Voorhees,
Daniel,	Hiscock,	Riddleberger,	Wilson of Iowa,
Dolph,	Jones of Nevada,	Sabin,	Wilson of Md.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reading of the bill will proceed.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 41, line 975, before the word "cruisers," to insert the words "first three," and after the word "cruisers," to strike out "not provided to be armored;" so as to read:

The contracts for the construction of said first three cruisers shall contain provisions to the effect that the contractor guaranties that when completed and tested for speed, under conditions to be prescribed by the Navy Department, the two vessels first hereinbefore provided for shall each exhibit a maximum speed of at least 19 knots per hour; and the vessel of 5,300 tons displacement, a maximum speed of at least 20 knots per hour; and in the case of each vessel, for every quarter knot of speed so exhibited above said guaranty the contractor shall receive a premium over and above the contract price of $50,000; and for every quarter knot that such vessel fails of reaching said guarantied speed there shall be deducted from the contract price the sum of $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the same clause, on page 41, line 989, after the word "dollars," to insert:

And in the contract for the construction of the three last-mentioned vessels such provisions for increased speed and the premium for the same shall be made as in the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy may be deemed advisable.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the same clause, on page 42, line 1002, after the words "domestic manufacture," to strike out:

At least one of said vessels shall be built in one of the navy-yards of the United States; and if the Secretary shall be unable to contract at reasonable prices for the building of any of the others of said vessels, then he may build such vessel in such navy-yards as he may designate.

Mr. MORGAN. I desire to amend the text of the bill as it came from the House before the question is put on the motion to strike out. I desire to leave it stand in the following language, commencing in line 1004:

If the Secretary of the Navy shall be unable to contract at reasonable prices for the building of any of the others of said vessels, then he may build such vessel in such navy-yards as he may designate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated from the desk.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 1002, after the work "manufacture," it is proposed to strike out down to and including the word "and," in line 1004, as follows:

At least one of said vessels shall be built in one of the navy-yards of the United States; and.

Mr. HALE. That is right.

Mr. CALL. I hope that amendment will not be agreed to. The provision for building one of these vessels in the navy-yards of the United States is, I think, one that may be very valuable to the public service. It places the Secretary of the Navy beyond the reach of contractors. Then, again, this result is attained by leaving the clause as it stands, but it is a concession to the labor of the country. It enables the laborers of the country to have some other competitor for their labor than that afforded by private contractors, and in that respect I think it is a reasonable concession to them.

But I have another and still more forcible reason, in my judgment, for objecting to this provision. It is an important part in every appropriation of the public money that its expenditure should not be confined to any one locality, that so far as practicable the advantages of the expenditure of the large revenues of the Government should be shared equally in all parts of the country. Now, if we wish to create a public sentiment favorable to the construction of a navy, it is eminently wise that these ships should be built in different parts of the country.

In the Gulf of Mexico, upon the Pacific coast, upon the Atlantic coast of the Southern States there are no private establishments which are adequate for construction of these ships; but in the navy-yard at Pensacola and elsewhere it would not be difficult for the Government to construct one of these vessels probably as cheaply as it could be done by private contract elsewhere; and it is, therefore, only reasonable that the opportunity, the possibility at least, of some expenditure of the public money should be given in other localities than those where great accumulated wealth has furnished the means for executing these contracts.

It is eminently wise that Congress should say to the people of the United States that in the expenditure of these large sums of money collected by taxation from them, so far as consistent with the public service, it shall be done in various localities in the country, and not confined to any one particular locality; and, in my judgment, it will be very wise for the Secretary of the Navy to make use of some of the navy-yards, and especially of the navy-yards upon the Gulf of Mexico, in order that this feeling may be produced and this justice done to that portion, as well as all other portions of the country. I hope therefore that this amendment will not be agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. MORGAN. I desire to make a verbal correction.

Mr. HALE. That will come after this is adopted.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MORGAN. In lines 1005 and 1006 I move to strike out "the others of;" and after the word "Secretary," in line 1004, to insert "of the Navy;" so as to read:

If the Secretary of the Navy shall be unable to contract at reasonable prices for the building of any of said vessels, then he may build such vessel in such navy-yards as he may designate.

Mr. HALE. That is right.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now recurs upon the amendment of the committee to strike out the paragraph.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope it will not be agreed to.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 42, line 1012, after the word "act," to strike out "four million" and insert "three million five hundred thousand;" so as to make the clause read:

Construction and steam machinery: Towards the construction and completion of the new vessels heretofore or herein authorized by Congress, and for the payment of premiums for increased speed or horse-power under contracts now existing or to be made under this act, $3,500,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 42, line 1016, after the word "all," to strike out "six" and insert "five;" and in the same line, after the word "million," to insert "five hundred thousand;" so as to make the clause read:

Armament: Towards the armor and armament of domestic manufacture of new ships heretofore or herein authorized, $2,000,000; in all, $5,500,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 42, after line 1017, to insert:

Steel practice vessel: For the construction and armament of one steel practice vessel of 800 tons, to be built by contract in accordance with the terms of the "Act to increase the naval establishment," approved August 3, 1886, $275,000.

Mr. GORMAN. I would like to ask the Senator from Maine, who has charge of the bill, if this paragraph that we are considering is practically the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] for a small vessel for the use of the cadets of the Naval Academy at Annapolis?

Mr. HALE. Yes, sir.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask the Senator whether it is specific enough so that it may be understood that this appropriation is for that purpose.

Mr. HALE. The committee considered that "one steel practice vessel" described it, because it is only used for the cadets at Annapolis. There is no other purpose for which it can be used. If the Senator has any doubt about it he may add: "for the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis."

Mr. GORMAN. I rather think that would be better.

Mr. HALE. Then, after the word "tons," in line 1019, I move to add:

For the use of the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

So that the paragraph will read:

Steel practice vessel: For the construction and armament of one steel practice vessel of 800 tons, for the use of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, to be built by contract in accordance with the terms of the "Act to increase the naval establishment," approved August 3, 1886, $275,000.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. MORGAN. I desire to give notice that I shall ask a separate vote in the Senate on the paragraph in the bill between lines 309 and 314, on page 14.

Mr. HAWLEY. The amendments proposed by the committee having been disposed of, I invite the attention of the Senator having charge of the bill to line 550, providing clerical service at the navy-yard in Washington in the general store-houses, and I move to insert, after the word "dollars," in line 550, on page 23, the words "one clerk, at $1,200."

Mr. HALE. Is that estimated for?

Mr. HAWLEY. In the Book of Estimates I find on page 131, "one book-keeper," which the bill has got; "one stationery clerk," omitted; "one bill clerk, one shipping clerk," provided for. This clerk is omitted as I know from the officer in charge of the navy-yard representing that particular department.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 550, after the word "dollars," insert "one clerk, $1,200."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CALL. I ask to reserve the amendment striking out the navy-yards.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment reserved by the Senator will be noted.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments, with the exception of the two reserved, will, if there be no objection, be concurred in in the Senate. [Putting the question.] They are concurred in. The question recurs on concurring in the first reserved amendment, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 14, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, agreed to the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations striking out the clause from line 309 to line 314, inclusive, as follows:

For the expenses of a commission of three officers, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Navy, to report as to the most desirable location on or near the coast of the Gulf of Mexico for a navy-yard and docks for shipping and for the expenses of sounding and surveying and estimating expenses, $50,000.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President——

Mr. CALL. I will ask the Senator from Maine if he will not yield at this stage of the bill for a motion to adjourn? The discussion of this amendment which is reserved by the Senator from Alabama I think will occupy some little time, and I shall feel constrained myself to offer some suggestions with regard to it.

Mr. HALE. For one, Mr. President, I am entirely willing to stay and try to complete the bill to-night. I hope we can get through.

Mr. BECK. I agree with the Senator from Maine that it ought not to take very long. I only desire to say for myself as one of the subcommittee that I consented to striking it out upon the ground that I thought the Secretary of the Navy had power to make all the examinations, but upon looking at it this proposes to give the Secretary the power to commission three officers—

To report as to the most desirable location on or near the coast of the Gulf of Mexico for a navy-yard and docks for shipping and for the expenses of sounding and surveying and estimating expenses, $50,000.

He has no power now to make any examination of yards or make any surveys or examinations, but I thought he did have that right without this amendment, and I consented to strike it out. If they wish to make an examination of that sort, and a thorough one, I, for one, shall vote to restore the House provision.

Mr. MORGAN. I wish to offer a very few observations on this subject. Ever since I have been in the Senate I have been very desirous that the waters of the Gulf of Mexico should be examined with reference to the capacity of that part of the world for building ships and building guns. It is understood, I believe, amongst ship constructors and amongst those who have charge of ships that fresh water is one of the essential parts of ship-building yards and ship-repairing yards for iron and steel ships. It is an indispensable thing to have fresh water.

Here is the Mississippi River from St. Louis to its mouth, that furnishes very many excellent localities for the building of iron and steel ships. The capacity for receiving such material as may be necessary is something wonderful. The Mississippi is connected from St. Louis down with all the great steel and iron establishments in the interior of the country, and with the coal and whatever is necessary for ship construction. So it may be said of the waters lying west of the mouth of the Mississippi River. So it may be said of the waters of the Alabama River, the vast quantities of coal and iron that we have in the hills of Alabama, and the fine navigation of the Alabama River and the Mobile River. I had supposed that we could find a locality in the South, along the Gulf or the waters tributary to the Gulf, which would be as excellent as any that can be found in the Hudson River or in the Delaware River or in any other part of the United States for building ships. We need such an establishment, but we know nothing about that locality as adapted for the purpose.

I know nothing about the Mobile River from Mount Vernon down to Mobile, except by my personal observation in passing over it a great many times, and I had the same opinion which gentlemen who are familiar with that subject have had for many years, that that would be a good location for the building of ships. But recently I prevailed upon the Coast Survey to make a survey from Mount Vernon to the junction of the Tombigbee and Alabama Rivers, which together constitute the Mobile River, and I find, very much to my astonishment, a vast stretch of deep water from Mount Vernon clear down to Mobile.

It may be that that is not the best locality; Mobile Bay, it may be, may not be the best locality. The Mississippi River may be very much better, but it is fair and due to that section of the world that there should be a commission organized under the Secretary of the Navy to ascertain simply what is the best place in all of that region of waters for the construction of ships.

Mount Vernon is 65 miles below the junction of the Tombigbee and Alabama Rivers, and about 56 miles north of Mobile, in a beautiful location, with high land upon the banks, and a great abundance of fine timber there, upon the national reservation, of every imaginable variety. But it may not be that that locality will be selected. If it is so prominently better than any other locality, of course we ought not to hesitate about it, but ought to select it and put a ship-yard there; but I propose to have it investigated, as I have been trying to do for several years, under the authority of the Secretary of the Navy.

We can not do it now because it is necessary to make some borings and soundings to ascertain the depth of water and the nature of the bank, and the shores, and all that, before anybody can venture to recommend that a ship-yard be located at any one of these places.

I desire to say that this is not a movement in opposition to the Pensacola navy-yard. That may be the best place, but that place ought to go into fair rivalry and competition with the other places on that subject. Not only so, but we want a place that is so far retired in the interior that it is not assailable by the ships of an enemy in time of war—a place of perfect security.

I do not know but that it may be ascertained that Memphis, or at St. Louis, or some other place farther down the Mississippi River, perhaps Baton Rouge, may be a better location than any we can show in Alabama; but whatever it is, the people in the central and southern part of the United States ought to enjoy this facility.

That is all I desire to say about it.

Mr. CALL. If there was any fact which could be collected by this commission for which this $50,000 is to be expended, there might be some reason for it; but the reports of the engineers furnish complete and satisfactory information, all that is possible to be obtained in reference to every possible locality suitable for a navy-yard.

Now, I take it that Congress is not going to be influenced, and ought not to be influenced, in its opinion and determination in regard to this matter by the opinions of any three or any six, or any number of persons outside of Congress, but that their judgment is to be formed upon facts ascertained in a satisfactory manner.

There are no facts for this commission to ascertain. They must rely upon the well-known and established geographical features of the country and the facts in regard to the depth of water and the general topographical character of the land as reported in the official papers upon that subject already fully and completely.

But that is not all. Not only is there entire inutility in this proceeding, but it is a fact that it has been investigated time and time again. I have here the reports, commencing in 1824, when New Orleans was a naval station and when everybody concurred, the Navy, the Engineer Department, and both branches of Congress, in the absolute necessity of removing the naval station from that place, and why? For facts which are obvious. And who will now pretend to say that there is the least reason or the least plausibility in the suggestion that the naval station for the construction of ships can be built in a river, the approach to which depends upon artificial means of communication which may be at any time destroyed in a moment, in an hour?

In 1824 the naval station was established at Pensacola. I have here the instructions from the Navy Department of September 15, 1825, and the report of William Bainbridge, Lewis Warrington, and James Biddle, captains in the United States Navy.

PENSACOLA, November 4, 1825.

* * * * * * *

The Bay of Pensacola is extensive and capacious, easy of access from sea, and affording secure anchorage for any number of vessels of the largest class. The depth of water on the bar, as laid down by Major Kearney, of the Topographical Engineers, is 21 feet. From the report to us of Lieutenant Pinkham, of the John Adams, whom we directed to sound, and from all the information we have been enabled to collect, at least this depth of water, we believe, will always be found on the bar, even after a long continuance of northerly winds. The northerly winds sensibly affect the waters on this part of the coast; they, however seldom continue long. The ordinary tides do not rise more than 3 feet, but these tides run with considerable rapidity, thus affording facilities to vessels working in or out of the harbor against an unfavorable wind.

The position which we have selected, as in our judgment combining the greatest advantages for a navy-yard, is in the vicinity of Barancas, and to the northward and eastward of Tartar's Point.

Here we found the necessary depth of water nearest the shore; an important consideration in respect to the expense to be incurred in carrying out the wharves required for naval purposes. Here, too, the works erected for the defense of the navy-yard would give additional security to the harbor, while its vicinity to the Baranca would admit of assistance to it in case of need from the troops stationed there. Here we are, in our opinion, susceptible of complete defense, at a less expense than elsewhere within the bay. The position is wholly protected by Tartar's Point against the swell of the sea which strong southerly winds set over the bar. It is favorably situated for rendering prompt assistance to vessels approaching the harbor. Its healthiness is not surpassed by any other part of the bay, and fresh water is there abundant and of a wholesome quality.

That report was made by three of the most eminent and distinguished officers of the United States Navy at that time. I have here a letter purporting to contain a statement of Admiral Farragut, in which he says that the preservation of the harbor at Pensacola as a naval station was worth in itself a war.

What are the places? Here is Tampa Bay to the far south, with a depth of water at a small expense capable of being made easy of admission for vessels of any size, but requiring some expenditure to make it, the river and harbor bill of this year containing the necessary appropriation. Here is Pensacola with a most magnificent harbor and a depth of water now at low tide of 24 feet, which has cost the Government a small expenditure of about two hundred thousand dollars, and Mobile with only 17 feet, after an expenditure commencing in 1834, I think, as shown by this paper of over a million and a quarter of dollars.

Yet the natural advantages of the harbor of Pensacola are such that even with comparatively no expenditure of money, or only a small amount as compared with upwards of a million and a quarter dollars at Mobile, commencing with a draught of 8 feet of water, they have been able to obtain an average of only 15 instead of 17 feet—17 feet one year and a narrow channel of 125 feet—while we have this magnificent harbor at Pensacola, with all this naval authority and with the experience of more than half a century, with the certificates of all the admirals and men of naval celebrity of Spain and England since the discovery of this continent, who have reported in favor of the great natural advantages of the magnificent harbor of Pensacola.

Mr. President, what are you going to investigate? Mobile, with its 17 feet of water for a few months, and then 15½ feet average, according to the report of the Engineer Department for 1887; New Orleans, 200 miles up a river the access to which is only preserved by the jetties and the constant care and expenditure of money; Galveston, with its shallow water and its difficult access, to be improved by large sums of money; or Pensacola, with its immediate proximity to inexhaustible stores of coal and iron, with the most capacious harbor upon the coast of America, in immediate proximity to Central and South America and the West Indies. What is there to investigate about it?

Mr. President, this is only a proposition to unsettle that which nature has settled and what the history and experience of the country in all the waters have confirmed.

Mr. BUTLER. Will the Senator from Florida yield to me for a motion?

Mr. CALL. I have no objection, sir.

Mr. BUTLER. May I inquire of the Senator from Maine if there is any objection to an adjournment now?

Mr. HALE. It is so late that I do not feel like urging the Senate to remain any longer.

Mr. BUTLER. Then I move to adjourn.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator from South Carolina allow me to introduce a resolution for reference?

Mr. BUTLER. Certainly.

RELATIONS WITH CANADA.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That a committee of seven Senators be appointed by the Chair whose duty it shall be to report upon the relations of commerce and business existing between the United States and the dependencies of Great Britain in North America, including the effect upon the commerce and carrying trade of the United States of the Canadian system of railways and canals now existing and in contemplation, and the prospect of the displacement of any existing industries of the United States by industries established there; also whether the obligations of existing treaties and of international law are and have been observed by the said dependencies toward the people of the United States, and the number, amount, and character of the existing claims against Great Britain by reason of the violation of such obligations toward the people of the United States in said dependencies.

Said committee shall have power to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to employ a clerk, messenger and stenographer, and to sit anywhere in the United States during the session and during the recess of Congress.

Any subcommittee by them appointed may exercise the same powers as the full committee.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had non-concurred in the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10347) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near the city of Plattsmouth, Nebr., and for other purposes, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CRISP, Mr. ANDERSON of Iowa, and Mr. DUNHAM the managers of the conference on the part of the House.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to give notice that immediately after the completion of the naval appropriation bill I shall ask the Senate to take up the Army appropriation bill.

BRIGHTWOOD RAILWAY COMPANY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2742) to incorporate the Brightwood Railway Company of the District of Columbia.

Mr. HARRIS. I move that the Senate non-concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives and request a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. HARRIS, Mr. SPOONER, and Mr. FARWELL were appointed.

GEORGETOWN BARGE, DOCK, AND ELEVATOR COMPANY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2252) to incorporate the Georgetown Barge, Dock, Elevator, and Railway Company.

Mr. HARRIS. In the absence of the Senator who reported the bill, I move that the Senate non-concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives and request a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. RIDDLEBERGER, Mr. FARWELL, and Mr. HARRIS were appointed.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills, received from the House of Representatives, were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia:

A bill (H. R. 7083) to regulate the powers and duties of the board of trustees of the Industrial Home School of the District of Columbia in respect to infant wards and scholars, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7785) for the relief of attendants on the insane at Hospital for the Insane in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 7864) to reappropriate to pay for alley condemned in square numbered 493;

A bill (H. R. 8272) to provide for the payment of F. H. Bates as military instructor at the Washington High School, District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 9769) to punish public drunkenness in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 9977) to authorize the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company to extend a side-track into square No. 1025 in the city of Washington; and

A bill (H. R. 10758) to amend the charter of the Capitol, North O Street and South Washington Railway Company.

The bill (H. R. 8990) to provide for the adjudication and payment of claims arising from Indian depredations was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

SCRIP LOCATION.

Mr. HAMPTON. I move to reconsider the vote by which the Senate postponed indefinitely the bill (S. 1585) providing for the location of scrip issued under the acts of August 31, 1852, and June 22, 1860, with a view of having the bill recommitted to the Committee on Public Lands. Some additional evidence has been brought in that I should be very glad for the committee to have.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The vote by which the bill was indefinitely postponed will be reconsidered, if there be no objection, and the bill will be recommitted to the Committee on Public Lands. The Chair hears no objection, and it will be so ordered.

Mr. BUTLER. I renew my motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina moves that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 53 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, July 25, 1888, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, July 24, 1888.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

CIVIL-SERVICE REFORM.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, referred to the Select Committee on Reform in the Civil Service, and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

Pursuant to the second section of chapter 27 of the laws of 1883, entitled "An act to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States," I herewith transmit the fourth report of the United States Civil Service Commission, covering the period between the 16th day of January, 1886, and the 1st day of July, 1887.

While this report has especial reference to the operations of the commission during the period above mentioned, it contains, with its accompanying appendices, much valuable information concerning the inception of civil-service reform and its growth and progress, which can not fail to be interesting and instructive to all who desire improvement in administrative methods.

During the time covered by the report 15,852 persons were examined for admission in the classified civil service of the Government in all its branches, of whom 10,746 passed the examination and 5,106 failed. Of those who passed the examination, 2,977 were applicants for admission to the departmental service at Washington, 2,547 were examined for admission to the customs service, and 5,222 for admission to the postal service. During the same period 547 appointments were made from the eligible lists to the departmental service, 611 to the customs service, and 3,254 to the postal service.

Concerning separations from the classified service, the report only informs us of such as have occurred among employés in the public service who had been appointed from eligible lists under civil-service rules. When these rules took effect they did not apply to the persons then in the service, comprising a full complement of employés who obtained their positions independently of the new law. The commission has no record of the separations in this numerous class, and the discrepancy apparent in the report between the number of appointments made in the respective branches of the service from the lists of the commission and the small number of separations mentioned is to a great extent accounted for by vacancies of which no report was made to the commission, occurring among those who held their places without examination and certification, which vacancies were filled by appointment from the eligible lists.

In the departmental service there occurred between the 16th day of January, 1886, and the 30th day of June, 1887, among the employés appointed from the eligible lists under civil-service rules, seventeen removals, thirty-six resignations, and five deaths. This does not include fourteen separations in the grade of special examiners, four by removal, five by resignation, and five by death.

In the classified customs and postal service the number of separations among those who received absolute appointments under civil-service rules are given for the period between the 1st day of January, 1886, and the 30th day of June, 1887. It appears that such separations in the customs service for the time mentioned embraced twenty-one removals, five deaths, and eighteen resignations, and in the postal service two hundred and fifty-six removals, twenty-three deaths, and four hundred and sixty-nine resignations.

More than a year has passed since the expiration of the period covered by the report of the commission. Within the time which has thus elapsed many important changes have taken place in furtherance of a reform in our civil service. The rules and regulations governing the execution of the law upon the subject have been completely remodeled in such manner as to render the enforcement of the statute more effective and greatly increase its usefulness.

Among other things, the scope of the examinations prescribed for those who seek to enter the classified service has been better defined and made more practical, the number of names to be certified from the eligible lists to the appointing officers from which a selection is made has been reduced from four to three, the maximum limitation of the age of persons seeking entrance to the classified service to forty-five years has been changed, and reasonable provision has been made for the transfer of employés from one Department to another in proper cases. A plan has also been devised providing for the examination of applicants for promotion in the service, which, when in full operation, will eliminate all chance of favoritism in the advancement of employés, by making promotion a reward of merit and faithful discharge of duty.

Until within a few weeks there was no uniform classification of employés in the different Executive Departments of the Government. As a result of this condition, in some of the Departments positions could be obtained without civil-service examination because they were not within the classification of such Department, while in other Departments an examination and certification were necessary to obtain positions of the same grade, because such positions were embraced in the classifications applicable to those Departments.

The exception of laborers, watchmen, and messengers from examination and classification gave opportunity, in the absence of any rule guarding against it, for the employment, free from civil-service restrictions, of persons under these designations who were immediately detailed to do clerical work.

All this has been obviated by the application to all the Departments of an extended and uniform classification embracing grades of employés not heretofore included, and by the adoption of a rule prohibiting the detail of laborers, watchmen, or messengers to clerical duty.

The path of civil-service reform has not at all times been pleasant nor easy. The scope and purpose of the reform have been much misapprehended; and this has not only given rise to strong opposition, but has led to its invocation by its friends to compass objects not in the least related to it. Thus partisans of the patronage system have naturally condemned it. Those who do not understand its meaning either mistrust it, or when disappointed because in its present stage it is not applied to every real or imaginary ill, accuse those charged with its enforcement with faithlessness to civil-service reform.

Its importance has frequently been underestimated; and the support of good men has thus been lost by their lack of interest in its success. Besides all these difficulties, those responsible for the administration of the Government in its executive branches have been and still are often annoyed and irritated by the disloyalty to the service and the insolence of employés who remain in place as the beneficiaries, and the relics and reminders of the vicious system of appointment which civil-service reform was intended to displace.

And yet these are but the incidents of an advance movement, which is radical and far-reaching. The people are, notwithstanding, to be congratulated upon the progress which has been made, and upon the firm, practical, and sensible foundation upon which this reform now rests.

With a continuation of the intelligent fidelity which has hitherto characterized the work of the commission, with a continuation and increase of the favor and liberality which have lately been evinced by the Congress in the proper equipment of the commission for its work, with a firm but conservative and reasonable support of the reform by all its friends, and with the disappearance of opposition which must inevitably follow its better understanding, the execution of the civil-service law can not fail to ultimately answer the hopes in which it had its origin.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 21, 1888.

Mr. KERR. I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Civil Service Reform if there is any report from that commission later than 1887?

Mr. CRISP. The chairman of the committee, my colleague, Mr. CLEMENTS, is not present.

CATHOLIC CHURCH OF MACON CITY, MO.

Mr. HATCH, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 10967) making an appropriation to reimburse the Catholic Church of Macon City, Mo., for the use and occupation of their church building by United States troops during the late civil war; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

FORT BROOKE MILITARY RESERVATION, FLORIDA.

Mr. DAVIDSON, of Florida, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 10968) for the donation of Fort Brooke military reservation at Tampa, Fla., for free schools and other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

EXTERMINATION OF "WHITE SCALE."

Mr. FELTON, by unanimous consent, introduced a joint resolution (H. Res. 204) to appropriate money for the investigation of the white scale (Icerya purchasi); which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Agriculture, and ordered to be printed.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT, SIGNAL SERVICE.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of War of a deficiency in the appropriations for the medical department of the Signal Service for the fiscal year 1887; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

WELLAND CANAL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the House, a report from the Commissioner of Navigation relative to the use of the Welland Canal.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks this resolution was introduced originally by the gentleman from Maine [Mr. DINGLEY]. The communication will be referred for the present to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

PER DIEM ALLOWANCE TO WITNESSES, TERRITORIAL COURTS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Acting Attorney-General, transmitting, with accompanying papers, a letter from the Secretary of the Interior in relation to per diem allowances to witnesses in United States courts in the Territories; which was referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Justice.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSISSIPPI, BURLINGTON, IOWA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2170) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Burlington, in the State of Iowa.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, this is one of a number of House bills with Senate amendments where the Senate has asked a conference with the House. In nearly all, perhaps in all but one, of these bills, which I will mention when it is reached, the amendments proposed by the Senate make no material change, and I therefore ask unanimous consent to concur in the amendments of the Senate to this bill and avoid the necessity of a conference.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BURROWS. What is the bill?

Mr. CRISP. To authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Burlington.

Mr. BURROWS. I presume these are merely formal amendments of the Senate?

Mr. CRISP. Yes, sir.

There being no objection, the Senate amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI, PONCA, NEBR.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2625) authorizing the erection of a bridge across the Missouri River at Ponca, Nebr.

Mr. DORSEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask concurrence in the amendments of the Senate, which are merely formal.

There being no objection, the amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE HILLSBOROUGH RIVER, FLORIDA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8353) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Hillsborough River at a point in the town of New Smyrna, in the county of Volusia and State of Florida.

Mr. CRISP. I make the same request in regard to the amendments of the Senate to this bill.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGES ACROSS THE FLINT AND CHATTAHOOCHEE RIVERS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10538) to authorize the construction of bridges across the Flint and Chattahoochee Rivers.

Mr. CRISP. I ask that the House concur in the Senate amendments to this bill.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. I ask that the amendments be read.

The amendments of the Senate were read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia that the House concur in the Senate amendments to this bill?

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. I have no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI NEAR PLATTSMOUTH.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 10347) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near the city of Plattsmouth, Nebr., and for other purposes, with the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. CRISP. I ask unanimous consent to non-concur in the Senate amendments to the bill, and that the conference asked for be agreed to.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

BRIDGE ACROSS BAYOU BARTHOLOMEW.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 9420) authorizing the Houston, Central Arkansas and Northern Railway Company to construct and maintain bridges across Bayou Bartholomew, and across Ouachita, Red, Little, and Sabine Rivers, in Louisiana, with the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. CRISP. I ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendments.

There being no objection, the amendments of the Senate were agreed to.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE OOSTENAULA RIVER.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 9086) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Oostenaula River at or near Rome, Ga.; with the amendment of the Senate thereto.

Mr. CRISP. I ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Georgia whether the amendments to these bills have been examined?

Mr. CRISP. I would state to the gentleman from Kansas that they have been examined in the RECORD, and in every case they are purely formal, except one or two, where some necessary and usual provision has been omitted, and in the bill where we have non-concurred, at the request of the gentleman near me who introduced the bill, a conference was asked.

There being no objection, the Senate amendment was concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE TENNESSEE RIVER NEAR KNOXVILLE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 9079) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Tennessee River at or near Knoxville, Tenn., with the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. CRISP. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendments be concurred in.

There being no objection, the Senate amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE ST. JOHN'S RIVER, FLORIDA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 8355) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the St. John's River between De Land Landing and Lake Monroe, in the State of Florida, with the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. CRISP. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendments be concurred in.

There being no objection, the Senate amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI RIVER AT FOREST CITY, DAK.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 6699) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at Forest City, Dak., by the Forest City and Watertown Railway Company, with the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. GIFFORD. I ask unanimous consent that the amendments of the Senate be concurred in.

There being no objection, the Senate amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 3523) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, and to establish it as a post-road, with the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. CRISP. I ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendments.

There being no objection, the Senate amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS TENNESSEE RIVER, ALABAMA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 7899) authorizing the construction of a bridge over the Tennessee River at or near Lamb's Ferry, Alabama, and for other purposes, with the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. CRISP. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendments be concurred in.

There being no objection, the Senate amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER, MONTANA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 3070) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, in Montana, with the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. TOOLE. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendments be concurred in.

There being no objection, the Senate amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS OCMULGEE RIVER, GEORGIA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 5095) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Ocmulgee River, in the State of Georgia, and for other purposes, with the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. CRISP. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendments be concurred in.

There being no objection, the Senate amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER, DAKOTA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 7438) granting to the Aberdeen, Bismarck and Northwestern Railway Company the right to construct and maintain a bridge across the Missouri River, near Winona, Emmons County, Dakota, with the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. GIFFORD. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendments be concurred in.

There being no objection, the Senate amendments were concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS OCONEE RIVER.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 10128) to authorize the construction and maintenance of a railroad bridge by the Birmingham, Atlantic and Air-Line Railroad and Banking and Navigation Company across the Oconee River, in Laurens County, State of Georgia, with the amendment of the Senate thereto.

Mr. CRISP. I ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendments.

There was no objection, and the Senate amendment was concurred in.

BRIDGE ACROSS ALABAMA RIVER.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 10527) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Alabama River, with the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. CRISP. I ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendments.

There was no objection, and the Senate amendments were concurred in.

LIFE-SAVING STATION.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 1856) to establish a life-saving station on the Atlantic coast between the Indian River Inlet, Delaware, and Ocean City, Md., returned with House amendments disagreed to and a conference requested on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The request for conference was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. This bill is ready for conference, and the Chair will appoint as managers on the part of the House the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. TARSNEY, the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. CLARDY, and the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. THOMAS H. B. BROWNE.

STATE HOMES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2116) to provide aid to the State homes for the support of disabled soldiers and sailors of the United States, with amendments of the House non-concurred in and the request for a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The request was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. This bill also is ready for a conference, and the Chair will appoint as managers on the part of the House the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. TOWNSHEND, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. MAISH, and the gentleman from Nebraska, Mr. LAIRD.

CONFEREES APPOINTED.

The SPEAKER. On House bill 10347 the Chair will appoint as conferees on the part of the House the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. CRISP, the gentleman from Iowa, Mr. ANDERSON, and the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. DUNHAM.

FREEDMAN'S SAVINGS AND TRUST COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House for reference the bill (S. 1138) to reimburse the depositors of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company for losses incurred by the failure of said company.

The SPEAKER. This bill will be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency. It has once before been referred to the Committee on War Claims.

Mr. SPRINGER. It should go to the Committee on Claims.

The SPEAKER. The Chair was in doubt as to which committee to refer it.

Mr. LANHAM. I think it should go to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, it will be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following Senate bills for reference:

The bill (S. 3284) to authorize the construction of a bridge across Bayou Bartholomew at or near Ward's Ferry, Louisiana; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

The bill (S. 3285) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Tensas River at or near Kirk's Ferry, Louisiana; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING IN CHICAGO.

The bill (S. 3365) for the erection of a public building in the city of Chicago to be used as appraiser's warehouse and other public purposes.

Mr. LAWLER. I ask, by unanimous consent, to concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. This is a Senate bill that comes up for reference.

Mr. LAWLER. I ask unanimous consent to consider the bill at the present time.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $200,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of erecting a public building upon the lot of ground owned by the United States of America, on the corner of Harrison and Sherman streets, in the city of Chicago, Ill., said building to be used as an appraiser's warehouse and for other Government purposes. Said building shall be constructed upon plans and specifications to be furnished by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, and the said building shall be protected from danger by fire by having an open space on every side of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of the sum hereby appropriated shall be expended until the State of Illinois shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

Mr. LAWLER. Mr. Speaker, this is similar to the House bill that has been passed, except that in the Senate there has been an amendment inserted so as to require a space of 40 feet all around the building. That is the only change, and we are willing to accept that amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. Is the amount appropriated the same?

Mr. LAWLER. The amount is just the same as in the House bill. There is no change except as to the 40 feet space.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. This bill is substantially the same as the one that passed the House, and appropriates the same amount.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LAWLER moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

POSTAL CRIMES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a bill (S. 3308) amendatory of an act relating to postal crimes, and amendatory of the statutes therein mentioned, approved June 18, 1888.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that that bill be considered at this time.

Mr. WEAVER. How much time will it occupy?

Mr. BLOUNT. Only a few minutes. I desire to make a brief statement on the object of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] asks unanimous consent to make a brief statement in relation to this bill, subject to the right to object.

There was no objection.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, the leading object of the bill, which was passed June 18, 1888, was to prevent the abuse of the mails by persons——

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, was the question asked by the Chair whether there was objection to the consideration of this bill?

The SPEAKER. The Chair asked whether there was objection to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] making a brief statement, subject to the right to object.

Mr. WEAVER. That is all right.

Mr. BLOUNT. The practice had obtained of writing letters to debtors stating that in the event of their not paying, they would have sent to them a letter with an advertisement on the outside of the envelope of the "Bad Debtors' Association for the collection of bad debts." The object of course was to extort payment. The act of June 18, 1888, was designed to suppress that practice, but it confined its inhibition to what appeared on the outside of the envelope. Since that time there has been devised a new plan of evading the law by the use of a transparent envelope such as the one I now hold in my hand. You can see through the envelope and read on the inside the name of the "Bad Debtors' Association," with the statement that in case the debtor does not pay this will be sent to him. The object of this bill is to prohibit this class of communications as well as those containing the advertisement on the outside of the envelope. In passing the law of June 18, 1888, Congress did not anticipate the use of a transparent envelope, but this device has been resorted to, and the object of the pending bill is to so amend the law as to prohibit this also. I now ask unanimous consent that the bill be put upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. OATES. I desire to ask the gentleman from Georgia whether this bill enlarges the list of unmailable matter as now regulated by law.

Mr. BLOUNT. It does, to the extent I have stated. My friend will see that this envelope is transparent, and that it contains, on the paper inside, matter which would be prohibited by the law if put on the outside.

Mr. OATES. Is that all that the bill provides?

Mr. BLOUNT. That is all there is of it.

Mr. OATES. That is right.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BLOUNT moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

RESEARCHES RELATING TO NORTH AMERICAN INDIANS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a concurrent resolution to authorize the printing of matter furnished by the Bureau of Ethnology relating to researches and discoveries connected with the study of the North American Indians; which was referred to the Committee on Printing.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Enrolled bills, reported that they had examined and found duly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. 842) granting a pension to Julia A. Rhoades;
A bill (S. 896) for the relief of Mrs. Louise Silvers;
A bill (S. 692) granting an increase of pension to Enoch G. Adams;
A bill (S. 749) granting a pension to Louise Paul;
A bill (S. 2652) granting a pension to Gustave E. Peters;
A bill (S. 2105) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Verbisky;
A bill (S. 1884) granting a pension to Louisa Provost;
A bill (S. 1867) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary L. Ristine;
A bill (S. 1716) granting a pension to Mary L. Williams;
A bill (S. 1629) granting a pension to Erastus B. Burnham; and
A bill (S. 1110) granting a pension to Mrs. Frederick Hauser.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING OF CAPITOL.

Mr. LEHLBACH, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, presented a report; which was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the letter of the Supervising Architect of the Capitol, giving approximate estimates of the cost of lighting the Capitol with electricity, have had the same under consideration, and respectfully submit the following report:

Some of the committee rooms and some other rooms of the House wing of the Capitol have been lighted during this session of Congress from a plant placed in the boiler rooms by the Sawyer-Mann Electric-Light Company. This plant was placed there without any authority of the House, permission having been given by the Architect of the Capitol on the express condition that no expense should accrue to the House. Your committee are of the opinion that while the light has given general satisfaction, the House should not consider any proposal for the purchase of this plant, as it is the opinion of the committee that a contract for the lighting of the House or any part thereof should only be made after a fair chance of competition has been given to all desiring to offer proposals for the same. Your committee is further of the opinion that the approximate estimate of the Architect of the Capitol furnished to the House is not sufficiently accurate to warrant the recommendation of this committee to authorize the advertising for proposals, and therefore recommend that an expert electrician be employed, whose duty it shall be to make plans and specifications for this work, and that upon his report this committee be authorized to advertise for proposals and to submit to the House the result of such advertisements with their recommendation. It is the unanimous opinion of the committee that the lighting of the entire Capitol with electricity is desirable, and that in connection therewith a system of electric bells connecting the various committee rooms with the Clerk's desk should at the same time be established, and therefore recommend the following resolution to the consideration of the House, and ask for its adoption:

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds are hereby authorized and directed to employ an electrical engineer to make plans and specifications for the lighting of the House and the committee rooms with electricity and for a system of electric bells, and also to advertise and solicit proposals for this work, and to report as soon as practicable to the House, and that a sum not exceeding $1,000 is hereby appropriated for the payment of said engineer and for the expenses of said advertisement out of the contingent fund of the House.

Mr. LEHLBACH. I ask the adoption of the resolution reported by the committee.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. LEHLBACH moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE, SUPREME COURT OF DAKOTA.

Mr. SPRINGER. I submit the conference report which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10573) to provide for one additional associate justice of the supreme court of Dakota, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill, and agree to the same.

WILLIAM M. SPRINGER,
C. B. KILGORE,
WILLIAM WARNER,
Managers on the part of the House.
JAMES F. WILSON,
W. M. EVARTS,
G. G. VEST,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The following statement of the House conferees, submitted under the rule, was read:

The managers on the part of the House of Representatives on House bill 10573, submit the following explanation of the effect of agreeing to the conference report:

If the report is agreed to, the effect will be to increase the number of judges in Dakota from six to eight, an increase of one over the number provided in the House bill. It is the opinion of all the judges in Dakota and of the Department of Justice that this increase is absolutely required in that Territory.

WILLIAM M. SPRINGER,
C. B. KILGORE,
WM. WARNER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to have read as part of my remarks a letter from the Acting Attorney-General.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, Washington, June 26, 1888.

SIR: Your letter of the 12th instant has been received, with a copy of House bill 8948 and of House Report 1341, respecting additional justices of the supreme courts of Dakota, Washington, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, and Arizona Territories, and for other purposes.

Upon examination of the report of the committee, submitted on the 27th of March last in connection with the unofficial information which the Department has received from civil officers of those Territories, it is forced to the conclusion that the proposed increase of the number of justices in the Territories mentioned is necessary and wise legislation concerning the interests of litigants, witnesses, and attorneys in the respective Territories.

Very respectfully,

G. A. JENKS,
Acting Attorney-General.

Hon. W. M. SPRINGER,
House of Representatives.

Mr. SPRINGER. This bill applies to only one of the Territories mentioned in the letter just read. That letter from the Department of Justice recommends, as will be observed, additional justices of the supreme court for Dakota, Washington, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, and Arizona. The committee of conference in this case has agreed to that recommendation only so far as it affects Dakota. The House has heretofore passed a bill of this character in regard to Utah; and after this measure is disposed of, I will ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill allowing additional justices for Wyoming and Idaho Territories. There will not then be as many as are recommended by the Department, but we hope the number will be sufficient until another session of Congress.

Mr. HOLMAN. How many judges does this bill provide for?

Mr. SPRINGER. Eight in all for Dakota, there being already six. The Committee on Territories recommended two additional judges. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MACDONALD] obtained unanimous consent for the passage of a bill granting one additional judge. The Senate increased the number to two, being the number recommended by the House Committee on Territories. I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the report of the committee of conference was adopted.

Mr. SPRINGER moved to reconsider the vote by which the report of the committee of conference was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WEAVER. I withdraw for the present my demand for the regular order, on condition that one gentleman on each side be recognized to ask unanimous consent.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think we had better have the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I ask unanimous consent that the call of committees for reports be dispensed with, and that gentlemen be permitted to file reports with the Clerk, as usual.

Mr. DUNN. I must object to that. There has not been a call of committees for some time.

Mr. HOLMAN. I called for the regular order. I withdraw the demand for the present.

Mr. DUNN. I insist on the regular order.

The SPEAKER, in accordance with the regular order, proceeded to call the committees for reports.

STEAMER SAGINAW, NEW YORK.

Mr. DUNN, from the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 10904) to provide an American register for the steamer Saginaw, of New York; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

AUTHORIZING SALE OF CERTAIN MINERAL LANDS TO ALIENS.

Mr. HERMANN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back favorably the bill (S. 1176) to authorize the sale to aliens of certain mineral lands; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JAMES M. WILLBUR.

Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (S. 1044) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to state and settle the account of James M. Willbur with the United States, and to pay said Willbur such sum of money as may be found due him thereon; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CHARLES K. ERWIN.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 10862) for the relief of Charles K. Erwin; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES OF HENRY S. FRENCH.

Mr. LAWLER, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (S. 82) for the relief of the legal representatives of Henry S. French; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

R. H. GIVENS'S HEIRS.

Mr. LAWLER also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 9476) for the relief of R. H. Givens's heirs; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CHARLES F. CAMPBELL.

Mr. LAWLER also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 10100) for the relief of Charles F. Campbell; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MADISON FEMALE INSTITUTE, KENTUCKY.

Mr. LAWLER also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 10383) for the relief of the Madison Female Institute, located at Richmond, Ky.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SARAH E. INGHAM.

Mr. LAWLER also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7499) for the relief of Sarah E. Ingham; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

NEWBURGH CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

Mr. RICHARDSON, from the Committee on Printing, reported back favorably Senate concurrent resolution to print report of the Newburgh (N. Y.) centennial celebration; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

UNITED STATES GEOLOGICAL SURVEY REPORTS.

Mr. RICHARDSON also, from the Committee on Printing, reported back favorably Senate concurrent resolution to print eighth and ninth annual reports of Director United States Geological Survey; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BUREAU OF ETHNOLOGY REPORTS.

Mr. RICHARDSON also, from the Committee on Printing, reported back favorably Senate concurrent resolution to print eighth and ninth annual reports of the Director of the Bureau of Ethnology; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SURVIVING SOLDIERS OF THE MEXICAN WAR.

Mr. STEWART, of Georgia, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back favorably joint resolution (H. Res. 160) to compensate surviving soldiers of the Mexican war, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

GENERAL GEORGE ROGERS CLARK.

Mr. STAHLNECKER, from the Committee on the Library, reported back favorably the bill (S. 2967) to provide for the erection of a monument to the memory of General George Rogers Clark; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCOOK, its Secretary, announced concurrence with amendments in the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1701) authorizing the construction of a high wagon-bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa.

It further announced the passage of the bill (H. R. 6602) for the relief of James O'Brien with amendments, in which concurrence was requested.

It further announced the passage of bills of the House of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 1477) to subdivide the western judicial district of Louisiana;

A bill (H. R. 1648) to provide for the holding of United States courts in the city of Newark, N. J.;

A bill (H. R. 409) for the relief of Thomas W. Lord;

A bill (H. R. 1338) to extend the leave of absence of employés in the Government Printing Office to thirty days per annum;

A bill (H. R. 7232) for the relief of C. E. Wilson;

A bill (H. R. 7452) for the relief of the Southern Illinois Normal University; and

A bill (H. R. 9771) for the erection of a public building at Ottumwa, Iowa.

It further announced agreement to the request for conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 3361) to provide for holding terms of the circuit and district courts of the United States for the district of Kentucky at Owensborough, in said district, and for other purposes, and had appointed Mr. VEST, Mr. HOAR, and Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, as managers of said conference on its part.

It further announced a request for a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 1612) to provide for holding terms of the United States district and circuit courts in the State of Nebraska, and had appointed Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, Mr. EVARTS, and Mr. COKE as managers of said conference on its part.

It further announced the passage of bills of the following titles; in which concurrence was requested, namely:

A bill (S. 308) for the relief of Farin & McLean;

A bill (S. 856) to provide for the holding of the district court of the United States at Salina, Kans.;

A bill (S. 878) for the relief of the estate of Thomas Niles, deceased;

A bill (S. 1668) for the relief of A. M. Woodruff;

A bill (S. 2185) to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of Matthew S. Whitney, administrator of Franklin S. Whitney, deceased, heretofore referred to said court;

A bill (S. 2636) for the relief of Thomas L. Hoffman;

A bill (S. 3125) restoring the right of pre-emption to Alfonso Roberts; and

A bill (S. 3159) for the relief of the Oregon Paving and Contract Company.

DETAILS OF OFFICERS OF THE ARMY AND NAVY.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the hour for the consideration of bills, and the hour begins at ten minutes past 12 o'clock. The call rests with the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I call up for consideration the bill pending at the expiration of the last consideration hour. It is Senate bill 186, to amend section 1225 of the Revised Statutes, concerning details of officers of the Army and Navy to educational institutions, etc.

The SPEAKER. The question is on concurring in the amendment of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES].

Mr. ADAMS. I do not understand the nature of the bill or the nature of the amendment. I desire to be informed as to both.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will have the bill read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1225 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by an act of Congress approved July 5, 1884, be, and the same is hereby, further amended, so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 1225. The President may, upon the application of any established college or university within the United States having capacity to educate at the same time not less than one hundred and fifty male students, detail an officer of the Army to act as president, superintendent, or professor thereof; but the number of officers so detailed shall not exceed fifty from the Army and ten from the Navy, being a maximum of sixty, at any time, and they shall be apportioned throughout the United States, first, to those State institutions applying for such detail that are required to provide instruction in military tactics under the provisions of the act of Congress of July 2, 1862, donating lands for the establishment of colleges where the leading object shall be the practical instruction of the industrial classes in agriculture and the mechanic arts, including military tactics; and after that, said details to be distributed, as nearly as may be practicable, according to population. Officers so detailed shall be governed by general rules prescribed from time to time by the President. The Secretary of War is authorized to issue, at his discretion and under proper regulations to be prescribed by him, out of ordnance and ordnance stores belonging to the Government, and which can be spared for that purpose, such number of the same as may appear to be required for military instruction and practice by the students of any college or university under the provisions of this section, and the Secretary shall require a bond in each case, in double the value of the property, for the care and safe-keeping thereof, and for the return of the same when required."

SEC. 2. That the said section 1225 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by the said act of Congress approved July 5, 1884, and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent or in conflict with the provisions of this act, be, and the same are hereby repealed, saving always, however, all acts and things done under the said amended section as heretofore existing; and this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its approval according to law.

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to amend section 1225 of the Revised Statutes, concerning details of officers of the Army and Navy to educational institutions, etc."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the pending amendment of the gentleman from Alabama.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out in lines 25 and 26 the words "Officers so detailed shall be governed by general rules to be prescribed from time to time by the President."

Mr. OATES. I offer that amendment, and for the reason that these words are wholly unnecessary. To require the President, who is the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, to make rules for the government of officers on these details seems to me to be entirely out of the usual course, and I hope they will be stricken out of the bill. After which I shall desire to offer another amendment.

I wish to say that a similar bill to this was before the Committee on the Judiciary, and was carefully examined and considered by them, and favorably reported with the amendments I shall propose to this bill; and with those amendments I think it is a good bill, and am in favor of it. I think it ought to pass. The other amendment I will submit in a few moments, and will state the reasons at the time of offering it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair is informed that a motion was made by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] for the previous question upon the bill and amendments up to its engrossment and third reading.

Mr. HERBERT. I do not understand that the previous question was asked on the bill.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Not at present. That was withdrawn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair is simply stating what the Chair is informed is the present status of the bill.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. That motion was withdrawn.

Mr. OATES addressed the Chair.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I believe I have the floor.

Mr. OATES. I desired only to offer the other amendment to which I referred.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The first question, the Chair thinks, will be upon the committee amendments.

Mr. HERBERT. I have an amendment to the committee amendments.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I am perfectly willing to allow any gentleman who desires to offer an amendment to do so, and let it be considered as pending, and shall then demand the previous question upon the bill and amendments. As the Chair suggests, however, the first question is upon the amendments reported by the committee, and I would like to dispose of them first.

Mr. OATES. I ask the gentleman from Illinois to allow me to have read a further amendment to be also considered as pending.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I have no objection to that.

Mr. HERBERT. The amendment I shall propose is to the amendments of the committee.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I ask that the first amendment reported by the committee be read, and let us proceed in order with the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 9 insert the word "academy" before the word "college."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Under the present law, and under the bill as it came to us from the Senate, academies are not included. The House committee enlarged the scope of the bill by including also academies as well as colleges.

I am opposed to that amendment. I antagonized it in committee, and am of the opinion it should not be adopted. Since this bill has been reported by the committee I have taken occasion to confer with the Secretary of War and others who understand the question much better than I do, and I am convinced this amendment should not be adopted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the amendment just read by the Clerk, to insert the word "academy" before the word "college."

Mr. CUTCHEON. Do I understand the chairman of the committee to state that the word "academy" is not now a part of the present law?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. It is not in the present law, but as the bill comes from the Senate it is proposed to be included by the committee. It is an amendment of the Military Committee to insert it.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I hope the word will be inserted. We have in Michigan a military academy at Orchard Lake—one of the best military schools in the country to-day. It is under the auspices of the State, and I know that they have a detail of an officer of the Army at the present time. It is not called a college, but an academy; and if the gentleman's proposition is going to affect us, in that case I should hope the amendment he suggests to strike out this word, if it is already in the bill, would not be adopted. If it is to insert the word "academy," I hope it will be accepted.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. In order to save the military academies, I would suggest to the gentleman that he might insert the word "military" before academy, and then let the word "academy" stand as it comes from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Yes, because this will affect several other schools. Maryland, for instance, has a military academy.

Mr. BREWER. And Pennsylvania.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I move to amend the bill by inserting the word "military" before the word "academy." I ask unanimous consent to amend by inserting the word "military" before "academy" and then let the word "academy" stand in line 9.

Mr. KERR. I object to giving unanimous consent to the amendment. I am opposed to it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection being made, the question is on the amendment to the amendment of the committee proposed by the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CUTCHEON. A word, Mr. Speaker——

Mr. KERR. I move as a substitute for the amendment the following, which I send to the desk.

Mr. HEARD. I rise to a point of order.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I understand I have the floor. Now, I am willing to yield for any amendments that gentlemen desire to offer, but we have less than an hour, and I must insist that amendments, if offered, shall not occupy the time of the House in debate. This bill will be lost if we do not conclude it within an hour.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri rises to a point of order.

Mr. HEARD. If I understand the status of the case, the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan is in order. It is an amendment to an amendment pending, and does not require unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has never stated that it required unanimous consent.

Mr. HEARD. I understand, therefore, that the gentleman has the right to offer a substitute for it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair stated that it was an amendment to an amendment, and was proceeding to take the sense of the House upon it.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. To save further discussion I withdraw my amendment, and after the several amendments have been read will demand the previous question upon the bill.

Mr. KERR. Then I ask the reading of the substitute I send to the desk. I will state that it provides that the bill shall not be so construed as to authorize the removal of any instructor already detailed.

Mr. MAISH. That will not do.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. That is not affected by the present bill in any way.

Mr. KERR. I understand it is.

Mr. LAIRD. Under existing law there is allowed so much time——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa, which he suggests as a substitute, is not now in order. It will be in order later on, when the Chair will recognize the gentleman to offer it.

Mr. ROGERS. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROGERS. There is so much confusion that it is impossible to know what public business is proceeding.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House will be in order.

Mr. MAISH. I suggest to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCHEON] to incorporate the words "institute and seminary" in his amendment, for I know there are institutions of this kind—there is one in my own State—where military tactics are taught; and therefore I make the suggestion.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I have no objection to the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. BLOUNT (to Mr. MAISH). Have you any information as to how many of these institutions are to be found in the United States?

Mr. MAISH. No, I have not.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The bill provides for sixty; fifty from the Army and ten from the Navy.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Those are all the officers that can be spared.

Mr. MAISH. It is regulated by the population of the States.

The amendment of Mr. MAISH to the amendment of Mr. CUTCHEON was agreed to.

The amendment of Mr. CUTCHEON as amended was adopted.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I ask to amend the same line by inserting the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the next amendment of the committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 12, after the word "Army," insert the words "or Navy."

The amendment was adopted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to the first section the following:

"Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent the detail of officers of the Engineer Corps of the Navy as professors in scientific schools or colleges as now provided by act of Congress approved February 26, 1879, entitled 'An act to promote a knowledge of steam-engineering and iron-ship building among the students of scientific schools or colleges in the United States;' and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to issue ordnance and ordnance stores belonging to the Government on the terms and conditions hereinbefore provided to any college or university at which a retired officer of the Army may be assigned as provided by section 1260 of the Revised Statutes."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. This amendment merely makes the bill clearer, and I now demand the previous question on the adoption of the amendment.

The previous question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the amendment was adopted.

Mr. BAKER, of New York, rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The next amendment is that offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES], which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

In lines 25 and 26 strike out the words "officers so detailed shall be governed by general rules prescribed from time to time by the President."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I do not think that ought to be adopted. I think the power ought to be left with the Secretary of War.

Mr. OATES. The President as commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy has that power already, and striking out these words does not enlarge or diminish his power; nor does it affect the rights of the Secretary of War.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. But it relieves the President of an enormous amount of detail work that can be left to the Secretary of War.

Mr. OATES. The gentleman should understand that my amendment strikes it out. The bill requires him to do it.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. A good deal of detail work is laid on the President.

Mr. OATES. Then you should vote for this amendment, as the amendment will leave it with the Secretary of War.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I withdraw further opposition to the amendment.

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. OATES. Then, in the first section of the bill, I do not remember the connection, I move to strike out the word "president."

The Clerk read as follows:

In lines 11 and 12, "detail an officer of the Army or Navy to act as president, superintendent, or professor thereof."

Mr. OATES. I move to strike out the word "president," for this reason: While I am in favor of this bill and in favor of detailing these officers to teach military tactics, no president of a college ever teaches military tactics, hence it is out of the line in which these officers are peculiarly skilled, and I think that should be stricken out of the bill.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I accept that amendment.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

Strike out in line 12 the word "president."

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I now yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER]. He desires to offer an amendment.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "university," in line 9, insert "or any State reformatory or industrial school maintained by any State for the reformation and education of boys, when requested by the board of managers of any such reformatory or State industrial school."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I do not accept that amendment, and I do not think it ought to be adopted.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I desire to say a word in explanation of the necessity of the amendment, and then I am sure my friend will accept it. In the city of Rochester, for example, there is located an institution, a State industrial school, which never has less than from five to six hundred young men, who are sent there for education and reformation. They are taught trades, instructed in technology, and have military training and discipline. The board of managers have on several occasions applied to the War Department for a detail of military officers to go there and instruct these young men in military tactics, and the application has been approved by the State officers, but no such detail has ever been made, simply for lack of the authority which this amendment proposes to give.

Mr. OATES. Does not the bill give the authority without your amendment?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Perhaps it does, but I should like to have the amendment adopted so as to make it certain.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I rise to oppose the amendment and the whole bill.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I have not yielded to the gentleman from Missouri. If he is speaking in my time I wish to know how much time he desires.

Mr. BLAND. I am speaking to the amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri has the right to be heard.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I have not relinquished the floor. I simply yielded to allow the gentleman from New York to offer his amendment, but I am willing now to yield to the gentleman from Missouri, if he will state what time he desires.

Mr. BLAND. The gentleman can not control the floor in that way.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois has the right to demand the previous question.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. And I intend to do it.

Mr. BLAND. I want the gentleman either to move the previous question or else give me the floor.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I have the floor to demand the previous question on the amendment, but if the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] will state how much time he wants I will yield to him.

Mr. BLAND. I do not want more than five minutes.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Time is very precious, but I am willing to yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BLAND. I am opposed, sir, to extending the scope of this bill, and in fact I am opposed to the bill itself. I do not think that in a republic it is the proper policy to extend the military arm into civil institutions or to give any excuse or pretext for increasing the military power of the Government or widening the scope of its employment. It ought to be limited and confined, and this whole bill looks to giving opportunities and excuses for the increase of our military establishment at the expense of the civil establishment. It is out of line with republican institutions, and I hope this House will vote down every amendment that looks to increasing or in any way enlarging the powers of the military establishment.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Now, Mr. Speaker, I hope we shall have a vote, and I call the previous question upon the amendment.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CUTCHEON. In connection with the amendment which I offered, to insert the word "military" before the word "academy," a motion was made to insert the word "institute" or "seminary." I accepted the amendment and supposed it was voted upon as a part of my amendment, but there seems to be some doubt about it, and if there is any doubt I ask unanimous consent that it may be considered as a part of my amendment which was adopted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is advised that it was not included in the gentleman's amendment. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCHEON] asks that the amendment indicated by him, which he supposed had been inserted before the vote was taken, may be regarded as a part of his amendment which was adopted.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I now demand the previous question on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER].

The previous question was ordered.

The question was taken on agreeing to the amendment of Mr. BAKER, of New York, and there were—ayes 39, noes 42.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. No quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point is made that no quorum has voted, and the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND].

The House proceeded to divide by tellers.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. It seems to me the gentleman from New York has not properly appreciated the courtesy I accorded to him. After moving the previous question I yielded to him for his amendment, thereby imperiling the bill; and I certainly do not think he should now insist upon a quorum.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. If my friend will only consent to the amendment——

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I have no power to do so.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I can not resist the appeal of my friend from Illinois, and I withdraw the point of "no quorum."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of "no quorum" being withdrawn, the noes have it, and the amendment is disagreed to.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I move the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "university," in line 9, insert, "or State institution for the support and education of soldiers' and sailors' orphans, supported by State taxation, and containing and supporting a school equal in educational facilities with an academy or college, with an attendance of not less than five hundred."

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment of Mr. GROSVENOR, there were—ayes 56, noes 33.

Mr. BLAND. We had better have a quorum.

Mr. BLAND and Mr. GROSVENOR were appointed tellers.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I hope the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] will withdraw the amendment.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I hope the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] will withdraw the demand for a quorum.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I never knew the gentleman from Missouri to withdraw anything after offering it. [Laughter.]

The tellers took their places; and the House proceeded to divide.

Mr. TOWNSHEND (during the count by tellers). How much of the hour is left?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DOCKERY). Twenty-five minutes.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 82, noes 26.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of "no quorum" being, as the Chair understands, still insisted upon, the tellers will continue the count.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. No quorum being present, I move that there be a call of the House.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I do not desire to prevent the passage of this bill. I believe there is no more meritorious proposition in the bill than the amendment I have offered; but in order that the passage of the bill may not be imperiled, I withdraw the amendment.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I now demand the previous question on the passage of the bill.

Mr. BLAND. Pending that, I move to lay the bill on the table.

The SPEAKER (having resumed the chair). The question is not on the passage of the bill, but on ordering it to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Then I demand the previous question on that.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois demands the previous question on ordering the bill to be engrossed and read a third time. Pending that, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] moves to lay the bill on the table.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. BLAND, there were—ayes 7, noes 76.

Mr. BLAND. No quorum.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. No quorum being developed, I move that there be a call of the House.

The motion of Mr. TOWNSHEND for a call of the House was not agreed to, there being—ayes 25, noes 62.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri has made the point that on the question of laying the bill on the table no quorum voted. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND].

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is it necessary to have a quorum in order to order a call of the House?

The SPEAKER. It is not. No point has been made on that.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Is it necessary to have a majority of the votes in order to have a call?

The SPEAKER. Of course it is.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. When the count develops the fact that no quorum is present, is it not the duty of the Chair to have a call of the House?

The SPEAKER. The Chair can not order a call; that is a matter for the House to determine.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. If no quorum is present, how can business proceed?

The SPEAKER. It can not.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The fact has been developed that no quorum is present; and until a quorum does appear no business can be transacted.

The SPEAKER. The House may not want to transact any business.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. If it be demonstrated by a count that no quorum is present, is it in the power of the House to do any business whatever?

The SPEAKER. When a quorum has failed to appear, no business can proceed, so long as the point of no quorum is made.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Then the question before the House is whether there shall be a call of the House to enforce the attendance of a quorum.

The SPEAKER. The point of no quorum has been made; and the House, upon a motion for a call, has decided not to order a call.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Then no business can be transacted.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Is it in order at this stage to ask for the yeas and nays——

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Upon ordering the bill to be engrossed for a third reading?

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the motion made by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] to lay the bill on the table. On that question no quorum voted, and thereupon the Chair appointed tellers. It is in order for the gentleman to demand the yeas and nays on that question.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri.

The yeas and nays were refused, only 6 voting in favor thereof.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I wish to put a parliamentary question. As the case now stands, no quorum being present, and it being impossible to transact business, there is but one thing to be done, as I understand, and that is to adjourn the House. Am I not correct?

The SPEAKER. A quorum may appear when the vote is taken by tellers.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The vote has been taken.

The SPEAKER. It has not been taken by tellers, and when the vote is not taken by yeas and nays, and the point of no quorum is made, the business of the House proceeds as usual. But when the vote is taken by the yeas and nays and the fact no quorum is present appears, then no business can be transacted. Such vote has not yet been taken.

The Chair appoints as tellers Mr. MAISH and Mr. BLAND.

The House proceeded to vote by tellers on Mr. BLAND'S motion that the bill and amendments be laid on the table.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Mr. Speaker, if this hour expires can we go on with other business?

The SPEAKER. Unless the vote by yeas and nays discloses upon the Journal of the House the fact no quorum is present the House can continue to transact business unless the fact of no quorum is made on the floor and that stops business, as now. If this matter is dropped and another subject comes up for consideration, business can be proceeded with unless the fact there is no quorum then appears.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 15, noes 86.

The SPEAKER. No quorum has yet voted, and the hour for the consideration of bills has expired.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The expiration of the hour does not settle the question of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. It does not, but the bill becomes unfinished business under the express rule of the House. It goes upon the Calendar as unfinished business.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. When no quorum is present how can any business be transacted?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has already decided unless no quorum appears on the call of the yeas and nays the House can proceed to transact business until the point of no quorum is made. Suppose the House proceeds——

Mr. BLAND. I withdraw the point about the absence of a quorum.

The SPEAKER. It is not necessary to withdraw it. It is not necessary to make it each time.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I make this point, that when the House is engaged in the process of acting upon a bill in the consideration hour, the expiration of the hour does not settle the question of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not know what the rule is to which the gentleman refers, but when the hour devoted to the consideration of bills has expired——

Mr. TOWNSHEND. But this is outside.

The SPEAKER. It is; but the vote is not an outside proceeding; it is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri to lay the bills and amendments upon the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move the House go into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the consideration of the unfinished business of clause 5, Rule XXIV.

The SPEAKER. The motion is not in order in that form. The House can move to resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

Mr. SPRINGER. I make that motion. I stated the other fact to give the House information of the object of going into committee.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I ask by unanimous consent that the hour be extended in order to dispose of the bill providing for the detail of officers of the Army and Navy.

Mr. BLAND. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is, a quorum shall appear to dispose of that business.

FORFEITURE OF LANDS GRANTED TO HASTINGS AND DAKOTA RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. MACDONALD. I rise for the purpose of calling up for present consideration a privileged bill and report—the bill to forfeit the lands granted to the Hastings and Dakota Railway Company, in the State of Minnesota, and for the relief of settlers upon the same and purchasers thereof.

The SPEAKER. From what committee?

Mr. MACDONALD. From the Committee on the Public Lands.

Mr. SPRINGER. I am willing to yield for that bill.

Mr. MACDONALD. I call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 8368) to forfeit the lands granted to the Hastings and Dakota Railway Company, in the State of Minnesota, and for the relief of settlers upon the same and certain purchasers thereof, reported from the Committee on the Public Lands with amendments, and ask that they be read.

The bill was read, and is as follows:

Whereas by an act of Congress entitled "An act making an additional grant of lands to the State of Minnesota in alternate sections, to aid in the construction of railroads in said State," approved July 4, 1866, there was granted to the State of Minnesota certain lands for a railroad from Hastings, in said State, through the counties of Dakota, Scott, Carver, and McLeod, to such point on the western boundary of the State as the Legislature of said State might determine, upon the express condition "that if said road was not completed within ten years from the acceptance of this grant, the said lands thereby granted, and not patented, shall revert to the United States; and

Whereas by an act of the Legislature approved March 7, 1867, the State of Minnesota accepted the aforementioned grant of lands, and by the same act transferred the same to "the Hastings, Minnesota River and Red River of the North Railroad Company, subject to the provisions thereafter contained, and of the act of Congress aforesaid;" the name of which said railroad company was thereafter duly changed to that of the "Hastings and Dakota Railway Company;" and

Whereas said Hastings and Dakota Railway Company wholly failed and neglected to build, construct, or complete said railroad through the county of McLeod, and beyond, to the western boundary of the State, for many years after the expiration of the time limited by the act of Congress aforesaid, by reason of which neglect and failure the lands so granted to said railway company reverted to the United States; and

Whereas in consequence of the aforementioned failure of the said Hastings and Dakota Railway Company to construct or complete said railroad within the time so limited and specified in said act of Congress, said granted lands, pertaining to that part of said railroad that was not completed in time, reverted to the United States, and became, and was generally believed to be, subject to settlement and entry under the land laws of the United States, and much of it was, in good faith, settled upon by many settlers, who have ever since remained upon said lands, and have made valuable improvements thereon; and others have, in good faith, purchased portions of the same from said railway company; and

Whereas said Hastings and Dakota Railway Company has (in consequence of its having sold and disposed of its said railroad and everything appertaining thereto, except its right to said lands) been, by the supreme court of said State of Minnesota, adjudged and decreed to have forfeited its charter, and to be dissolved; and the same has ceased to exist, except that for a few months longer it is permitted to close up its affairs and dispose of such property as it may have: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That all the said lands granted to the State of Minnesota by said act of Congress entitled "An act making an additional grant of lands to the State of Minnesota, in alternate sections, to aid in the construction of railroads in said State," approved July 4, 1866, for a railroad in said State from Hastings through the counties of Dakota, Scott, Carver, and McLeod, to a point on the western boundary of the State, and transferred to the said Hastings and Dakota Railway Company, as hereinbefore stated, except so much thereof as are adjacent to and coterminous with so much of said railroad as was constructed and completed within the period fixed by the said act of Congress for the completion of the whole road, and the right of way through the remainder of the route, with all the necessary grounds now used by said railroad for station buildings, shops, depots, switches, side-tracks, turn-tables, and all lands which were, prior to January 1, 1888, included within the platted limits of any village, town, or city be, and the same are hereby, declared to be, and are, forfeited to the United States, and restored to the public domain, because of the failure of the said Hastings and Dakota Railway Company to perform the conditions upon which said grant of lands was made to it: Provided, That the title to said lands sold by said company to bona fide purchasers, prior to January 1, 1888, and which were not, at the time of such sale, in the actual possession of some person other than the purchaser, is hereby confirmed to such purchasers from said company, and the persons holding through or under them.

SEC. 2. That all actual bona fide settlers upon any of the lands declared forfeited by this act, who settled upon the same as public land, and with the purpose and intention of acquiring title thereto, under the laws of the United States relating to public lands, are hereby confirmed in their rights as such settlers, and permitted and authorized to acquire title to the same (not exceeding 160 acres in any one case) as a homestead, under and pursuant to the laws relating thereto; and, in making proof of such homestead, he shall be allowed for the time that he has already resided upon and improved the same.

The amendments of the committee were read, as follows:

Insert, before the word "except," in line 12 of section 1, the words "and not patented;" also insert, after the words "possession of," in line 29 of section 1, the words "and claimed by."

[Mr. MACDONALD withholds his remarks for revision. See APPENDIX.]

The amendments of the committee were agreed to, and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MACDONALD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask to submit a privileged report.

Mr. SPRINGER. I renew my motion——

The SPEAKER. Pending the motion of the gentleman from Illinois the gentleman from Indiana states that he rises to submit a privileged report. The gentleman will state what it is.

Mr. HOLMAN. A report from the Committee on the Public Lands. I am directed by the committee to report back the following Senate bill with amendments for present consideration.

Mr. SPRINGER. And I raise the question of consideration.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the title will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1080) to extend the laws of the United States over certain unorganized territory south of the State of Kansas.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to ask unanimous consent that five minutes be allowed on each side to explain this question of consideration as between these two bills, the Oklahoma bill, which I have called up, and the bill now reported by the gentleman from Indiana.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. ROGERS. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I do not understand what two bills are struggling for consideration.

The SPEAKER. That is just what the gentleman desires to state. Is there objection?

Mr. HOOKER. What is the bill under consideration?

The SPEAKER. There is no bill under consideration. The gentleman from Indiana has reported a Senate bill with amendments, the title of which has been read. The gentleman from Illinois moves that the House proceed to consider the Oklahoma bill in Committee of the Whole, and asks permission that five minutes be allowed on each side for a statement as to the merits of the two bills; to which no objection was made.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, the bill under consideration just reported by the gentleman from Indiana will be explained more at length by him in his time, but it relates to what is known as No Man's Land, or the Public Land Strip west of the Indian Territory and north of the Panhandle of Texas. The proposition is to create a land office there and allow lands to be acquired under the homestead laws of the United States, and also to extend the statutes of the United States over that strip. I believe that is correct.

Mr. ROGERS. Where is the land office to be located?

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman from Indiana can answer.

Mr. HOLMAN. In the strip.

Mr. SPRINGER. Within the strip itself; what portion of it, I do not know. The United States jurisdiction which will be extended over the strip is to be exercised by the United States courts in Kansas.

The bill which I desire to call up is the bill to provide for the organization of the territory of Oklahoma. If this bill should pass, it would provide for the organization of that territory; it would provide for land offices within the territory, not only for No Man's Land, but all the Indian Territory west of the five civilized tribes after the territory is organized, and also extend the laws of the United States over the whole region. It would apply the homestead laws to the taking of land in the strip; and would allow them a civil local government. It embraces, therefore, all that the other bill embodies.

Mr. PAYSON. Will the gentleman permit an inquiry?

Mr. SPRINGER. Well, I have but a moment.

Mr. PAYSON. Suppose the Oklahoma bill should not pass, then what condition does it leave the Public Land Strip in?

Mr. SPRINGER. I am glad the gentleman asked the question. The people in the Public Land Strip are to-day asking for bread. It is as easy for us to give them bread as a stone. The gentleman from Indiana proposes to give them a stone, for he thinks it is easier to give them a stone than it is to give them bread. It is as easy to pass an act organizing the Territory of Oklahoma as to pass a bill providing for the disposition of the lands in the limits of No Man's Land and providing no local government by which there can be security to person and property after they go there. The bill for the organization of the Territory gives to the people their local government and extends over them the laws of the United States and all rights under the homestead laws.

Mr. PAYSON. Allow me one other question. If the bill proposed by the gentleman from Indiana should pass, then does it interfere with the passage of the Oklahoma bill?

Mr. SPRINGER. It does to this extent. You will authorize men to say to the country we allowed them to enter their lands and take possession there, but they have no government. If the Oklahoma bill passes there is no use under the sun for the passage of the other bill. It is the fifth wheel to the wagon; and it is brought here to antagonize the present passage of the bill that will afford real relief.

It will be utterly unnecessary and nugatory if the Oklahoma bill is passed. The Oklahoma bill is in the interest of all the people, because they have no law there which will protect them in their person and property; and this bill only extends to them the jurisdiction of the courts of Kansas. Gentlemen know that the laws of the United States do not furnish any protection under the criminal code which would be enforced in the Territory. It has the national laws, and they have no effect to protect property. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has two minutes remaining.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the House will understand the point exactly.

Mr. PAYSON. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PAYSON. Owing to the confusion in the House, it is impossible to hear the statements gentlemen are making.

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen will cease talking on the floor, or, if they desire to continue conversation, will retire to the cloak-room.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the House will get at the real point at issue between these two bills. You have fifteen thousand people settled on this Public Land Strip without any form of government whatever. There is no opportunity of obtaining entries of land or any other civil rights whatever. The Senate has passed a bill providing for the creation of that strip into a land district, to survey the land and dispose of it; and the amendment proposed by the Committee on Public Lands provides that these lands shall be disposed of only under the homestead law. The Senate bill proposed to annex this strip of land to Kansas for judicial purposes.

Mr. SPRINGER. For what judicial purposes?

Mr. HOLMAN. For Federal judicial purposes. That is the purport of the Senate bill. It is proposed to amend that bill by attaching either to New Mexico or to Kansas that Public Land Strip for purposes of temporary government.

Mr. DUNN. Is that strip of territory within the jurisdiction of any Federal court now?

Mr. HOLMAN. It is not. It has no government whatever; it has no law whatever. It is the only part of our public domain that is not subjected in some form or other to law; and you have a large body of people there who are entitled to some protection. The Senate bill is a practical measure and is intended for temporary purposes only. It declares upon its face that it is only a temporary measure. It is not an interference and will not interfere in the remotest degree with the Oklahoma bill. It provides protection for these people.

Mr. SPRINGER. It will secure no more in that direction than the Oklahoma bill, if passed.

Mr. HOLMAN. Here is a bill that can be passed readily.

Mr. SPRINGER. Here is also a bill that can be passed readily if you will take that out of the way and yourself too.

Mr. HOLMAN. Here is a measure we can pass to which there is no objection whatever, for I see no real objection. No gentleman can have objection to giving these people law, and therefore I think this bill should pass, and let the Oklahoma bill take its course. I will yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PAYSON].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has two minutes remaining.

Mr. PAYSON. Now, if any gentleman on the other side desires to occupy the time reserved I would be willing for him to take the floor now. I simply desire to say, in the two minutes I have, that I think this bill should be considered. I am not in favor of the bill in its present position, and at the proper time I have a substitute which I shall offer that will obviate the criticism made by my colleague [Mr. SPRINGER]; but as to the main proposition, the necessity for something being done on that neutral strip, there is no question. There is a section of country nearly as large as Rhode Island and Delaware, on which a population of from 15,000 to 20,000 is as absolutely without law as though no law were in existence. There is no law whatever there. They have never been invited there; but tempted to go there on account of the land, the climate, the water, the timber, and such inducements as grow out of this condition of things, these people have gone there. We propose, by the bill and the amendment I intend to offer, to give them a temporary local government. There is no antagonism between this bill and the Oklahoma bill, because in the event that this bill should pass, it would not be necessary to pass the Oklahoma bill, and if it should not pass we could take up the Oklahoma bill.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I do not understand that there will be anything in the way of considering the bill of the gentleman from Indiana if the Oklahoma bill should pass.

Mr. PAYSON. The committee present it for consideration and in a parliamentary way ask to have it considered, and for that reason I favor the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER].

Mr. WEAVER. It does seem to me, with all due respect to the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, that he ought not to thrust this bill in here in advance of the consideration of the Oklahoma bill. We have all stood by him through thick and thin upon his bill for the forfeiture of railroad land grants, and also upon the public lands bill, and I can see no excuse for thrusting in this bill here to antagonize the Oklahoma bill—for that is what it amounts to, and I want the House to understand it. Six hundred thousand laboring men have petitioned for the passage of the Oklahoma bill. The bill of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is a privileged matter which he can call up at any other time. If the Oklahoma bill fails, he will have some excuse for bringing in his bill, but he has none now. Even if his bill should pass it would not give local government to the people of No Man's Land.

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, yes; it proposes to do that temporarily.

Mr. WEAVER. How? It provides for nothing but judicial process, and the people will have to go 200 miles to Kansas to get an officer to serve a process. It is a mere mockery and denial rather than an extension of justice to these people. I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WARNER].

Mr. CANNON. I have just come in, and want to ask a question for information. Do I understand that this is a contest between the Oklahoma bill and a bill reported from the Committee on Public Lands?

Mr. WEAVER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CANNON. And I understand the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER] to say that the public lands bill is a privileged matter, while the Oklahoma bill is not?

Mr. WEAVER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CANNON. So that if this Oklahoma bill is not considered now, it probably will not be considered this session?

Mr. WEAVER. That is just the situation.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. Speaker, I can only consider the action of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] in bringing this bill before the House at this time as a move in direct opposition to the consideration of the Oklahoma bill. The bill of the gentleman from Indiana is a privileged measure, which he can bring in at any time. This afternoon is open to us, and it is the first afternoon that we have had. We have petitions from over half a million of citizens of this country asking for the consideration of the Oklahoma bill, and the opening up to actual settlers of that territory, containing over 23,000,000 acres of land almost in the center of the continent. The bill is guarded in every way for the protection of the rights of the Indians, and there is only one class of persons who are strenuously objecting to its consideration, the cattle syndicates that are occupying 6,000,000 acres of these lands contrary to law, contrary to the decisions of the Attorney-General and the courts.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House now proceed to consider the bill reported from the Committee on Public Lands by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN].

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I wish to understand what will be the effect of a vote in the affirmative?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state the situation. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and gave notice that his purpose was to call up in that committee the bill known as the Oklahoma bill. Pending that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] made a privileged report from the Committee on Public Lands, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] raised the question of consideration against the consideration of that report.

Mr. PAYSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PAYSON. If the House shall determine to consider the bill reported by the gentleman from Indiana, and that business shall be disposed of, is there anything to prevent the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] from then making the same motion that he has made now, that the House go into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering his bill?

The SPEAKER. The motion can still be made.

Mr. SPRINGER. And, on the other hand, there will be nothing during the rest of this session to prevent the gentleman from Indiana from bringing up his bill.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House now proceed to the consideration of the bill reported by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] from the Committee on Public Lands?

The question was taken, and the Speaker declared that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 31, noes 55.

So the House refused to consider the bill.

Mr. BARNES. No quorum.

Mr. WEAVER. It is too late to make the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is not too late.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope the gentleman from Georgia will not obstruct the business of the House. The Committee on Territories has had but two hours this session to consider its business, and I think it certainly ought to have the rest of this afternoon at least.

Mr. WEAVER. I ask the gentleman from Georgia to withdraw the point of no quorum.

Mr. SPRINGER. He is a member of the Committee on Territories, and I think it comes with a very poor grace from a member of that committee to obstruct the consideration of business reported from a committee of which he is a member. I therefore appeal to him in the interest of the public——

Mr. BARNES. The gentlemen can not very well make an appeal to me when he comments upon my want of good grace in this matter, and now I will not withdraw the point. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. Then I withdraw my remark.

Mr. BARNES. Then I withdraw the point.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think there should be a further count, and for that purpose, merely, I renew the point.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will then appoint tellers and have the vote taken in that way. The Chair appoints as tellers the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER].

The tellers took their places.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

The tellers proceeded to make the count.

The SPEAKER. There seems to be a misunderstanding as to the state of the question. The Chair understood the gentleman from Indiana to demand——

Mr. HOLMAN. I wanted a further count upon the original proposition.

The SPEAKER. Then the Chair will restate the question.

Mr. HOLMAN. But I am perfectly willing to let the vote go in its present shape.

The SPEAKER. The vote will then be taken on the motion made by the gentleman from Illinois, as already stated by the Chair.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 93, noes 16.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will not insist on a further count.

Mr. FINLEY. I make the point that no quorum has voted.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WARNER] desire to speak an hour each on this subject. I hope there will be no interruption of business at this time.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I join in the request of my friend from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] that an opportunity be afforded for the discussion of this bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope, if the point is to be made, it will be made after debate and when members have had a chance to understand what the measure is.

The SPEAKER. If the point is insisted upon, the tellers will resume their places.

Mr. FINLEY. As this bill is to be discussed fully before any question is taken upon it, I withdraw the point.

The SPEAKER. The point of no quorum being withdrawn, the ayes have it; and the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union is agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, Mr. DOCKERY in the chair.

OKLAHOMA.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is now in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union. The Clerk will report the first bill in order.

Mr. SPRINGER. Before the debate begins, and in order that there may be no misunderstanding, I will ask——

Mr. HOOKER. Let us hear what the bill before the Committee of the Whole is. We have heard no bill read. I call for the reading of the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole may proceed to consider the House bill No. 1277, which is the first bill on the Calendar as unfinished business, under clause 5 of Rule XXIV.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois that the Committee of the Whole now proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 1277? The Chair hears no objection. The title of the bill will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 1277) to provide for the organization of the Territory of Oklahoma, and for other purposes.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] desires that the bill be read. I want to state for the information of the Committee of the Whole that the Committee on Territories reported this bill with sundry amendments, and those amendments are printed in the body of the bill; but in order to have the bill before the committee without any striking out or any interlineation another bill was introduced by me, referred to the Committee on the Territories, and reported back without amendment, with the recommendation that it pass. The latter bill embodies the previous amendments and some other amendments, principally those suggested by friends of the bill, who are interested in more effectually protecting the rights of the Indians—that is to say, the representatives of the Indians' Rights Association. I move, therefore, to strike out all after the enacting clause of the pending bill and insert the bill which I have in my hand, the measure last agreed upon by the Committee on Territories.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that there is now pending an amendment in the nature of a substitute, offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES].

Mr. BARNES. That has never yet been offered. I submitted it for information, and it has been printed for the use of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands the gentleman from Illinois to ask unanimous consent to substitute the bill which he sends up for the bill the title of which has been read.

Mr. SPRINGER. Well, I will make that request, instead of moving to strike out and insert. Then the gentleman from Georgia can have the opportunity to move his substitute.

Mr. BARNES. It ought to be read now, so as to bring up the whole question.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. HOOKER. That does not displace the amendment of the gentleman from Georgia?

The CHAIRMAN. It does not. He will still have the right to offer his substitute.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to suggest that the amendment of the gentleman from Georgia be regarded as pending as an amendment to the substitute of the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SPRINGER. That is agreeable to me.

Mr. ADAMS. What is the pending bill?

The CHAIRMAN. The pending bill is House bill 1277, for which the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] asks to substitute House bill No. 10614. Is there objection?

Mr. BUCHANAN. How can we tell whether we wish to object unless we understand what the gentleman asks to substitute?

Mr. SPRINGER. The substitute I ask to have considered is the same as the other bill, except that the amendments are incorporated as a part of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection to the request fo the gentleman from Illinois to substitute House bill 10614 for House bill 1277; and it is so ordered. If there be no objection, the substitute of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] will now be considered as pending, in accordance with the request of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN].

Mr. SPRINGER. That is right.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I wish to inquire whether the offering of this substitute will preclude the offering of amendments to the pending bill?

The CHAIRMAN. The question will not come up on agreeing to the substitute until after the bill is perfected.

Mr. SPRINGER. I have here, and will ask the pages to circulate, a map which exhibits thoroughly the region covered by the pending bill.

A MEMBER. Let the bill and substitute be read.

Mr. SPRINGER. Let the discussion go on, and that discussion will have the effect better to enlighten the members as to what is proposed in the pending bill and substitute than by any mere formal reading of them. I ask, therefore, that the formal reading be dispensed with.

Mr. HOOKER. I hope that will not be done. Let the bill and substitute be read and be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. SPRINGER. They will be printed in the RECORD, as a matter of course.

The Clerk proceeded with the reading of the bill.

Mr. PAYSON. If this is the first reading of the bill for information and not the second reading of the bill for amendments, I do not see why we should not let the bill and substitute be printed in the RECORD and save the time for the discussion.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia objects to dispensing with the reading of the bill and substitute.

Mr. PAYSON (some time afterwards). I understand the gentleman who objects to dispensing with the reading of the bill and substitute understands the bill is now being read for amendment.

Mr. SPRINGER. The bill was read a first and second time before it was referred, and it is now being read for information.

Mr. PAYSON. Then I move to dispense with the formal reading, as it will be read, together with the substitute, when they come up for consideration. There does not seem to be any good object to be subserved by reading them at this time.

Mr. HOOKER. This is a new bill, and there is a substitute moved by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] and they ought to be read to the House for information. I object, therefore, to dispensing with the reading of the bill and substitute.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all that part of the United States included within the following limits, except such portions thereof as are hereinafter expressly exempted from the operations of this act, to wit: Bounded on the west by the State of Texas and the Territory of New Mexico; on the north by the State of Colorado and the State of Kansas; on the east by the reservation occupied by the Cherokee tribe of Indians east of the ninety-sixth meridian of west longitude, and by the Creek, Seminole, and Chickasaw reservations; and on the south by the Creek, Seminole, and Chickasaw reservations, and by the State of Texas, comprising what is known as the Public Land Strip, and all that part of the Indian Territory not actually occupied by the five civilized tribes, is created into a temporary government by the name of the territory of Oklahoma: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to impair the rights of person or property, or to impair any patent to or right of occupancy of lands now pertaining to the Indians in said territory under the laws and treaties of the United States, Executive order, or otherwise, or to include any territory occupied by any Indian tribe for which title has been conveyed by patent or otherwise from the United States or to which such tribe may be entitled by law, Executive order, right of occupancy, or treaty, without the consent of said tribe, or any territory which by treaty or agreement with any Indian tribe is not, without the consent of said tribe, to be included within the territorial limits or jurisdiction of any State or Territory; but all such territory shall be excepted out of the boundaries and constitute no part of the territory of Oklahoma until said tribe shall signify its assent to the President of the United States to be included in the said territory of Oklahoma, except for judicial purposes as provided herein, or to affect the authority of the Government of the United States to make any regulation or enact any law respecting such Indians, their lands, property, or other rights, which it would have been competent to make or enact if this act had never passed.

SEC. 2. That there shall be a governor, secretary, Legislative Assembly, supreme court, attorney, and marshal for said territory, who shall be appointed and selected under the provisions of Title XXIII, chapter 1 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to the government of all the Territories. The provisions of said title shall have the same force and effect in the Territory of Oklahoma as in other Territories of the United States: Provided, That the Legislative Assembly and Delegate to the House of Representatives shall not be elected until the President shall order: Provided further, That no person shall be entitled to vote at the first election, or to be elected to any office, who has not been a bona fide resident of said territory for sixty days previous to said election: And provided further, That the council in said territory shall consist of thirteen members, and the house of representatives shall consist of twenty-six members, which may be increased to thirty-nine.

SEC. 3. That the Constitution and all laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable shall have the same force and effect in said territory of Oklahoma as elsewhere in the United States: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to interfere with the local governments of any of the Indian tribes which may now be provided for by the laws and treaties of the United States, or which may exist in conformity thereto: And provided further, That the supreme court of the Territory shall have jurisdiction and shall embrace all causes of action, crimes, and offenses arising within the limits of the territory organized by this act; and all laws heretofore passed granting jurisdiction to United States courts within the limits of said Territory are hereby repealed; but cases now pending shall be prosecuted to their final disposition therein the same as if this act had not been passed.

SEC. 4. That the section of country lying between the States of Kansas, Colorado, and Texas, known as the Public Land Strip, is hereby declared to be a part of the public domain of the United States, and shall be open to settlement under the operation of the homestead laws only, except as otherwise provided in this act: Provided, That the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of land in each township shall be reserved for school purposes.

SEC. 5. That whenever the Creek and Seminole tribes of Indians shall signify their assent to the provisions of this section, in legal manner, to the commission provided for in this act, and the President has issued his proclamation fixing the time as provided herein, the unoccupied lands ceded to the United States by said tribes under the treaties of June 14, 1866, and March 21, 1866, shall be open to settlement, except the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections in each township, which shall be reserved for school purposes, and shall be disposed of to actual settlers only, in quantities not to exceed 160 acres in square form, to each settler, at the price of $1.25 per acre. All persons who are heads of families or over twenty-one years of age, and who are citizens of the United States, or have resided in the United States for two years, and have declared their intention to become citizens thereof, shall be entitled to become actual settlers on such lands. An accurate account shall be kept by the Secretary of the Interior of the money received as proceeds of the sale of such lands. The commission hereinafter created by this act is hereby authorized to confer with the Creeks and Seminoles to ascertain whether said Indians are entitled to any further compensation than that heretofore paid for said unoccupied lands. If said commission shall find that further compensation should be paid said Indians, they may, by negotiation with said Indians, fix the amount of such additional compensation, not to exceed the sum of $1.25 per acre, less the cost of sale and the amounts heretofore paid said tribes in the purchase of said lands; and any additional sum agreed upon by said commission to be paid said tribes for said lands as provided herein shall be placed to the credit of said tribes in the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 6. That whenever the Cherokee tribe of Indians shall signify their assent to the provisions of this section, in legal manner, to the commission provided for in this act, and the President has issued his proclamation fixing the time as herein provided, the unoccupied portion of the lands west of the ninety-sixth degree of west longitude, ceded to the United States by the said tribe of Indians by the treaty concluded July 19, 1866, shall be open to settlement, except the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of said land, which shall be reserved for school purposes, and shall be disposed of to actual settlers only, in quantities not to exceed 160 acres, in square form, to each settler, at the price of $1.25 per acre. All persons who are heads of families or over twenty-one years of age, and who are citizens of the United States, or have resided in the United States two years and have declared their intention to become citizens thereof, shall be entitled to become actual settlers on such lands. An accurate account shall be kept by the Secretary of the Interior of the money received as proceeds of the sale of said lands, and said money shall be placed to the credit of the Cherokee Indian tribe in the Treasury of the United States, after deducting the cost of the sale by the United States and the amount heretofore appropriated and paid to the Cherokee tribe as part compensation for said unoccupied lands: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to authorize any person to enter upon or occupy any of the lands mentioned in this or the preceding section, for the purpose of settlement or otherwise, until after the said Indian tribes and the commissioners herein authorized have concluded an agreement to that effect as provided herein, and laid the same before the President of the United States, who is thereupon authorized and required to issue his proclamation declaring such relinquished lands open to settlement, and fixing the time from and after which such lands may be taken. Any person who may enter upon any part of said lands contrary to the provisions of this act, and prior to the time fixed by the President's proclamation, shall not be permitted to make entry upon any lands or lay any claim thereto in said Territory.

SEC. 7. That the President may, at such times as he may deem it necessary, direct land offices to be opened in the Territory of Oklahoma, not to exceed four in number, and may nominate and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate appoint the usual officers to conduct the business of said land offices; and the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall, when directed by the President, cause the various portions of said lands to be properly surveyed and subdivided, where the same has not already been done. It is hereby made the duty of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to carefully examine each claim taken under the provisions of this act before issuing a patent to the claimant; and if it shall appear that said claim was not taken in good faith, he shall refuse a patent and declare all prior proceedings before had in such case to be null and void; and all persons settling on lands under the provisions of this act shall be required to select the same in square form, as near as may be, and to maintain a continuous personal residence of three years on the land, and to improve and cultivate the same for that period in the manner required by the homestead laws before obtaining title thereto; but payments for lands, where payment is required to be made by this act, shall be made in four equal installments, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, as follows: The first payment shall be made within six months from the time of entry, the second at the expiration of one year from date of entry, the third at the expiration of two years from date of entry, and the final payment shall be made at the expiration of three years from date of entry: Provided, That there shall be reserved public highways four rods wide around every section of land in said Territory, the section lines being the center of said highways; but no deduction shall be made in the amount to be paid for each quarter-section of land by reason of such reservation.

SEC. 8. That the procedure in applications, entries, contests, and adjudications under this act shall be in the form and manner prescribed under the homestead laws of the United States, and the general principles and provisions of the homestead laws, except as modified by the provisions of this act, shall be applicable to all entries made hereunder, and no patent shall be issued to any person who is not a citizen of the United States at the time he makes final proof and payment. Final proof and payment, except in cases of contest, shall be made within three months after the expiration of three years from the date of entry, and in default thereof, or in default of the payment of any installment of the purchase-money when due, the entry shall be liable to cancellation, and the money paid thereon shall be forfeited to the United States. Lands entered under the provisions of this act shall be liable to taxation after the first installment of the purchase-money shall have been paid; but the same shall not be subject to any judgment or lien obtained upon indebtedness contracted or obligation incurred prior to the issue of patents therefor, nor shall such land be sold, or contracted to be sold, leased, or contracted to be leased, conveyed, mortgaged, or in any manner incumbered prior to final proof or payment and the record thereof made in the office of the register and receiver of the district where the land is located; and any sale, lease, conveyance, or mortgage made, executed, or contracted for prior to such final proof, payment, and record shall be absolutely null and void; and all assignments, transfers, and mortgages of unpatented land entries shall be at the risk of the assignees, transferees, and mortgagees, who shall have no recourse against the United States for any failure of claimant's title before issue of patent: Provided, That the provisions of section 2305 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, entitled "Homesteads," shall not be modified or changed by anything in this act.

SEC. 9. That whenever any portion of the lands opened to settlement by the provisions of this act shall be occupied for town-site purposes, and the Secretary of the Interior is satisfied that they are occupied in good faith and are necessary for such purposes, the said Secretary is hereby authorized and directed to cause patents to be issued therefor, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to any legally organized company occupying and entitled to the same, upon the payment in cash of $20 per acre for the lands so occupied. The money so received for each town site, except such amount as may be required to be paid to the Indian tribes, as provided in sections 5 and 6 of this act, shall be held by the Secretary of the Interior as a separate school fund for the benefit of the people of such town, and shall be expended under his direction for the erection of school buildings and the support of schools therein: Provided, That town sites actually occupied on the Public Land Strip at the date of the approval of this act by not less than 100 bona fide inhabitants shall be patented to the legally organized company selected by said inhabitants. said sites to embrace the amount of land provided by law: Provided further, That all patents issued for town sites in the territory of Oklahoma shall contain reservations for parks and other public purposes, embracing in the aggregate not less than 10 nor more than 20 acres; but no deduction shall be allowed on this account in the amount to be paid for said town sites as provided in this section; and patents for such reservations shall be issued to the towns respectively when organized as municipalities.

SEC. 10. That all lands in the territory of Oklahoma not embraced in the provisions of sections 4, 5, and 6 of this act, which are not required by law, treaty stipulations, executive orders, or right of occupancy for the use of any Indian tribe, or which may be relinquished as an Indian reservation, shall be open to settlement under the provisions of this act: Provided, That whenever Indian lands are purchased by the United States with the consent of the Indians, and opened to settlement in said territory, the President of the United States may fix the price to be paid therefor by actual settlers, which price shall in no case exceed $1.25 an acre, and the proceeds shall be held for the benefit of the Indians concerned, as provided in sections 5 and 6 of this act.

SEC. 11. That the President of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to appoint a commission, to be composed of five persons, not more than three of whom shall be members of one political party, whose duty it shall be to open negotiations with the Creeks, Seminoles, and Cherokees, for the purpose of securing the consent of said Indians, so far as it may be necessary, to the provisions of section 5 and section 6 of this act. The commission is authorized to enter into such agreements with said Indian tribes as it may deem necessary to accomplish the purposes of this act, and shall submit the same to the President for his approval or rejection. The compensation of the members of said commission shall be at the rate of $10 per day; and they shall also be allowed, in addition thereto, their actual necessary traveling expenses, stationery, and postage. They shall have power to appoint a secretary, who shall receive a compensation of $6 per day, and such allowances for traveling expenses as he may actually incur.

SEC. 12. That it shall be unlawful for any person, for himself or any company, association, or corporation, to directly or indirectly procure any person to settle upon any lands opened to settlement by this act with a view to their afterward acquiring title to said lands from said occupants; and the parties to such fraudulent settlement shall severally be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished, upon indictment, by imprisonment not exceeding twelve months, or by fine not exceeding $1,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 13. That all leases of lands belonging to the United States or held in common by any of the Indian tribes within the territory of Oklahoma, as organized by this act, including the Cherokee Strip west of the ninety-sixth degree of west longitude, whether controlled by persons, corporations, or others, except such leases as are held for the purpose of cultivating the soil strictly for farming purposes, are hereby declared void and contrary to public policy; and it is hereby made the duty of the President, immediately after the passage of this act, to cause the lessees of said lands, and any other persons illegally occupying the same, to be removed from said lands.

SEC. 14. That the act of Congress approved July 25, 1866, granting lands to the State of Kansas to aid in the construction of the Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad and its extension to Red River, and an act of Congress granting lands to the State of Kansas to aid in the construction of the southern branch of the Union Pacific Railway, and a telegraph from Fort Riley, Kans., to Fort Smith, Ark., approved July 26, 1866, or any other acts of Congress so far as they relate to lands granted in said Indian Territory and the Public Land Strip, except for the right of way and necessary stations as now provided for by law, are hereby repealed; and all or any rights to said lands are hereby forfeited to the United States, and no railroad company now organized, or hereafter to be organized, shall ever acquire any lands to aid in the construction of its road, or in consequence of any railroad already constructed, either from the United States, or from any Indian tribe, or from any Territorial government, within the limits of the territory organized by this act.

SEC. 15. That neither the Legislative Assembly of said territory, nor any county, township, town, or city therein, shall have power to create or contract any indebtedness for any work of public improvement, or in aid of any railroad constructed or to be constructed, nor to subscribe for or purchase any shares of stock in any railroad company or corporation.

SEC. 16. That the provisions of this act shall not be applicable to lands lying within the limits of what is known as Greer County until the question of title thereto between the United States and the State of Texas shall have been finally determined in favor of the United States.

Mr. BARNES's proposed substitute was read, as follows:

A bill to provide a commission for the purpose of negotiating with the Indians in the Indian Territory, with a view of opening a part of said Territory to white settlement.

Be it enacted, etc., That the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, is hereby authorized and directed to appoint three commissioners, whose duty it shall be to negotiate and make treaties with the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Seminole, Creek, and Cherokee Indians, for the purpose of securing homes and reservations east of the ninety-eighth degree of longitude for the Kiowa, Comanche, Apache, Cheyenne, and Arapaho Indians, and the Wichita and affiliated bands living with them.

SEC. 2. That in order to open up the country for occupancy by citizens of the United States west of the ninety-eighth degree of longitude, now occupied by the Comanches, Kiowas, and Apaches, and the country occupied by the Cheyennes and Arapahoes, and by the Wichita and affiliated bands, said commissioners shall treat with said Indians for an exchange of the lands now occupied by them for permanent homes and reservations east of said ninety-eighth degree of longitude.

SEC. 3. That in treating with the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Seminole, Creek, and Cherokee Indians for the occupancy by American citizens of the country west of the ninety-eighth degree of longitude leased, sold, ceded, or agreed to be ceded by them to the United States for the settlement of Indians and freedmen thereon, it shall be stipulated that the lands so to be occupied by citizens of the United States shall not be paid for at a greater rate than $1.25 per acre, and that any and all sums of money heretofore received by any of said Indians as a payment thereon shall be deducted from the amounts agreed to be paid.

SEC. 4. That negotiations with the tribes and bands of Indians now living west of the ninety-eighth degree of longitude shall proceed upon the basis of securing to them homes and reservations east of said degree of longitude in perpetuity, and compensation for their removal and settlement in a new country, and pay for their improvements.

SEC. 5. That in treating with any and all of said Indians, consideration shall be given to any and all matters unsettled, or about which any controversy exists, between said Indians and the United States, growing out of any treaty or agreement or statute heretofore made by the authority of the United States, to the end that all such matters may be finally determined.

SEC. 6. That said commissioners shall be allowed pay at the rate of $10 per day each, and necessary traveling and other expenses, while actually engaged in the discharge of the duties required herein; and a stenographic secretary, whose pay shall be at the rate of $6 and actual expenses while engaged as such secretary.

SEC. 7. That the President direct the speediest accomplishment of the requirements of this act; and the sum of $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated to carry the same into effect.

Mr. BLOUNT. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLOUNT. After the bill shall have been read, will it not be open for general debate and amendment?

Mr. SPRINGER. It will be.

Mr. BLOUNT. I supposed so, but I was asking the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair so understands.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the bill and substitute as above.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Mr. Chairman, it was remarked by some gentleman shortly before the commencement of the reading of these two bills that this measure was petitioned for by some 600,000 workingmen of this country. I think a remark of that kind is not warranted and should not pass unnoticed, because the measure itself with its provisions and scope has never yet been submitted to or read by any considerable number of workingmen, and I think it safe to assert that it has not been read by one out of ten of the members of this body. To say that the workingmen of this country favor a proposition the effect of which will override and break down any existing treaty stipulations with the Indian tribes is a direct insult to the intelligence of themillions of toilers of the United States. I desire to plant myself squarely with every workingman in favor of every just measure having for its object the opening up, for the benefit of the people of the country, of the public domain, and in favor of throwing around the territory at a proper time and under proper restrictions and conditions Territorial forms of government, and moreover, I am in favor of throwing around the territory when it presents the proper conditions the rights and privileges of statehood, and if the zeal of some of my friends who favor this bill were as great in behalf of the 600,000 citizens of Dakota, the country would not to-day witness the spectacle of a great State vainly seeking her constitutional right of admission to the Union.

Mr. Chairman, it is not my purpose in the brief hour at my disposal to attempt any extended review of the provisions of the bill to organize the Territory of Oklahoma now before us, further than to remark that if this Congress shall determine to adopt a policy such as is proposed by the pending bill, then it is probable that this measure, with a single amendment, as proposed by the minority report, is open to as little objection as any of its predecessors.

I can not resist the conviction that the passage into law of this bill would inaugurate a complete and radical change of the policy of our Government toward the tribes of Indians now occupying the Indian Territory, and would in effect be a gross breach of the honor and good faith pledged by this great Government of ours toward weak and defenseless tribes, who hold and possess their land under most solemn treaty covenants.

I do not question the power of Congress to do just what this bill proposes, but I do deny our right under the Constitution and the laws, and insist that if we proceed about it as is proposed the act will constitute in effect a violation of our sacred covenants with those people; if not a direct violation, the act opens the way to such results. Feeling thus, I am compelled in the discharge of my oath as a member of this House to enter my most earnest protest against it. The Constitution provides that—

Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States.

Mr. NUTTING. Will my colleague permit me to ask a question?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Certainly; with pleasure.

Mr. NUTTING. Am I to understand that my friend's opposition to this bill rests against the proposed means and methods contemplated by the bill, rather than to the general proposition of opening in some legal and methodical way the lands in the Indian Territory to settlement?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. My friend will understand as I proceed that I am not opposed to opening up for settlement the lands in question whenever and as soon as it may be done with due regard for existing treaty rights. Treat with civilized tribes first, extinguish existing titles, then go ahead. This I contend is all that can be done decently.

Mr. NUTTING. I thank the gentleman for permitting the interruption.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. The lands affected by the bill before us are all embraced within the Indian Territory (except the public land strip known as "No Man's Land"), and the rights and interests of those tribes therein are defined by existing treaties, which have received judicial and executive interpretation the correctness whereof has not, I believe, been questioned by any one. The provisions of the existing treaties are, we may assume, familiar to all who have given the subject any considerable study. Under them, it is claimed, the United States have disposed of the title to those lands to the five civilized tribes, covenanting on the part of the Government of the United States that they should never be included within the territorial limits or jurisdiction of any State or Territory, that they should remain subject to the intercourse laws, which, as has been stated during this debate, have always remained in force in all parts of the Territory. The rights acquired by the United States under the treaties of 1855 and 1866 are purely in the nature of trusts. It has been well stated that it is not within the lawful power of either the legislative or executive department of the Government to annihilate those trusts or to avoid the obligations arising thereunder.

For nearly fifty years this title has received recognition by and express approval of the judicial and executive departments of the Government.

Their existence has been and is recognized as "a domestic Territory—a Territory which originated under our Constitution and laws." (Mackey vs. Coxe, 18 Howard, page 100.)

As late as January 3, 1885, the then Secretary of the Interior, in a letter to the Senate (see Executive Document No. 17, second session Forty-eighth Congress), among other things, said:

The Cherokees have a fee-simple title to their lands, and they do not recognize the right of the Department to interfere in the management of their affairs with reference thereto. Patent was issued to this nation of Indians, December 31, 1838, for their lands in the Indian Territory, under the provisions of articles 2 and 3 of the treaty of 1835 (7 Statutes, 478), and in accordance with the terms of the act of May 28, 1830 (Id., 412).

"The land is theirs and they have an undoubted right to use it in any way that a white man would use it with the same character of title, and an attempt to deprive the nation of the right would be in direct conflict with the treaty as well as the plain words of the patent. They are quite capable of determining, without the aid of the Interior Department or Congress, what is to their advantage or disadvantage, and the Government can not interfere with their rightful use and occupation of their lands, which are as rightfully theirs as the public domain is that of the United States, subject only to the provisions of article 16 of the treaty of 1866, which at most is only a contract to sell certain portions of the land; but until the Government settles friendly Indians thereon and pays for the land the right of possession and occupancy is especially reserved."

I beg the indulgence of the House in this connection also to read a letter written by the then Acting Commissioner of the Land Office, April 25, 1881, having reference to a scheme then being pushed by the so-called "Freedman's Oklahoma Association," and the difference between the movement then attempted and that contemplated under the present bill I leave gentlemen to observe after due consideration. I read from Executive Document No. 111, Senate, Forty-seventh Congress, first session, which is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., April 25, 1881.

SIR: I am in receipt, by your reference, of a copy of a circular purporting to be issued by the "Freedman's Oklahoma Association," promising 160 acres of land to every freedman who will go and occupy the public lands at Oklahoma. This circular is signed in the name of J. Milton Turner, who is represented as "president," and by Hannibal C. Carter, who is represented as "general manager" of said pretended association.

It contains a letter from E. C. Boudinot, professing to state the legal character of the lands to which emigration is invited, and affirming that the same are public lands of the United States; that the Indian title thereto has been extinguished, and that the said lands were purchased by the United States for the use of freedmen as well as Indians.

The circular declares that the freedmen of the United States "have an undoubted legal right to enter and settle upon these public lands."

In compliance with your request for a report upon said lands, in view of the representations contained in this circular, I have the honor to state as follows:

1. There are no lands in the Indian Territory open to settlement or entry by freedmen, or by any other persons, under any of the public-land laws of the United States.

2. There has never been a period of time since the acquisition by the United States of the territory ceded by France that any of the lands embraced within the limits of the present Indian Territory have been open to settlement or entry by any persons whomsoever under any of said public-land laws.

3. The lands to which the United States holds the legal title within the Indian Territory are reserved lands by treaty stipulations and acts of Congress, and are not, and never have been, public lands subject to general occupation.

4. The entire Indian Territory, including the lands therein to which the United States holds the paramount title, is "Indian country," as defined by the first section of the act of Congress of June 30, 1854 (fourth Stat., 729), which act prohibits unauthorized settlements in such country, and provides for the employment of the military forces to prevent the introduction of persons and property contrary to law, and for the apprehension of every person who may be in such country in violation of law (Revised Statutes, sections 2111-2157).

The Indian Territory comprises a remaining portion of lands originally granted to, or reserved for, the use of certain Indian tribes, and constitutes a district created by the act of Congress of May 28, 1830 (4 Stat., 411) for the removal thereto of Indians from other localities.

The Territory is specifically described by geographical boundaries in the twenty-fourth section of the intercourse act (4 Stat., 733), by which act it was attached to the western judicial district of Arkansas for judicial purposes. (Revised Statutes, section 533.)

None of the land laws of the United States have ever been extended over said Territory, nor have any other general laws of the United States been so extended, except the criminal laws and the laws regulating intercourse with Indian country.

Prior to 1866 the whole area of the Indian Territory, except a small portion in the northeast corner which belonged to the Senecas, Shawnees, and Quapaws, was embraced in the grants made and patented to the Cherokee, Choctaw, and Creek Indians, under the treaties with said tribes, respectively.

The several treaties under which the title of the United States was conveyed to said tribes are as follows:

CHEROKEE TREATIES.

May 6, 1828, 7 Statutes, page 310.
February 14, 1833, 7 Statutes, page 414.
December 29, 1835, 7 Statutes, page 478.
Patent issued to the Cherokee Nation December 31, 1839.

CHOCTAW TREATIES.

October 18, 1820, 7 Statutes, page 210.
January 20, 1825, 7 Statutes, page 234.
September 21, 1830, 7 Statutes, page 333.
Patent issued to the Choctaw Nation March 23, 1842.

CREEK TREATIES.

January 24, 1826, 7 Statutes, page 286.
March 24, 1833, 7 Statutes, page 366.
February 14, 1833, 7 Statutes, page 417.
Patent issued to the Creek Nation August 11, 1852.

The treaties with the Senecas, Shawnees, and Quapaws were the treaties, respectively, of February 28, 1831, 7 Statutes, 348; July 20, 1831, 7 Statutes, 351; and May 13, 1833, 7 Statutes, 424.

By agreements approved by the United States the Choctaws conveyed a portion of their lands to the Chickasaws, and the Creeks in like manner conveyed a portion of their lands to the Seminoles.

The titles of the several tribes under the foregoing treaties and agreements were subject to the following conditions:

First. That the land should not be conveyed by them except to the United States.

Second. If the Indians abandoned the land, or became extinct, the lands were to revert to the United States.

It was stipulated by the United States that the Indians should be protected in their homes and lands against all interference by any person or persons.

The treaties by which the United States reacquired title to any of the lands in the Indian Territory, or obtained the conditional right to control the disposal of any of said lands, were the treaties with the Seminoles of March 21, 1866; with the Choctaws and Chickasaws of April 28, 1866; with the Creeks of June 14, 1866; and with the Cherokees of July 19, 1866.

By the third article of the treaty with the Seminoles (14 Stat., 756), said Indians ceded to the United States about 2,100,000 acres of land, "in compliance with the desire of the United States to locate other Indians and freedmen thereon."

In compliance with the same desire, the Creeks, by the third article of the treaty with that tribe (14 Stat., 786), ceded about 3,200,000 acres to the United States, "to be sold to and used as homes for such other civilized Indians as the United States may choose to settle thereon."

The freedmen referred to were the former slaves of Indian tribes. The treaty stipulations, as uniformly understood and construed, have no application to any other freedmen than the persons freed from Indian bondage. They relate exclusively to friendly Indians and to Indian freedmen of other tribes in the Indian Territory whom it was the desire of the United States to provide with permanent homes on the lands ceded for that purpose.

The lands reconveyed to the United States by the foregoing treaties are therefore held subject to the trust named. They can be appropriated only to the uses specified, and to those uses only by the United States, and then only in the manner provided for by law. Miscellaneous immigration even by the intended beneficiaries would be unauthorized and illegal.

The Choctaw and Chickasaw cession of April 28, 1866 (14 Statutes, 769), was by the tenth section thereof made subject to the conditions of the compact of June 22, 1855 (11 Statutes, 613), by the ninth article of which it was stipulated that the lands should be appropriated for the permanent settlement of such tribes or bands of Indians as the United States might desire to locate thereon.

The lands embraced in the Choctaw and Chickasaw cession were also included in a definite district established by the stipulations of the treaty of 1855, pursuant to the act of Congress of May 28, 1830, the United States re-engaging by the seventh article of said treaty to remove and keep out from that district all intruders.

Articles 15 and 16 of the treaty with the Cherokees (14 Stat., 803, 804) provide that the United States may settle any civilized Indians friendly with the Cherokees and adjacent tribes within the Cherokee country, on unoccupied lands, on certain terms and conditions specified in the treaty.

These provisions made the United States the agent of the Cherokees for the sale and disposal of unoccupied land in the Cherokee country for the benefit of said tribe, but restricted such sale and disposal exclusively to friendly Indians.

In pursuance of the stipulations of the foregoing compacts, and in the exercise of the trusts assumed by the United States under the several treaties, and in accordance with specific provisions of law and the lawful orders of the President, all the lands in the Indian Territory to which the United States has title have been permanently appropriated or definitely reserved for the uses and purposes named.

It is stated in the circular referred to me for examination that there are at the present time a large quanity, to wit, some 14,000,000 acres of public land in this Territory to which the Indian title has been extinguished, and that "these public lands are surveyed and sectionized, awaiting their intended use, namely, settlement and occupation by the freedmen of the United States, giving to each settler the fee-simple to a homestead of 160 acres."

It is essential for the instruction of those who may be uninformed, and necessary to the protection of those who are sought to be imposed upon, that the misleading features and false conclusions of the statements contained in said circular should be explained and exposed.

The main proposition set forth is that there are certain public lands in the Indian Territory, and the argument is that the rights of citizens to enter and settle upon the public lands must be the same in that Territory as elsewhere; and it is further asserted that colored people are especially protected in such rights as to these particular lands by the assumed purposes for which the lands were acquired by the United States.

That there are lands in the Indian Territory that belong to the United States in the sense that the United States hold the naked legal title thereto is true; but it is not true that these are public lands within the meaning of the public-land laws.

The term "public lands" is sometimes used in a general sense to designate lands the legal title to which is in the United States, in contradistinction to lands that are the private property of individual citizens. It is in this sense that the term is used in the surveying laws which require Indian reservations to be surveyed in the same manner as "other public lands." And the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in his annual reports of surveying operations, includes the area of surveyed and unsurveyed lands in the Indian Territory in the tables of surveyable public lands in the same manner as all Indian reservations are included in each of the other States and Territories. But this does not mean that the surveyed or unsurveyed lands embraced in Indian reservations are public lands in the sense of the laws providing for the disposal of public land. Under these laws the term public lands has a particular signification, and is used to describe such of the lands of the United States as are open to the public for general occupation, settlement, or entry.

All lands belonging to the United States are not subject to disposal, hence all lands belonging to the United States are not public lands within the meaning of that term, as invariably used in the public-land laws, and as the statutes are uniformly expounded by the courts.

Lands belonging to the United States, but which have been appropriated to any special use, or reserved for any purpose by act of Congress or Executive proclamation, or withdrawn from disposal by lawful authority, are not public lands in the legal and proper sense of those words as employed to define lands subject to disposal to the public and open to occupation by the public.

Indian reservations, and all other reservations established by competent authority, are protected from entry or settlement by positive provision of law, and both the State and Federal courts, in an unbroken line of decision, have always maintained the inviolability of such reservations.

The pre-emption and homestead laws authorizing entries to be made on lands belonging to the United States to which the Indian title is extinguished expressly provide, among other restrictions, that "lands included in any reservation by any treaty, law, or proclamation by the President, for any purpose," shall not be subject to such right. Hence the extinguishment of the Indian title to certain of the lands in the Indian Territory does not operate to open any of such lands to pre-emption or homestead settlement under those laws.

The title of the United States to lands in the Indian Territory is, as heretofore shown, subject to specific trusts, and it is not within the lawful power of either the legislative or executive departments of the Government to annihilate such trusts, or to avoid the obligations arising thereunder.

Such trusts are for the benefit of Indian tribes and Indian freedmen. The "freedmen of the United States" are not comprehended within the policy or intention of the treaty provisions, and said lands have accordingly not "been purchased for the use and occupation "of the colored people of any of the States.

Were it otherwise, and if in fact any land in the Indian Territory was intended for the settlement and occupation of colored people of the United States, it would require an appropriate act of Congress to carry such intention into effect. No legal settlement can be made on any lands of the United States except in accordance with some law, and no law exists under which colored people, any more than other citizens, can occupy lands in the Indian Territory, or be permitted to intrude themselves within that Territory.

For many years efforts have been made by designing persons to effect an ingress into the Indian Territory for the purpose of despoiling the Indians of the patrimony secured to them by the most solemn obligations of the United States.

These unlawful and dangerous efforts have heretofore been thwarted by the prompt action of the Executive, under his constitutional duty to enforce the laws.

The present attempt to make use of the colored people of the country in the same direction, by deluding them with fictitious assurances that new and congenial homes can be provided for them within this Territory, deserves especial reprobation, since its only effect must be to involve innocent people in a criminal conspiracy, and to subject them to disappointment, hardship, and suffering.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. HOLCOMB,
Acting Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

This letter is so conclusive that I have given it in full. The scheme to legislate as now substantially proposed is not new. Session after session for a whole decade Congress has been urged to create in and throw around that country a territorial form of government. To do so in a wise and proper method and by means and measures that would not subject our Government to the imputation of inhumanity, injustice, and mismanagement, is a consummation devoutly to be desired. The method now urged seems to have met with poor success in all the past. In November, 1877, Mr. Franklin, a member of the Forty-fifth Congress, introduced "A bill to provide for the organization of the Territory of Oklahoma." I hold in my hand the able and exhaustive report upon that bill, presented by Mr. Neal, to which is subscribed the familiar names of the present Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Muldrow, and the gentleman from Maine, Mr. REED. I have read it with interest. It is a valuable contribution to the history of proposed legislation affecting the civilized tribes of Indians. I will quote their conclusions only:

1. That the bill under consideration conflicts with existing treaty stipulations.

2. That while the right to decide in the last resort that a treaty is no longer binding is undoubtedly lodged in Congress, the exercise of that right is a judicial act affecting the honor and dignity of the nation, requiring for its justification reasons which commend themselves to the principles of equity and good conscience, particularly where the parties to the compact with the United States are weak and powerless and depend solely on the good faith of the Government.

3. That no such reasons exist for violating the treaty stipulations which reserve the Indian Territory exclusively for Indians, and which secure to the Cherokees, Choctaws, Chickasaws, Creeks, and Seminoles the right of self-government under the restrictions of the United Stutes Constitution.

4. That even if there were no opposing treaty stipulations—no objections resting on good faith—it would be unwise and impolitic to throw the Indian country open to white settlers without the consent of the Indian owners.

5. That while official recommendations, some of them entitled to the highest respect, are strongly in favor of making Indians citizens of the United States, and transferring their land titles from the national tenure in common to the individual tenure in severality, experience has shown that in the great majority of cases such measures, instead of benefiting, have proved injurious to the Indian.

6. That experience fully demonstrates that the holding their lands in common by the Indian tribes is an effectual safeguard against the worst effects of Indian improvidence. Apart from any considerations of justice or humanity it would be unwise and unstatesmanlike to adopt measures which, by destroying that safeguard, would be calculated to reduce the great mass of them, in opposition to their own earnest protests, to a state of hopeless penury and degradation.

It is strange and unaccountable to me that the present Chief Executive neglected, when the present Administration came into power, to negotiate with the Creeks, Seminoles, and Cherokees, pursuant to the law of March 3, 1885, which provides—

That the President is hereby authorized to open negotiations with the Creeks, Seminoles, and Cherokees for the purpose of opening to settlement under the homestead laws the unassigned lands in said Indian Territory ceded by them respectively to the United States by the several treaties of August 11, 1866, March 21, 1866, and July 19, 1866; and for that purpose the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, his action hereunder to be reported to Congress.

Especially when we read in his first annual message the valuable suggestions there made in relation to the Indian policy recommended by him.

The President says:

I recommend the passage of a law authorizing the appointment of six commissioners, three of whom shall be detailed from the Army, to be charged with the duty of a careful inspection, from time to time, of all the Indians upon our reservations, or subject to the care and control of the Government, with a view of discovering their exact condition and needs, and determining what steps shall be taken on behalf of the Government to improve their situation in the direction of their self-support and complete civilization; that they may ascertain from such inspection what, if any, reservations may be reduced in the area, and in such cases what part, not needed for Indian occupation, may be purchased by the Government from the Indians and disposed of for their benefit; what, if any, Indians may, with their consent, be removed to other reservations, with a view of their concentration and the sale on their behalf of their abandoned reservations; what Indian lands now held in common should be allotted in severalty; in what manner and to what extent the Indians upon the reservations can be placed under the protection of our laws and subjected to their penalties; and which, if any, Indians should be invested with the rights of citizenship.

The powers and functions of the commissioners in regard to the subjects should be clearly defined, though they should, in conjunction with the Secretary of the Interior, be given all the authority to deal definitely with the questions presented, deemed safe and consistent.

They should be also charged with the duty of ascertaining the Indians who might properly be furnished with implements of agriculture and of what kind; in what cases the support of the Government should be withdrawn; where the present plan of distributing Indian supplies should be changed; where schools may be established and where discontinued; the conduct, methods, and fitness of agents in charge of reservations; the extent to which such reservations are occupied or intruded upon by unauthorized persons, and generally all matters relating to the welfare and improvement of the Indian.

They should advise with the Secretary of the Interior concerning these matters of detail in management, and should be given power to deal with them fully, if he is not invested with such power.

This plan contemplates the selection of persons for commissioners who are interested in the Indian question, and who have practical ideas on the subject of their treatment.

The expense of the Indian Bureau during the last fiscal year was more than $6,500,000. I believe much of this expenditure might be saved under the plan proposed; that its economical effects would be increased with its continuance; that the safety of our frontier settlers would be subserved under its operation, and that the nation would be saved through its results from the imputation of inhumanity, injustice, and mismanagement."

In accordance with these suggestions a bill was introduced by the honorable gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] early in the Forty-ninth Congress, but being, like some others of the recommendations of the Chief Executive, considered of no immediate importance, Mr. HOLMAN's bill was on the Calendar when the present Congress came into existence, and the same bill is before this House to share, I presume, a like fate, although its enactment is strongly urged by the President in the unwritten portion of his last annual message. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] in his able speech ha given a clear and convincing argument upon the law and the settled policy hitherto maintained by the Government in its management of the Indian problem.

Mr. Chairman, I am aware that in numbers a majority of the Committee on the Territories favor the pending bill; nevertheless I can safely assert that the minority is in deadly earnest and of respectable proportions. I am bound to admit in all sincerity that a considerable public sentiment exists in some portions of the West and Southwest in favor of this scheme. Some of it—a good deal of that public sentiment is, I doubt not, wise. Much of it, in my opinion, otherwise. The measure is earnestly urged by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MANSUR], and will be advocated with equal zeal by his colleague [Mr. WARNER]. They represent, in so doing, I admit, a considerable sentiment which has been communicated to this Congress in a pamphlet account of a convention held at Kansas City, in their State, in February last.

It is insisted as an argument in favor of the scheme that the bill expressly excepts from the operation thereof the lands of the five civilized tribes, and that the consent of the Indians now occupying some portions of the land affected must be obtained before they shall be in any manner affected thereunder, but the record of the Kansas City convention to my mind reveals much more of the real purpose of those most interested in promoting this measure. We are assured, also, that it is not the intention to disturb the rights or interests of the five civilized tribes. Let me read briefly from some of the speeches made at the convention:

Mr. John Furlong, of Purcell, Ind. T., said:

I have traveled 500 miles to this convention. I have come from out the heart of the Indian Territory. I have come from the town of Purcell, on the borders of Oklahoma—on the borders of the promised land. I come here to represent a great multitude of people who are living in the Indian Territory in the capacity of renters, farmers, railroaders, herders, tradesmen, and who are there legally or with as much permission as can be obtained, and their unanimous desire was when I came before this convention to tell you here with one voice and demand that the Springer bill be adopted or passed by the national Congress.

* * * * * * * *

There is one element in the Indian Territory not so kind to us, and I will mention some few. The first is the man married to the Indian. These men say to the Indians, "Now, if you will allow white men to come in amongst you they will rob and cheat you, and it is better you should keep them out." Now their purpose in talking this way I know not, unless they want all the spoils themselves. * * * My people also said that they were in favor of the Springer bill, notwithstanding that the bill requests or demands the consent of the Indians. This is the thing that they do not like in the bill, but they say, "We will give the Indians every chance to come to terms under favorable circumstances. We will hold out to them the palm of peace." If they do not act fair and right and are not willing to do right, they told me to tell this convention that Oklahoma should be theirs under any circumstances.

Mr. C. W. Daniels, of Baxter Springs, arose in the audience and said:

I arise to know whether this convention was called in the interest of the Oklahoma country exclusively. As I read the invitation, it was called in the interest of opening the whole Territory, from one end to the other, not for the support of Missouri, Arkansas, and Kansas, but for the interest of the whole Western people of the whole United States.

Later in the convention the same speaker said:

We want to obliterate the Indians; that is the only solution of this question. Some of the philanthropists down East—there are only a few of those people—are working against this move. They think we are going to infringe on the rights of the Indians; that is not the intention, I believe, of this convention. We want to obliterate the Indian race entirely, and we want to fill that country up with white men, and just as sure as you mix the white men in with them the Indian is gone. As this man [Mr. McNaughten] told you to-day, there is not a full-blood Indian in the Peoria tribe. Why? Because they have been mixed for a number of years with white men. Let a white man marry an Indian squaw (if she has got 160 acres of land)—and there are just lots of them in our country—and they make pretty good citizens. They say there are no good Indians, except dead Indians, but those people, after you mix them a little, make pretty good citizens.

* * * * * * *

The first thing we want down there is prohibition [laughter] (let me talk to you Kansas folks), and then we will go into women's rights. * * * This thing is going all over the United States—it is going like a wave, and the Congressman that will oppose this thing has got to stand from under. We people of the West will say to them, "This is our will." We want this measure, and I defy any Congressman to be elected in this district of Kansas or Missouri that will get up and fight this measure. [Applause.]

* * * * * * *

Of course, from what I said this morning about Oklahoma, I don't want any of you Oklahoma men to feel as though we were going to interfere with your arrangements at all. We not only want to join with you, but we want you to join with us. We want that whole Indian Territory opened.

Mr. J. P. McNaughten, of the Peoria tribe, was introduced. He said:

I am here representing a few people who live in the heart of the Indian Territory; not particularly in the heart of the Territory, but adjoining Kansas and immediately south of Baxter Springs. I represent these people in this way: There are very few, if any, but are opposed in any way whatever to the country remaining in the shape it is. Some of them have come down to Kansas City, and probably there are a great many people in this convention who are well acquainted with them. They are located there. They have 51,000 acres of land south of Baxter Springs, and now they ask for severalty; they are in favor of the Springer bill. All they ask is for the lands to be opened up.

This gentleman from the Oklahoma country, Mr. Furlong, referred to the "squaw men" of that country, and I might be classed among that number. I married a squaw. Mr. Furlong said the "squaw men" of that country were strictly opposed to opening the country. Gentlemen, it is just the reverse where I live. I will say and I can prove it up that the "squaw men" have made the country where I am located to-day, and they are the men who want the country opened up. * * * I, as a "squaw man," ask for my rights and nothing more. I want the protection of the United States. I was born a citizen of the United States, although I live in the Territory; but I have always endeavored to get to the States in time to vote. [Laughter.] I never failed to get there, gentlemen, and I always bring everybody along with me that I can. [Laughter.] I have never had the pleasure of voting more than once at one election—but I did the best I could to get others to come. We want more men in there, men of ability and means; we are not in favor of these little boomers of a day.

Captain Couch was the next speaker. He said:

* * * * * * *

Believing that there is a misunderstanding as to the object of this convention by some who are here, and believing that there is a mistaken idea as to the motives of some persons who are here, perhaps it would be proper for me to make a few remarks.

It appears that there are some here who are of the opinion that it is the intention of the Oklahoma boomers, or of some persons who are located in the southern part of the State of Kansas, to come here and manipulate matters in his convention to their personal interests alone; and I desire now, if it is within my power, to convince the people here that such is not the case. I am not here as the representative of the Oklahoma boomers alone. I was not sent here by the organization known as the Oklahoma colony, but I was sent here as a delegate at large—one of a delegation of five that was elected at a convention held at Arkansas City on the 3d, from a convention representing forty or fifty of the leading towns of southern Kansas, who united in sending delegates here to participate in this matter. Therefore, I say I do not represent alone the views of the Oklahoma boomers, but the people of the entire southern part of the State, and the people of the entire Southwestern States.

Now, I see that our friend a while ago has a mistaken idea as to what is contained in the Oklahoma bill now before Congress—at least I believe he has. The speakers before him had spoken of Oklahoma, of the opening of the Oklahoma country. He seems to think their view is that only that portion known as Oklahoma is to be opened. I want to say this with reference to the position taken by the Oklahoma colony. That colony was organized in 1880. It was organized for the purpose of making settlements on what is known as Oklahoma—a portion of the unoccupied lands situated in the center of the Indian Territory, originally belonging to the Creek and Seminole Indians, but has always been unoccupied by the Indians and has never been set apart for Indian occupancy since the treaties of 1866 between the United States and the Creek and Seminole Indians.

Our organization, or the originators of it, were of the opinion that this land, being the property of the United States, having been bought and paid for by the United States, surveyed in sections and quarter sections, and that the public-land laws applied to all land belonging to the United States, they believed they had the right to settle there under the land laws without any additional legislation. And on that theory we proceeded and attempted at various times to effect a settlement. We did make settlements at many times; but the past and present administrations have held an opinion different from what we did with reference to this question. While there is no difference in opinion as to the ownership of the land, all agreeing that it belongs to the Government, the past as well as the present administration felt that they were not justified in permitting settlement there until there is some additional legislation declaring it a part of the public domain and providing a way for the land entries. Our organization has been defeated in perfecting a settlement there, and for the past two years or more it has been the object of that organization to secure the proper legislation for the opening of that country; and from that time to this I want to say that there has not been an effort on the part of that colony, as a colony, to effect a settlement there—that is, forcible invasion, as you might say—but we directed our efforts in the way of securing legislation.

The bill now pending before Congress is largely due to the efforts of this organization. We have had representatives for the two past sessions of Congress—both sessions of the Forty-ninth Congress—at Washington, who have done everything in their power to secure legislation substantially as the gentleman that spoke awhile ago (Mr. Daniels) was in favor of. The bill that we have prepared, and which was introduced there, for the organization of the territory known as the territory of Oklahoma, included the entire Indian Territory within its boundaries, and the Public Land Strip. We met with a great deal of opposition, sufficient to defeat the passage of the bill during the Forty-ninth Congress. Experience taught our friends there that it would be wise perhaps to change the boundaries of the Territory, and the bill that was presented by our friends at this session of Congress for the organization of the territory only included about 25,000,000 acres of land. [The speaker referred to a map in his hand.] What has generally been known as Oklahoma is a tract of land situated in the center of the Indian Territory, containing a little less than 2,000,000 acre s as is shown by the red portion in the center of this map.

The bill now pending before Congress for the organization of the territory of Oklahoma comprises all that portion of the Indian Territory lying west of that occupied by the five civilized tribes, beginning at the northeast corner of the Osage reservation, running south to the Chickasaw reservation, thence west to the western boundary point, including all except that occupied by the Creeks, Choctaws, Chickasaws, Seminoles, and Cherokees. That is what the gentleman spoke of here, and all these gentlemen have spoken as being in favor of it. Now, I am in favor, as that gentleman says, of opening the entire Territory. I have favored that all the time. That is what the Oklahoma boomers have been in favor of; but we favor now the Springer bill for the reason that we will meet with less opposition. The five civilized tribes can not well object to the passage of that bill, they not being included within its boundaries. There are a great many of these men who oppose this bill, believing that the right and title to the land occupied by these tribes must not be interfered with, that they should not be included. For that reason the boundaries have been changed so that it includes the land that I have stated.

Now, I think I can say for the people of Southern Kansas and the Oklahoma boomers that we are in favor of the passage of that bill because we think it is the strongest bill that can possibly be presented. If we can secure any legislation we can secure that, and if that is successful it is only a question of time, in my opinion, until the entire Indian Territory will be opened. I hope before this convention adjourns that such action will be taken as will impress upon the minds of the members from this Western and Southwestern country that we are terribly in earnest in reference to this matter; that we want speedy legislation, that which is broad and comprehensive, and we do not want to rob the Indians of any rights. We do not want to be put off with any side-show business like the annexation of the Public Land Strip to the State of Kansas some time in the future. I hope there will be an expression here to-day to the effect that we demand legislation anyhow that covers as much as that outlined in the Springer bill.

Earlier in the convention Chief J. W. Earlie, of the Ottawa tribe of Indians, was introduced, and in his speech he said among other things:

I have always had the desire, and believe you white people who are here are aiming at some view to some undertaking of opening up the Territory and to wipe out and abolish the Indian tribes. I have always been in favor that some action should be taken so the Territory should be governed as you white people are governed and supported by the Government of the United States, by vote, as well as in paying the taxes to the Government. I have always thought it would be the best policy that you white men as a people should extend laws, that the tribal relations should be abolished, as well as the Indian Department. [Applause.] We have suffered more or less, as we Indian tribes are governed by agents, as well as by the Indian Interior Department. * * * You can depend on my voice that I mean for the whole Territory to be opened up, and that the whites should mix up with the Indians and the Indians should mix up with the white men, and I will rejoice over your efforts.

The Ottawa tribe numbers a few hundred only, and occupy a small reservation located in the northeasterly portion of the Territory most remote from the area of the Territory proposed to be embraced under this bill.

Having given these extracts from the pamphlet report of that convention, illustrating as they do the disregard for existing legal rights under the existing treaties, in the minds of those people who were thus represented, it is but fair that I should proceed further and read from the same pamphlet in proof of the fact that they were "sinning against light." We all know that when the opinion of members of Congress is sought as to what the next Congress will do upon any given proposition, you are sure to get the desired information. When Mr. Ross, president, Caldwell, Kans., in April, 1887, addressed to my friend from Missouri, Mr. BURNES, a letter, he would have saved himself some labor, expended in multiplying opinions, if he had first awaited the answer of my honored friend. Here we have it in full:

ST. JOSEPH, MO., April 15, 1887.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 12th instant, asking me if "I favor the opening for settlement by American citizens of that part of the Indian Territory now unoccupied by Indian nations and tribes;" also, if, in my opinion, "Congress, at its next session, will take action looking to the opening of these unoccupied lands."

In reply, I beg to say that I am heartily in favor of placing every acre of the public lands in possession of bona fide settlers under the homestead law, and all such land in the Indian Territory or elsewhere should be surveyed at once and opened up to settlement.

With regard to your second question, I would say everything depends upon the personnel of the Committee on Territories. That committee in the last Congress was very unfortunately constituted. A similar committee will probably produce similar results.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES N. BURNES.

Messrs. J. W. Ross, President, and J. P. LOVE, Secretary,
Caldwell, Kans.

[Applause.]

Inasmuch as the personnel of the committee (meaning, of course, the majority by whom the Oklahoma bill in the last Congress was favorably reported) was such as to merit the criticism then made, and in view of the fact that the present committee was similarly constituted, thus insuring a like favorable report in this Congress, thereby giving preference to a measure to build a Territorial form of government in territory where there are lawfully no white men over that to recognize a State where 400,000 citizens are lawfully living and who for ten years or more have been pleading for their constitutional rights at the hands of Congress, I must admit that the gentleman's criticism holds good to-day. But we have another letter, which the whole House will recognize, gestures and all, and my good friend, the author thereof, merits the thanks of his country for it.

PITTSBURGH, April 19, 1887.

DEAR SIR: I know of no reason why Indian Territory not occupied by Indians should not be opened for settlement.

As to what Congress will do at the coming session I know not. Nobody does.

Respectfully,

THOMAS M. BAYNE.

J. W. Ross, Esq.

[Applause.]

Mr. MAISH, of Pennsylvania, wrote:

To your first interrogatory I answer "Yes," if it can be done without infringing upon the rights of the Indian tribes, and without a violation of treaty stipulations.

To your second interrogatory I answer, in my opinion measures will be introduced, but I confess my inability to forecast the action that will be taken.

Respectfully yours,

LEVI MAISH.

The honorable gentleman from Indiana knew what he was saying when he replied as follows:

I think Congress will authorize the President, during the next session, to create a commission, to treat with the Indian tribes in the Indian Territory who are interested in the unoccupied lands in that Territory for the surrender of the same to the United States for the settlement of American citizens. The President earnestly urged Congress during the last term, both in the first as well as second session, to grant him that authority, but he wished the authority of the commission to extend to all the Indian reservations, as well as the Indian Territory. The last Congress was not inclined to grant the President this power. The conflict between this plan of the President (recommended by Secretary Lamar) and the proposition to organize a Territorial government (conditionally) over the Indian Territory, I think, was the cause of the defeat of both measures.

I do not believe that Congress will authorize the settlement of the unoccupied lands in the Indian Territory, until, through negotiations with the tribes interested, the Indian title is relinquished, and I am satisfied that the commission, as suggested by the President and Secretary of the Interior, is the only practicable mode of reaching those lands and opening them for settlement.

Yours, respectfully,

WILLIAM S. HOLMAN.

The honorable gentleman from Illinois admitted that he is not a prophet, and imparted light when he wrote:

I have no fixed idea of the matter. Not being well advised upon the question of opening the Indian lands for settlement, I am liable to change my views upon a full consideration of the question. I am in favor opening up every foot of unoccupied land to actual settlers, if it can be done consistently with our treaties and contracts and in harmony with the rights of all concerned.

I haven't the remotest idea of what the Fiftieth Congress will do in the matter. A Daniel can not foretell that.

Yours, etc.,

GEORGE A. ANDERSON.

[Applause.]

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. O'NEILL] wrote:

I am in favor of opening up to actual settlers the unoccupied land in the Indian Territory, and favor Congressional action as soon as possible.

Yours truly,

JOHN J. O'NEILL.

And the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. RYAN] gave an unkind cut at our President when he wrote:

Your circular letter received. To the first question, I answer emphatically, yes. My course in Congress for the last three years is one of persistent effort to accomplish that result, and if the President had not refused to execute the law of the 3d of March, 1885, of which I have the honor of being the author, I have no doubt Oklahoma and the Cherokee Outlet would now be lawfully occupied by American citizens as homes for themselves. The bill I introduced to open "No Man's Land" to settlement under the homestead laws, extend the laws of the United States over it, and attach it to Kansas for judicial and land-entry purposes, passed the House on motion of Judge PETERS and the Senate on motion of Senator PLUMB without opposition, and yet the President refused to sign it, thereby closing that door also against the homeless, and leaving persons and property there wholly without the protection of law. To the second question, I answer that, in my judgment, Congress at its next session will take some steps toward opening the unoccupied lands of the Indian Territory to settlement, if not embarrassed by the Administration. The "if," however, is a big one.

Very respectfully,

THOMAS RYAN.

[Applause.]

A distinguished Senator likewise intimated that the President had neglected a duty under the law.

He wrote:

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your favor of the 30th ultimo, and in response to the inquiries therein made will say that I have always favored the opening of such Indian lands to settlement as were not needed for actual use by the Indians themselves, provided, always, that the consent of the Indians was first obtained in the proper manner. This is the spirit of the Indian severalty bill which became a law at the recent session of Congress, and for which I voted. It has always been the policy of the Government to open up new areas to the hardy and adventurous pioneer as fast as practicable, a policy with which I have heretofore been in accord and which I still favor. As to what Congress may do in the case you mention, I could not express any opinion, although I have no reason to doubt that it would substantially be in accord with what I have hereinbefore expressed.

Of course, however, to obtain the consent of the Indians some negotiations must be had with them, and I call your attention to the fact that Congress some two years ago authorized the President to negotiate with the Indians for the cession of their right to the very lands to which you refer. I have no doubt that if the President had negotiated with the Indians promptly a law would already have been passed by Congress to open the lands to settlement, and my belief is now that whenever he shall report that he has obtained an agreement from the Indians whereby the title can be acquired by the Government and the lands opened to settlement, Congress will act very promptly.

I write without any special knowledge of the condition of affairs existing in the locality you mention, basing what I have said solely upon that rule which has heretofore been observed by Congress, and in which I have been myself participating and consenting.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN SHERMAN.

Similar views were given by Senator PLUMB, of Kansas; Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois; Senator INGALLS; by Mr. MORRILL, of Kansas; Senator REAGAN, of Texas; Mr. MCSHANE, of Minnesota; by Mr. FINLEY, of Kentucky, and by others.

From the earnestness with which the desire to possess the Indian Territory is expressed one would almost conclude that the last acre of the public domain had become settled, and that nowhere else between the two oceans within our jurisdiction is to be found a place for the homesteader, but if any reliance is to be placed on figures the following statement, showing the area of lands surveyed, area disposed of, and area remaining in the several States and Territories to June 30, 1887, as given by the present popular Commissioner of the Land Office, will demonstrate that Uncle Sam is yet solvent in real estate if not land poor:

States and Territories.	Surveyed up to June 30, 1887.	Disposed of to June 30, 1887.	Surveyed and undisposed of to June 30, 1887.	Disposed of excess of surveys (apparent).
	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.
Alabama	32,462,115	31,733,743	728,372
Arkansas	33,410,063	31,517,708	1,892,355
California	71,988,476	40,545,311	31,443,165
Colorado	58,184,750	19,734,366	38,450,384
Florida	30,704,518	31,043,781		339,263
Kansas	51,770,240	40,407,619	11,362,621
Louisiana	27,067,762	27,450,054		382,298
Michigan	36,128,640	36,170,307		41,867
Minnesota	42,316,088	33,932,140	8,383,948
Mississippi	30,179,840	28,725,473	1,454,367
Missouri	41,836,931	42,657,442		820,511
Nebraska	46,989,039	31,331,496	72,657,543
Nevada	32,793,702	10,193,395	22,600,307
Oregon	39,867,995	19,652,488	20,215,507
Wisconsin	34,511,360	32,124,309	2,387,051
Arizona	13,804,538	6,008,908	7,795,630
Dakota	47,865,153	50,168,779		2,303,626
Idaho	10,350,554	5,731,997	4,618,557
Montana	18,540,335	11,700,550	6,839,785
New Mexico	46,580,485	14,238,542	32,341,943
Utah	13,078,172	5,522,909	7,555,263
Washington	21,231,622	14,872,031	6,409,591
Wyoming	47,023,498	10,671,009	36,422,489
Total	828,805,876	579,134,357	253,558,878	3,887,359

In relation to this statement the commissioner says:

The area of lands surveyed as given in the foregoing statement is substantially correct, as it is made up from the returns of the surveys reported to this office.

The area given as disposed of includes all entries and selections reported, and is only an approximation, probably satisfactory for the purpose for which it is to be used, but is not sent out as being reliable or accurate for the reason that the areas of a large number of entries which have been relinquished and canceled and the lands re-entered are included in some cases more than once.

This office has never been able to furnish an accurate and reliable statement of the disposals of the public lands for the want of sufficient force to bring the statistics up to date, but continues from year to year to furnish approximations of entries made instead of actual areas disposed of.

The apparent excess of the area disposed of over the area surveyed in Florida, Missouri, Michigan, and Dakota is due to the causes stated, the aggregate of error resulting from which is unknown, and in Louisiana a large area of swamp lands was passed to the State without actual survey in the field, and the areas of such canceled entries and unsurveyed swamp lands are embraced in the aggregate of disposals in these States.

In the other States as well the areas of relinquished and canceled entries are not known and therefore not deducted.

The States of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, and Ohio are ommitted from the above statement, for the reason that practically all the lands in these States have been disposed of.

Our legislation affects directly or indirectly an Indian population, as determined to June 30, 1880, of about 260,000, dwelling upon 137 different reservations, embracing numerous tribes, distributed among the States and Territories as follows:

States and Territories.	Reservations October, 1882.		Population June 30, 1880.
	No.	Area.
		Acres.
Arizona	19	6,514,871	21,361
California	5	427,058	10,669
Colorado	1	1,094,400	2,530
Dakota	13	27,480,785	27,472
Idaho	4	2,748,981	4,470
Indian Territory	25	41,102,280	76,585
Iowa	1	1,258	355
Kansas	4	135,419	969
Michigan	3	66,332	10,141
Minnesota	10	4,755,716	7,680
Montana	5	27,797,800	21,650
Nebraska	6	424,159	4,002
Nevada	4	885,015	6,800
New Mexico	5	7,154,525	23,452
New York	8	87,677	5,139
North Carolina	1	65,211	2,200
Oregon	6	2,075,560	5,355
Utah	2	3,927,480	840
Washington	16	6,330,148	13,900
Wisconsin	7	586,026	7,375
Wyoming	1	2,342,400	2,063
Bands of Indians in Indiana, Florida, and Texas			1,000
Grand total	137	135,998,101	253,938

The proposed legislation affects directly, it is claimed, the entire area of Indian reservations in Indian Territory, which are as follows:

Name.	Area.	Name.	Area.
	Acres.		Acres.
Cheyenne and Arapaho	4,297,771	Pawnee	283,629
Cherokee	5,031,351	Peoria	50,301
Chickasaw	4,650,935	Ponca	101,894
Choctaw	6,688,000	Pottawatomie	575,877
Creek	3,040,495	Quapaw	56,685
Iowa	228,418	Sac and Fox	479,667
Kansas	100,137	Seminole	375,000
Kiowa and Comanche	2,968,893	Seneca	51,958
Modoc	4,040	Shawnee	13,048
Nez Percé	90,711	Wichita	743,610
Osage	1,470,059	Wyandott	21,406
Otoe	129,113	Kickapoo	206,466
Ottawa	14,860

Our unsurveyed domain embraces, including Alaska's 369,529,600 acres, a grand aggregate of 841,780,652 acres, divided among the States and Territories as follows:

States and Territories.	Acres.	States and Territories.	Acres.
Louisiana	1,603,328	Montana	73,476,305
Florida	7,227,002	Indian Territory	13,477,610
California	29,004,164	Public Land Strip, unorganized territory	3,672,640
Minnesota	11,143,752	Alaska	369,529,600
Oregon	21,107,365
Nevada	38,943,898	Grand total	841,780,652
Nebraska	88,320	Deducting Alaska	369,529,600
Colorado	8,695,250
Wyoming	15,551,622	We have in acres	472,251,052
New Mexico	30,988,155	Deducting Indian Territory	13,477,610
Utah	40,986,468
Washington	23,514,538	We still have unsurveyed in the public domain	458,773,442
Dakota	48,731,327
Arizona	59,101,702
Idaho	44,877,606

Adding the surveyed, undisposed of 253,558,878, leaves the total of 712,332,320 acres available outside the territory of Alaska and the Indian Territory, so that only an Oklahoma boomer may be apprehensive of exhausting the resources of the Government in public lands. We may congratulate ourselves also that in the near future we shall add to this grand aggregate many millions of acres through forfeitures of railroad and other public land grants. Hence it must be evident that there is room for the homesteader outside the Indian Territory, and the "Oklahoma boomers" may at least wait until action may be taken under the power conferred by the act of 1885 and until the President has had time and opportunity to execute that part of the laws, or until additional power may be conferred as proposed by the pending bill of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN].

Mr. Chairman, in all dealings with the American Indians and in all our treatment of them, especially during the past half century, it has been the settled policy of our Government to preserve the autonomy of the several tribes in their governmental affairs and to encourage them in building and maintaining for themselves a better social and domestic existence. They are the wards of the nation. The obligation of a guardian to a ward is the highest and most sacred known to the law. An individual proving recreant to his trust as a guardian is held to the strictest accountability before the law, and receives the condemnation of his fellows.

Can a great and powerful nation be justified before the civilized nations of the world for a wrong differing therefrom only in that in the former case a single individual is affected but has a remedy at law, while in the latter the honor of the nation is concerned and the rights and interests of sixty-five thousand civilized Indians are impaired while they have no remedy at law? Can we say in such a case that "might makes right?" No, Mr. Chairman. We hear it stated that all this talk about the Indian is mere sentiment, but let us remember that "sentiment underlies everything that is great or lovely or enduring on this earth. It is the joy of festivals, the animating soul of patriotism, the bond of families, the beauty of religious, political, and social institutions. It has consecrated Thermopylae, the Parthenon, the Capitol, the laurel crown, the conquerors' triumphal procession, the epics of Homer, the eloquence of Demosthenes, the muse of Virgil, the Mediæval Cathedral, the town-halls of Flanders, the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge, the struggles of the Puritans, the farewell address of Washington.

"There is no poetry without it, nor heroism nor social banqueting."

Sentiment inspired our forefathers. The heroic sacrifices and struggles of that noble army in their march and conflict from Cambridge to Yorktown. The unparalleled heroism of the Army and Navy in the great rebellion. The voluntary service of more than two millions of men, and the sacrifice of more than three hundred thousand lives upon the altar of union and universal liberty, bear testimony to the beauty, strength, and wisdom of sentiment. Every monument from the lofty shaft that commemorates the life and services of Washington, and the stately erections that testify the grandeur of the immortal Lincoln, the valor of our military and naval leaders on land and water, and the sacrifices and bravery of their followers, down to the humblest tablet marking the resting place of the humblest of the Union's unknown defenders, is the prompting of a noble sentiment.

Why do we to-day extend to the vanquished the right hand of fellowship and admit to an equality upon this floor men who twenty-five years ago were prompted to peril their lives and fortunes for what they conceived to be their patriotic duty, even to the overthrow of the Government of their fathers? It is because the sweet and noble sentiment of charity covers like a mantel the errors of the past, and let us hope inspires us all to a grander and more exalted struggle for the defense of humanity and the perpetuity of our Republic. "Leonidas lives in the heart of the world because he sacrificed himself to patriotism. The martyrs are objects of unfading veneration because they died for Christianity." [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, this Government can not afford to adopt or pursue a policy affecting the rights or interests of any Indian tribes, especially the five civilized tribes, that will not bear the criticism of the Christian world.

As to these tribes we must remember that they embrace a population of about 65,000 persons, who, it may be asserted without question, are by reason of their advanced civilization—their advancement in agriculture and in the trades—no longer involved in the Indian problem. It is truly said that the very foundation of the proposed measure, so far as it applies to the five civilized tribes, is a misunderstanding of the relations of those tribes to the development and progress of the United States; that it is pervaded and poisoned by the erroneous assumption that these five tribes are, like the wild tribes of the plains, obstacles to the march of American civilization, a menace to the peace and safety of American citizens, and burdens upon the Treasury of the United States, and therefore, like those wild tribes, are involved in the great Indian problem which now, with such urgency, confronts the Government and people of the United States.

Let our Government pursue a policy rather that will speed the day when the Indian races will be eager to become a part and parcel of our civilization in the highest and best sense, when they shall learn to love and adopt the arts and pursuits of peace, and become a portion of our liberty-loving and law-abiding people, as they surely will in the near future if we treat with them in advance of any legislation tending to affect their status as a race. [Applause.] Mr. Chairman, the importance of this proposition is so great from every standpoint that, having said what I have, I am constrained to ask the House to consider in this connection the statement submitted to Congress by the Cherokee delegation as to the rights of the five tribes of the Indian Territory. I do this because it is a comprehensive paper, and as an act of fairness to a defenseless race.

To the Congress of the United States:

The country to which the Cherokees have a right is not held by them under what is commonly called an "Indian title." That sort of title to the lands in Indian Territory which belong to the Creeks, Choctaws, Chickasaws, Seminoles, and Cherokees was extinguished before these tribes or any of them were removed from east of the Mississippi River. The frailty of such a title was acknowledged by the United States, and forever impressed upon these tribes of Indians when it was found to be too weak to prevent the forcible appropriation of their homes east of the Mississippi. Another and better title—one that would make Indians as secure in the possession of their lands as white men in theirs—a title, in short, by patent in fee-simple—was promised to them by the Federal Government, was gladly accepted by the tribes named, and was duly executed in their behalf respectively.

Hence, we are justified in asserting that the patents of these tribes, or companies of Indians, include their right of occupation and use, as the greater includes the less; and that actual personal occupancy of land covered by our patents is not more essential in this than in other cases to the fact of ownership.

The lands west of the Arkansas River known as the "Cherokee Strip" are embraced within the area described in the Cherokee patent.

It is these lands that the bill to create the "Territory of Oklahoma" proposes to take from the Cherokees and open to white settlement.

The right and title of the Cherokee Nation to these lands is the same as to the lands east of the Arkansas River included in their patent—the title to the lands west being unaffected except by an agreement between the United States and the nation that the United States may settle friendly Indians west of 96° under certain stated conditions. (Treaty of 1866, sixteenth article.)

All these lands remaining unsettled, and while they remain so unsettled, are as much Cherokee domain as they were before the treaty was made.

The bill of Mr. SPRINGER, therefore, appears to the Cherokees to be a contemplated breach of good faith, to say the least; and they view it with very natural alarm, as all their dependence for safety is upon the respect the United States Government has for its own pledges.

Not only so, but the Cherokee Nation itself is expected by this bill to join in an act of bad faith towards the still weaker and more dependent tribes who have been settled in that country—Poncas, Pawnees, Ottoes and Missourias, and Osages. The understanding of the parties in interest when they were settled there was that the homes chosen for these tribes, or remnants of tribes, should be and remain in an Indian country, where they would be safe from the pressure of white settlers on every side. The United States, therefore, can not honorably propose, nor the Cherokees honorably consent, without the free and voluntary assent of these tribes, to change the conditions under which they agreed to be located in an Indian country, there to live surrounded by their own race.

The privilege granted to the United States by our nation to settle friendly Indians on certain Cherokee lands left the Cherokee title to all of that domain not so settled precisely where it was before. But in order to avoid any misunderstanding on this point the right of "possession and of jurisdiction" is expressly declared to remain in our nation as to the tracts not sold to and occupied by friendly Indians. (Revision of Indian Treaties, page 93.)

But it may be said that the consent of our nation is provided to be had before the bill can take effect.

We reply that this pretense, in our opinion, adds mockery to injustice.

What sort of "consent" is that which is only a choice between two evils? Which offers to one's option a misfortune only less dire than other misfortunes that he will otherwise have to endure? Which requires choice of two alternatives, both abhorrent to the taker, between which he must accept one that is bad in preference to the other which is worse?

Such is the nature of the "consent" provided by this bill to be got from the Indians. It severs connection between them and a large part of their lands, and condemns the lands to the condition of a valueless wilderness before their eyes, unless the Indians will consent to take a dollar and a quarter an acre with all delays and deductions attached, and see one-half of their family estate pass forever away to strangers.

Worse still. The "consent" provided for is their consent to let the Government have half of their country at the Government's own price, to be paid under conditions fixed by the Government alone, or, should their consent to that arrangement be withheld, to know that the protection of the United States will be withdrawn while the struggle goes on between the Indians and the white boomers, intruders, and depredators; the one to retain the profitless title, and the others to compel its relinquishment.

It would be idle to pretend, should this bill pass, that the General Government will not give all of its moral support to every plan to obtain the acceptance of its provisions by the Cherokees and the other Indians concerned. Would Congress approve the measure by passing it if it did not mean to declare that the Indians ought to consent to it? Can it be expected that the same attacks upon our rights by "boomers," etc., which the Government has heretofore righteously attempted to restrain and defeat, but to which this bill announces that the Government at last succumbs, will not be resumed with renewed vigor, and will thenceforth have the moral support if not the direct approbation of the Government?

ENEMIES CREATED BY LEGISLATION.

By similar thoughtless legislation in 1866, the Cherokee Nation was compelled to battle for life in your Halls against two powerful railway corporations, to whom Congress had granted the best part of the Indian Territory, provided the Cherokee title were first extinguished.

The contest was spread over several years, the railway companies doing their utmost to destroy our harmless nationalities by means of "Territorial bills," in order to realize the benefits of the grant made by Congress contingent on our decease as a nation, and the Cherokees spending a world of anxiety and hundreds of thousands of dollars to put off the evil day.

It was a hard and cruel position that the Cherokees and other tribes of the Territory were placed in, and, although the companies have not been so hostile of late years, those statutes which started the war are yet on your books, bristling with menace to our peace and welfare.

The nation would be placed, by the same kind of legislation, in the same position of antagonism with other powers, should this bill pass.

THE GEORGIA STRUGGLE RENEWED.

In still another view the unfortunate Indians of the Territory will be placed in much the same position that they occupied when their lands were included within the assigned limits of the State of Georgia and other States. This bill connects a large portion of the Indian Territory with what is called "No Man's Land," and the whole embraced in the "Territory of Oklahoma." Thus the Government will be tacitly pledged to extinguish our tribal titles, so far as to carry out the purposes of the act. The old struggle will be substantially renewed, with the doleful prospect of gradual contraction, until the tribes are crushed out of existence—like that of the solitary victim in the slowly closing chamber—further removal west being now out of the question.

The "Five Tribes" of the Indian Territory have greatly prospered in their present homes under the protecting policy of the United States since 1830. Congress is now solicited to announce itself as weary of well-doing, and ready to cripple or crush the prosperity which the observance of good faith has enabled us to realize and exhibit.

JUDGE BREWER'S DECISION.

The decision of Judge Brewer, of the United States court, has been referred to as determining the right of the Cherokee Nation to what is called the "Cherokee Strip," land covered by our patent, and the right to the possession of which, until sold and occupied by friendly Indians, is expressly vested in the Cherokee Nation by the sixteenth article of the treaty of 1866.

The United States district court of Kansas has been given jurisdiction over whatever portion of that country is not occupied by the Cherokees.

The lands sold in trust to the United States and occupied by the Poncas, Pawnees, Ottawas, and Missourias and Osages, being no longer occupied by the Cherokees, falls within the jurisdiction of that court. The act of Congress left to the determination of the courts whether the remainder of the strip was or was not occupied by the Cherokees, in one sense or another, in either or neither, whether as a nation or as individuals, under patent or treaty, or both, personally or through agents; all of these questions—branches of the trunk question of occupancy—being left by the act to the opinion of the court, but merely for the purpose and with the object of defining its jurisdiction as to place.

The Cherokees therefore do not regard Judge Brewer's decision as deciding anything more than that indefinite terms were used by Congress to describe the extent of the court's jurisdiction as to the place—which terms the court was authorized to define for itself with that specific object only, and not with the view of settling the rights of any parties to the country without giving them notice or hearing—which would be monstrous.

The Cherokees take this occasion to express their settled belief and understanding that the grant of a patent to their nation by the United States was designed to and does, so long as the patent is operative and the lands are unconveyed, give the nation a right not subject to be limited in its exercise to the actual personal occupancy of the lands by Cherokee citizens, and not condemned to expire for lack of such personal occupancy.

We do not by ourselves alone occupy one-half of the country patented to us east of 96°. Neither does the owner of any estate of any consequence occupy much of it except through the agency of employés and substitutes.

THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF 1883.

It is also alleged that the Cherokee Nation has bargained away their rights in all of the country west of 96°, and has in part received the consideration agreed upon.

In reply to this, we state the following indisputable facts:

The Cherokee delegation of 1882-'83 were only authorized to negotiate as to the said lands for a better and juster price than had been paid for tracts then occupied by friendly Indians. They were, by the same instructions, expressly forbidden to treat for the transfer to the United States or to friendly Indians of any more lands of the Cherokee domain than those so occupied, except strictly as provided by treaty.

The delegation of 1882-'83 reported to the national council that, in conformity with their instructions, they had obtained from Congress, upon the recommendation of the Department, the sum of $300,000, in addition to what had already been paid for the tracts then occupied by friendly Indians.

This report and information was accepted and acted upon by the Cherokee Legislature bona fide, and every proceeding since, of the said Legislature and of the courts of the United States before which the question has come, is in perfect harmony with the facts as now stated.

THE "INDIAN POLICY" OF THE "FIVE TRIBES."

Each of the five "civilized" tribes of the Indian Territory has a patent in fee for their lands. If these patents are worth anything whatever they are worth a great deal as evidences of title, if not as assurances of use and possession; but it takes something more than a piece of writing, however formal, explicit, and pertinent to the writer's intentions at the time, to compel due respect and observance of its purport. It is this something that the five tribes lack and which they want.

For timber has been stolen from their patented lands by white men to the value of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Other valuable products of the domain have been separated from it and carried off surreptitiously. Numberless outside cattle have been grazed on the pasture lands of the tribes without leave of the owners. Trespasses and intrusions without limit have vexed and injured them, and all these violations of our titles are still taking place, and the tribes have no more redress than they would have without a fee-simple title, and with only a treaty guaranty of occupancy still respected by the United States.

Such is the state of things for which the tribes wish a remedy. The remedy which they are presumed, by the frame-work of the American Government, to be entitled to as owners of the soil by patent in fee, is an essential concomitant of such a title and is put at the service of every other lawful owner of land in the United States, except an Indian tribe, for the securing of his rights in the property patented.

This remedy is the right to apply to and enter the judicial halls of the Government.

The authority to entertain and examine complaints when coming from these tribes—as organizations—has not been vested in the courts—they have no jurisdiction where the tribe as a government is concerned and the tribal property is to be protected, and our patent as an evidence of title is no more than waste paper in the hands of the nation itself.

Hence, all sorts of depredations and wrongs are done to the Indians which their possession of a patent was undoubtedly intended to prevent, and would prevent, if the design had been completed and the courts empowered to protect Indian nations holding such titles as well as citizens of the United States and foreigners of the white and black races who have similar titles.

In short, any one of the five tribes is made up of a number of Indians duly organized into a company called the Seminole Nation, the Creek Nation, etc., as the case may be, which company has been recognized as a legal personality by the United States by the grant of a patent in fee to such company or nation; and the Indian company, in the Indian view, is as much entitled to the protection of their landed rights by the Government through its judicial tribunals as any company of foreign capitalists are who have acquired land from the United States with like guaranties.

NATURAL AND GOOD RESULTS OF WELL-DEFINED AND PROTECTED RIGHTS.

With the jurisdiction of the United States courts thus extended the intercourse and relations between Indian and white residents of the Territory will be extended also, and made more agreeable and profitable. But in any event the nations want the United States court or courts, to whose jurisdiction their citizens must be subject, located within the Territory, as their respective treaties provide.

In pursuance of the "Indian policy" of the Indians of the Indian Territory, they, therefore, apply to Congress for the imposition of penalties sufficient to restrain the commission of thefts, depredations, and trespasses upon their common property by white men not members of the tribe.

There is no sound reason why one white man should go to prison a year for stealing an Indian pony, worth $25, and another white man go wholly free of legal blame who steals a thousand dollars' worth of property of the tribe. The guaranties of protection are as strong and stronger in the latter case than in the former.

The result of the constant temptation, presented by the law's omission to persons over whom our nations have no jurisdiction to depredate upon the national property, is this: The intercourse between the two races is more or less accompanied by distrust and want of cordiality on both sides. Our relations with each other are legally ill-defined, and therefore, to some extent, strained and disagreeable. The United States Government is responsible for this condition of things—the result of not enabling our nation to defend its own rights of property with the essential weapon presumably placed in the "nation's" own hand for the very purposes of such defense—our patent in fee.

If this great obstacle to free business and social communication between the Cherokees and whites were removed, and our local government were authorized to represent and defend in the judicial department of your Government the common rights of our people, the cry for the opening of our country to settlement, or even white settlement, would have no foundation in appearance, as it has none in law and decency.

The Cherokees hold their lands in common because it is a cardinal principle of their social system that it is equally the duty of government to discourage and prevent the greedy elements of human nature from absorbing gifts of nature intended for all, as it is to foster and encourage all industries that tend to enlarge and multiply those gifts without denying to any person his natural share.

The Cherokee Nation, as a body-politic, consequently holds the lands of the nation, with the power to regulate the use of those lands so as to prevent any monopoly of its benefits. Industry in that direction, the Cherokees think, will defeat the ends of government and finally defeat itself.

But with unrestrained and confident intercourse between the Cherokees and such of the outside world as realize the reciprocal benefits of such intercourse—the rights of all parties concerned being equally well defined and guarded—the same state of things will be found in the Cherokee Nation that is found elsewhere in the civilized world, where one person or number of persons own the land and others assist in cultivating it in one character or another, for a just and lawful consideration, and to their mutual benefit.

Already thousands of persons not members of the nations are profitably employed in developing our resources. Nothing is wanting to develop them fully, while the titles and the status of the Indian tribes remain what they are now, but the protection which the United States has pledged in treaty and patent to be given to the several nations.

THE NECESSITIES OF CIVILIZATION.

The delegation have in this appeal tried to be just to the necessities and just claims of the United States as well as to those of the Indians. So much has been said about the "necessities of civilization," as a plea for taking what is left of the red man's land, that we do not wish to seem to avoid the subject, and run the risk of being charged with want of sympathy with it, simply because the Indians will be the sufferers.

We admit, then, that we do recognize the necessities of civilization, especially of American civilization, the highest civilization the world has ever seen. But the Cherokees contemplate these necessities, even from their lower plane, as not essentially material or pecuniary. Taking patented land or any other property by force may be the act of a high-spirited robber, which he may attempt to excuse on the plea of necessity and an aversion to beg what he is bound to have, but the United States Government never has been and never will be reduced to such extremity, and it is not the Indians who have ever presumed such a thing possible. The American people never will be driven to the plea of "necessity" as an excuse for recalling any act of generosity, or for repudiating any pledge in favor of Indians or any other people. As a fact, the United States is universally regarded as the richest, most prosperous, most self-reliant, most enterprising in good works, and the most promising of all nations on the globe.

This is so because the American Government and people have been pre-eminently just and conscientious in their dealings with mankind at home and abroad.

The "necessities" of civilization—of American civilization—in the view of the Cherokees, are the necessities that bind the people and their government to a constant observance of the principles which have made them what they are. These principles are those of honor, justice, and good faith, especially to the weak; which involve respect for the examples and guaranties of those who have gone before, and a patriotic love for those who are to come after, for whom the present generation is preparing a harvest of examples and obligations in its turn.

According to Indian notions, these are the true "necessities of civilization," because civilization can not otherwise survive and grow.

In view of the facts and truths we have attempted to state, and in pursuance of the "instructions" of our nation, the Cherokee delegation ask Congress to uphold and not destroy or weaken by the passage of this or any other "territorial bill" the rights your fathers have vested our tribe with in all earnestness and good faith.

L. B. BELL (Chairman),
GEORGE SANDERS,
STAND W. GREY,
W. P. BOUDINOT,
Cherokee Delegation.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] attempts to break the force of over five hundred thousand petitioners asking for the passage of this bill by the assertion that they did not know what they were doing. Let me say to my friend that this multitude of petitioners embrace the farmers, the mechanics, the laboring men of the nation—the men who create her wealth, the bone and sinew of our country. It is a mistake to underestimate their intelligence. They have exercised the constitutional right of petition.

Their petitions may be disregarded, but let it be on some other ground than the ignorance of the signers. They knew what they were doing when they sent their petitions to Congress; and let me assure the gentleman they will know in the morning what we, their servants, have done to-day. Our acts will be discussed in the work-shop and in the field throughout the nation. Hundreds of thousands of the citizens of Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Illinois, and Missouri ask speedy and favorable action upon this bill.

Time will not permit me to follow the gentleman further. I propose to give the committee the result of my investigation of the rights of the Indians in the lands embraced in the proposed Territory of Oklahoma and the rights of our fellow-citizens.

Mr. Chairman, it is claimed that we are an "intensely practical" people, but our dealings with the wards of the nation, the Indians, have been characterized more by sentiment than reason, more by impulse than common sense. For one, I shall not claim that the bill under consideration is perfection, or that it is all that the people demand. Notwithstanding the fact that it falls short of what many of the friends of Oklahoma want, yet it has a well-defined purpose—the opening of a vast territory to actual settlers, and provides for the accomplishment of this by justifiable methods. The methods employed are not as expeditious and direct as many of us could wish, yet it will be accepted as an earnest on the part of Congress to open Oklahoma to the hand of industry, to the wheels of commerce, to the tide of trade.

In 1834 "all that part of the United States west of the Mississippi and not within the States of Missouri and Louisiana or the Territory of Arkansas," was declared by the law to be Indian country. (4 Stat., 729.) Therefore the question of restoring to the public domain unoccupied lands in which Indians claim title is no new one in our history. The Indian Defense Association and its allies sound the alarm in this, as in all other legislation which fails to recognize every pretended claim of the Indians. The burden of the cry is that the Indian is being robbed of his patrimony. The contest now presented is one of sentimentality against common sense,

SAVAGERY AGAINST CIVILIZATION,

indolence against industry; idle wandering Indians against tens of thousands of industrious, landless citizens. The issue presented by this bill is whether by fair legislation millions of acres of the best part of the continent, now unoccupied, shall be opened to settlement, to the end that under the tender care of the homesteader they may be made to yield an abundant harvest; or whether they shall remain as now, a waste, the home of wandering

INDIAN BANDS, HALF-BREEDS, AND OUTLAWS.

I speak of the unoccupied lands. The bill under consideration is intended to plant law and industry where lawlessness and idleness now hold undisputed sway; and this, without doing violence to the equitable or legal rights of the Indians.

The criticism of this bill, by the citizen uninfluenced by passion or sentiment, will be that it does not go far enough in the direction of an early opening of these fertile lands. If any have grounds of complaint to its provisions, they are the thousands of husbandmen who stand ready to enter upon and till these lands. They are not speculators, they are not boomers, they are not trespassers; they are law-abiding American citizens, seeking homes for themselves and those whom God has given them. They have waited long and patiently; now they demand legislation that shall remove the barriers between them and these lands, that shall open these lands to actual settlers—men who earn their living by the sweat of their brows—this bill, should it become a law, will be hailed as an evidence that Congress is willing to do something more substantial for the toiling, homeless people than to simply pass high-sounding resolutions. Do not "break the word of promise to their hopes" while you keep it to their ears. The purpose of this measure is to open to the actual, bona fide settlers, not land sharks, about 23,278,719 acres of the public domain. (This estimate does not include Greer County.)

Comparison will give members an idea of the extent of the proposed Territory. It exceeds in area the States of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Delaware combined; and it is safe to say contains double the number of acres of all those States adapted to agriculture. It is larger than East or West Virginia; larger than either Indiana, Maine, or South Carolina.

The Territory of Oklahoma embraces, among other tracts, the Public Land Strip, commonly known as No Man's Land. There are in this strip 3,672,640 acres awaiting the toilers of the soil, almost every acre susceptible of cultivation. This Public Land Strip is well named; it is absolutely

NO MAN'S LAND.

Even the Indians, strange as it may seem, have failed to set up any claim to it. This land is not within the limits of any Territory, organized or unorganized. The jurisdiction of no court extends over it. Its inhabitants can acquire no title to the soil, either by residence or purchase. It has thus far been neglected by Congress. Yet this fertile strip contains more acres than the State of Connecticut; its area is two-and-a-half times greater than Delaware, and four times as large as Rhode Island.

BOTANY BAY.

The unoccupied portion of the Indian Territory included in this bill is the ideal refuge of dishonest debtors and outlaws. It is the Botany Bay of the United States. There may be those who will challenge the correctness of this statement; yet, sir, I have spoken the words of truth and soberness. I have understated rather than overstated the facts as to the condition of the district named. I take it for granted there is no one more competent to speak of the true condition of the Indians there than General Nelson A. Miles. His position gave him better opportunities to learn the actual state of society than almost any other man in the Union; certainly better than a junketing committee passing through the country. None will question his intelligence or fairness and impartiality. Above all, he can not be accused of sympathy with the boomer or his methods. General Miles, in his annual report for 1885, says it—is now a block in the pathway of civilization. It is preserved to perpetuate a mongrel race far removed from the influence of a civilized people, a refuge for the outlaws and indolent of whites, blacks, and Mexicans. The vices introduced by these classes are rapidly destroying the Indians by disease. Without courts of justice or public institutions, without roads, bridges, or highways, it is simply a dark blot in the center of the map of the United States.

BLOCK IN THE PATHWAY OF CIVILIZATION.

Pass this bill, Mr. Speaker, and the "block in the pathway of civilization" will soon be removed by the hand of commerce; and the "dark blot" that now disfigures the map of the United States will be erased by an enlightened, happy, and prosperous people. Seventeen bands of Indians, numbering in all 10,374, occupy, "Indian fashion," 11,685,035 acres, or nearly one-half of the Indian country that is included in the proposed Territory of Oklahoma.

To each man, woman, and child of this mongrel squad of Indians, squaw men, mulattoes, negroes, and half-breeds, now supported by the Government in squalor and idleness, is set apart over 1,000 acres of the choice land of the Union. A large percentage—I think it safe to say a majority—of the occupants of these lands do absolutely nothing. They have not the ENERGY OF THE CHASE OR THE GENIUS OF THE FISHERMAN.

They are an incumbrance to the soil, a standing impediment to the advancement in the arts and sciences of the five civilized tribes, and a menace to the peaceable citizen on No Man's Land. For their own good and possible reclamation a government over them for the administration of law and the enforcement of order is demanded as an act of humanity to the Indians. The opposition to a Territorial government that shall establish justice, enforce law, and insure order comes not from any of the Indians residing in that part of the Indian country included within the territorial limits of Oklahoma, but it comes from those who claim to represent the five civilized tribes, the Choctaws, the Chickasaws, the Creeks, the Seminoles, and the Cherokees.

Their agents and attorneys, in arguments before the committee, did not object simply to this bill, but they strenuously protested against the passage of any law that should recognize the right of the white man to settle on any of the lands in the Indian Territory included in Oklahoma. These lands they demand shall be occupied by Indians or not at all. In other words,

NO WHITE TRASH NEED APPLY.

There are those whose sentimentality leads them to champion such a position. They are those who view the noble red man as Job's warhorse sniffed the battle—from afar off. They are those who are brought in contact with the Indians at long range.

The civilized tribes—

Says the Creek representative—would prefer the terrors of the blizzard rather than to attempt to withstand the human cyclone from Kansas, Missouri, and Texas—

Should this bill become a law.

Mr. Hawkins, an educated Choctaw, having the attorney of his tribe at his elbow, in a carefully prepared argument before the Committee on Territories, used this language:

This bill opens the sluice-ways to admit to this Territory the outpourings and offscourings of American jails and prisons, the hords of fugitives from justice, escaped murderers and thieves, banished roughs and desperate outlaws, and subjects to their merciless and disorderly rule a people comparatively law abiding, prosperous, and happy.

This language, when it is not proposed by this bill to interfere with an inch of soil owned and occupied by them.

Again he says:

If the Territorial government of Oklahoma shall be organized, as provided in this bill, the ruin of our tribes and people will be speedy and complete. First will appear the scum of white vagabondage, which is always borne on the surface and at the front of the wave of Western immigation of the American people.

THE AVANTCOUREURS OF CIVILIZATION.

I am not informed in what school this "civilized" Indian learned the character of the Western pioneers, the men who, by their sufferings, their tireless energy, their indomitable courage, have been the avantcoureurs of civilization from the Atlantic to the Pacific. I fear that many of the spokesmen of the Indians spend more of their time in the enervating atmosphere of Washington than in the invigorating atmosphere of the great West. Their opinions, I fear, have been formed from their association with the impecunious horde that infest the national capital, whose occupation as Indian lobbiest would be gone should this bill become a law. They claim that the tribal relations which are sacred to them will be doomed should a Territory be organized on the west of the five civilized tribes. Should this bill pass, they say:

The tribal rights of the Indians, to the maintenance of which the national faith of the American Republic has been so often pledged, will rapidly melt away. Even their tribal existence, which has been guarantied to them by so many solemn treaties, will be extinguished.

Should this prophecy be fulfilled the occupation of many Washington City Indians will be gone; the language used must express their fears rather than the judgment of the Indians who reside in the Territory. The substitute which the gentleman from Georgia gave notice that he would offer for the pending bill proposes to take most of the lands included in Oklahoma and pay the Indians no more than is proposed in the bill. Are they sincere in their predictions of evil, and that continually, to the tribal rights of the Indians, should Oklahoma be organized on the west? Certain it is that these tribes for many years have been hemmed in on three sides by States. On the north by Kansas, on the east by Missouri and Arkansas, on the south by Texas. It is their boast that, thus environed—

No other nation on earth spends so much per capita for educational purposes as the five civilized tribes, and that they have virtually solved the problem of Indian civilization—they are more orderly and law-abiding and peaceable than the average American communities.

That to-day—

Without stopping to question the accuracy of this statement, may we not congratulate them upon their progress, and suggest that they owe this blessing, not to the wild territory on their west, occupied if at all by a mongrel race, but to the great States by which they are bounded and their Christianizing influences? Would not their condition be further improved by the establishment of a Territorial government on their immediate west, where law, order, and intelligence would reign, rather than as now—chaos, turbulence, and ignorance? When they moved from east of the Mississippi to their present homes they sought companionship with organized communities. They settled on the eastern rather than the western border of their reservations, that they might be the nearer the white man. Taking their statement as true, certainly their present condition bespeaks the wisdom of that choice.

Mr. Chairman, I now propose to examine separately, as far as my time will permit, the claim of the civilized tribes to the lands in Oklahoma. (The map which I make a part of my remarks shows clearly the proposed territory of Oklahoma and the lands of the five civilized tribes.) To do this, tedious and uninteresting as it may be, it becomes necessary to examine the leading provisions of the various treaties entered into between the United States and these tribes from 1820 down to the present time.

THE CHOCTAWS AND CHICKASAWS' CLAIMS.

The Choctaws and Chickasaws' claims are one and the same, and we will so consider them. The home of the Choctaws prior to 1820 was in Mississippi. In that year those of them who lived "by hunting and would not work" negotiated for "a country beyond the Mississippi" where they might be collected and settled together. To accomplish this certain lands west of the river were ceded to the Choctaws. (7 Stat., 210.) By treaty of 1825 the boundaries of the ceded lands were corrected. Soon a new difficulty arose. The State of Mississippi extended its laws over the Choctaws remaining in that State. The President of the United States declared his inability to protect them "from the operation of these laws." This gave rise to the treaty of September 27, 1830, between the United States and the Choctaws.

By its terms there was to be conveyed by the Government to the Choctaw Nation—

A tract of country west of the Mississippi River in fee-simple to them and their heirs and their descendants, to inure to them while they shall exist as a nation and live on it. (7 Stat., p. 333.)

Then follows a description of their lands in the Indian country:

Beginning near Fort Smith, where the Arkansas boundary crosses the Arkansas River, running thence to the source of the Canadian Fork, if in the limits of the United States, or to those limits; thence due south to Red River, and down Red River to the west boundary of the Territory of Arkansas; thence north along that line to beginning. (7 Stat., sec. 2, p. 333.)

By section 5 it is stipulated:

The Government and people of the United States are hereby obliged to secure to the said Choctaw Nation of Red People the jurisdiction and government of all the persons and property that may be within their limits west, so that no Territory or State shall ever have the right to pass laws for the government of the Choctaw Nation of Red People, and their descendants; and that no part of the land granted them shall ever be embraced in any Territory or State.

The Choctaws were to be forever secure from and against all laws—

Except such as may, and which have been, enacted by Congress, to the extent that Congress, under the Constitution, are required to exercise a legislation over Indian affairs. (7 Stat., 333.)

Soon after the execution of the treaty of 1830 the Chickasaws were forced across the Mississippi, and they, by the treaty of 1837, became part owners of the Choctaw domain. (11 Stat., 573.)

This brings us to the treaty of June 22, 1855, the ninth article of which is as follows:

The Choctaw Indians do hereby absolutely and forever quit-claim and relinquish to the United States all their right, title, and interest in and to any and all lands west of the one hundredth degree of west longitude; and the Choctaws and Chickasaws do hereby lease to the United States all that portion of their common territory west of the ninety-eighth degree of west longitude, for the permanent settlement of the Wichita and such other tribes or bands of Indians as the Government may desire to locate therein, * * * which Indians shall be subject to the exclusive control of the United States, under such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with the rights and interest of the Choctaws and Chickasaws, as from time to time may be prescribed by the President for their government: Provided, however, That the territory so leased shall remain open to settlement by Choctaws and Chickasaws as heretofore.

The tracts leased to the United States by the treaty of 1855 are included in the Territory of Oklahoma.

The Choctaws and Chickasaws deny the right of Congress to establish a Territory which shall include these lands. They say they were conveyed to them in fee-simple. This is true, but it was a qualified fee. They could sell to no one but the United States. Their interest in these lands was to terminate upon the happenings of either of the contingencies, their failure to exist as a nation, or their ceasing to live upon the lands. Having no further use for these lands, in 1855 they granted to the Government a perpetual lease of all their lands between the ninty-eighth and one hundredth degrees west longitude. They then ceased to live upon them. They have never lived upon any part of the leased lands for over thirty years. After the execution of this lease these tribes claimed an equity in these lands, notwithstanding the fact that they had ceased to live upon them and had been paid $800,000 for them. In the lease they had reserved the right to settle upon the lands as theretofore. To extinguish this equity the third article of the treaty of July 10, 1866, provides:

The Choctaws and Chickasaws, in consideration of the sum of $300,000, hereby cede to the United States the territory west of the ninety-eighth degree west longitude, known as the leased district.

That these tribes, as to these lands, have been generously treated none will question. It does seem that in dealings with the General Government nothing pays so well as to be an Indian. Be that as it may, certain it is that neither the Choctaws nor Chickasaws have any interest, legal or equitable, in the lands included in Oklahoma, which are those lying west of the ninety-eighth degree, formerly ceded to these tribes. Their cession of these lands to the United States was without any conditions.

This, Mr. Chairman, brings us to a consideration of the objections of the Creeks and Seminoles to the creation of this new Territory, which is to include the west half of their original domain. In 1826 the Creeks ceded to the United States certain of their lands in the State of Georgia, where they had lived, for the sum of $217,600. That year a portion of the Creek Nation expressed a wish to remove west of the Mississippi. A deputation of five warriors were sent, at the expense of the United States, to "spy out" the land west of the Father of Waters. They being satisfied, a part of the tribe moved to their new home, the Indian country. In 1832 the Creeks ceded to the United States all their lands east of the Mississippi. Those who had remained agreed to join their brethren west of the Arkansas. By article 14 of the treaty of March 24, 1832, it is provided that—

The Creek country west of the Mississippi shall be solemnly guarantied to the Creek Indians, nor shall any State or Territory ever have the right to pass laws for the government of such Indians, but they shall be allowed to govern themselves.

Within what limitations?

So far—

Says the treaty—

as may be compatible with the general jurisdiction which Congress may think proper to exercise over them. (7 Stat., 368.)

In 1832 the Seminoles, then residing in the Territory of Florida, relinquished their lands in that Territory, crossed the Mississippi, and became "a constituent part of the Creek Nation."

The Creeks having settled on a part of the lands ceded to the Cherokees "difficulties and dissensions thus arose" between them and the Cherokees as to their boundary lines. To remove these difficulties and to define by metes and bounds the lands ceded to the Creeks, the treaty of February 14, 1833, was entered into. Their territory was defined by apt description. The third article of that treaty stipulates that—

The United States will grant a patent in fee-simple to the Creek Nation of Indians for the land assigned said nation by this treaty, * * * and the right thus granted by the United States shall continue to said tribe of Indians so long as they shall exist as a nation and continue to occupy the country hereby assigned to them. (7 Stat., 419.)

This title depended upon their existence as a nation and a continuous occupancy of the lands assigned to them. The fee was thus limited and qualified. In 1852 a patent was issued to the Creek Nation for the lands ceded them by the treaty of 1833, which lands were occupied by the Creeks and Seminoles. I have stated that the Seminoles—that is, those of them who left Florida—became by an agreement between them, the Creeks and the United States, a "constituent part of the Creek Nation." After a time injurious dissensions and controversies sprang up between these tribes. Therefore it was deemed wise in 1856—

For the simplification and better understanding of the relations between the United States and said Creek and Seminole tribes of Indians that all their subsisting treaty stipulations should, as far as practicable, be embodied in one comprehensive instrument. (Treaty of 1856.)

The principal readjustment consisted in the Creeks setting aside to the Seminoles by metes and bounds a part of the Territory that had been ceded by the Creek Nation, retaining the remainder for themselves. These lands were to be respectively secured to and held by said Indians by the same title and tenure by which they were guarantied and secured to the Creek Nation by the third article of the treaty of February 14, 1833, and by letters patent issued to said Creek Nation on the 11th day of August, 1852. Neither of these tribes after this, it is clear, had any other or different title to its respective lands than the Creek Nation had therein before the division, which was, as I have shown, a qualified fee. For the privilege of settling the injurious dissensions and controversies between these simple red men the Government paid $1,375,000; one million going to the Creeks and three hundred and seventy-five thousand to the Seminoles. They danced; Uncle Sam paid the fiddler.

In 1861 the Creeks entered into a treaty—

With the so-called Confederate States, whereby they ignored their allegiance to the United States,

And by that act rendered themselves liable to forfeit to the people of the United States, says the treaty—

All the benefits and advantages enjoyed by them in lands * * * including their lands and other property held by grant from the United States.

Whereas in view of said liabilities—

Says the preamble to the treaty of July 19, 1866—the United States require of the Creeks a portion of their lands whereon to settle other Indians.

TO FORFEIT ALL THEIR LANDS.

The Government had the right to forfeit all their lands, but instead of exercising this right it granted them amnesty and purchased from them the west half of their lands, for which it paid $975,168, at the same time setting apart the east half of their vast domain forever as a home for the Creek Nation. They had no further use for the lands sold. They did not occupy them. The part left them was more than they needed for a home. Article IV of the treaty of 1866 reads:

In compliance with the desire of the United States to locate other Indians and freedmen thereon, the Creeks hereby cede and convey to the United States * * * the west half of their entire domain, * * * the eastern half of said Creek lands being retained by them, shall, except as herein otherwise stipulated, be forever set apart as a home for said Creek Nation.

The lands here ceded to the United States were estimated to contain 3,250,560 acres, the Indians to be paid therefor the sum of $975,168, that is, 30 cents an acre. The Creeks could be divested of their title in their lands in three ways: the extinction of the nation, ceasing to occupy them, or by sale to the United States. Have they any further interest in the west half of their lands, embraced in Oklahoma? They sold them to the United States at a price agreed upon, they received the purchase money, and have never occupied an acre of those lands since 1866.

But—

Say the attorneys for the Creeks—

The United States expressed a desire to locate "Indians and freedmen" upon these lands. We are willing to sell and did sell at 30 cents an acre for that purpose, but we are unwilling that they shall be thrown open to settlement under the homestead laws, although we are paid as provided in this bill, $1.25 an acre.

Their position is that these lands must be occupied by "Indians or freedmen," or not at all. This bill utterly ignores this claim, but, in keeping with the spirit of liberality that has heretofore characterized our treatment of these wards of the nation, has provided that they be paid for any possible equities the Creeks or Seminoles may have in these lands. With this the are not satisfied. They demand that Congress shall do nothing looking to the establishment of a Territorial government over these lands, and that the President shall be compelled to use the Army to maintain this wall of prejudice and sentimentality against immigration, against commerce, against civilization. The legal title to these lands is in the United States, in trust for the people, who have rights that Congress should not ignore, rights that the Indian should be made to respect.

INDIAN ATTORNEYS

THE RIGHT WHICH THE CHEROKEES CLAIM.

Mr. Chairman, we now come to the discussion of the right which the Cherokees claim to maintain a Chinese wall around 6,000,000 acres south of and adjoining the State of Kansas, and known as the Cherokee Outlet.

This strip for years has been leased by cattle syndicates, and it is claimed that a few Indian chiefs and headmen have appropriated the lion's share of the lease money to their individual use. As might be expected, they are resisting the passage of this bill, claiming that the Congress of the United States is prohibited by treaty stipulations and solemn guaranties from the formation of any Territory that shall embrace within its limits any part of this outlet. Let us examine the grounds of their claim. To do this it becomes necessary to hurriedly at least view the treaties between the United States and the Cherokees. In 1808 the tribe divided into two bands; one desired to engage in the pursuit of agriculture in the country they then occupied—Georgia; the other desired to continue the hunter life. The scarcity of game where they then lived made them anxious to move across the Mississippi River, where game abounded.

The treaties of 1817 and 1819 (7 Stat., 156 and 195) provided for exchanging with the latter band lands west for a part of the Cherokee lands in the State of Georgia. This band removed to their new home, the Indian Territory. The Georgians were anxious that the other band of Cherokees remaining in their State should join their less civilized brethren west of the Mississippi. This led to the treaties of 1828, 1833, and 1835 (7 Stat., 310, 414, and 478) by which 7,000,000 of acres were ceded to the Cherokees as a permanent home. This tract was designated with particularity by metes and bounds. The treaties provided that:

In addition to the 7,000,000 acres of land thus provided for and bounded, the United States further guaranty to the Cherokee Indians a perpetual outlet west and a free and unmolested use of all the country lying west of the western boundary of said 7,000,000 of acres as far west as the sovereignty of the United States and their right of soil extend. (7 Stat., 415.)

PERPETUAL OUTLET.

The purpose of this "perpetual outlet" was to enable them to reach the Great West that abounded in all kinds of game.

At this time, 1835, the Cherokees claimed that the lands that had been ceded to them as a home, that is, the 7,000,000 acres, were not sufficient "for the accommodation of the whole nation on their removal west of the Mississippi." Accordingly, the United States sold them 800,000 acres in addition to the 7,000,000 acres theretofore ceded them. For these additional lands the Cherokees paid $500,000. These Cherokee neutral lands, and not the 7,000,000 acres, were to be conveyed to the Cherokees "and their descendants in fee-simple." (7 Stat., 480.) It is nowhere provided that any of the other lands, that is, the 7,000,000 acres, or the outlet, were to be thus conveyed. It is true that it was stipulated in article 3 of the treaty of 1835—

That the lands above ceded—

That is, the 7,000,000 tract—

by the treaty of February 14, 1833, including the outlet, and those ceded by this treaty—

That is, the neutral lands—

shall all be included in one patent, executed to the Cherokee Nation of Indians by the President of the United States, according to the provisions of the act of May 28, 1830.

To determine what title was conveyed by this patent to the 7,000,000 acres and the outlet, it is necessary to examine the statute, the provisions of which were to control the President in executing the patent to the lands. Upon an examination it will be found that the act of 1830, named in the treaty, is one providing for the exchange of lands with Indians residing in any of the States or Territories. The third section of this act authorizes the President to issue patent to any nation or tribe "for lands given to them in exchange," and concludes with these words:

Provided, always, That such lands shall revert to the United States if the Indians become extinct or abandon the same. (4 Stat., 411.)

The lands given the Cherokees for a perpetual home were given them in exchange for lands in Georgia. Therefore, the only title they acquired in these lands, including the outlet, was one limited by the conditions named in the act of May 28, 1830. Not so with the neutral lands. They were not given in exchange for other lands; they were sold by the United States to the Cherokees for so much money. As to them there was no condition-subsequent. The title to the neutral land was in fee-simple.

HOLDEN VS. JOY.

Keeping this distinction in mind, it will be found that the case of Holden vs. Joy (17 Wallace, 211) has no application to the 7,000,000 acres or the outlet. In that case the Supreme Court only passed on the title that the Cherokees acquired in the 800,000 acres which they purchased from the United States in 1835, for $500,000, and sold to Mr. Joy in 1867, at and for the sum of $800,000. On December 31, 1838, in pursuance to the treaty of 1835 and the act of May 28, 1830, the United States issued to the Cherokees a patent for 13,574,135 acres of land, by metes and bounds, exclusive of the 800,000 acres contained in the Cherokee neutral lands. In no treaty had the outlet been defined other than by the general words "a perpetual outlet west." There was no statute or treaty from which the number of acres in the outlet could be ascertained. It seems to have been arbitrarily assumed by the authorities that all of the unassigned lands in the Indian Territory, at the time of the execution of the treaty of 1835, were included in the perpetual outlet west. In every treaty the lands ceded to the Cherokees as a home were limited to 7,000,000 acres. These were fixed and determined by well-defined boundaries. Beyond this, an outlet, a passage to the west, only was granted. Why were 6,574,135 acres of land patented to the Cherokees as an outlet? The explanation of this is, I apprehend, that the President, at the time of the execution of the patent (1838), regarded these lands bordering on the then Great American Desert of so little value, either present or prospective, that, had there been three times as much of the Indian Territory remaining unassigned to other tribes, all would have been dumped in the patent as "perpetual outlet west."

No distinction was made in the granting clause between the lands granted to the Cherokees as a permanent home and those granted to them as an outlet. Yet it is true that a marked and well defined distinction is made between the land ceded as a home and that granted as an outlet, in every treaty between the United States and the Cherokees. If, under a state of facts similar to those in this case, a patent had been issued to a corporation for over 6,000,000 acres of land, it would have been canceled on the ground that there was no law authorizing it. The manifest intent of the United States, as expressed in treaty stipulations, was to provide

A PERMANENT HOME FOR THE CHEROKEES.

This was done by setting aside the 7,000,000 acres of land. In addition to this an easement was granted them over the lands of the United States as far west "as the sovereignty of the Government extended." Let me here call the attention of the House to the language of Judge Brewer in United States vs. Soule et al., decided in the United States circuit court for the district of Kansas in June of last year. That distinguished jurist says:

Manifestly, Congress set apart the 7,000,000 acres as a home, and that was thereafter to be regarded as set aside and occupied, because, as expressed in the preamble of the treaty, Congress was intent upon securing a permanent home; beyond that the guaranty was of an outlet—not territory for residence, but for passage ground, over which the Cherokees might pass to all the unoccupied domain west. But while the exclusive right to this outlet was guarantied, while patent was issued conveying this outlet, it was described and intended obviously as an outlet and not as a home. (U. S. vs. Soule et al., 30 Fed. R., page 918.)

The learned judge expressly overrules United States vs. Rogers (23 Federal Reports, 658) decided by Judge Parker and relied upon by the minority of the committee and by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] in his argument. Judge Brewer in 1887 placed the same construction upon the interest of the Cherokees in the outlet as John C. Calhoun in 1821 gave while Secretary of War. In a letter dated at the Department of War, October 8, 1821, addressed to certain chiefs of the Cherokee Nation in regard to the removal of certain parties from the outlet, he says:

It is to be always understood that in removing the white settlers from Lovely's purchase for the purpose of giving the outlet promised you to the West, you acquire thereby no rights to the soil, but merely to an outlet, of which you appear to be already apprised, and that the Government reserves to itself the right of making such disposition as it may think proper with regard to the salt springs upon that tract of country. * * *

J. C. CALHOUN.

TEKE-E-TOKE, JOHN JOLLY, BLACK FOX,
W. WEBBER, THOMAS GRAVES,
Chiefs of Arkansas Cherokees.

NO RIGHT TO THE SOIL.

The Cherokees were to acquire "no right to the soil" in the Outlet; it was to be a passage to the West. Nothing more. Of this, if we are to believe the statements contained in Mr. Calhoun's letter, the Cherokees "were apprised" as early as 1821. Certain it is this letter gives the understanding of the United States and Cherokees as to the Outlet. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] in his able argument contended, as I remember, that the construction given by Mr. Calhoun of the interest that the Indians were to have in the Outlet was undoubtedly the correct one as to any promises or guaranties relating thereto down to the time the letter of October 8, 1821, was written by that distinguished statesman. But it is claimed that when the United States commenced negotiations to induce the Cherokees east of the Mississippi to join their brethren west of the Mississippi, another and different contract was entered into as to the title of that tribe in and to the Outlet. Upon this proposition I take issue with the distinguished gentleman from Georgia. To my mind his position is not sustained by the record.

The first treaty in which the 7,000,000 acres are set aside by metes and bounds to the Cherokees as a permanent home is that of May 6, 1828. (7 Stat., 311.) It was in this treaty that the Government expressed—its anxious desire to secure to the Cherokee Nation of Indians, as well as those now living within the Territory of Arkansas, as those of their friends and brothers who reside in the States east of the Mississippi and who may wish to join their brothers of the West, a permanent home.

In this instrument we find Mr. Calhoun's letter referred to as follows:

The Cherokees, resting also upon the pledges given them by the President of the United States and the Secretary of War (Mr. Calhoun), of March, 1818, and October 8, 1821, in regard to the outlet west.

What was the pledge of the Secretary of War as to this Outlet? That intruders upon it were to be removed, but that the Indians were to acquire no right to the soil in the Outlet. It is in this treaty that the lands assigned the Cherokees as a permanent home are for the first time bounded. It is in this treaty we find Mr. Calhoun's letter referred to regarding the outlet west and that outlet first defined, as follows:

In addition to the 7,000,000 of acres thus provided for and bounded, the United States further guaranty to the Cherokee Nation a perpetual outlet west.

This general description of the Outlet is followed word for word in all the subsequent treaties with the Cherokees. In the terse language of Mr. Calhoun, it gave the Cherokees no right to the soil.

It was not territory for residence—

Says Judge Brewer—

but for passage ground over which the the Cherokees might pass to all the unoccupied domain west.

The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] in an able and ingenious argument contends that by the terms of the treaty of August 6, 1846, (9 Stat. 971), the United States placed a different construction upon the interest of the Cherokees in the soil of the Outlet than that given by Mr. Calhoun in his letter of October 8, 1821. The treaty will be searched in vain for a single sentence or word that sustains the gentleman. That treaty was only for the purpose of settling "certain difficulties" that existed between members of the Cherokee Nation. That portion of the Cherokee people known as the "Old Settlers" or "Western Cherokees" claimed the right to exclude the Cherokees who, prior to 1828, resided east of the Mississippi from any interest in the lands west of the Mississippi. This claim was decided against the "Old Settlers," and it was determined by this treaty of 1846 that the home west of the Mississippi "became the common property of the whole Cherokee Nation by the operation of the treaty of 1828." (9 Stat. 873.)

CONSTRUCTION GIVEN BY MR. CALHOUN.

This again recognizes the correctness of the construction given by Mr. Calhoun to the interest of the Cherokees in the Outlet, namely, that they acquired no interest in the soil thereof. Their right was that of passage.

The treaty of 1846 can not be tortured into the support of the position of the gentleman from Georgia, [Mr. BARNES].

Here let us examine the treaty of 1866 regarding this outlet. That treaty contained this provision:

The United States may settle friendly Indians in any part of the Cherokee country west of 96 degrees.

That is, on any part of the Cherokee Outlet which is embraced in the Territory of Oklahoma. The treaty further provided that the lands upon which friendly Indian tribes might be settled should be—

Conveyed in fee simple to each of said tribes to be held in common, or by their members in severalty, as the United States might decide. (14 Stat., 804.)

The United States, and not the Cherokees, were to determine how the lands should be conveyed.

The wonderful physical changes that had been wrought in the country west of the Mississippi since 1835, rendered in 1866, the further use of the Outlet "as a passage-ground over which the Cherokees might pass to all the unoccupied West" unnecessary.

THE UNOCCUPIED WEST

of 1835 was in 1866 the home of hundreds of thousands of American citizens, living under State and Territorial governments. In 1835 the Indian Territory barely touched the suburbs of civilization; in 1866 it was environed by churches and school-houses. The conditions that apparently rendered an "outlet" a necessity in 1835 had ceased to exist in 1866.

This changed condition should not be lost sight of in construing the treaty of 1866 and the acts of the Cherokees thereunder. In 1866 the Cherokees, having no use for the outlet as a passage to the West, sold all their interest in it to the United States.

Under the treaties the Cherokees had "no right in the soil," nor could they settle upon any of the lands in the Outlet (16 Attorney-General, 470). The lands guarantied to them as a home were the 7,000,000 acres east of the ninety-sixth degree west longitude; upon these they could settle. In these they had an interest in the soil. Not an acre of that tract is in the least affected by the bill under consideration. In accordance with the provisions of the treaty of 1866 just cited, the United States, consistent with what was then the policy of the Government regarding the unoccupied lands in the Indian Territory, settled several tribes of Indians on the eastern part of the Outlet. The Osages and Kaws settled upon all that part of the Outlet between the ninety-sixth degree west longitude and the Arkansas River, a tract comprising 1,566,304 acres, for which the Cherokees were paid $1,091,412, or 70 cents an acre. Five bands of Indians—the Nez Perces, the Poncas, the Otoes, the Missourias, and the Pawnees—were settled on the west bank of the Arkansas, their territory aggregating 551,732.14 acres.

The lands assigned these five tribes were assessed by the President at 47.49 cents per acre, except the Pawnee lands, being 230,014.04 acres, which were valued at 70 cents. The price was fixed by the President in accordance with the provisions of the treaty of 1866. The Cherokees have been paid the purchase-money, and the bands of Indians named now occupy all these lands. The right to the passage-way, the easement, the guarantied to the Cherokees has thus been abandoned by them. Its entrance, its mouth, has thus been blocked by and with their consent. It is true that the treaty ceding this outlet to the Government further provides that the Cherokee Nation was—to retain the right of possession of and jurisdiction over all of said country west of the ninety-sixth degree of longitude until sold and occupied.

PERPETUAL OUTLET WEST,

Until sale and occupancy they were to "retain" the semblance of possession and jurisdiction as before. Their possession of and jurisdiction over this tract, in the language of Judge Brewer, was never more than that of—an outlet, not territory for residence, but for passage ground over which they might pass to all the unoccupied domain west.

The unoccupied domain west had become the occupied. Therefore, having no further use for this tract "for passage," they ceded to the United States the easement they had in it, thereby putting more money in their pockets. In pursuance of the spirit of the treaty of 1866 and the desire of the Cherokees, upon the recommendation of General Francis Walker, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the act of May 29, 1872 (17 Stat., 190) was passed, authorizing the—

President and Secretary of the Interior to make appraisement of the Cherokee lands * * * and of the land of the Osage Indians in the Indian Territory, and south of the southern line of Kansas, ceded to the United States by the Cherokee Indians.

In accordance with this act an appraisement was made in 1877. The price of the lands occupied by the Pawnees was fixed at 70 cents an acre, and the remainder of the lands, 6,344,562.01, were valued at 47.49 cents per acre. This appraisement was regarded as fair and just by the Indians and the United States. The Cherokees two or three years after the appraisement complained that the Government in locating Indians upon the Outlet settled them on the eastern and best portion, leaving unoccupied the western and poorest portion, while they were being paid for but little more than the lands actually occupied by other Indians. They claimed, and I think justly, that the lands, having been appraised, their value thus ascertained, they should be paid the entire value fixed thereon; that is, $3,174,047.30, with interest.

This amount with reasonable interest the United States should have paid. The Secretary of the Interior, Hon. S. J. Kirkwood, in 1882, with reference to this claim of the Cherokees, says:

I think in this matter the Cherokees have some cause of complaint that they have not been fairly dealt by. I think also that their demand for the present payment for all the land is not quite reasonable, and that their demand for interest as set forth in their communication to me is extravagant.

Then he proposes a remedy, as follows:

If the United States should pay them the appraised value (47.49 cents per acre) for as much land in the extreme western and least valuable part of the cession as has been occupied in the eastern and more valuable portion thereof, * * * any just ground of complaint would be removed. (H. Ex. Doc. 89, Forty-seventh Congress, first session.)

As I have heretofore shown, there had been taken in the eastern part of the outlet west of the Arkansas River by the five tribes named, 551,732 acres, which at the assessed value (47.49 cents per acre) would amount to $262,017.50. Three years prior to this recommendation the Cherokees had been paid $300,000. The act of June 26, 1880 (21 Stat., 248), expressly provided that the $300,000 was to be paid the Cherokees out of funds due them under appraisement of their lands west of the Arkansas River. It must have been paid on all the lands; for at that time the appraised lands upon which Indians had been settled amounted to $265,404.27. (S. Ex. Doc. 19, Forty-seventh Congress, second session.) In 1881 they were paid nearly $50,000 for the land occupied by the Poncas. This brings us to the payment of $300,000 made in accordance with the recommendation of Secretary Kirkwood, that is, to pay the Cherokees for as much land in the western portion of the outlet as had been occupied in the eastern, and thus in the opinion of the Secretary remove all just grounds of complaint. The Cherokees received this money, and for a time acquiesced in the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior.

This last $300,000 was to be paid the Cherokees "out of the funds due under appraisements for Cherokee lands west of the Arkansas River." (23 Stat., 624.) It will be observed that this, as well as the appropriation of a like amount in 1880, recognizes the justice of the assessment, of which the Cherokees had not complained, and the further fact that that assessment had created a "fund due." The Department of the Interior "holds that the above-named appropriations were made on of the Cherokee Nation lying west of the Arkansas River." (S. Ex. Doc. 19, Forty-eighth Congress, second session.) The Indians demonstrated by their demands that in their opinion the United States had purchased their interest in the outlet.

ACCOUNT OF ALL THE LANDS

On January 11, 1882, Daniel H. Ross and R. W. Wolfe, Cherokee delegates, and W. A. Phillips, special agent, addressed a letter to Hon. S. J. Kirkwood, Secretary of the Interior, in which they claimed that the 6,344,562 acres of the Cherokee Outlet were appraised by the Secretary and the President as the law directed in June, 1879, at 47.49 cents per acre, making an aggregate of $3,013,032. They said:

There is due us interest from July 1, 1879, to present date or date of payment at the rate of 5 per cent. Upon that amount—

They add—

there has been paid $350,000, which sum has passed to our credit—

How? On a part or all of the land? The letter says the amount passed to their—the Cherokees'—credit—as sums paid on our lands thus appraised at an aggregate for the entire tract. It will thus be seen—that there has been a full recognition of the amount thus due us by the President, by the Department, and Congress. We have not so far been able to secure full payment.

They add—

AGGREGATE AMOUNT THEN DUE AND PAYABLE.

The Cherokees in the letter just cited, by which they claimed there had been a sale of all their interest in the "Outlet" to the United States, and that the amount at which the lands had been appraised constituted an "aggregate" amount then due and payable—in this same letter they further claim that the treaty of 1866 "had in all essential particulars been set aside." This was not controverted by the honorable Secretary of the Interior. Then they saw an advantage in holding that the treaty of 1866 was no longer regarded as binding by either party.

They now claim that it is in full force, and while they received $648,389.46 "out of funds due them under the appraisement in 1877 of the entire Outlet, yet that this money was paid to and received by them upon the express understanding that none but Indians were to occupy any of the lands so appraised and paid for, and that the Government had the power legally to open to its citizens for settlement any portion of such tract." For one, I do not recognize their claim as either just or legal. I do not believe it represents the judgment of the better class of Indians. I am not disposed to encourage a few chiefs, head men, and lobbyists in their attempt to play regarding these lands. The public domain belongs to the people and should, as a matter of right, be opened to settlement by the people. They shall not be excluded therefrom by my vote or my influence, by reason of a claim such as that set up by the Cherokees in this case, a claim founded upon sentiment and kept alive by prejudice. I believe that Congress unquestionably possesses the power to open these unoccupied lands to settlement by paying the Cherokees an amount of money equal to the assessed value thereof in 1877, with reasonable interest thereon.

DOG IN THE MANGER

Congress, if necessary, should not hesitate to exercise this power. The bill under consideration excludes the citizen from these lands until the assent of the Cherokees is obtained, and proposes to pay them $1.25 an acre, less the expense of sale and the amount they have heretofore received thereon; thus giving them for the 6,022,224 acres of unoccupied lands in the outlet 77.51 cents per acre more than the same lands were appraised at by the President under the treaty of 1866. Should this bill become a law the money to be paid the Cherokees under it, placed at 4 per cent. interest, would yield these Indians an annual income three times as great as that now received by them from the cattle syndicates as lease money.

Prudence as well as wisdom would seem to dictate to the Cherokees to lose no time in accepting a proposition so liberal in its terms. They need look for nothing better. To this the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] does not object. In the substitute which he gives notice he will offer he proposes to take the lands in the same manner and at the same prices proposed in this bill. It is the establishment of the territory to which he objects. The very thing that is necessary to protect the Indians during the negotiation for these lands and the thing that is absolutely necessary to protect them and the settlers after negotiations are completed. This substitute means chaos; the bill under consideration, order.

CATTLE SYNDICATE—A GIGANTIC MONOPOLY.

It is a well-known fact that over 6,000,000 acres of the Cherokee Outlet are now, and for years have been, in the possession and control of a cattle syndicate—a gigantic monopoly. It is claimed that among its members are men of sufficient influence to defeat any legislation looking to the opening of these lands to the tillers of the soil. This syndicate, by reason of its occupancy of this immense tract, is enabled annually to put hundreds of thousands of dollars into the pockets of its members. They pay a nominal rental for the exclusive use and occupancy of these lands, over which immense herds of cattle range, exempted from taxation. The cattle upon this strip can not be reached by execution. The dishonest creditors may there have hundreds of thousands of dollars of other people's money invested in stock, yet while upon the Cherokee Outlet he can laugh at all processes issued from civil courts for its collection.

CITY OF REFUGE.

It is the "city of refuge" for those who have an abundance but would avoid the payment of their honest debts. They occupy these lands under leases made in violation of the statutes of the United States, yet are exempted from criminal prosecution. They have no legal right whatsoever to remain upon the land. The President has ample and full authority to compel them and their herds to be removed therefrom at any time. There is no power vested in any officer of the Government to render these pretended leases lawful or valid. They remain there either through the indifference or favoritism of those whose plain duty it is to act in the premises. These points are all decided by Attorney-General Garland in opinion of July 21, 1885. He but enlarges upon the opinion of Attorney-General Devens. (16 Op., 470).

ATTORNEY-GENERAL GARLAND.

The learned gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] contends that all Attorney-General Garland said about the syndicate leases in the Cherokee Outlet was obiter dictum. The ex-Secretary of the Interior, and present Justice of the Supreme Court, in response to whose questions the opinion was given, did not so regard the utterances of the legal advisers of the Administration. In his last annual report he says:

The Attorney-General holds there is no warrant of law—

For the—existing arrangements for the privilege of grazing cattle thereon—

That is on the Cherokee Strip.

That part of the Attorney-General's opinion relating to the syndicate leases of the Outlet, instead of being obiter dictum was a plain exposition of the law upon the state of facts submitted to him by the Department of the Interior. The opinion is denounced as obiter dictum, "extra official," not because that opinion and the proclamation of the President issued in accordance with the law therein expressed, brought financial ruin to many small holders of cattle in other parts of the Indian Territory, but the opinion is denounced because he did not go out of his way to shield the cattle syndicate.

The Attorney-General did not go outside the facts in rendering his opinion. He knew what he was doing then, and still adheres to the views of the law as then expressed, notwithstanding the fierce criticism by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES]. The opinion applies the plain provisions of the statutes regarding the leasing of Indian lands (sec. — Revised Statutes]. The Attorney-General fully comprehended the question submitted and is not disposed to retreat under the fire opened upon him by the syndicate. I shall here submit a letter from that official, which I am enabled, through the kindness of the chairman of the Committee on Territories, to use. It will explain itself:

MARCH 5, 1888.

DEAR MR. SPRINGER: I notice in yesterday's RECORD, in Mr. BARNES's speech, page 1790, it is stated my opinion on cattle leases was obiter dictum, not based on facts, etc.

Now, please make it plain for once and forever, that opinion was in direct response to the questions propounded by Mr. Lamar. I have nothing to do with facts but as they come to me from the Departments asking my opinion, and to respond to their questions.

Further on Mr. BARNES does say, Lamar extended his inquiry, etc. Now do me the favor and justice especially to put this in black and white on the record, that I answered what was put to me by Mr. Lamar. Please don't fail to do this.

Yours, truly,

A. H. GARLAND.

Notwithstanding all this the gentleman from Georgia insists that the failure of the President to cause the removal of the cattle from the Cherokee Outlet, held there under arrangements with the Cherokee Live-Stock Association, that this fact was conclusive evidence that the opinion of Mr. Garland was not regarded as good law. It is true he did cause the

CATTLE TO BE REMOVED SUMMARILY

and at great loss to the owners from other parts of the Indian country. What arguments or influence induced him to permit this rich and influential syndicate to remain in the undisputed possession of the Cherokee Outlet I am unable to say. This I do know, that Secretary Lamar directed that this monopoly—be informed that any so-called lease or other arrangements into which they or any other parties may enter with the Cherokee Nation for the occupation of the Cherokee Outlet with their cattle for grazing purposes will be subject to cancellation or discontinuance by the Department at any time.

Certain it is, from this language, Mr. Lamar entertained no doubt as to the power vested in him to declare their "so-called leases" null and void. He further recommends in his annual report—that Congress should set its seal of approval or disapproval upon the occupation of Indian lands by individuals and associations of white men for grazing purposes. (R. Sec. In. 87, page 31.)

He then adds:

The occupation of these lands by white men with their cattle, under so-called leases for grazing purposes, if of any present benefit to the Indians, is not conducive to their future well-being. (Id.)

The hope of the future of the Indian lies in the early breaking up of the tribal relations and the localization of the individuals of the tribes upon separate allotments of land, and thus become individual fee-holders, clothed with the privileges and trusted with the duties of American citizenship.

When once he is located in his homestead—the bulwark of American progress and liberty—and is brought to realize the dignity as well as the responsibility of his new position and relations, * * * his heart will swell to the Government for the blessings and opportunities thereby conferred upon him.

Says the Commissioner of Indian Affairs—

FROM THE BARBARISM OF THE AGES.

Then, and not till then, will the Indian be "redeemed, regenerated, and disenthralled" from the barbarism of the ages and enter within "the pale of American civilization." Any legislation giving early promise of this result meets the determined opposition of the Cherokee land syndicate, Indian chiefs, and head men. The eloquent gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] denounces the section of this bill which is in the line of the recommendation of Secretary Lamar, declaring the leases held by the syndicate null and void, directing the President to remove all persons holding under them. This, the gentleman designates as "an attempt to confiscate the land of the Indians."

This, in the face of the fact that it provides for removal of none but intruders from these lands, and, in return pays the Indians a sum yielding an annuity many times greater than the lease money now received by them from the syndicate. If this be confiscation, it is a confiscation that enriches the Indians and removes a gigantic monopoly to make way for the assertion of the rights of the citizen—a monopoly that has had exclusive control since 1883 of over 6,000,000 acres of choice grazing and farming lands, an area greater than the State of Massachusetts, at a nominal rental of 1⅞ cents an acre annually. It is not strange that this syndicate and others that have been formed for operations in the Indian country under legislation now pending to authorize Indians to lease their lands, make a determined fight against this bill. They are not satisfied with the harvest they have been permitted to reap for the last five years. They are now, it is claimed, working up an opposition on the part of certain Indians to the just, humane, and equitable provisions of this bill. They are masquerading as the friends of the Indian; the hands they extend to the Indians are but the voice will ever be recognized as the voice of Jacob of the syndicate.

DISGUISED AS THE HANDS OF ESAU,

The rights of the Indians are carefully guarded under the provisions of this bill; the pretended claims of the Cherokee Live-Stock Association are repudiated. When these lands shall be opened to settlement no possible advantage is given to one citizen or section over any other citizen or section in securing homesteads. All stand upon an exact equality. It provides—

That nothing in this act shall be construed to authorize any person to enter upon or occupy any of the lands mentioned in this or the preceding section, for the purpose of settlement or otherwise, until after the said Indian tribes and the commissioners herein authorized have concluded an agreement to that effect as provided herein, and laid the same before the President of the United States, who is thereupon authorized and required to issue his proclamation declaring such relinquished lands open to settlement, and fixing the time from and after which such lands may be taken.

Any person who may enter upon any part of said lands, contrary to the provisions of this act, and prior to the time fixed by the President's proclamation, shall not be permitted to make any entry upon such lands.

The bill excludes land sharks and provides homes for actual settlers. No person is permitted to acquire more than 160 acres, and before he can acquire any title to the land he must—

Maintain a continuous personal residence of three years thereon and improve and cultivate the same for that period in the manner required by the homestead laws.

He is permitted to pay for his homestead in four equal installments of $50 each, the first at the time of entry and the other installments in one, two, and three years thereafter. It brings a home within the reach of the humblest citizen.

IT IS THE LABORING MAN'S BILL.

At the same time it enriches the Indian. This bill does not imitate the policy of the older States of the Union, "who expelled" at the point of the bayonet "or killed off most of their Indians or reduced them to a condition of helpless poverty." (8 Att'y-Gen., 262.)

On the contrary, should this bill become a law the five civilized tribes would have sufficient lands left to give to each man, woman, and child 352 acres, while millions of dollars would be placed to their credit in the National Treasury, making them the richest people on the face of the globe. The substitute proposed by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] gives the President very little, if any, greater powers than he now has under the law of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat., 384), which has been a dead letter upon the statute-books. And it is fair to presume that the substitute, should it be adopted, would be permitted to go into the same state of

INNOCUOUS DESUETUDE.

His substitute certainly would give no offense to the land syndicate.

It is further contended that Congress can not legally pass this bill, because article 5 of the treaty of 1835 provides:

That the United States hereby covenant and agree that the lands ceded to the Cherokee Nation in the foregoing article shall in no future time, without their consent, be included within the limits or jurisdiction of any State or Territory (7 Stat. 481).

It is gravely urged that this is an inhibition on the power of Congress to establish the Territory of Oklahoma, which includes, as it is claimed, a part of the lands referred to in the article just cited. The language of the treaty does not sustain this claim. What lands were ceded to the Cherokees in the "foregoing article?" Turning to article 4 we find that the lands which under article 5—shall in no future time, without their—consent, be included within the limits * * * of any State or Territory were only the reservations within the Cherokee country which were made in the Osage treaty of 1825 to certain half-breeds.

The Cherokees—

RESERVATIONS TO HALF-BREEDS.

Turning to article 5 of the treaty of 1825 with the Osage Indians we find that these "reservations to half-breeds contained only forty-two sections of land, not one foot of which is included in this bill. If they stand upon the letter of the treaty they must fail. But conceding for the sake of the argument that the inhibition applied to all the lands ceded to the Cherokees, yet it is competent for Congress to establish Territorial government having within "its limits and jurisdiction" the lands so ceded which are no longer occupied or owned by the Cherokees. This section certainly is no stronger than the stipulations contained in the treaty of 1828, by which the United States guarantied to the Cherokees a "permanent home"—a home which the treaty guarantied in the most "solemn" manner should never in all future time be embarrassed by having extended around it the lines * * * of a Territory or State." (7 Stat., 311.) It is apparent that the same agreement that is now urged against the creating of this Territory could have been used, and it would have been equally as cogent, against the admission into the Union of the States of Kansas, Texas, and Arkansas, the lines of which "extend around" the Indian Territory.

It would have been as justifiable to have kept those great States out of the Union, upon the ground that to admit them would violate "solemn treaty obligations," as there is justice or wisdom now to prevent the organization of Oklahoma. Whether or not this or any other Territory shall be created is a question that addresses itself to the legislative department of the Government. The consequence that may result in all such cases, and the expediency, give rise to questions that must be met by the political and not the judicial department of the Government. This principle is fully sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States in the Cherokee tobacco cases (11 Wall, 621). In 1828 the inhospitable surroundings of the Indian Territory led our fathers to believe that no people would ever have the hardihood to attempt to live there in sufficient numbers for the organization of States. The map attached shows the United States of 1835.

TIME HAS WROUGHT WONDROUS CHANGES.

Time has wrought wondrous changes. These changes have imposed upon us as legislators, as the servants of the people, political duties and responsibilities. For nearly a hundred years we made treaties with the Indians as if they were independent nations and powers; but in 1871 we declared, by legislative enactments, that in all future dealings with them we would no longer play the farce of "acknowledging or recognizing" them as nations or powers. (16 Stat., 566.) This was a new departure, rendered necessary by changed conditions. In 1866 it was the policy of the General Government to locate Indians and freedmen upon that part of the Indian Territory embraced in this bill. No freedmen have at any time been settled upon the lands in question. Nor is it now the policy to locate other Indians in this territory, which is now the center of the great Southwest.

The harmonious development of which and the commerce and industries of the nation require the organization of the territory.

Pretended treaty stipulations are paraded to prevent this.

In answer to this plea, let me cite the language of a distinguished ex-Secretary of the Interior. He says:

Contracts or treaties impossible of execution, unjust and unfair to both whites and Indians, ought to be abrogated or modified by legislative action.

He then adds:

It is not beneficial to the Indians to have millions of acres of valuable land remain unoccupied around them.

The game having disappeared from the Indian country there remains no longer any useful purpose for these Indians keeping millions of acres of land vacant, over which they have not sufficient energy to roam.

THE GREATEST WORD PAINTER OF THE AGE.

Mr. Chairman, the greatest word painter of the age would fail in an attempt to describe the marvelous changes that the hand of industry has wrought in the country west of the Mississippi since the treaties of 1828, 1830, 1833, 1835. Then there were between the Mississippi and the Pacific Ocean but two States and one organized Territory. Now there are twenty-two States and Territories west of the Mississippi, of which only three are as small as all New England. Then the western line of Missouri was the western boundary of settlement and civilization. Now it is the heart of the continent where the East and the West join. Since then we have acquired an empire west of the Mississippi, stretching from that great artery of commerce across the continent to the golden shores of the Pacific, every foot of which has been carved into States and Territories.

Since then the cunning hand of the husbandman with the magic wand of industry has transformed the "Great American Desert" into those grand agricultural States of Nebraska and Kansas. That imaginary desert has "receded before advancing civilization like the Indian and buffalo which once roamed it."

At the time the Indians removed to the Indian Territory the center of gravity of the nation's population was far east of the Alleghany Mountains. Now it is near the east bank of the Mississippi, soon to reach in the rapid march of empire, under the whip and spur of electricity and steam, the junction of the the geographical center of the Republic.

WATERS OF THE KANSAS AND THE MISSOURRI

In the center of the great Southwest, unrivaled in her resources, unsurpassed in the enterprise and intelligence of her citizens, stand the unoccupied lands of the Indian Territory, lands adapted by soil and climate to be the garden spot of the continent rather than as now a "block in the highway of commerce and a blot on the map of the United States."

When the first of these treaties was made (1828), there was not a mile of railroad in the United States. Now there are over 150,000 miles of railroad in operation, reaching from ocean to ocean, from the lakes to the gulf, making the East, the West, the North, and the South neighbors. They are the indissoluble ties of commerce that shall forever knit the people of all sections of our country in a common brotherhood. Pass this bill and in the near future one of the brightest gems in the sisterhood of States will be the State of Oklahoma. [Applause.]

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman from Arkansas desired to make a statement, and I will yield to him such time as he desires.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Before that, permit me to state that I have promised to the gentleman from Alabama a portion of the time reserved by myself, if the gentleman wishes to occupy it now.

Mr. COBB. No, not just at present. I will reserve it.

Mr. ROGERS. If the gentleman from Illinois will permit me to occupy the floor in my own right I will yield it back to him in a very few moments. I shall not consume more than four or five minutes.

Mr. Chairman, late in the session of the Forty-ninth Congress, in a debate which took place touching the Cherokee Strip or Outlet, as it is sometimes called, a colloquy ensued between the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER], his colleague, also from Illinois [Mr. PAYSON], and myself. In that colloquy, which I now send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have printed in the RECORD, I was inadvertently led into placing the Attorney-General in an improper position with reference to the opinion delivered by him in response to the letter of the Secretary of the Interior touching the status of the Cherokee Outlet.

I am made to say in that colloquy, which is correctly reported, that "the inquiry," meaning the inquiry of the Secretary of the Interior to the Attorney-General, "did not cover the Cherokee Strip or any part of it." In that I was mistaken. I now desire to place in the RECORD in this connection, first, the colloquy to which I have referred, then the letter of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, addressed to the Secretary of the Interior, the letter of the Secretary of the Interior, addressed to the Attorney-General, and in response to that the opinion of the Attorney-General; all of which I ask to have printed in the RECORD in connection with the speech which has just been delivered, as a matter of justice to him, as well as to me.

I wish to state also in this connection that this is the first appropriate occasion since the colloquy took place when this matter could be properly presented.

The colloquy referred to by Mr. ROGERS is as follows:

Mr. PAYSON. As the Attorney-General has decided these leases are invalid because of the want of power on the part of the Indians to make them, I ask this question for information: Has any step been taken by the Interior Department on that opinion furnished by the Attorney-General?

Mr. SPRINGER. I believe not.

Mr. PAYSON. Why not?

Mr. SPRINGER. As far as the Cherokee Strip is concerned?

Mr. PAYSON. Has this committee taken steps to inquire why the Interior Department, after calling for the opinion of the Attorney-General, and he has given it as the law officer of the Government, that these Indians had no power to make leases, and therefore they are void—has this committee taken any steps to inquire why this Administration has not acted as to these cattle leases? I would be glad to be advised.

Mr. SPRINGER. I can not give the gentleman the information he requires; I have not asked Mr. Lamar the reason why he has not acted upon the opinion of the Attorney-General. The President did act upon it so far as the Cheyenne and the Arapaho reservation was concerned.

Mr. MORRISON. Why does not the gentleman offer a resolution making the inquiry?

Mr. ROGERS. The inquiry made by the Secretary of the Interior of the Attorney-General did not cover the Cherokee strip or any part of it.

Mr. WEAVER, of Iowa. But the answer did.

Mr. ROGERS. But I am answering your question.

Mr. SPRINGER. My answer to the gentleman from Arkansas is that it did.

Mr. ROGERS. You are mistaken, then; that is all.

Mr. SPRINGER. Then I will read the opinion of the Attorney-General.

Mr. ROGERS. No; read the inquiry addressed to him.

The letter of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Office of Indian Affairs, Washington, July 7, 1885.

SIR: In view of the fact that on many of the Indian reservations there are herds of cattle held there under pretended leases made to various parties by the Indians of the respective reservations I would respectfully recommend that the honorable Attorney-General be asked to state whether there is any law empowering the Interior Department to authorize Indians to enter into contract with any parties for the lease of Indian lands for grazing purposes.

Also, whether the President or the Interior Department has any authority to make a lease for grazing purposes of any part of any Indian reservation, or whether the approval of the President or the Secretary of the Interior would render any such lease made by Indians with other parties lawful and valid.

The above inquiries are not intended to refer to lands owned by the five civilized tribes in the Indian Territory.

Yours, respectfully,

J. D. C. ATKINS,
Commissioner.

The Hon. SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

The letter of the Secretary of the Interior is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, July 8, 1885.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith a copy of a letter from the Commissioner on Indian Affairs, submitting certain questions as to the power and authority of the Executive or the head of this Department regarding the making or the granting of authority to make any contract by Indians with any parties for the lease of Indian lands for grazing purposes.

With a view of limiting the range of consideration of this subject within the bounds necessary for present purposes, I have the honor to specify the following reservations as a portion of those upon which contracts, leases, or agreements are alleged to have been made by the Indians holding, occupying, or residing upon the lands contained therein:

1. The Cherokee lands in the Indian Territory west of 96° of longitude, except such portions thereof as have heretofore been appropriated for and conveyed to friendly tribes of Indians.
2. The Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservation in the Indian Territory.
3. The Kiowa and Comanche reservation in the Indian Territory.

The lands of the Cherokees referred to were ceded to those Indians by the United States by the treaties of 1833 and 1835 (7 Stat., 414 and 478). The status of those lands is shown and controlled by the provisions of Article XVI of the treaty of June 19, 1866, with the Cherokees (14 Stat., 804).

The status of the lands occupied by the Cheyenne and Arapaho Indians is shown in the correspondence which is made the basis of the Executive order of August 10, 1869 (see pamphlet of Existing Indian Reservations, page 28, herewith), and by unratified agreement, made in pursuance of the provisions of section 5 of the act of May 29, 1872 (17 Stat. 190).

The lands occupied by the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Indians were ceded to those Indians by the treaty of October 21, 1867 (15 Stat., 581 and 589).

With reference to these specified Indian lands or reservations, each and all of them, I have the honor to request that this Department may be favored with your opinion on the questions propounded by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, namely:

Whether there is any law empowering the Interior Department to authorize Indians to enter into contract with any parties for the lease of Indian lands for grazing purposes.

Also, whether the President or the Interior Department has any authority to make a lease for grazing purposes of any part of any of these Indian reservations, or whether the approval by the President or the Secretary of the Interior would render any such lease made by Indians with other parties lawful and valid.

Voluminous correspondence and papers showing the nature and character of the alleged leases made by the Indians above referred to, and other Indian tribes, of portions of the lands within their reservations to citizens of the United States for grazing purposes, with references to laws and decisions bearing on the subject, will be found in Executive Document No. 17, Forty-eighth Congress, second session, copy herewith.

Very respectfully,

L. Q. C. LAMAR, Secretary.

The honorable the ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

The following is the opinion of the Attorney-General in response to the foregoing letter:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, Washington, D. C., July 21, 1885.

SIR: By your letter of the 8th instant, inclosing a communication from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs of the 7th, the following questions are, at his suggestion, submitted to me with request for an opinion thereon:

"Whether there is any law empowering the Interior Department to authorize Indians to enter into contract with any parties for the lease of Indian lands for grazing purposes; and also whether the President or the Interior Department has any authority to make a lease for grazing purposes of any part of any Indian reservation, or whether the approval by the President or the Secretary of the Interior would render any such lease made by Indians with other parties lawful and valid."

These questions are propounded with reference to certain Indian reservations, namely:

1. The Cherokee lands in the Indian Territory west of 96° of longitude, except such parts thereof as have heretofore been appropriated for and conveyed to friendly tribes of Indians.
2. The Cheyenne and Arapaho reservation, in the Indian Territory.
3. The Kiowa and Comanche reservation, in the Indian Territory.

Our Government has ever claimed the right, and from a very early period its settled policy has been, to regulate and control the alienation or other disposition by Indians, and especially by Indian nations or tribes, of their lands. This policy was originally adopted in view of their peculiar character and habits, which rendered them incapable of sustaining any other relation with the whites than that of dependence and pupilage. There was no other way of dealing with them than that of keeping them separate, subordinate, and dependent, with a guardian care thrown around them for their protection. (3 Kent Com., 381; Beecher vs. Wetherby, 95 U. S., 517, where most of the cases on this subject are cited and discussed.)

Thus in 1873 the Congress of the Confederation, by a proclamation, prohibited "all persons from making settlements on lands inhabited or claimed by Indians, without the limits or jurisdiction of any particular State, and from purchasing or receiving any gift or cession of such lands or claims, without the express authority and directions of the United States in Congress assembled," and declared "that every such purchase or settlement, gift or cession, not having the authority aforesaid, is null and void, and that no right or title will accrue in consequence of any such purchase, gift, cession, or settlement." By section 4 of the act of July 22, 1790, chapter 33, the Congress of the United States enacted "that no sale of lands made by any Indians or any nation or tribe of Indians within the United States shall be valid to any person or persons, or to any State, whether having the right of preemption to such lands or not, unless the same shall be made and duly executed at some public treaty, held under the authority of the United States." A similar provision was again enacted in section 8 of the act of March 1, 1793, chapter 19, which by its terms included any "purchase or grant of lands, or of any title or claim thereto, from any Indians or nation or tribe of Indians within the bounds of the United States." The provision was further extended by section 12 of the act of May 19, 1796, chapter 30, so as to embrace any "purchase, grant, lease, or other conveyance of lands, or of any title or claim thereto." As thus extended it was re-enacted by the act of March 3, 1799, chapter 46, section 12, and also by the act of March 30, 1802, chapter 30, section 12.

In the above legislation the provision in terms applied to purchases, grants, leases, etc., from individual Indians as well as from Indian tribes or nations; but by the twelfth section of the act of June 30, 1834, chapter 161, it was limited to such as emanate "from any Indian nation or tribe of Indians." And the provision of the act of 1834, just referred to, has been reproduced in section 2116, Revised Statutes, which is now in force.

The last-named section declares: "No purchase, grant, lease, or other conveyance of lands, or of any claim or title thereto, from any Indian nation or tribe of Indians, shall be of any validity in law or equity, unless the same be made by treaty or convention entered into pursuant to the Constitution."

This statutory provision is very general and comprehensive. Its operation does not depend upon the nature or extent of the title to the land which the tribe or nation may hold. Whether such title be a fee-simple, or a right of occupancy merely, is not material; in either case the statute applies. It is not, therefore, deemed necessary or important, in connection with the subject under consideration, to inquire into the particular right or title to the above-mentioned reservations held by the Indian tribes or nations respectively which claim them. Whatever the right or title may be, each of these tribes or nations is precluded by the force and effect of the statute from either alienating or leasing any part of its reservation or imparting any interest or claim in and to the same without the consent of the Government of the United States. A lease of the land for grazing purposes is as clearly within the statute as a lease for any other or for general purposes, and the duration of the term is immaterial. One who enters with cattle or other live-stock upon an Indian reservation under a lease of that description, made in violation of the statute, is an intruder, and may be removed therefrom as such, notwithstanding his entry is with consent of the tribe. Such consent may exempt him from the penalty imposed by section 2117 Revised Statutes, for taking his stock there, but it can not validate the lease or confer upon him any legal right whatsoever to remain upon the land; and to this extent and no further was the decision of Judge Brewer in United States vs. Hunter, 21 Fed. Rep., 615.

But the present inquiry in substance is (1) whether the Department of the Interior can authorize these Indians to make leases of their lands for grazing purposes, or whether the approval of such leases by the President or the Secretary of the Interior would make them lawful and valid; (2) whether the President or the Department of the Interior has authority to lease for such purposes any part of an Indian reservation.

I submit that the power of the Department to authorize such leases to be made, or that of the President or the Secretary to approve or to make the same, if it exists at all, must rest upon some law, and therefore be derived from either a treaty or statutory provision. I am not aware of any treaty provision, applicable to the particular reservations in question, that confers such powers. The Revised Statutes contain provisions regulating contracts or agreements with Indians, and prescribing how they shall be executed and approved (see section 2103); but those provisions do not include contracts of the character described in section 2116, hereinbefore mentioned.

No general power appears to be conferred by statute upon either the President or Secretary, or any other officer of the Government to make, authorize, or approve leases of lands held by Indian tribes; and the absence of such power was doubtless one of the main considerations which led to the adoption of the act of February 19, 1875, chap. 90, "to authorize the Seneca Nation of New York Indians to lease lands within the Cattaraugus and Allegany reservations, and to confirm existing leases." The act just cited is moreover significant as showing that, in the view of Congress, Indian tribes can not lease their reservations without the authority of some law of the United States.

In my opinion, therefore, each of the questions proposed in your letter should be answered in the negative, and I so answer them.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

A. H. GARLAND, Attorney-General.

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

Mr. SPRINGER. Before the committee rises I want to make one or two remarks, not in the nature of argument, but in the nature of statements of fact in regard to the position of this bill and what it proposes to do. There seems to be an impression abroad in some minds to the effect that this bill proposes to take certain lands from the Indians without their consent. On the contrary, so far as the pending bill is concerned, it assumes that the Indians own these lands and that they have a right to be paid for the occupancy of them. Under this bill the lands in which they claim an interest can not be occupied until a commission appointed by the President of the United States shall have visited the Indians and made an agreement with them that they shall receive compensation for those lands at a rate not to exceed a dollar and a quarter per acre, less the amount they have already received.

Under this law no man can take, occupy, and live upon this land until this agreement is made and approved by the United States and the proclamation of the President to that effect is issued, and if any person goes upon the land before that time he forfeits the right to take a homestead there.

So far as this land is concerned, it is precisely in the same condition as the lands we have acquired from the Indians from the time of the settlement at Plymouth Rock until this time, and I undertake to say that there never was a proposition to the Indians that had so much of fairness and justice in it as this bill has. If it is robbery to take this land under this bill, our forefathers have been guilty of robbery ever since they landed on Plymouth Rock.

Mr. HOOKER. You concede, then, that this land belongs to these Indians and that it will be necessary that they should consent before it is taken under the operation of this bill?

Mr. SPRINGER. This bill does concede that it is theirs, but I do not. It does not make any difference where the title is.

Mr. HOOKER. Have you a right to create a territory out of land which belongs to the Indians, who have possession?

Mr. SPRINGER. We do not propose to create a territory until we get possession. This bill will operate on No Man's Land only until the Indians give their consent, and when they do give their consent and the President approves it and signs it and issues his proclamation, then, and not until then, will settlers be able to go onto this land.

Mr. HOOKER. You concede it belongs to the Indians not only by treaty stipulation but by patent?

Mr. SPRINGER. I said that the bill concedes it is theirs, and that the bill does not affect any part except No Man's Land without the consent of the Indians.

Mr. STRUBLE (to Mr. SPRINGER). But you do not accept that as a legal proposition?

Mr. SPRINGER. I do not. I agree fully with the legal proposition of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WARNER] on that point.

Mr. HOOKER. That it is theirs or it is not?

Mr. SPRINGER. I am not quibbling here about one thing and another.

Mr. HOOKER. I am quibbling about what the law is.

Mr. WEAVER. If the bill pass it will be theirs.

Mr. SPRINGER. I say that for the purposes of this bill I will concede that it is theirs.

Mr. HOOKER. Without this bill it is theirs.

Mr. SPRINGER. Under this bill their claim is recognized.

Mr. HOOKER. Is it theirs?

Mr. SPRINGER. Ask me something about infant baptism, or something else that is equally foreign to the subject.

Mr. HOOKER. I think you might be better informed on that subject than you are on this.

Mr. PETERS. I say they have a legal right to this land.

Mr. HOOKER. Then, from the frankness of your statement, I see that you differ with the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SPRINGER. Now, I do not want to be misunderstood, and I say to gentlemen here that so far as this bill is concerned it assumes that the land belongs to the Indians, and we are not going to take it under this bill unless the Indians agree that we shall.

Mr. HOOKER. Is that a false assumption or a true assumption?

Mr. SPRINGER. That is the fact, as is shown by the provisions of the bill. Now, it is discussing an abstraction to discuss the question whether this land is or is not the property of the Indians under treaties that have been heretofore made. We will not take it from them without their consent or without paying them for it.

Mr. HEARD. We give them the benefit of the doubt.

Mr. SPRINGER. We give them the benefit of the doubt. It is supposed in some quarters that the opponents of this bill are here representing the Indians of this country. I deny it. The Indian Rights Association of Philadelphia, composed of charitable and distinguished people, Quakers, ministers of the gospel, and others, has been organized to look after the rights of all the Indians of the United States. That association, composed of distinguished philanthropists who are not in the employ of any Indian tribes and are not the attorneys of any Indian tribes, are looking after the rights of the Indians, and in pursuit of that object they sent a very competent agent, Mr. Painter, to this part of the country to examine the character of these lands and to report how much of them could be taken for white settlement. In the last annual report of the association, the report for 1887, he says:

It would be a cruel outrage to force them to remove; it would be a disastrous step backward to induce them to go. The lands to which they would remove are not so good as those now occupied. They are bitterly opposed to the plan and it ought not to be attempted. Oklahoma ought to be opened up.

That is, Oklahoma proper, in the center of the Territory.

It is not needed by the Indians; it can not be kept empty and ought not to be so kept; but if treaty obligations and moral obligations must be violated, it is better to do so with reference to vacant lands than with reference to established homes. Steps ought to be taken at once to gain the consent of the Seminoles and Creeks to throw this land open to settlement, and it could doubtless be done if a fair price above the 30 cents per acre which we have paid for it for the settlement of Indians upon it was offered for it.

That is what we propose to do. The Indian Rights Association, composed of eminent philanthropists, takes the position of the Oklahoma bill, which is now before us, and the Indians who oppose this bill are those of the five civilized tribes, who have agents and attorneys in this city, organized into what is called the Indian Defense Association. They are the representatives and paid agents of the five civilized tribes and of the cattle syndicates, who are trying to keep this territory for a cattle pasture.

And, Mr. Chairman, that is the issue which is involved in this bill—whether this territory, which is now unoccupied by Indians, and where an Indian has not resided for thirty years, and whether the Cherokee Outlet, where they have never resided, shall be opened up under the provisions of this bill to settlement by white people, or whether they shall be dedicated forever as cattle pastures. That is the whole question, and no one can stand here in face of the report of this Indian Rights Association, which has been organized to protect the true interests of all the Indians of this country, and claim that the rights of the Indians are to be imperiled in the least by the provisions of the Oklahoma bill. That bill was prepared in such form as to throw all practicable safeguards around the Indians, and I appeal to this House and to the country to do justice to the people of the United States who are seeking to make homes in that territory.

Pass this bill and let it go into the territory with the newcomer, so that when he comes in there to make a home he will find a law to protect himself and his family. I also ask in benalf of 15,000 American citizens who are now settled in what is known as No Man's Land, and who have no law, Federal, State, or Territorial, to protect them—in their behalf I ask that this bill be passed, in order that the shield of local and national law may be thrown around them, and that the people therein residing may have the same rights and privileges that are guaranteed by our Constitution to the people of every other part of the country.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I would like to ask the gentleman a question for information.

Mr. SPRINGER. Certainly.

Mr. GROSVENOR. It has been represented to me by persons assuming to represent the settlers on No Man's Land that for some reason or other they are opposed to this bill. Can the gentleman state what is the fact in that regard?

Mr. SPRINGER. The people of No Man's Land are praying earnestly for the passage of the Oklahoma bill, because they have no government; and the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] does not propose to give them any government.

I now move that the committee rise.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I desire to yield five minutes of the time reserved by me to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SYMES].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] has eighteen minutes of his hour remaining.

Mr. SPRINGER. The committee must rise now, as the House must take a recess in two or three minutes.

The motion of Mr. SPRINGER that the committee rise was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. DOCKERY reported that the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 10614) to provide for the organization of the Territory of Oklahoma, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found duly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 8354) to authorize the construction and maintenance of a pile bridge over the Halifax River at Daytona, Volusia County, Florida;

A bill (H. R. 9512) for the erection of a public building at Brownsville, Tex.; and

A bill (H. R. 9611) to authorize the Macon, Tuscaloosa and Birmingham Railroad Company to build a bridge across the Black Warrior River, in Alabama.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. HEMPHILL, for one week from to-day.

To Mr. STEWART, of Georgia, indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. BYNUM, for the remainder of the week.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

By unanimous consent, the Committee on Military Affairs was discharged from the further consideration of the resolution of the military board of Virginia, favoring the bill pending in Congress to make appropriations for the maintenance of the militia of the States of the Union; and the same was referred to the Committee on the Militia.

The hour of 5 o'clock p. m. having arrived, the House, according to order, took a recess until 8 p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House reassembled at 8 o'clock p. m., and was called to order by Mr. DOCKERY as Speaker pro tempore.

The Clerk read as follows:

SPEAKER'S ROOM, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 24, 1888.

I hereby designate Hon. A. M. DOCKERY to preside as Speaker pro tempore at the session of the House this evening.

JOHN G. CARLISLE, Speaker.

Hon. JOHN B. CLARK,
Clerk House of Representatives.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the special order under which the House meets to-night.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That on Tuesday, July 24, the House take a recess from 5 o'clock until 8 o'clock p. m., the session not to extend beyond 10 o'clock p. m., said session to be devoted to the consideration of business reported from the Committee on Public Lands to which there shall be no objection.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, some of the bills covered by this resolution are in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union or in Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar. I ask unanimous consent that all bills considered to-night may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole, in order to save time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

SCHOOL LANDS IN WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Washington Territory [Mr. VOORHEES] has a bill which has not yet been reported, but which is understood to be covered by the order. He desires to make the report for consideration now; and I presume no member will object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, the report will be received.

Mr. VOORHEES, by unanimous consent, reported back favorably, from the Committee on the Public Lands, the bill (S. 558) for the relief of certain settlers upon the school lands of Washington Territory.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

A MEMBER. Let the bill be read.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas sections sixteen and thirty-six of each township of land in Washington Territory was reserved unto that Territory for school purposes; and

Whereas on December 2, 1869, the Legislative Assembly of that Territory, by an act duly passed, authorized the county commissioners of the several counties in that Territory to lease said lands for a term of years not exceeding six years, the money received therefor being placed in the school fund; and

Whereas the lands so leased are greatly enhanced in value by the cultivation thereof, and the lessees thereof have made valuable improvements thereon and incurred large expense in reducing such land to a state of cultivation, and will incur much loss if they are caused to abandon their said improvements and cultivation; and

Whereas the validity of the said leases is questioned: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the action of the county commissioners of the several counties of Washington Territory under the authority supposed to reside in the act of the Legislative Assembly of said Territory of December 2, 1869, entitled "An act to provide for the leasing of school lands in Washington Territory," when had in conformity to said act, be, and the same hereby is, confirmed, and that said act be, and the same is hereby, validated and confirmed.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to say a single word. This is something of a new departure in regard to school lands. It has not been heretofore the policy of the Government to give to the Territories any control of the school lands. But it is easy to see that when these lands remain entirely unprofitable year after year there is a serious loss to the Territory. The authority which this bill proposes to confer, to lease such lands for a period not exceeding six years, would seem to be entirely unobjectionable. The Committee on Public Lands think this a proper measure.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HOLMAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

GRANT TO CALIFORNIA OF 5 PER CENT. OF SALES OF PUBLIC LANDS.

The first business on the Calendar under the special order was the bill (H. R. 1235) granting to the State of California 5 per cent. of the net proceeds of the cash sales of public lands in said State.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman having charge of that measure [Mr. MCKENNA] is not present. It will give rise to considerable discussion, and therefore for the present I ask it be passed over.

Mr. VANDEVER. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his objection and let it be considered.

Mr. HOLMAN. This bill has been discussed for an hour in the House. It will give rise to a great deal of anxiety from fear of making a mistake, and in the absence of the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKENNA], who discussed it before, I must insist it be passed over for the present.

The bill was passed over.

ADDITIONAL LAND DISTRICT, OREGON.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1762) to establish an additional land district in the State of Oregon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of that bill?

Mr. HERMANN. That bill has already passed both Houses.

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not see how it got on the Calendar. It passed several months ago.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There being no objection, the bill will be laid on the table.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

PURCHASERS OF SWAMP LANDS.

The next business on the Calendar under the special order was the bill (H. R. 6897) to relieve purchasers of and to indemnify certain States for swamp and overflowed lands disposed of, and for other purposes.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that bill be passed over for the present, as it will involve considerable discussion. I do not see the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MCRAE], who has charge of it.

There was no objection, and the bill was passed over.

NEW LAND DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7788) to establish a new land district in the State of Mississippi.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. STOCKDALE] having charge of this bill is not present, and I hope it will be passed over, although I do not think there is any objection to it.

There was no objection, and the bill was passed over.

SWAMP AND OVERFLOWED LANDS.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (S. 758) to relieve purchasers of and to indemnify certain States for swamp and overflowed lands disposed of, and for other purposes.

Mr. HOLMAN. That will give rise to discussion, and let it be passed over for the present.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

DONATION CLAIMS.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (S. 1709) to provide for the issue of patents to certain persons for donation claims under the act approved September 27, 1850, commonly known as the donation law.

Mr. HOLMAN. These are claims arising under what is commonly known as the "donation law." The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. HERMANN] is in charge of the measure.

There was no objection to the consideration of the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in all cases where widows or single women, in good faith, settled upon the public lands in the Territories of Oregon or Washington, claiming donation rights under the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to create the office of surveyor-general of the public lands in Oregon, and to provide for the survey, and to make donations to settlers of the said public lands," approved September 27, 1850, or of the acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, or either of them, and filed the notifications and made the final proof of residence and cultivation required by said acts or either of them before the surveyor-general of the Territory or before the register and receiver of the proper local land-office, and received from such surveyor-general or from the register and receiver of the local land-office certificates in due form for such donation claim, and they, or their heirs and assigns, have since occupied and improved such claims, and there are no adverse claims thereto, and in all cases where, upon proof satisfactory to such surveyor-general or register and receiver, as the case may be, donation claims under the provisions of said acts, or either of them, were set off to orphans by the surveyor-general of the Territory or the register and receiver of the proper local land-office, and certificates were issued for such claims, and the claimants, their heirs, or assigns, have since occupied and improved such claims, and there are no adverse claims thereto, the title of such donation claimants, their heirs or assigns, to such claims is hereby confirmed, and patents shall be issued for such claims in conformity with such certificates.

Passed the Senate March 19, 1888.

Attest: ANSON G. McCOOK, Secretary.

Mr. SMITH, of Wisconsin. I ask the gentleman from Oregon how many acres there are in one of these donation claims?

Mr. HERMANN. There are from 80 to 640. They are few in number. In some instances whole towns and cities have been built on them. Patents have been issued on that class of claims for thirty or forty years, but recently doubt has arisen as to the construction of the law. This bill has been rendered necessary to remove that doubt. It has been approved at the Department and has passed the Senate.

Mr. SMITH, of Wisconsin. What is the maximum amount of acres in each claim?

Mr. HERMANN. About 160 acres would be the average.

Mr. HOLMAN. I would inquire of the gentleman how it happens some of these claims are for a larger number of acres than others?

Mr. HERMANN. I will state to the gentleman from Indiana, in reply to his question, in many instances it was impossible to get the maximum quantity.

Mr. HOLMAN. What is the maximum?

Mr. HERMANN. I will make a statement covering the facts of the case.

The original donation act was approved September 27, 1850, and was to induce population to that distant region, and granted 640 acres to a married man and his wife and 320 acres to a single man, and was limited to those who had become settlers prior to December 1, 1850. Another section limited the quantity of land to 320 acres to a married man and one-half to a single man emigrating to and settling in Oregon and Washington between December 1, 1850, and December 1, 1853, and this limitation was extended to December 1, 1853.

The report which I had the honor to make for the committee explains the situation fully, as follows:

That said bills propose the confirmation of titles to certain lands in Oregon and Washington Territory settled upon the early settlers under the act of Congress approved September 27, 1850, commonly known as the donation land, and confines confirmation exclusively to those who made residence for four years, submitted final proof to the surveyors-general or registers and receivers, and who had certificates for patent issued by said officers, and where said claimants or their assignees have since occupied and improved said lands and there are no adverse claims.

For nearly thirty-eight years most of these people or their assigns have resided on and claimed these lands. Conveyances have been made, and the original certificates for patent have always been recognized as conclusive between all parties as to the title. Towns and villages have been built upon this class of lands. The Department has until a few years past uniformly issued patents upon this class of claims, but now doubts its authority to do so upon a close construction of the law. The claims remaining unpatented are few in number, and justice and equity, if not the law, demand confirmation.

There being no objection to the consideration of the bill, it was ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, was passed.

Mr. HERMANN moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC LANDS, TUSCALOOSA, ALA.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (S. 2845) granting to the corporate authorities of the city of Tuscaloosa, in the State of Alabama, all the right, title, and interest of the United States to fractional sections 22 and 15, lying south of the Warrior River, in township 21 and range 10 west.

Mr. HOLMAN. I presume there is no objection to the consideration of that bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. PAYSON. I hope the bill will be considered, for a reason in which I am sure the chairman of the committee will bear me out. The object of the measure is to perfect the title to a large portion of the city of Tuskaloosa, Ala. Owing to the destruction of their records, there is difficulty in making title. The Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the Land Office recommend its passage, and while I do not remember with sufficient certainty the facts to be able to state them in detail, yet the chairman of the committee will bear me out in the assertion that when the matter was examined in committee it was found to be a case that, from the official records, it would go without saying ought to be passed. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] came to our committee and urged its passage.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope there will be no objection.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all of the interest or claim of the United States in and to fractional sections 22 and 15, lying south of the Black Warrior River, in township 21, of range 10 west, in the State of Alabama, be, and the same is hereby, relinquished to and vested in the city of Tuskaloosa for the following purposes:

First. The part and parts of said fractional sections constituting the localities known as the "river margin," the "streets of said city," the "pond," and the "common," shall vest in said city absolutely.

Second. The residue of said fractional sections shall be vested in the said city in trust, for the use of each of the occupants of the lots, or parts of lots thereof, who are owners in good faith, according to the title which is now vested in each; the intent of this act being not to give any right to said occupants except what arises from the relinquishment of the right or claim of the United States thereto.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BANKHEAD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. I notice that we are passing quite a number of Senate bills, while the House bills for the same purpose are pending. I hope in all these cases the House bills will be laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That action ought to be taken in every case, but is impossible for the clerks to determine.

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not think it is a matter of practical importance, however.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is of this importance, that it relieves the Calendars of bills that ought to be laid on the table.

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly they ought to be; but I am not able myself to point them out at this time. It can be done hereafter.

METHODIST COLLEGE ASSOCIATION OF SOUTHWESTERN KANSAS.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 8740) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to sell to "The Methodist College Association of Southwestern Kansas" certain lands in Kansas.

Mr. PETERS. I ask for the consideration of that bill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized to sell and convey to "The Methodist College Association of Southwestern Kansas," a corporation duly chartered by the laws of the State of Kansas, at the rate of $1.25 per acre, the following-described real estate being Osage Indian land, situated in Ford County, Kansas, to wit: Lots numbers 3, 5, 6, and 7, of section 3, township 27 south, of range 24 west.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

Add to the bill:

And the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to cause the improvements on said land to be appraised and sold under such directions as he may prescribe: Provided, That said Methodist College Association shall, within five years after the passage of this act, begin in good faith the construction of buildings upon said land for the purposes herein set forth.

Mr. PETERS. I would like to ask that the report in this case, which explains the bill very fully, may be printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection.

The report (by Mr. TURNER, of Kansas) is as follows:

The land described embraces about 140 acres, and is that part of the Fort Dodge military reservation upon which the fort buildings are situated. The fort has been abandoned by the Government as a military post, and that part of the reservation not embraced in this bill has been disposed of to actual settlers at $1.25 per acre, in accordance with a ruling of the Secretary of the Interior, under existing law, relating to the Osage Indian trust lands. The land described in the bill has been reserved from sale for the reason that the fort buildings were situated thereon.

The bill provides that this land shall be sold to this association at $1.25 per acre.

Your committee would recommend that after the word "west," in line 11, the following be added:

"And the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to cause the improvements on said land to be appraised and sold under such directions as he may prescribe: Provided, That said Methodist College Association shall, within five years after the passage of this act, begin in good faith the erection of buildings upon said land for the purposes herein set forth."

And, with the adoption of this amendment, recommend that this bill pass.

The amendment recommended by the committee was adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, the question being upon the passage of the bill.

Mr. WEAVER. How much land is involved?

Mr. PETERS. It is about 140 acres. This is the land upon which the old buildings of the Fort Dodge military reservation were situated.

The bill was passed.

Mr. PETERS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LAND OFFICE, FOLSOM, N. MEX.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (S. 2040) to establish a land office at Folsom, in the Territory of New Mexico.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that this bill be passed over informally for the present.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. CONGER. I hope the gentleman will not object to taking it up now.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think I will have to insist upon the objection for the present. Of course I have no objection to the gentleman from Iowa being heard upon it, if he wishes, at this time.

Mr. WEAVER. If the bill is to be passed over informally, of course there is no necessity for occupying time upon it now.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that it be passed over.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Before that action is taken, I want to state in connection with the bill, so that it may go upon the record, that when this bill was reported to the House it was distinctly understood by the parties interested in it that the passage of the bill would not be asked until the public-land bill which passed the House some weeks ago and is now pending in the Senate should become a law.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill will be passed over informally for the present, retaining its place on the Calendar.

CAMP SHERIDAN MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. DORSEY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7410) for the relief of settlers upon Old Camp Sheridan military reservation.

Mr. McRAE. Is that a request to take up a bill out of its regular order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is.

Mr. McRAE. Then I shall be compelled to object. I think we can proceed much more rapidly by following the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next bill.

CERTIFICATION OF LANDS TO THE STATE OF KANSAS.

The next business on the Calendar was the joint resolution (H. Res. 14) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to certify lands to the State of Kansas for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Whereas by the act of Congress approved July 2, 1862, there were granted to the several States "which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts" an amount of public land equal to 30,000 acres for each Senator and Representative in Congress to which the States were respectively entitled by the apportionment under the census of 1860; and

Whereas the State of Kansas, having at the time two Senators and one Representative, was entitled to 90,000 acres; but on account of a withdrawal of lands for the benefit of the Leavenworth, Pawnee and Western Railroad northwest of Fort Riley, along the valley of the Republican River, one list of 7,682 acres, which, having been selected by the State as minimum lands, were certified to the State as double minimum; and

Whereas the said road not having been surveyed, located, or constructed on said route, the said public lands which had been previously withdrawn were restored to market at the minimum price: Therefore,

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized to certify to the said State of Kansas 7,682 acres of land, in lieu of an equal amount heretofore erroneously certified to said State as double minimum lands: Provided, That in case there are not a sufficient amount of public lands in said State to satisfy the requirements of this act, then the said Secretary is hereby authorized and directed to issue to said State land scrip, acre for acre, in lieu of said lands; and said scrip shall be locatable on any of the public lands of the United States.

Amend the title so as to read: "Joint resolution to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to certify lands to the State of Kansas for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts."

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendments:

In line 5, before the word "land," insert "public," and after the word "land" insert "in said State;" so that it shall read:

Seven thousand six hundred and eighty-two acres of public land in said State, etc.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. WEAVER. I would like to have an explanation, subject to the right of objection.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. The statement in connection with the joint resolution is simply this: The Government granted to the agricultural colleges 30,000 acres of land per Senator or Representative to which the States were respectively entitled. The State of Kansas under this act of Congress, approved in 1862, was entitled to receive 90,000 acres of land. The Government also provided that where lands had been granted to a railroad, such lands should be considered as $2.50 an acre instead of $1.25 lands. Under that act the State Agricultural College of Kansas received 90,000 acres, less 7,682 acres, I think was the amount, because of the fact that these lands had been withdrawn for the Kansas Pacific Railroad for the purpose of building the road on the Republican branch from Fort Riley up towards Nebraska.

Subsequently that withdrawal was revoked; that is to say, that road never was built there; but in 1866, two years after the State had selected this land, the road was authorized to be built where it is now, out the Smoky Hill. When this was restored it was not restored as double minimum land, but as single minimum, so that the college was charged with land at $2.50 which was really only $1.25 land, and this applies to the seven thousand odd acres withheld from it by virtue of that act.

Mr. WEAVER. Where will they get this land?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. In the State.

Mr. HOLMAN. The proviso of this bill escaped my attention, and I ask that it again be read.

The Clerk reported the proviso.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is the objectionable feature.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. The committee has proposed an amendment striking out the proviso. If the Clerk will read, there is a provision inserted that the location shall be on lands in Kansas.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think the proviso should be stricken out.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. I think the report shows the proviso is to be stricken out.

Mr. WEAVER. If it does go out it should remain out.

Mr. McRAE. I move to strike it out.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment of the committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the word "lands," in line 7; also insert the word "public" before the word "land," in the fifth line; also insert the words "in said State" after the word "land," in line 5.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope that the friends of this bill will accept it with this amendment.

Mr. WEAVER. We may strike out that proviso here and it may be inserted elsewhere. I want the friends of this measure to say that this shall be satisfactory; because it is more important to preserve public land for actual settlers than for agricultural colleges.

Mr. PETERS. If the resolution goes into conference we will see that the proviso is not restored.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. I am quite willing that it should be stricken out and remain out.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this resolution? The Chair hears none.

The amendments of the committee were agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. I move to amend the title so as to read: "Joint resolution to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to certify lands to the State of Kansas for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts."

The motion to amend the title was agreed to.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas, moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

PREVENTION OF ALIENS ACQUIRING TITLE TO PUBLIC LANDS.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7425) to amend the homestead laws to prevent aliens acquiring title to public lands, and to secure homes for actual settlers who are citizens of the United States.

Mr. McRAE. That seems to be here on an adverse report, and it may as well be passed over.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, the bill will be laid on the table.

Mr. McRAE. I make the motion.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the quantity of public land subject to entry as homestead shall be hereafter 80 acres instead of 160 acres, as heretofore allowed.

SEC. 2. That none but citizens of the United States shall be entitled to enter public lands as homesteads or in any manner whatever acquire title thereto.

SEC. 3. That this act shall take effect immediately after its passage: Provided, That any entry in good faith actually made prior to its passage may be perfected, completed, and title acquired to the lands designated in accordance with laws in force at the time of making such entry.

Mr. WEAVER. I understand that is substantially provided for in the general bill we have passed.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, this bill will be laid on the table.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

FORT WALLACE MILITARY RESERVATION.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 8310) to provide for the disposal of the Fort Wallace military reservation in Kansas.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That so much of the northwest quarter of section 19, township 13 south, range 38 west, and of the northeast quarter of section 24, township 13 south, range 39 west, and the east half of the east half of the northwest quarter of section 24, township 13 south, range 39 west, included within the limits of the Fort Wallace reservation, excluding and excepting therefrom the right of way heretofore granted to the Union Pacific Railway Company and excepting the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section 24, township 13 south, range 39 west, and fractional blocks 44, 49, 50, 51, 36, and 48, according to the town plat of the city of Wallace be, and is hereby, set apart for town-site purposes, and may be entered by the corporate authorities of the city of Wallace under and subject to the provisions and restrictions of section 2387 of the Revised Statutes.

SEC. 2. That the Union Pacific Railroad Company is hereby granted the preference right, for the period of three months after the appraisement herein provided for, to purchase the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section 24, township 13 south, range 39 west, and fractional blocks 44, 49, 50, 51, 36, and 48, according to the town plat of the city of Wallace, the same being now occupied by said railroad company for depot and other purposes, at such price as may be fixed, without reference to the improvements thereon, by the Secretary of the Interior, not less than $2.50 per acre.

SEC. 3. That the Wallace Water-Works Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Kansas, is hereby granted the preference right, for the period of three months after the appraisement herein provided for, to purchase the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section 25, township 13 south, range 39 west, at such price as may be fixed thereon by the Secretary of the Interior, not less than $2.50 per acre, and said water-works company is hereby granted the use of a right of way, not exceeding 25 feet in width, for the purpose of maintaining the line of pipes now laid and laying and repairing the same hereafter, and connecting said tract of land with the city of Wallace, the same to be approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 4. That the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 20, township 13 south, range 38 west, heretofore set apart by the military authorities of Fort Wallace as a cemetery, is hereby granted to the city of Wallace for cemetery purposes.

SEC. 5. That the northeast quarter of section 29, township 13 south, range 38 west, being that portion of said reservation on which are situated the buildings constituting the Fort Wallace military post, shall be appraised under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior and sold at a public or private sale, as he may deem to the best advantage of the Government, except that it shall not be sold at less than its appraised price.

SEC. 6. That the remainder of said reservation shall be disposed of under the homestead laws, except the privileges granted by section 2301 of said homestead laws: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, limit the quantity of land which may be entered upon by one entryman, within 1 mile of the limits of the city of Wallace to a quantity not less than 40 acres, and not exceeding 160 acres.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. WEAVER. How much does it involve?

Mr. HOLMAN. Quite a large body.

Mr. TURNER, of Kansas. Twenty-eight sections.

Mr. Speaker, I apprehend that a little explanation of the provisions of this bill may be necessary. The general object is to open up this reservation. It is an old military reservation out on the frontier of Kansas, located in just that section of the State which is being settled up by homesteaders. The reservation is 2 miles wide and 7 miles long, making fourteen sections long. In order to do justice to all parties who are interested there, it is quite necessary that several sections should be considered.

Section 1 of the bill simply provides that the town-site of Wallace shall be granted by the Government for town-site purposes. There is already a town located upon this place. I should say that this town site embraces about 145 acres of land.

Section 2 provides that the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall be allowed to purchase 40 acres of land, at a valuation fixed by the Secretary of the Interior, at not less than $2.50 an acre, being the double-minimum price of all public lands.

Now, the reason for that is simply this: The Union Pacific Railroad when building its roads through the State of Kansas placed their division stations, as most railroads do, at every hundred miles. The third division is at Ellis, 100 miles east of Fort Wallace. In order to get water it was placed at the creek. As it passes from the fort the land rises to a table-land, which made it necessary for them to go 150 feet for water, where they obtain running water. The railroad had the right of way across this military reservation.

The Secretary of War granted the Union Pacific Railroad Company, on account of the water situated there, permission to build their division shops at that point. They did so, and also commenced experimental gardening at that point. They planted trees of different kinds which were kept under the control of their forester, and planted various kinds of vegetation upon patches of this 40 acres for the purpose of experimenting, and with the view of showing the fact that grain could be grown in that country. Now, that 40 acres has become covered by their machine shops, hotel, depot, offices, coal-sheds, etc., so that it would be but fair and just to this company to let them purchase the 40 acres of land at the valuation fixed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. PAYSON. The water-works there are for the benefit of the entire community.

Mr. TURNER, of Kansas. Certainly. They belong to the town, not to the railroad company. It is very difficult in that part of the country, as I have stated, to get water in sufficient quantities to supply the towns; and therefore the Wallace Water-Works Company was formed, and reservoirs were established on the creek, some three-quarters of a mile distant from the town. After this bill was considered the company laid its pipes; it was, in fact, laying them at the time. The company has been formed by citizens of the town of Wallace, for the purpose of furnishing the people of Wallace with water. This bill provides that the Wallace Water-Works Company may purchase 40 acres of land at the appraised valuation.

Mr. PAYSON and others. That is all right. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. TURNER, of Kansas, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SALE OF LAND IN HOUSTON, TEX.

The next public-land business on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5690) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell block of land 108 in the city of Houston, Tex.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to sell, either at private or public sale, the interest held by the United States in and to block 108, situated in the city of Houston, Tex., on the south side of Buffalo Bayou, and to make a quitclaim deed to the purchaser thereof.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. SMITH, of Wisconsin. Who reported it?

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not remember.

Mr. McRAE. It is a very proper bill; and I hope it will pass.

Mr. HOLMAN. This land, as we understand, is entirely useless to the Government; and on that account this bill has been recommended by the committee.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HOLMAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LAND FOR PUBLIC PARK, TACOMA, WASH.

The next public-land business on the Calendar was the bill (S. 1870) granting the use of certain lands in Pierce County, Washington Territory, to the city of Tacoma for the purposes of a public park.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby granted to the city of Tacoma, in the county of Pierce, in the Territory of Washington, the right to occupy, improve, and control, for the purposes of a public park for the use and benefit of the citizens of the United States, and for no other purposes whatever, the following-described pieces or parcels of land, situate in the county of Pierce and Territory of Washington, and described as follows, namely: Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, and the east half of the southeast quarter, and the northeast quarter of the northwest quarter, and the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section 15, township 21 north, of range 2 east, and lots 1, 2, and 3, and the south half of the southwest quarter of section 14, same township and range, and lots 1, 2, and 3, in section 10 of the same township and range, containing 635 acres, more or less: Provided, That the United States reserves to itself the fee and the right forever to resume possession and occupy any portion of said lands for naval or military purposes whenever in the judgment of the President the exigency arises that should require the use and appropriation of the same for the public defense or for such other disposition as Congress may determine, without any claim for compensation to said city for improvements thereon or damages on account thereof.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. This is a very important measure, and I hope the gentleman from Washington Territory [Mr. VOORHEES] will be permitted to state its effect.

Mr. PAYSON. I hope the gentleman will not consume much time. We are all in favor of the bill.

Mr. VOORHEES. I will not take three minutes.

The land covered by this bill is a military reservation known as Point Defiance. It embraces from 700 to 800 acres. The War Department is entirely in favor of this measure, as is shown by a letter which accompanies the report. The bill provides simply that this land shall be used by the city of Tacoma for the purpose of a public park, reserving to the United States the right at any time and under any circumstances to resume possession of the land for purposes of public defense.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that the report upon this bill be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, that order will be made. The Chair hears no objection.

The report (by Mr. VOORHEES) is as follows:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill (S. 1870) granting certain lands in Pierce County, Washington Territory, to the city of Tacoma for the purpose of a public park, report the same back with a favorable recommendation. The tract of land to which this legislation refers contains between 600 and 700 acres, and immediately adjoins the city of Tacoma.

The bill in its present shape has been recommended by the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army, which recommendation meets with the concurrence of the Secretary of War, as appears from the following letters:

"OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS, UNITED STATES ARMY,
Washington, D. C., March 3, 1888.

"SIR: I have the honor to return herewith Senate bill 1870, granting certain lands in Pierce County, Washington Territory, to the city of Tacoma, for the purposes of a public park.

"It is recommended that the bill be radically changed, in this, that instead of granting the lands mentioned to the city of Tacoma, the said city may be permitted to use the same for the purposes of a public park, and no other; that no price be received for the same from the city of Tacoma; that all title be securely vested in the United States, and that this permission be given with the full understanding that the United States intends to occupy the lands or any part of them for military or other purposes whenever its proper officials see fit to order the same, and without any claim for compensation or damage on the part of said city of Tacoma.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"J. C. DUANE,
"Brigadier-General, Chief of Engineers.

"Hon. WILLIAM C. ENDICOTT,
"Secretary of War."

"WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington City, March 15, 1888.

"SIR: In reply to your request of the 12th instant for the views of this Department upon House bill No. 7081, Fiftieth Congress, first session, which conveys to the city of Tacoma, for a stipulated sum per acre, certain lands in Pierce County, Washington Territory, belonging to the United States, for the purposes of a public park, I have the honor to inform you that on the 6th instant the Committee on Public Lands of the United States Senate was furnished with a report upon a measure similar to the present bill (S. 1870) by the Chief of Engineers, who recommends that the bill be so amended as not to grant the lands in question to the city of Tacoma, but merely to permit their use as a public park, and that the United States accept no price for the lands, but retain its title in them securely vested; the property to revert to the United States whenever required, without any claim for damages on the part of the city of Tacoma.

"These recommendations of the Chief of Engineers are fully concurred in by this Department.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"S. V. BENÉT,
"Brig. Gen., Chief of Ordnance, and Acting Secretary of War.

"Hon. C. S. VOORHEES,
"House of Representatives."

Your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MACDONALD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CAMP SHERIDAN MILITARY RESERVATION.

The next public-land business on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7410) for the relief of settlers upon old Camp Sheridan military reservation.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all entries or filings under the homestead and pre-emption laws, allowed by the United States district land officers at Valentine, Nebr., of lands within the limits of the former Camp Sheridan military reservation, situated in township 33 north, of ranges 45 and 46 west, in said State, prior to receipt by them of instructions from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated July 2, 1886, be, and the same are hereby, confirmed: Provided, That the persons making such filings or entries possessed the necessary qualifications and have, since filing or entry (as the case may be), fully complied with the law governing entries of like character upon public lands.

SEC. 2. That in cases of filings under the pre-emption law, made upon lands in said abandoned reservation, the limitation of thirty months, prescribed by section 2267, United States Revised Statutes, shall not be enforced, but proof and payment must be made within six months from passage of this act.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendments reported by the Committee on the Public Lands were read, as follows:

In line 3, after the word "homestead," insert "and."
In line 4 strike out the words "and timber culture."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DORSEY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SALE OF CERTAIN LANDS IN LOUISIANA.

The next public-land business on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 9423) to restore to the public domain and to regulate the sale and disposition of certain lands east of the Mississippi River, in the State of Louisiana.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all lands lying in the rear of 80 arpents from and east of the Mississippi River and south of the Bayou Manchac and Amite River, within the limits of townships 8 and 9 south, of ranges 1, 2, 3, or 4 east, and township 10 south, of ranges 2, 3, and 4 east, in the late southeastern district in the State of Louisiana, which lands have been reserved from sale because claimed to be embraced within certain French or Spanish land grants, but which have been, or may hereafter be, decided by the courts of the United States not to be legally embraced within any such land grants claimed to have been granted by the French or Spanish Governments within the said limits, shall be restored to the public domain and shall be surveyed; and that so soon as said surveys shall have been made, all persons who have in good faith settled upon said lands within the limits of said townships at the time of the passage of this act, and who occupy the same, shall be entitled to enter the same, not exceeding 160 acres each, under the provisions of the homestead laws, and shall be admitted to make their proofs and complete their titles in the same manner as if the said reservation, because of said grants claimed, had not been made; and all lands embraced within said townships not covered by actual settlers shall be subject to entry, under the provisions of the homestead laws only, for the period of three years after said lands shall have been surveyed; and after that time all lands which are too low for settlement, and which may not have been entered for homestead settlement, shall be sold at public sale to the highest bidder for cash, in tracts not larger than 160 acres: Provided, That this right of entry shall not extend to any lands within the limits of 80 arpents in depth from the Mississippi River, nor to any confirmed land grants within the limits of said townships: And provided further, That all lands disposed of under the provisions of this act shall be subject to all existing servitudes for drainage recognized by the laws of the State of Louisiana.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendments reported by the Committee on the Public Lands were read, as follows:

After the word "only," in line 27, strike out the following:

"For the period of three years after said lands shall have been surveyed; and after that time all lands which are too low for settlement, and which may not have been entered for homestead settlement, shall be sold at public sale to the highest bidder for cash, in tracts not larger than 160 acres."

At the end of the bill add the following:

"And provided further, That neither the claimants under this bill as homesteaders nor the State of Louisiana shall be entitled to indemnity from the United States by reason of the passage hereof or of any action under it."

The amendments reported by the committee were agreed to.

Mr. GAY. I wish to offer an amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. If the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. GAY] will permit me, I desire to insert after the words "under the provisions of the homestead laws only" the words "except section 2301 thereof." That is the commutation clause.

Mr. McRAE. I hope my friend from Indiana will not insist on that amendment. Of course we all favor that provision in the general bill when it shall become a law; but until we can get some general rule established let us not have one law operating in one neighborhood and another in another, thereby creating confusion.

Mr. PAYSON. It seems to me we ought to get this in wherever we can.

Mr. GAY. I suggest to my friend from Indiana that this provision might affect very unjustly the rights of settlers. These lands have been occupied for fifty years by a harmless, innocent people.

Mr. MACDONALD. They are all occupied, are they not?

Mr. GAY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOLMAN. In view of the statement made by the gentleman from Louisiana, I will not press the amendment.

Mr. GAY. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to the bill the following:

"That the provisions of this bill shall be, and are hereby, extended to embrace all settlers upon public lands, and for the disposition of all public lands, embraced in the grant to Daniel Clark, so far as decreed invalid by the Supreme Court of the United States and the unconfirmed Conway claim."

Mr. CUTCHEON. I would like to hear some explanation of this amendment.

Mr. GAY. It has been ascertained that the original settlers on these lands were not all upon the Donaldson and Scott claim, which has recently been declared invalid, but many of them were upon the Daniel Clark grant and the Conway grant, which have also been set aside. The lands are of exactly the same character.

Mr. HOLMAN. And on the same part of the river.

Mr. GAY. This amendment is designed to protect contiguous bona fide settlers who have been there for three generations.

Mr. CUTCHEON. The gentleman's explanation is satisfactory.

The amendment of Mr. GAY was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. GAY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CANCELLATION OF RESERVATIONS ON ACCOUNT OF LIVE-OAK.

The next business under the special order was the bill (S. 196) to cancel certain reservations of lands on account of live-oak in the southwestern land district of the State of Louisiana; which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the reservation set apart by order of the President, October 21, 1845, in the southwestern land-district of the State of Louisiana, known as Pecan Island, within the following townships to wit: No. 15 south, range 1 west; No. 15 south, range 2 west; No. 16 south, range 1 west; No 15 south, range 1 east; No. 16 south, range 1 east, on account of the live-oak supposed to grow thereon, be, and are hereby, canceled and annulled: Provided, That all persons who have in good faith settled upon and made improvemens upon Pecan Island, within the limits of the said towships, at the time of the passage of this act, and who occupy the same, shall be entitled to enter the same, not exceeding 160 acres each, under the provisions of the homestead laws, and be admitted to make their proofs and complete their titles in the same manner as if the said reservations for live-oak had not been made.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. WEAVER. There should be a commutation clause inserted in the bill.

Mr. GAY. That is not at all necessary.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think some such provision should be inserted.

Mr. McRAE. The commutation clause is not necessary under the homestead law in the South. It has never been used there. They take the land for homes and keep them.

Mr. PAYSON. It can not work any injury to have it inserted. Settlers in possession who hold land under this bill can not be harmed.

Mr. McRAE. It makes them trouble for which there is no occasion at all.

Mr. PAYSON. It could be inserted in the time we are debating it.

Mr. WEAVER. Why should not all settlers be treated alike?

Mr. HOLMAN. There would be no impropriety in inserting such a provision.

Mr. PAYSON. It can not hurt anybody.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does anybody offer the amendment?

Mr. PAYSON. Yes; I move to insert, after the word "laws," the words "except section 2321 of the Revised Statutes," which is the commutation clause of the homestead law.

Mr. GAY. I am willing to accept that amendment.

There was no objection, and the amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WEAVER moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LEASING OF SCHOOL AND UNIVERSITY LANDS, WYOMING TERRITORY.

The next business under the special order was the bill (S. 1782) to authorize the leasing of the school and university lands in the Territory of Wyoming, and for other purposes; which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the county commissioners of each of the counties organized or hereafter organized in the Territory of Wyoming are hereby authorized to lease the lands devoid of timber and known mineral deposits heretofore reserved or that may hereafter be reserved for school purposes in their respective counties, in such manner as may be provided by the laws of the said Territory: Provided, That until the Legislature of the said Territory shall provide by law for the leasing of the said lands, the presidents of the several boards of the county commissioners of the said Territory shall constitute a commission that is hereby authorized to make the necessary rules and regulations for the leasing of the said lands: Provided, That such rules and regulations shall have no force and effect until they are approved by the Secretary of the Interior. The said commission shall meet at such place and time as may be designated by the governor of the said Territory.

SEC. 2. That all moneys derived from the leasing of the lands as provided by the first section of this act shall become part of the school funds of the county where such lands are situated, and shall be used for the building of schoolhouses and the support of public schools in such county, and for no other purpose.

SEC. 3. That the governor, superintendent of public instruction, and auditor of the Territory of Wyoming are hereby constituted a board, with authority to lease the lands heretofore selected, or that may hereafter be selected, for university purposes, under the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to grant lands to Dakota, Montana, Arizona, Idaho, and Wyoming, for university purposes," approved February 18, 1881, in the said Territory of Wyoming, in such manner as may be provided by the laws of the Territory of Wyoming: Provided, That until the Legislature of said Territory shall provide by law for the leasing of said university and school lands the said governor, superintendent of public instruction, and auditor are authorized, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to make the necessary rules and regulations to carry out the provisions of this section.

SEC. 4. That all moneys derived from the leasing of the said university lands, as provided by the third section of this act, shall become a part of the university fund of said Territory, and shall be used for the support of the university of Wyoming, and for no other purpose.

SEC. 5. That no lease under the provisions of this act shall be made for a term exceeding five years, and all leases shall expire within six months after the Territory is admitted as a State into the Union: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may at any time in his discretion annul any lease made under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 6. That where lands in the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, in the Territory of Wyoming, are found upon survey to be in the occupancy, and covered by the improvements of an actual pre-emption or homestead settler, or where either of them are fractional in quantity, in whole or in part, or wanting because the townships are fractional, or have been or shall hereafter be reserved for public purposes, or found to be mineral in character, other lands may be selected by an agent appointed by the governor of the Territory in lieu thereof, from the surveyed public lands within the Territory not otherwise legally claimed or appropriated at the time of selection, in accordance with the principles of adjustment prescribed by section 2276 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and upon a determination by the Interior Department that a portion of the smallest legal subdivision in a section numbered 16, or 36, in Wyoming, is mineral land, such smallest legal subdivision shall be excepted from the reservation for schools, and indemnity allowed for it in its entirety, and such subdivisions, or the portions of them remaining after segregation of the mineral lands or claims, shall be treated as other public lands of the United States.

The amendments of the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out the following proviso in section 1:

"Provided, That until the Legislature of the said Territory shall provide by law for the leasing of the said land, the presidents of the several boards of the county commissioners of the said Territory shall constitute a commission that is hereby authorized to make the necessary rules and regulations for the leasing of the said lands: Provided, That such rules and regulations shall have no force and effect until they are approved by the Secretary of the Interior. The said commission shall meet at such place and time as may be designated by the governor of the said Territory."

Also, in section 3, line 12, insert after the word "university" the words "and school."

Mr. HOLMAN. I presume there is no objection to the consideration of the bill, but I wish to have the first part of the last clause read again.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. McRAE. If it will provoke debate I will object, but otherwise I will not.

Mr. HOLMAN. It will give rise to no debate.

Mr. McRAE. I have no objection to the bill being considered on the condition that it does not give rise to a protracted debate. I have several bills I wish to have passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and the bill is before the House for consideration.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to have the first part of the last clause of the bill read again.

The last section of the bill was again read.

Mr. HOLMAN. I believe that does not go further than is provided in other cases.

Mr. CAREY. This section has been prepared at the Interior Department. They struck out the section I had drawn and substituted this in its place. It is in conformity with the law with reference to school lands.

Mr. TOOLE. I desire to offer an additional clause. It is that the provisions of this act shall extend to the other Territories of the United States.

The amendments of the committee were agreed to.

Mr. TOOLE. I move to insert in the bill the Territories of Arizona, New Mexico, Montana, Dakota, and Idaho.

Mr. WEAVER. I do not know what are the conditions of the other Territories. That would make this a large lease bill.

Mr. TOOLE. I submit it is only fair the other Territories should be included upon the same conditions.

Mr. WEAVER. I can not agree to it.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suppose the same officers are appointed in all cases.

Mr. TOOLE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOLMAN. And each of these Territories has its own superintendent of public schools?

Mr. TOOLE. Yes, all of the machinery is supplied just as in Wyoming.

Mr. WEAVER. But these other Territories ought to have brought in their bills, and have them considered by the Public Lands Committee. I object to this sort of legislation in reference to the public lands. They are being disposed of fast enough to syndicates——

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope my friend will not press this amendment.

Mr. TOOLE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to say just this: The Congress of the United States has already set an example to the Territories of the United States by passing a law that prohibits the Legislative Assemblies of the Territories from enacting any special law of any kind or character whatever. Having set that very good example, it seems to me that unless some special reason is shown in a matter of general importance like this, affecting the Territories of the United States exactly alike as this does, there is no reason why a separate bill should be passed in each case, but that the same law should apply alike to each of the Territories.

All the school lands of the United States are exactly in the same condition, and there is no permission on the part of the Territorial authorities to lease or sell them, or exercise any supervision or control over them whatever until they become States of the Union. It seems to me that they stand exactly upon the same ground, and that this provision ought to apply to all alike.

Mr. WEAVER. Still the Territories have not thought it of sufficient importance to ask Congress or the Committee on the Public Lands to consider such a proposition.

Mr. McRAE. They are asking it; they are asking it now.

Mr. TOOLE. They stand exactly upon the same basis as Wyoming.

Mr. McRAE. This provision does not take any land whatever from the Government, but it only helps to increase the school funds in the Territories.

Mr. WEAVER. It allows them to lease the lands.

Mr. McRAE. Yes, but the lands are being occupied now to a large extent, and the Territories derive no revenue from them. Now, if they have the privilege of leasing them it will add to their school funds just that much.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Now, Mr. Speaker, let me say just one word.

Mr. TOOLE. I offer that amendment.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I would like to have some member of the committee suggest any reason why Wyoming or any other Territory should be included in a provision of this character which does not embrace all of the Territories. If any gentleman can suggest a reason I would like to know it.

Mr. WEAVER. They have not seemed to want it heretofore.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. The excuse and the only excuse that is offered here, which I must be permitted to say is a very flimsy one, is that bills have not been introduced on behalf of the Territories. But it is time enough now to introduce them. The gentlemen of the committee, the chairman of the committee, or some member of the committee, ought to show a reason why they should not be included as proposed here; because if this is good for Wyoming, it is good for all of the Territories.

It seems to me that there can be no possible objection to it.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Would the provisions apply to all alike?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Yes, sir; every one of them has the same officers, the superintendent of public instruction, and have exactly the same machinery. There can be no objection on that ground.

Now our Territorial school lands are being settled upon by people who do not own the lands because they can not get them surveyed. Our public-school lands are being despoiled by people settling upon them, calling them Government lands. The county commissioners of the various counties should have a right to stop this. They should make laws to stop the settling upon the lands or the committing of depredations upon them. They are powerless now to do so.

Mr. WEAVER. All of the public lands are under the control of the General Government, and it can put a stop to it.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. But it does not do it. It has appropriated $300,000 for certain purposes, and appropriated $80,000 to make surveys, an amount so small to each mile to be surveyed that every cent of it has to be turned back into the Treasury.

Mr. WEAVER. I consider it, however, bad policy for the General Government to abandon the control of the public domain and turn it over as here proposed. The only effect of such a provision is to turn over the public lands to the cattle syndicates, building up vast corporations at the public expense, and a system which is hostile to the general policy of our land laws.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I want to say just this and in connection with the very thing the gentleman now speaks of: It becomes quite apparent to everybody in a moment who knows anything of the conditions there that the very thing he speaks of is being done to-day. They are taking possession of the school lands for the very purposes he suggests, and there is no power to stop them.

Mr. WEAVER. That we propose to regulate.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. But something ought to be paid to Territories for the use of school lands.

Mr. WEAVER. I want to be understood in this matter. The responsibility is not with me any more than any other member of the committee. The chairman of the committee is here, and other members; but let me suggest just this: we all know that these growing privileges granted in the Territories on the public domain are wholly and essentially hostile to the homestead system, and the more you extend these privileges the stronger becomes the power of these men who get control. I understand that with reference to these school lands, they are lands that can not be sold or leased by the Territories, but can be homesteaded. But after a while, when the Territories come into the Union and the land passes under the control of the State, you have powerful syndicates built up that have control of the State government and control of every acre of the lands; and they will retain the control of them, or at least are liable to do so. I think that is very objectionable legislation.

Mr. SYMES. By the report from the Committee on Territories for the admission of Territories into the Union as States it passes to them and they retain control of the school lands, and they are inhibited from disposing of them. They are made school lands for a permanent fund.

Mr. WEAVER. I understand the legal status of this land. I am not a member of the Committee on Public Lands, and if the members of that committee have no objection to this bill, I will not object to it; but it does not strike me as not being the right manner in which to accomplish the purpose sought.

Mr. McRAE. I want to say but one word. This land is scattered about, a section here and a section there; and if it were in a body there would be a great deal more force in the point made by the gentleman from Iowa. By a person taking "section 6," or "section 16," or any section, you can not make a monopoly of the land in a Territory; and I do not see any reason why these people should not raise funds by renting these lands if they desire to do so.

Mr. WEAVER. There are parties grazing lands surrounding those sections now.

Mr. McRAE. That does not interfere with anybody's rights.

Mr. MACDONALD. If there is to be further debate on this bill, I will rise for the purpose of objecting to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. CAREY. If I may be permitted one word of explanation, I do not think there will be any objection to the bill. I think the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER] has entirely misunderstood the situation in reference to this land. In the Territory which I represent the people are expending $25 annually on each scholar of school age. They are establishing a university in that Territory. The Secretary of the Interior in his letter indorses this bill. He believes this legislation is wise; and I do not believe there can possibly be any objection to this bill in reference to Wyoming.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Do you know of any situation in Wyoming that does not apply to the other Territories, and why it might not be wise legislation for them?

Mr. CAREY. I have been working on this bill practically for three years for the Territory of Wyoming, and I will not discuss what may be wise for the other Territories.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that the amendment be again reported.

The amendment of Mr. TOOLE was read, as follows:

After the word "Wyoming," insert "Arizona, Dakota, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, and Utah."

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope my friend will not insist upon that kind of legislation. The names should be inserted in the body of the bill, and before the vote is put I ask that the first section—that portion of it which embraces Wyoming—shall be reported as proposed to be amended, so as to see if the subsequent language will harmonize with the several Territories named. I apprehend that the whole bill will have to be changed.

The Clerk proceeded to report the section.

Mr. HOLMAN (interrupting the reading). That will not do at all. I suggest that the bill will have to be remodeled.

Mr. TOOLE. I withdraw the amendment I have offered.

Mr. HOLMAN. I would suggest to the gentlemen representing the other Territories that this bill be withheld for a while. I think it is bad legislation—at any rate it is not good legislation; but inasmuch as the gentlemen seem to be so anxious for this provision I will not object myself, for I do not see why the same rule should not apply to all Territories, and I shall not object to have this provision extended to the whole of the Territories named, except Washington.

Mr. KERR. I will move to strike out that section. I do not think it should be for any Territory.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That can be accomplished by voting against it.

Mr. KERR. I do not think it ought to apply anywhere.

Mr. MACDONALD. I ask that this bill be laid aside informally.

Mr. McRAE. If the gentleman in charge of this bill does not demand the previous question on its passage, I will.

Mr. CAREY. I demand the previous question on the passage of the bill.

The amendments of the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HOLMAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

KANSAS LANDS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6217) to relinquish the interest of the United States in certain lands in Kansas.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all the interest of the United States in and to the south half of the northeast quarter and the north half of the southeast quarter of section 6, township 6 south, of range 18 west, of the sixth principal meridian, in Rooks County, Kansas, is hereby relinquished to Elmore S. Stroup.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that the report may go into the RECORD.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The report (by Mr. TURNER, of Kansas) is as follows:

Your committee have had under consideration House bill No. 6217, and find the following facts: The south half of the northeast quarter and the north half of the southeast quarter of section 6, township 6, of range 18 west of the sixth principal meridian, in Kansas, was located with Supreme Court scrip K 34, sub. 2, R. and R. 71, by Elmore S. Stroup, and upon which patent issued December 20, 1881.

It further appears that at the time of making said entry the said Elmore S. Stroup was only nineteen years of age, a fact that came to his knowledge after making said proof, when he immediately deeded said land to the United States and placed said deed upon record with the register of deeds in the county in which said land is located. The Government could not accept said conveyance, and as patent has been issued by the Government to the said Elmore S. Stroup for said land, the purpose of this bill is to quiet the title of said land to the said Elmore S. Stroup. The report of the Land Commissioner upon this case is as follows:

"DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
"GENERAL LAND OFFICE.
"Washington, D. C., March 6, 1888.

"SIR: Replying to your letter of February 24, 1888, you are informed that the records of this office show the S. ½ NE. ¼ and N. ½ SE. ¼, section 6, township 6, range 18 west sixth principal meridian, Kansas, to be located with supreme court scrip K 34, sub. 2, R. and R. 71, by Elmore S. Stroup, upon patent issued December 20, 1881.

"Very respectfully,
"S. M. STOCKSLAGER,
"Acting Commissioner."

The deposition of the register of deeds of the county in which said land is located is as follows:

"STATE OF KANSAS, Rooks County, ss:

"H. A. Kinworthy, of lawful age, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says: I am register of deeds for Rooks County, Kansas, and have in my custody the records of deeds, mortgages, and so forth, of lands in said county. That page — of book —— of deeds shows a deed from Elmore S. Stroup to the United States, conveying by warranty his title to the S. ½ NE. ¼ and N. ½ SE. ¼, section 6, township 6, range 18, Rooks County, Kansas, to the United States; and that the said deed remains on record uncanceled. Said deed is dated 19th day of May, 1883, acknowledged 19th day of May, 1883, and filed for record 21st day of May, 1883.

"[SEAL.] H. A. KINWORTHY,
"Register of Deeds.

"Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of February, 1888.
"[SEAL.] F. A. CHIPMAN,
"Clerk District Court, Rooks County, Kansas."

All of which is respectfully submitted, with the recommendation that the bill be passed.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. TURNER, of Kansas, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

PURCHASERS WITHIN RAILROAD GRANTS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 9056) to protect purchasers of lands lying in the vicinity of Denver, Colo., heretofore withdrawn by the executive department of the Government as lying within the limits of certain railroad grants, and afterward held to lie without such limits.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That as to all lands lying in the vicinity of Denver, in the State of Colorado, heretofore withdrawn by the executive department of the Government for the use or benefit of the Union Pacific Railway Company, Eastern Division, and the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company, or their or either of their successors, under the construction heretofore placed by the executive department of the Government upon the act of Congress entitled "An act to authorize the transfer of lands granted to the Union Pacific Railway Company, Eastern Division, between Denver and the point of its connection with the Union Pacific Railroad, to the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company, and to expedite the completion of railroads to Denver, in the Territory of Colorado," approved March 3, 1869, construing the grant in said act mentioned to be one continuous grant west of Fort Riley, in Kansas, through Denver, Colo., to Cheyenne, Wyo., and which lands have been sold by said companies or either of them, or their or either of their successors, prior to December 9, 1887, to citizens of the United States or to persons who have declared their intention to become such citizens, the holder of the title under such purchase from the railroad company, unless he be a director or other officer of the Union Pacific Railway Company, may, upon making proof of such purpose at the proper land office, and the further proof of the time of his or, if he claimed by inheritance, his ancestor's purchase, that he or his ancestor relied in good faith upon the validity of the title of such railroad companies, and that such purchase was made for a valuable consideration, enter and pay for said lands at the ordinary Government price for like lands, and patents shall issue therefor to the holder of such title and inure to the benefit of the original purchaser and all claiming under him: Provided, that nothing herein shall be held to dispossess or determine the rights of parties who may hold adversely to each other under purchase from the railroad company: And provided further, that a mortgage or pledge to secure the payment of money shall not be considered a purchase under the provisions of this act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? The Chairs hears none.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. I would be glad to hear some explanation of this measure.

Mr. PAYSON. I reported this bill under the unanimous instruction of the committee.

Mr. McRAE. I hope time will not be occupied in discussion.

Mr. PAYSON. My explanation will not occupy more than a minute. The simple effect of this bill is that parties who are in possession of certain lands which they purchased from the Union Pacific Railway Company—some of them as early as 1869—and who have been in continuous possession since, will be allowed to repurchase the same land from the Government by paying the same price for it.

This measure is rendered necessary from this circumstance: In the early days of that railroad grant these lands were held to be railroad lands. The Commissioner of the General Land Office in 1873 so decided; and the then Acting Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Cowan, affirmed that decision on appeal. The lands were then put in the market and sold. In October or November, 1887, Mr. Muldrow, Acting Secretary of the Interior, reviewed the former decision and held that, owing to some technical difficulty (which it would take me too long to explain, and which it is not necessary to explain), these lands were not railroad lands. But in the mean time the parties who will be the beneficiaries under this bill have been in possession—some, as I have stated, since 1869. This bill gives them, if they were purchasers in good faith and not connected in any way with the railroad company, the right to buy from the Government the land they previously bought from the railroad company.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Does this apply to excess lands?

Mr. PAYSON. No, sir; it applies to lands within the granted limits; not to excess lands. The lands are only rendered valuable by reason of their proximity to the city of Denver. As I have stated, the bill has been reported unanimously. It does not give away an acre of land.

Mr. HOLMAN. I want to call the attention of the gentleman from Illinois to this point——

Mr. McRAE. I do not want to oppose this bill, but I have a suggestion to make which I hope will be acceptable. There are three little private bills on the Calendar to which there can be no objection. They were reported prior to this bill and should have had priority of consideration; but in the hope that gentlemen would get through with these other measures, I have suffered them to go on. Now, if they will agree to take up these three bills and pass them, they may then take all the time they please in the consideration of this bill. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. The inquiry I desired to make was this: My friend from Illinois [Mr. PAYSON] in the amendment which has been read used the phrase "officer of the Union Pacific Railway Company." Is that description a proper one? This corporation was in the first place known as the Kansas Pacific.

Mr. PAYSON. It is now the Union Pacific Railway Company.

Mr. HOLMAN. Does the gentleman think the phraseology of his amendment sufficient to cover the whole case?

Mr. PAYSON. There is no trouble about that. I am told that as a matter of fact none of these officers are interested in an acre of the land which will be affected by this bill. That provision has simply been inserted out of abundant caution.

Mr. HOLMAN. Of course, I insist that that shall be in.

Mr. PAYSON. That is proper.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I ask the Clerk to report again the last amendment. Some of the land to be affected by the bill is very valuable—worth a thousand dollars an acre. I think the provision ought to be well guarded.

The Clerk again read the amendment.

Mr. PAYSON. That is just as strong as it can be.

Mr. HOLMAN. It appears so.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendments reported by the Committee on the Public Lands were agreed to.

Mr. PAYSON. There is a verbal amendment which should be made in line 28. The word "claimed" should be "claim." I ask to make that correction.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, the correction will be made. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the report in this case be published in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the absence of objection, that order will be made.

The report (by Mr. PAYSON) is as follows:

By the Union Pacific Railroad acts of Congress of July 1, 1862, July 2, 1864, and July 3, 1866, a continous grant of lands was made to the Union Pacific Railway Company, Eastern Division, from Kansas City, Mo., through Denver, Colo., to Cheyenne, Wyo.; by a further act of Congress of March 3, 1869, the Union Pacific Railway Company, Eastern Division, was authorized to contract with the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company for the construction of that part of the Union Pacific Railroad between Denver and Cheyenne, and to transfer to the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company its grant of lands along that portion of its road.

The road from Kansas City to Denver was completed in accordance with the acts of Congress, and accepted by the President October 19, 1872; and the road from Denver to Cheyenne was completed in accordance with the acts of Congress, and accepted by the President May 2, 1872.

In 1873 the question was raised in the Land Department whether the act of March 3, 1869, above referred to, severed the original continuous grant from Kansas City to Cheyenne into two separate grants, one to the Union Pacific Railway Company, Eastern Division, from Kansas City to Denver, and the other to the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company, from Cheyenne to Denver, thus making two termini at Denver.

This question became important because the Union Pacific, Eastern Division, runs into Denver on a course substantially due east and west, and the Denver Pacific on a course substantially due north and south. So that if there be two grants, each terminating with a line perpendicular to the line of these roads at Denver, there would be a triangle or segment of land, lying southwest of Denver, which belongs to neither of the companies. In the two cases which arose before Land Commissioner Drummond, in 1873, to wit: Denver Pacific vs. Longan and Union Pacific vs. Hodge, Mr. Drummond decided that the act of March 3, 1869, above cited, did not sever the original continuous grant, and that the lands in the triangle belonged to the several companies. The case of the Denver Pacific vs. Longan was appealed to the Secretary of the Interior, and was affirmed by the then Acting Secretary Cowan, in 1874. (See 1 Copp's L. O., 100-101.)

Aside from the decisions last quoted the executive department of the Government has recognized the continuity of said grant both before and after the passage of the act of March 3, 1869, in the following ways:

1. When the Union Pacific Railway Company, Eastern Division, filed its map of general route, in 1860, the Department approved the same and sent to the register and receiver of the land office at Denver a plat showing the limits of the grant which included the triangle in question, and a letter withdrawing the lands in the triangle from private entry.

2. When the Denver Pacific filed its map of definite location, August 21, 1869, the Department approved the same and forwarded to the register and receiver at Denver and at Central City a diagram showing the definite limits of the grant, which diagram includes the northerly half of this triangle; and when the Kansas Pacific first filed its map of definite location, May 26, 1870, the Department approved the same and sent to the register and receiver at Denver a diagram showing the definite limits of the grant, which diagram includes the southerly half of the triangle.

3. From 1874 to December 9, 1887, the Government issued patents to the said companies and their successor to 16,740 acres of land in the triangle, in each of which patents it is recited that the said companies are entitled to the same by reason of their compliance with the acts of Congress above mentioned.

4. From the time the Union Pacific Railway Company, Eastern Division, first filed its map of general route, in 1866, the Government has at all times, both before and after the passage of the act of March 3, 1869, sold the even-numbered sections within the triangle at double minimum price, on the theory that the triangle was part of the grant to the railroad companies.

On December 9, 1887, the question of whether or not this triangle was part of the grant to said railway companies was again raised before the Secretary of the Interior, on the petition of H. R. Clise and others, asking that the Attorney-General be instructed to bring suit to set aside patents to certain of the lands in the triangle, and Acting Secretary of the Interior Muldrow, in his decision of said last mentioned date, held that said act of March 3, 1869, severed said original continuous grant, and that the triangle in question never became the property of said railroad companies, and instructed the Attorney-General to bring suit to set aside all patents issued by the Government to said railroad companies for lands lying within the triangle.

Prior to the rendition of this decision, and while the Government recognized the title of the railroad companies to these lands by the decision of the Secretary of the Interior and the numerous other ways above set out, these railroad companies sold about 38,000 acres of these lands to innocent purchasers, who were induced by the conduct of the Government to believe that the title of the railroad companies was perfect. Some of the purchases were made as early as 1869, and a large number of the purchasers have been in actual possession, cultivating and improving the lands, for ten and fifteen years; and all these lands have to be irrigated to make them productive, which could only be done at great expense. Some of these lands lie in close proximity to the city of Denver, have gone through numerous hands, and are said to have become very valuable, from $250 to $500 per acre.

Of the 38,000 acres so purchased by innocent purchasers, about 17,000 acres have been patented to the companies, and about 21,000 acres are neither patented nor certified.

The bill under consideration (H. R. 9056) is intended to protect these innocent purchasers. It permits them to purchase the lands of the Government at minimum price. It does not grant any lands to the companies, nor does it in any manner confirm or recognize any prior pretended grant to the companies, but, on the contrary, is based upon the theory that the decision of the Secretary of the Interior of December 9, 1887, is correct, and that the lands in the triangle never passed to the railroad companies.

The relief asked in this case comes within the spirit of the act of Congress of March 3, 1887, for the protection of innocent purchasers from railroad companies, but owing to the peculiar circumstances of the case, that act is not applicable.

The committee are of the opinion that the said innocent purchasers are equitably entitled to the relief granted by the bill (H. R. 9056), and therefore recommend its passage, with the following amendments:

On line 21, between the words "successors" and "to," insert the words "prior to December 9, 1887."

On line 24, between the words "company" and "may," insert the words "unless he be a director or other officer of the Union Pacific Railway Company."

On line 25, between the words "land office" and "enter," insert the words "and the further proof of the time of his, or if he claim by inheritance his ancestor's, purchase, that he or his ancestor relied in good faith upon the validity of the title of such railroad companies, and that such purchase was made for a valuable consideration."

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PAYSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

HUGH FOSTER.

The next public-land business on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 9040) to confirm the homestead entry of Hugh Foster.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That homestead entry numbered 1790, made at the United States land office at Marquette, Mich., March 22, 1879, by Hugh Foster, upon the south half the northeast quarter and north half of the southeast quarter of section 10, in township 47 north, of range 2 east, under authority of the instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to the local officers, dated July 2, 1878, and recommended for confirmation, by special act of Congress, by the Secretary of the Interior, in a decision on the case rendered November 18, 1881, be, and the same is hereby, confirmed as of the day of the date of said entry: Provided, however, That due proof of compliance with the provisions of the homestead law shall be made in the usual manner.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the report in this case be published in the RECORD.

There being no objection, it was ordered accordingly.

The report (by Mr. LAFFOON) is as follows:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was submitted House bill 9040, having had the same under consideration, and after having examined Executive Document No. 88, Forty-seventh Congress, first session, are of opinion that said bill ought to pass.

They therefore recommend the passage of said bill. Said executive document is made a part of this report.

[Senate Ex. Doc. No. 88, Forty-seventh Congress, first session.]

Message from the President of the United States, transmitting a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, of the 27th ultimo, with accompanying papers, on the subject of the confirmation of the homestead entries of certain lands in the Marquette district, Michigan, made by Hugh Foster and John Waishkey, jr.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, for the consideration of Congress, a communication of the Secretary of the Interior of the 27th ultimo, with accompanying papers, on the subject of the confirmation of the homestead entries of lands in the Marquette district, Michigan, made by Hugh Foster and John Waishkey, jr.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 3, 1882.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, January 27, 1882.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith, in duplicate, for the consideration of Congress, draught of a bill, with accompanying papers, for the confirmation of homestead entry No. 1790, made at the United States land office at Marquette, Mich., on the 22d March, 1879, by Hugh Foster. This entry was made under instructions inadvertently issued by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, when the land was in a state of reservation under the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Statutes, 516), and before it had been restored to market.

I also submit, in duplicate, draught of a bill for confirmation of homestead entry No. 1828, made May 8, 1879, at the same office, by John Waishkey, jr., under like circumstance.

Very respectfully,

S. J. KIRKWOOD, Secretary.

The PRESIDENT.

A Bill to confirm the homestead entry of Hugh Foster.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That homestead entry No. 1790, made at the United States land office at Marquette, Mich., March 22, 1879, by Hugh Foster, upon the south half of the northeast quarter and north half of the southeast quarter of section 10, in township 47 north, of range 2 east, under authority of the instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to the local officers, dated July 2, 1878, and recommended for confirmation by special act of Congress by the Secretary of the Interior in a decision on the case rendered November 18, 1881, be, and the same is hereby, confirmed, as of the day of the date of said entry: Provided, however, That due proof of compliance with the provision of the homestead law shall be made in the usual manner.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 13, 1881.

SIR: In compliance with the request contained in your letter of November 18, 1881, deciding on appeal that homestead entry No. 1790, made by Hugh Foster at the Marquette, Mich., land office, March 22, 1879, under instructions to the local officers from this office dated July 2, 1878, was invalid by reason that the land which was reserved under the second section, act of March 3, 1875, had not been restored to the public domain as therein provided for at the date of said entry, I have the honor to inclose herewith for transmission to Congress the draught of a bill confirming said homestead entry, together with accompanying papers, namely:

Copy of Commissioner's letter to local officers authorizing certain entries, July 2, 1878.

Copy of Commissioner's decision holding the homestead entry of Hugh Foster for cancellation, May 3, 1879.

Copy of Secretary's decision, November 18, 1881.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. C. McFARLAND,
Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., July 2, 1878.

GENTLEMEN: I am in receipt of a letter from Guy H. Carleton, esq., dated at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., the 21st ultimo, requesting me to advise you as to whether or not the south half of northeast quarter and northeast quarter of southeast quarter of section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, are subject to homestead entry.

In compliance with the request of Mr. Carleton, I have to state that I am in receipt of a letter under date of February 20, 1878, from the Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs, stating that there is no Indian claim to the above-described land. If upon examination of your records you find no interfering claim to said land, they will be subject to homestead or pre-emption entry by the first legal applicant.

Very respectfully,

J. A. WILLIAMSON, Commissioner.

REGISTER AND RECEIVER,
Marquette, Mich.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., May 3, 1879.

GENTLEMEN: Homestead entry No. 1790, March 22, 1879, in the name of Hugh Foster, for the north half of southeast quarter and south half of northeast quarter, section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, is this day held for cancellation for the reason that the land embraced therein is not subject to entry.

On the section in question, although not embraced in the reservation, certain Indians had made selections of land, and section 2 of the act approved March 3, 1875, provides as follows:

"That all Indians who have settled upon and made improvements on section 10, in township 47 north, range 2 east, and section 24, in township 47 north, range 3 west, Michigan, shall be permitted to enter not exceeding 80 acres each, at the minimum price of land, upon making proof of such settlement and improvement before the register of the land-office at Marquette, Mich.; and when said entries shall have been completed in accordance herewith, the remaining lands embraced within the limits of said sections shall be restored to market."

In the office circular of March 18, 1875, promulgating the act above referred to, the local officers were instructed to treat the land embraced in the two sections as reserved from any other disposal than that for which the act provides, and at the expiration of one year from its passage—which was considered ample time for the Indians to avail themselves of the provisions thereof—the register and receiver were directed to report any vacant tracts remaining in said sections 10 and 24 for restoration to market.

No report appears to have been made by the local officers, and the lands have not been restored to market.

You will inform Mr. Foster of the above decision, and allow him sixty days within which to appeal, and in the event of the cancellation of his entry he will be allowed to make a new one, with credit for fee and commissions already paid.

You will make an investigation, first notifying the United States Indian agent for the tribe to which said Indians belong, in order to ascertain whether any Indian claims exist upon said lands, as contemplated by the act, and report result of such investigation to this office, in order that any vacant lands remaining may be restored to market.

Very respectfully,

J. M. ARMSTRONG,
Acting Commissioner.

REGISTER and RECEIVER,
Marquette, Mich.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, November 18, 1881.

SIR: I have considered the appeal of Hugh Foster from your decision of May 3, 1879, holding for cancellation his homestead entry of March 22, 1879, upon the north half of the southeast quarter and the south half of the northeast quarter of section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, Marquette, Mich., because at the date of said entry said lands were reserved from any other disposal than that provided by the second section of the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stats., 516), which provides that all Indians who have settled upon and made improvements on said section 10, and other sections therein named, shall be permitted to enter not exceeding 80 acres each, upon making due proof therefor, "and when said entries shall have been completed in accordance herewith the remaining lands embraced within the limits of said sections shall be restored to market."

Your circular of March 18, 1875, under this act, required the local officers, at the expiration of one year from its passage, to report any tracts which might then be vacant, tho they might be restored to market. If such report has been made, said lands have not yet been restored.

It appears, however, that on July 2, 1878, your office advised the local office that if no interfering claim to the lands named in said section 2 appeared on their records they would be subject to filing and entry under the pre-emption and homestead laws by the first legal applicant therefor. These instructions, as you state in your letter of May 3, 1879, were not intended to change the rule in respect to the restoration of lands to market, but were inadvertently issued. They were, nevertheless, in force at the date of Foster's entry, who appears to have made the same in virtue thereof. It does not appear to what extent, if any, he has improved the tract; but whether much or little he should not suffer in his rights or property from the inadvertency of your office.

I am neither disposed to waive the general rule respecting the restoration of lands to market, which has been in force for many years, nor to spare suitable action for relief of Mr. Foster. I therefore request you to prepare a bill for submission to Congress which may secure his rights and validate his entry as of the day of the date thereof.

The papers transmitted with your letter of July 19, 1881, are herewith returned.

Very respectfully,

S. J. KIRKWOOD, Secretary.

THE COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 16, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith, for transmission to Congress, the draught of a bill confirming homestead entry No. 1828, for the south half of the southeast quarter and south half of the southwest quarter of section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, Michigan, made May 8, 1879, by John Waishkey, jr., for reasons set forth in my letter C, of the 14th instant, to you on said subject.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. C. MCFARLAND,
Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

A bill to confirm the homestead entry of John Waishkey, jr.

Be it enacted, etc., That homestead entry numbered 1828, made at the United States land office at Marquette, Mich., May 8, 1879, by John Waishkey, jr., upon the south half of the southeast quarter and south half of the southwest quarter of section 10, in township 47 north, of range 2 east, under authority of the instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated July 2, 1878, be, and the same is hereby, confirmed as of the day of the date of said entry: Provided, however, That due proof of compliance with the provisions of the homestead law shall be made in the usual manner.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 14, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to hereby recommend that the homestead entry No. 1828, for the south half of the southeast quarter and south half of the southwest quarter of section 10, township 47 north, of range 2 east, made by John Waishkey, jr., at the Marquette, Mich., district land office, May 8, 1879, and held for cancellation September 16, 1879, on the same ground that homestead entry No. 1790 was so held, be incorporated in the bill confirming homestead entry No. 1790, the draught of which bill was inclosed in my letter C to you of the 13th instant, for transmission to Congress. The land covered by said entry No. 1828 lies in the same section, township, and range as that covered by homestead entry No. 1790, and I think Mr. Waishkey is entitled to the same relief that is sought in behalf of Mr. Foster by the bill before mentioned.

I inclose herewith a copy of the letter of September 16, 1879, holding entry No. 1828 for cancellation.

Very respectfully, you obedient servant,

N. C. MCFARLAND, Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., September 16, 1879.

GENTLEMEN: Referring to my letter of May 3, 1879, holding for cancellation homestead entry No. 1790, in the name of Hugh Foster, covering the north half of the southeast quarter and south half of the northeast quarter of section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, for reason therein stated, I am in receipt of your letter of the 13th ultimo, inclosing one from Foster's attorney relative thereto.

You cite as your authority for allowing said entry a letter from this office of July 2, 1878, stating that the tracts above mentioned were subject to homestead entry, etc. The letter referred to was inadvertently written of the tenor that it was, as the tracts were not subject to such entry under the law.

Section 2 of the act of March 3, 1875, quoted in my letter of May 3 last, is specific in its provisions, and the land embraced in section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, and section 24, township 47 north, range 3 west, is not subject to entry or location, except by Indians, as therein provided for, until the same shall have been restored to market. The subsequent act of May 23, 1876, has reference only to lands formerly within the Indian reservation, and does not apply to the sections mentioned above.

Homestead entry No. 1823, covering the south half of the southeast quarter and south half of the southwest quarter of section 10, township 47, range 2 east, in the name of John Waishkey, jr., is similarly situated in this respect with that of Hugh Foster, and is also this day held for cancellation for reasons stated at length in my letter of May 3, 1879, with regard to the latter.

You will inform the parties to the entries above, allow the usual time for appeal, and report action in the premises to this office.

You will carry out the instructions contained in the last paragraph of my letter of May 3, last, relative to investigating whether any Indian claims exist in said sections, in order that, if so, they may be adjusted, and thereafter the remaining lands restored to market, as contemplated in the act of March 3, 1875.

In case you find that your predecessors have made any report bearing on the matter, communicate the fact to this office, giving the date of such report.

Very respectfully,

J. M. ARMSTRONG,
Acting Commissioner.

REGISTER AND RECEIVER,
Marquette, Mich.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MCRAE moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

PATENT TO CERTAIN LAND IN ARKANSAS.

The next public-land business on the Calendar was the bill (S. 1082) to authorize the issuance of patent to certain land in Arkansas.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the location made by Samuel J. Johnson for the north half of southwest quarter of section 17, in township 12 north, of range 9 west, in Arkansas, containing 80 acres, on the 4th of March, A. D. 1861, with military bounty land-warrant No. 32256, for 80 acres, under act of March 3, A. D. 1855, in the name of Achilles Ferrill or Terrill, be, and the same is hereby, confirmed, and patent shall issue, notwithstanding the loss of said warrant.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I would like to hear a brief explanation.

Mr. WHEELER. By the examination of very voluminous evidence the committee found that the land-warrant in this case was lost, and that the location of the warrant was the result of accident or mistake, for which the owner of the warrant could not be held responsible.

Mr. HOLMAN. It was lost in the Land Office.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows:

Add to the bill the following:

"Provided, That nothing herein contained shall prejudice adverse rights, and that, should conflicting claims be presented, the rights of the claimants shall be adjudicated by the Department as in other cases."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading, was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WHEELER moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

WILLIAM GAFFER AND OTHERS.

The next public-land business on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 9234) for the relief of William Gaffer and his legal representatives and assigns.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the entry of Samuel Gaffer, under date of March 24, in the year 1864, at Winnebago City, Minn., for the northwest quarter of section No. 20, township No. 104 north, of range 26 west, of the fifth principal meridian, and the subsequent final proof of the same by his son William Gaffer (as the son of said Samuel Gaffer, deceased), be, and the same hereby is, ratified, confirmed, and declared valid; and the President is hereby authorized and directed to issue, in due form, a patent for said land to the said William Gaffer, which patent shall operate as and be a conveyance of said land to him and his legal representatives or assigns.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. MACDONALD. Since this bill was reported by the Committee on Public Lands, an amendment has been agreed upon by my colleague [Mr. LIND] and myself, in consequence of the receipt of certain communications which led us to believe it necessary to adopt this amendment as a precautionary measure against doing injustice to any person. I ask that the amendment be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the word "to," in line 12, and insert the following:

"The district judge of the sixth judicial district of the State of Minnesota, which patent shall operate as, and be a conveyance of said land to such judge in trust for the use and benefit of the person or persons equitably entitled to said land or any part thereof.

"SEC. 2. That upon the issuance of such patent any person interested in said land may make application to the judge of said court; and said judge shall thereupon issue a citation citing all parties interested to appear before him on the first day of the term at the next ensuing general term of the district court in and for the county in which said land is located, and then and there establish his claim to said land or any part thereof, which citation shall be served in such manner as the judge of the said court shall direct. That on the return-day of said citation, or at such other time as the judge may fix, the several persons cited interested in said land shall adduce and submit the evidence in support of their respective claims thereto; and the judge of said court shall thereupon award to each or any of said claimants such portion of said land as he is in equity and good conscience entitled to; and such award shall be final and conclusive, and shall be carried into effect by such judge by executing conveyances in conformity therewith to the parties adjudged to be entitled to said land or a portion thereof."

Mr. PAYSON. This seems a strange precedent. I do not myself, as a member of the House of Representatives, like that kind of legislation. I never before heard of a measure looking to the issue of a patent from the General Government to the judge of a court for him to handle the title and transmit it to such persons as he might think equitably entitled to it. It is a rather odd piece of legislation. I do not care to object to it; but I do not want to go upon record as favoring that kind of legislation.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish it to be understood this bill does not come from the Committee on the Public Lands. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MACDONALD] is responsible for it.

Mr. MACDONALD. It is right, and the gentleman from Minnesota is willing to be responsible for it.

The amendment was agreed to, and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MACDONALD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

REVOCATION OF WITHDRAWAL OF LANDS.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to present a bill from the committee, which came to us on reference of a communication of the Secretary of the Interior. It is a measure recommended by him.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act to provide for the revocation of the withdrawal of lands made for the benefit of certain railroads, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5 of an act entitled "An act for a grant of lands to the State of Iowa, in alternate sections, to aid in the construction of a railroad in said State," approved May 12, 1864, and section 7 of an act entitled "An act extending the time for the completion of certain land-grant railroads in the States of Minnesota and Iowa, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1865, and also section 5 of an act entitled "An act making an additional grant of lands to the State of Minnesota in alternate sections, to aid in the construction of railroads in said State," approved July 4, 1866, so far as said sections are applicable to lands embraced within the indemnity limits of said grants, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

SEC. 2. That the provisions of section 4 of an act approved June 2, 1864, and entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act making a grant of lands to the State of Iowa, in alternate sections, to aid in the construction of certain railroads in said State,' approved May 15, 1856," be and the same are hereby repealed, so far as they require the Secretary of the Interior to reserve any lands but the odd sections within the primary, or 6 miles granted limits of the roads mentioned in said act of June 2, 1864, or the act to which the same is amendatory; and all withdrawals of lands within indemnity limits heretofore made for the benefit of any road or roads, under or by virtue of said grants or any of them, and any reservations of lands made under said provisions of the act of June 2, 1864, shall be revoked, and the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to restore said lands to settlement and entry, after affording due opportunity, by such notice as he may consider proper to give to claimants under said grants, or any of them, to show cause why said restoration should not be made.

SEC. 3. That whenever, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior, a grant of lands heretofore made by the United States to aid in the construction of any rail or wagon road, canal, or other work of internal improvement, has been adjusted, and he deems it advisable that said adjustment should be finally closed on the books of the Land Office, he shall cause such notice to be given, by advertisement or otherwise, as may seem to him proper, warning parties interested to come forward within three months and show cause why such adjustment should not be at once closed.

If a proper showing be made, he shall, as speedily as may be, determine the matters involved, awarding to said parties whatever they may be entitled to, and thereupon, or if no such showing be made, he shall at once direct the Commissioner of the General Land Office to close finally the adjustment of said grant, and the same shall not thereafter be reopened. And after the closing of any such adjustment, the Secretary shall revoke all withdrawals theretofore made for such grant, and restore to settlement and entry, under the homestead laws, all public lands withdrawn thereunder remaining undisposed of.

Mr. HOLMAN. The changes made by the committee make it more imperative. With the consent of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PAYSON] and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MACDONALD], who are members of the subcommittee, I will not press that measure to-night.

Mr. PAYSON. It is a good measure now.

Mr. HOLMAN. Very well; let it be acted on with a motion to reconsider entered and pending.

Several MEMBERS. Let the report of the committee be read.

Mr. HOLMAN. I withdraw the report. It is a privileged matter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill is not before the House.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WHEELER. I ask to call up the bill (S. 283) to amend sections 2474 and 2475 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, setting apart a certain tract of land lying near the headwaters of the Yellowstone River as a public park.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This is not included in the special order for this evening's session.

Mr. WHEELER. This is reported from the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. HERMANN. Let me get in and pass a bill (H. R. 1176) providing for the sale of certain mineral lands to aliens.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There is only one minute remaining.

Mr. WHEELER. It is impossible to pass it in that time.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Is it necessary to move reconsideration of the votes passing bills to-night?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That has been done in each case.

The hour of 10 o'clock p. m. having arrived, the Speaker pro tempore adjourned the House, according to order, until 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

PRIVATE BILLS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills of the following titles were introduced and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. E. P. ALLEN: A bill (H. R. 10969) granting a pension to Clara S. Coleman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10970) to place the name of George R. Williams on the pension-roll—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHEADLE: A bill (H. R. 10971) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay David H. Olive—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10972) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to donate four cannon to the Lafayette (Ind.) Soldiers and Sailors' Monument Association—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. CHIPMAN: A bill (H. R. 10973) for the relief of Florence Griffin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DAVIS: A bill (H. R. 10974) to increase the pension of James Brady—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GEST: A bill (H. R. 10975) granting a pension to John H. Starr—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10976) granting a pension to William L. Wilson—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10977) granting a pension to John J. Brown—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HERMANN: A bill (H. R. 10978) for the relief of M. S. Hellman—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McCORMICK: A bill (H. R. 10979) for the relief of Uriah L. Davis—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. McMILLIN: A bill (H. R. 10980) for the relief of Willis Cornwell—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MERRIMAN: A bill (H. R. 10981) granting an increase of pension to Augusta B. Bradley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHIVELY: A bill (H. R. 10982) granting a pension to Joseph H. Heiser—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10983) increasing the pension of John Akers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STONE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 10984) to place on the roll of Company B, Fifteenth Regiment Kansas Cavalry, the name of William A. Wilson—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BOUND: Petition of citizens of Trevorton, Pa., in favor of House bill No. 8716—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. CHEADLE: Petition of Riley Sanders and 81 others, voters of Monroe County, Indiana, for protection to wool—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, sundry petitions of citizens and soldiers, for restoration of arrears of pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of citizens of Kokomo, Ind., against reduction of tariff on window-glass—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Jeremiah McCool, for relief—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CHIPMAN: Joint resolution to authorize the Secretary of War to cause a survey and report to be made of the practicability and necessity of a winter bridge across the Detroit River—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, petition of Margaret Bolio, of Detroit, Mich., for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COMPTON: A resolution authorizing the commissioners of the District of Columbia to have Pennsylvania avenue and Massachusetts avenue east surveyed and platted—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. COWLES: Petition of Adam Staley, of Wilkes County, North Carolina, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CUTCHEON: Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to grant leave of absence to Frederick S. Strong, Fourth United States Artillery—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. R. H. M. DAVIDSON: Petition of H. L. Knight and 170 others, of King Wylly and 225 others, and of William A. Morrison and 157 others, citizens of Florida, for a bill donating Fort Brooke military reservation at Tampa, Fla., for free schools and other purposes—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. GEST: Affidavits in the pension claims of John H. Starr, of William L. Wilson, and of John Brown—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. D. B. HENDERSON: Petition of A. E. House and others, citizens of Delaware County, Iowa, for certain amendments to the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. HOUK: Petition of J. R. Harrison, and of administrator of James Evans, of Jefferson County, Tennessee, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MORSE: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Massachusetts, for a prohibitory constitutional amendment—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: Petition of administrator of Henry Alley, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ROGERS: Petition of Olive Coppock, of Saline County, and of Jennie Cope, of Garland County, Arkansas, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HENRY SMITH: Petition of Augustus H. F. Hien, for payment of war claim—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. J. D. STEWART: Petition of merchants, business men, and prominent citizens of Richmond, Va., for an appropriation in behalf of the National Colored Exposition—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, petition of George Coal, of Clayton County, Georgia, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. SYMES: Petition of citizens of Colorado, for amendments to the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, memorial of Luke Phillips and 59 others, of Gunnison, Colo., for certain amendments to the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Colorado, for a prohibitory constitutional amendment—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TAULBEE: Petition and proof to accompany bill for the relief of Joseph McSwain—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. VOORHEES: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of East and of West Washington Territory, for a prohibitory constitutional amendment—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. WALKER: Petition of L. P. Ruff, of Jackson, Mo., for repeal of duty on dental instruments—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WARNER: Petition of J. E. Crozier, and of O. A. Jones, of Missouri, for reduction of duty on dental instruments, etc.—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WHITTHORNE: Petition of Eleanor W. McKisrack, of Maury County, Tennessee, for reference of her claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of heir of John G. Tarkington, of Hickman County, Tennessee, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WILKINSON: Petition of Francis Massich, of William Golding, and of heirs of Adele Lanaux, of Louisiana, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. THOMAS WILSON: Petition of Typographical Union No. 42, of Minneapolis, Minn., in favor of international copyright bill—to the Committee on Patents.

The following petitions for the more effectual protection of agriculture, by means of certain import duties, were received and severally referred to the Committee on Ways and Means:

By Mr. LAIDLAW: Of citizens of Franklinville, N. Y.

By Mr. SYMES: Of citizens of Colorado.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, July 25, 1888.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a petition of citizens of Ohio, praying for the adoption of certain amendments to the interstate-commerce law; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. MANDERSON presented a petition of citizens of Brown County, Nebraska, praying for the passage of certain amendments of the interstate-commerce law; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. VANCE presented a petition of citizens of Wilson County, North Carolina, praying for an amendment of the interstate-commerce law; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. PLUMB presented the petition of William Edgerton and 35 other citizens of the Third Congressional district of Kansas, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. KENNA presented a petition of the board of commissioners of Ohio County, West Virginia, asking for an appropriation by Congress for the restoration of bridges and the repair of the national road recently destroyed by storm and flood; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3902) for the relief of Sophia B. Moore, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 9263) granting an increase of pension to Abraham J. Buckles;

A bill (H. R. 9830) for the relief of Lachlan H. McIntosh; and

A bill (H. R. 2190) granting a pension to Jane Smallridge.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom were referred the following bills, asked to be discharged from their further consideration, and that they be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs; which was agreed to:

A bill (S. 952) for the relief of A. W. Hager; and

A bill (S. 2055) for the relief of Mrs. Catherine E. Whitall.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1981) to provide for the erection of a public building for the use of the post-office and other Government offices at the city of Muskegon, in the State of Michigan, reported it without amendment.

Mr. ALLISON, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3187) making an appropriation of $150,000 to enable A. de Bausset to build an air-ship to convey passengers and freight through the air, and for other purposes, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce; which was agreed to.

Mr. BLAIR, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 5155) granting a pension to John S. Bryant; and

A bill (H. R. 9363) granting a pension to Edwin J. Godfrey.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 320) for the relief of John D. Adams, reported it with amendments.

JOHN W. KING.

Mr. FAULKNER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1008) for the relief of John W. King, of Warren County, in the State of Mississippi, reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the bill (S. 1008) entitled "A bill for the relief of John W. King," now pending in the Senate, together with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act approved March 3, 1883, and an act entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," approved March 3, 1887, to find and report the facts bearing upon the merits of the claim, including the loyalty of the claimant, and all facts bearing upon the question of laches and as to whether the bar of the statute of limitations ought in justice to the claimant to be waived.

REUBEN RAGLAND.

Mr. FAULKNER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1703) for the relief of Reuben Ragland, reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the bill (S. 1703) entitled "A bill for the relief of Reuben Ragland," now pending in the Senate, together with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act approved March 3, 1883, and an act entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," approved March 3, 1887, to find and report to the Senate the facts bearing upon the merits of the claim, including the loyalty of the claimant and all other facts contemplated by the provisions of said act.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. FAULKNER introduced a bill (S. 3375) to create a board of audit to adjust all claims for special damages to real estate by reason of public improvements in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. DANIEL (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3376) making an appropriation for the purchase of portraits of former Secretaries of the Navy; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Library.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 3377) granting a pension to Margaret Ann Beebe; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HISCOCK introduced a bill (S. 3378) to grant pensions for service in the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps of the United States during the war against rebellion; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. McPHERSON introduced a bill (S. 3379) in regard to a monumental column to commemorate the battle of Princeton, and appropriating $30,000; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Library.

Mr. CAMERON introduced a bill (S. 3380) for the relief of William Brice & Co. and others; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3381) for the erection of a public building at Allentown, Pa.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. HAMPTON introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 100) providing for the adjustment of the amount due to the State of South Carolina for the rent of the Citadel Academy; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. MITCHELL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PLUMB submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 2952) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies taken and used by the United States Army, as reported by the Court of Claims, under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1883, known as the Bowman act; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. EVARTS. I ask that the following order be made:

Ordered, That William Burnett have leave to withdraw his petition and accompanying papers from the files of the Senate.

These are papers now before the Library Committee, not relating to public affairs of any importance, and I ask that they may be immediately withdrawn.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The order will be made, subject to the rules.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

Mr. CULLOM submitted the following resolution; which was read:

Whereas it is publicly announced that the Minneapolis, Sault Ste Marie and

Atlantic Railway Company, a line running from Minneapolis to Sault Ste Marie, has passed under the control and ownership of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, or to the directors of said Canadian Pacific Railway Company acting for and in its interest; and

Whereas it is also alleged that the control of the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Railway, a line running from Duluth to Sault Ste Marie, has also passed into the control of said Canadian Pacific Railway Company, or to the directors of said Canadian Pacific Railway Company acting for and in its interests; and

Whereas said two lines of railway control all the approaches to the bridge over the St. Mary's River on the boundary line between the United States and Canada, the ownership of which bridge is also alleged to be in the said Canadian Pacific Railway Company; and

Whereas said Canadian Pacific Railway Company owns the only line reaching said Sault Ste Marie from the Canadian side; and by virtue of the monopoly of the ownership of the American lines controlling the approaches to said bridge, and of the ownership of the said bridge, said Canadian Pacific Railway Company, it is alleged is enabled in effect to ignore and defeat the operations of the interstate-commerce law in letter and in spirit; and

Whereas said Canadian Pacific Railway Company is not only a foreign corporation, but one built wholly by and operated in the interest of a foreign government; and the money used in the purchase and control of said American lines, it is alleged, is furnished either directly by said government, or obtained by its credit, and is used as above recited: Therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee on Interstate Commerce be, and is hereby, directed to inquire into the matters hereinbefore referred to, and as to whether any legislation is necessary to protect the interests of the people of the United States, and to prevent the diversion of commerce from its natural and legitimate channels, and to prevent the monopolizing of traffic by a foreign corporation; and to report to the Senate by bill, or otherwise.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. GORMAN. I ask that the resolution may lie over until to-morrow morning. I wish to prepare an amendment to be offered to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will lie over under the rule, and be printed.

PRIVILEGES OF THE FLOOR.

Mr. HOAR. I move the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the rules of the Senate be so amended as to add to the list of persons entitled to the privilege of the floor ex-Speakers of the House of Representatives of the United States.

I think there will be no objection to the passage of the resolution. It corrects what is manifestly an oversight in the rules.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. PLATT. Of course I have no objection to extending the privileges of the floor in this manner, but I think that all resolutions which look to the extension of the privileges of the floor ought to go to the Committee on Rules, because if we pass one resolution without such a reference it would be discourteous not to pass another which somebody might offer at some future time.

Mr. HOAR. It does not strike me that that can by any possibility apply to this case. It is to correct a mere oversight. This high officer, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, has always been ranked with the Vice-President of the United States. Usually he is spoken of as the second officer in the Government, and to omit him from those entitled to our floor is a clear oversight. A gentleman who had filled the high office of Speaker of the House of Representatives was at the door of the Senate a few days ago, and I was very much mortified on finding that the rules did not permit me to bring him on the floor.

I hope my honorable friend from Connecticut will in this case—it being so absolutely plain and clear—not insist on a reference. It would involve a special meeting of the Committee on Rules, taking those Senators from their avocations on the floor of the Senate, and taking the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH], the chairman of that committee, from the Committee on Finance. I think it is a matter of which the Senate can judge.

Mr. PLATT. I will not say that the suggestions of the Senator from Massachusetts have not convinced me; but I think that I am convinced against my will, and am of the same opinion still. However, I will not object to the consideration of the resolution nor ask to have it referred to the Committee on Rules. I think we are in great danger, if such resolutions are not referred to the committee, of some time having the matter enlarged in a way which we shall be sorry for afterwards. I think there is no earthly objection to passing this resolution.

Mr. HARRIS. I quite agree with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT]. It is a very unsafe method to amend the rules without consideration. But if the mover of the resolution will allow it to be referred, I think the Committee on Rules can report it back in thirty minutes from the floor.

Mr. HOAR. I have no objection to that course. My sole reason in not referring it was a regard for the convenience of the members of that committee. I supposed it would probably put a mortgage on the time of those gentlemen for some morning to get a meeting.

Mr. HARRIS. The committee is composed of only five members, and I suppose the five can get together and report the resolution back this morning. There can be no objection to the resolution. It would be a very bad precedent to amend the rules without a reference to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. HOAR. Very well, let it take that course.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on Rules.

BRIGHTWOOD AVENUE.

Mr. PLUMB submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved, That the commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and hereby are, directed to report whether the Seventh street road, now called Brightwood avenue, has not been reduced in width, and if so, by what authority, and what steps, if any, are necessary to restore it to its original width.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House insisted upon its amendment to the bill (S. 1856) to establish a life-saving station on the Atlantic coast between Indian River Inlet, Delaware, and Ocean City, Md., agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. TARSNEY, Mr. CLARDY, and Mr. BROWNE, managers at the conference on its part.

The message also announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 2116) to provide aid to State homes for the support of disabled soldiers and sailors of the United States, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed Mr. TOWNSHEND, Mr. MAISH, and Mr. LAIRD, managers at the conference on its part.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills with amendments; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (S. 196) to cancel certain reservations of lands on account of live oak in the Southwestern land district of the State of Louisiana;

A bill (S. 1086) to authorize the issuance of patent to certain land in Arkansas; and

A bill (S. 1732) to authorize the leasing of the school and university lands in the Territory of Wyoming, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 558) for the relief of certain settlers upon the school lands of Washington Territory;

A bill (S. 1709) to provide for the issue of patents to certain persons for donation claims under the act approved September 27, 1850, commonly known as the donation law;

A bill (S. 1870) granting the use of certain lands in Pierce County, Washington Territory, to the city of Tacoma for the purposes of a public park;

A bill (S. 2845) granting to the corporate authorities of the city of Tuscaloosa, in the State of Alabama, all the right, title, and interest of the United States to fractional sections 22 and 15, lying south of the Black Warrior River, in township 21 and range 10 west; and

A bill (S. 3365) for the erection of a public building in the city of Chicago to be used as an appraiser's warehouse and other public purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 6264) to incorporate the Washington and Highlands Street Railway Company of the District of Columbia; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 8354) to authorize the construction and maintenance of a pile bridge over the Halifax River at Daytona, Volusia County, Florida;

A bill (H. R. 9512) for the erection of a public building at Brownsville, Tex.; and

A bill (H. R. 9611) to authorize the Macon, Tuscaloosa and Birmingham Railroad Company to build a bridge across the Black Warrior River, in Alabama.

PRIVILEGES OF THE FLOOR.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there further morning business?

Mr. HARRIS. Having seen a majority of the Committee on Rules, and being authorized by each of them, I report back the resolution submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], and I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that it be now considered.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the rules of the Senate be so amended as to add to the list of persons entitled to the privileges of the floor ex-Speakers of the House of Representatives of the United States.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further morning business that order is closed.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10556) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill having been reported from the Committee of the Whole to the Senate, the question recurs upon the first reserved amendment, which will be stated.

Mr. RANSOM. I ask the Senator from Maine if he pleases to give way to me for a minute while I call up a bill which I know will give rise to no debate. If it does I shall withdraw it immediately.

Mr. HALE. I am very desirous to get the naval appropriation bill through speedily. If the Senator has a bill which will take no time whatever, I shall not object to its consideration.

Mr. RANSOM. If it takes any time I shall withdraw it.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT STATESVILLE, N. C.

Mr. RANSOM. I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be informally laid aside to enable me to call up the bill (H. R. 1705) to provide for the erection of a public building at Statesville, N. C.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

"JOSEPHINE" AND "M. C. UPPER."

Mr. PALMER. I ask the Senator from Maine to kindly yield to me for a moment that I may ask the Senate to take up for consideration Senate bill 2197.

Mr. HALE. Will it involve any debate whatever?

Mr. PALMER. If it does I shall not press it. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2197) empowering and directing the Commissioner of Navigation to register and enroll as American vessels certain sailing vessels of foreign construction, repaired in the port of Cleveland, Ohio, and named the Josephine and M. C. Upper, respectively.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. HALE. I did not catch the reading of the bill. Is this a case of foreign vessels repaired under the statute?

Mr. PALMER. It is.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

APPRAISERS' WAREHOUSE IN NEW YORK.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask the Senator from Maine, who seems to be in a good humor this morning, to yield to me for the purpose of enabling me to ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of House bill 1661.

Mr. HALE. Will it involve debate?

Mr. SPOONER. If there is debate I shall withdraw the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The title of the bill will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 1661) for the erection of an appraisers' warehouse in the city of New York, and for other purposes.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 4, after the word "purchase," to insert "or acquire by condemnation;" so as to read:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase or acquire by condemnation a site, and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious fire-proof building for the use of the United States appraiser, and for other Government uses, at the city of New York, in the State of New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 9, after the word "site," to strike out the word "purchased;" so as to read:

The site shall embrace an area sufficient, in the opinion of said Secretary, for the purposes above mentioned.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 15, after the word "site," to strike out the words "when purchased;" so as to read:

And the building to be erected on the said site shall be plain and without porticos, towers, or needless ornamentation, but shall contain the necessary accommodations and appliances for an appraisers' warehouse, sufficient to insure the examination and appraisal of imported merchandise with facility and dispatch, and shall not exceed in cost the sum of $650,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 4, after the word "purchase," to insert "or acquire by condemnation;" so as to read:

SEC. 2. That the said Secretary is hereby further authorized and directed, in his discretion (in lieu and stead of the purchase of a site for an appraisers' warehouse only), to purchase, or acquire by condemnation, a site embracing an area sufficient for the purposes mentioned in this section for the erection of a new custom-house building, in addition to said appraiser's warehouse.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 15, before the word "dollars," to strike out "one million five hundred thousand" and insert "three million;" so as to read:

Or the said Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, purchase two sites in the vicinity of each other in said city of New York, suitable for both of said purposes of the 'appraisers' store-house and custom-house; and then and in that event the said single site for custom-house and appraisers' warehouse as aforesaid, or two sites in the vicinity of each other, as the case may be, shall not exceed in cost the sum of $3,000,000, which sum, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated for the purpose, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated (in lieu and stead of the sum of $850,000 hereinbefore appropriated).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 22, after the word "purchased," to insert "or acquired;" so as to read:

And is to be available only in case the said single site for both custom-house and appraisers' warehouse, or two sites in the vicinity of each other, shall be purchased or acquired as herein set forth.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, line 1, after the word "purchase," to insert "or acquisition;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 4. That in case of the purchase or acquisition of a single site for both custom-house and appraisers' warehouse, or two sites in the vicinity of each other, as provided in section 2 of this act, then the appropriation of $650,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the erection of an appraisers' warehouse, shall be available for the purpose, in like manner as provided in section 1 of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further amendment to the bill as in Committee of the Whole, it will be reported to the Senate.

Mr. BECK. Before that is done I should like very much to hear some explanation of it. Has there been a site selected?

Mr. SPOONER. The bill authorizes the selection by the Secretary of the Treasury of a site.

Mr. BECK. So I understand. Is there any suggestion from any quarter as to where it is likely to be located, or what is to be done with the present custom-house building?

Mr. SPOONER. That is left entirely to the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, as he desired it should be.

There is accompanying the bill a letter from him stating that the present accommodations in the city of New York are entirely inadequate. The necessity for the purchase of such a site is too plain for debate.

Mr. BECK. There is no doubt about the appraisers' office being altogether inadequate, and there is no doubt it is in the wrong place, three-quarters of a mile from the custom-house; but I do not think I ever saw such a bill brought here which gave no intimation to Congress where the building was going to be located, and whether the location would suit public convenience, where all is to be left to one man.

The bill proposes to appropriate $3,000,000, it being an increase from a million and a half, as passed by the House, to three millions; but unless we know something about it before the work is commenced that will not be enough, and if we get it done for $10,000,000 we shall be lucky. It may be all right, but I do not believe it is.

Mr. MCPHERSON. If the Senate will bear with me a moment, I will say that the Senator from Kentucky must see how obviously wrong and simple it would be to undertake to locate in the bill at any particular point this great building, because, as a matter of course, the property would cost double what it otherwise would if the matter were not left to the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury. The Senator from Kentucky I think was present in committee last year, in fact I know he was, and saw the utter impossibility of transacting the business in that great appraisers' office in New York with any degree of economy, or with any degree of comfort or dispatch. I am told that the truckmen who truck goods to the appraisers' office sometimes are compelled to wait four or five hours before they can discharge goods at the appraisers' stores, because of the multitude of business which is transacted there and the want of accommodations.

The custom-house building, which is located away down town, I suppose can be sold to-day for as much money as it would cost to build a new custom-house and appraisers' stores and all the buildings necessary for the proper and well-accommodated business of the customs department in New York. But as to designating any particular place where it shall be located, the Secretary of the Treasury would certainly consult the convenience of the people of that city who had business with the custom-house.

Surely something should be done and should be done at once toward relieving the distress, so to speak, of the business community of New York in their attempt to do business with the custom-house. I hope that the bill will pass in some form.

Mr. BECK. I know that the appraisers' accommodations at present are inadequate, and I know that the present custom-house is perhaps not what it ought to be, but we have had experience before in New York. We built a post-office building there, and we limited the cost as strictly as this bill does, perhaps more so, to $3,000,000. Then they wanted another million and a half, I believe, and we gave them that, and put in still more stringent regulations, requiring the building to be finished for that amount. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES], I remember, was chairman of the committee at the time, and he will recollect better than I do; but I think that at three different times, in violation of all our laws, they exceeded the limit, and it cost us nine or ten millions and perhaps ten and a half million dollars before we got through.

I do not propose that we shall provide that this building shall be located at any particular place, but I think Congress ought to know something about it. The Secretary of the Treasury should ascertain at what price property can be obtained, and we should see whether it is going to be placed at a proper point or not.

The Secretary of the Treasury is perhaps the hardest worked man in this Administration, and he will have nothing to do with the location under the bill. He will have no time to look at it; perhaps he will not know anything about it, but will send some clerk or somebody who will pick out a place and locate the building there whether it is right or wrong, and while it will be said to be done by the Secretary of the Treasury it will in fact be done by somebody about whom the Secretary of the Treasury may know very little.

If Congress is going to maintain any control over a great matter like this, there ought to be more care given to it than the bill provides for.

I only desired to say that much, and I do not propose to oppose the bill further.

Mr. SPOONER. I feel under obligations to the Senator from Maine to withdraw this matter from consideration if he insists upon my doing so, although it is a matter of great public interest.

Mr. HALE. I can not consent to have the debate continue.

Mr. SPOONER. I think it will take but a few moments longer to dispose of the bill.

Mr. HALE. If it is going to give rise to any further debate, of course I must insist upon going on with the regular order.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I agree with the Senator from Wisconsin that this is an important matter, and I think it is important that the bill be passed with great care and consideration. We do need new appraiser's stores in New York City. We do need a new custom-house there. The buildings ought to be in the vicinity of each other, and they ought to be convenient to the merchants; and when we enter upon that work we should enter upon it with great care.

Although I have confidence in the Secretary of the Treasury that he will exert proper care in the selection of a site for these two buildings, I think that power should not be given to any one man. I think it is a matter of sufficient importance to elicit the attention of a commission of eminent men or of two or three of our Cabinet officers; and when the work is entered upon it should be entered upon with a view to the convenience of the merchants and those who are transacting business at the custom-house. When that is done, in my judgment, the $3,000,000 limit put in the bill will not prove to be a sufficient limit.

Mr. SPOONER. The bill provides for the purchase of a site for that amount.

Mr. ALLISON. It proposes to appropriate $650,000 for the purchase of a site, if I remember correctly.

Mr. SPOONER. The bill contains alternative propositions.

Mr. ALLISON. It proposes that a building shall be erected upon the site selected, plain in its character, and not to exceed a cost of $650,000.

Mr. SPOONER. Or in lieu of that the Secretary of the Treasury may purchase at a cost not exceeding $3,000,000 a site for both the appraiser's warehouse and the custom-house.

Mr. ALLISON. No appraiser's store can be built suitable for the business of the city of New York for $600,000 or twice that sum, in my judgment, even of a plain, substantial character. Of course it will be fire-proof.

Mr. HALE. I think I must call for the regular order.

Mr. ALLISON. I shall detain the Senate just one moment longer. I examined this matter with great care, as did the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECK], a year or two ago. It is a matter of immense importance. I do not know of a place where the business of the country is so inconveniently transacted as in the city of New York.

Mr. SPOONER. I should like to say to the Senator from Iowa that this bill has been very carefully considered by merchants' associations in New York, by the Produce Exchange of New York, by the institutions in New York of a business nature which it would be especially necessary to accommodate, and its provisions meet their entire approval. As the bill came from the House it provided for the erection of stores at a cost not exceeding $600,000 or the purchase of a site for both buildings at a cost not exceeding $1,500,000. We have increased that limit upon the request of the business interests of New York to $3,000,000, which they regard as adequate.

The Secretary of the Treasury was communicated with in regard to the bill. He has given the subject great personal attention. He comes from that State; he is a careful man; he knows pretty well and can inform himself very accurately what the interests of the business of New York require in this respect, and he very much prefers the bill as reported from the committee to the bill as it passed the House; it meets his commendation. I believe one good level-headed man, with all the facilities at hand for information, would do as well as a commission.

Mr. ALLISON. I did not say——

Mr. SPOONER. However, if the bill is to be further debated I do not feel at liberty under my arrangement with the Senator from Maine to insist upon its further consideration.

Mr. BECK. I hope if this bill is to go over—and I trust it will—the Senator from Wisconsin will endeavor to ascertain, as remarked by the Senator from New Jersey, what disposition can be made of the present square in which we have the appraiser's stores, and what are we going to do in regard to the old custom-house?

Mr. SPOONER. We have inquired into that.

Mr. BECK. I believe, with the Senator from New Jersey, that that block is utterly unfit for the appraiser's stores and can be sold for perhaps two or three millions, and perhaps the custom-house and grounds for two or three millions more, and we may as well look this thing squarely in the face and appropriate those pieces of property and the three millions now proposed, because the appraiser's stores and a custom-house suitable for New York can not be built for twice that.

Mr. SPOONER. This is only to purchase a site.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, I should hope that this bill would not be treated here as if it was a new proposition or one that had not been very fully considered in this Congress. It was introduced in the House of Representatives and there passed, when it was thought that it was much better that there should be a larger provision which should cover the cost of the land that should provide for both structures under the idea that it was important that the custom-house and appraiser's stores should be convenient, and that therefore an area should be put at the disposition of this Government that would accomplish those purposes.

Now, there is an alternative proposition in this bill providing a certain price for a plot on which to erect appraiser's stores, and also a provision for the erection of those stores, which is probably quite inadequate, I agree; the alternative proposition being to take into view by the Secretary of the Treasury plots of land contiguous, adjacent, coterminous, or convenient to one another, by which the common structure or the double structure may be economically erected.

I have not heard a single objection to the proposition that this greater accommodation both for the appraiser's establishment and for the custom-house ought to be provided; nor is at all doubtful that for the convenience of the public business and of the merchants, which are entirely coincident as we all know, they should be coterminous and embraced under one structure, if that be found suitable. Where, then, does this alternative suggested to us leave a grievance unredressed until some other inquiry is made? Inquiry in every direction has preceded this bill before its introduction, and on the part of the Department of this Government having charge of it, the Treasury Department, ever since.

So, then, this method of disposing of the matter is simply leaving us without a custom-house, which everybody agrees we should have; without an appraiser's establishment, which every one agrees we should have; without a site for them, that everybody agrees we should have; and upon what suggestion are we to be left in this position? Is it better that Congress should pass upon the competing private interests of land-owners who would wish to sell to the Government? It seems to me not at all suitable either on its general principle or on the habits of this country. Our habit is to concentrate responsibility upon executive officers and to hold them responsible to Congress for any lack of administration.

Mr. President, no one knows better than the Senator from Kentucky, who has had abundant opportunity to satisfy himself and has firmly expressed himself, that we need in New York for the business of the Government, for the convenience of commerce, this provision or a provision that is to accomplish the general purpose. We now hold a custom-house wholly inadequate in Wall street, where every square foot is of the highest value and which can be disposed of by itself probably for enough to cover the purchase of the new structure that we are to make. There is no place in the city of New York where the square foot is worth as much as it is on the site of the present custom-house. If it were abundant, if it were large enough, if it were convenient, if the merchants desired it, the cost of the land should be no impediment to our continuing our possession.

Now, Mr. President, all that we propose here is to provide a sum of $3,000,000 to give, either by purchase or condemning, an adequate plot in the city of New York for these buildings. I should hope, therefore, not only that this bill might be heard and passed upon now, but that if it is contested it should be now presently disposed of. It is not a matter about which to protract debate. The Senator from Iowa has said what he has to say, the Senator from Kentucky has said what he has to say, and they both agree in the principal proposition that we ought to have an adequate appropriation for the purposes aimed at.

I do not know any other way that we are to find out where the proper place is except by leaving it to the officers of the Government that are trusted. I have repelled on my part toward all my constituents any effort to direct the attention of the Senate to the place where this should be. I have said to all of them that I would have no entertainment of those ideas, but they must all be reserved for the responsible head of the Treasury Department if this bill should become a law.

Why put it off a year or why put it off a week? I agree it does not make any difference whether it passes this week or next week. It has passed the House. It has on it amendments which only are changing the area that embraces the object of the whole structure. Now, as to the appraisers' stores—perhaps the Senator from Iowa, or the Senator from Kentucky, may be more accurate about the amount of rent than I can be without refreshing my memory—it is a very large sum—as I understand, certainly over $80,000. I am not sure that it is not over $100,000 a year that we are paying for rent merely for an appraisers' establishment, and a very inadequate establishment, an inconvenient one, an old sugar-house, not in site nor in its arrangement complete to the satisfaction of the Government. We must look at things as they are.

The present custom-house in Wall street will sell for enough to cover everything, as I suppose. Certainly we make a saving in paying the interest on the cost of the appraisers' stores instead of $80,000 or $100,000 a year rent for inconvenient quarters. The magnitude of the sum involved should not affect in the least the consideration and the determination of the question, because that is determined by the necessities of the case and the high value of real estate.

So all agree about the important object, and we have been obliged to put in the bill a provision for condemnation, with entire uncertainty whether by private contract or not, so great is the value near by and in other places, that we might not be at the mercy of competing private interests.

Mr. SPOONER. I feel under honorable obligation to the Senator from Maine, in view of the condition on which he granted me indulgence, not to press further this bill at this time if he insists upon going on. I give notice that at the earliest opportunity I shall call it up for action.

DISTRICT SALES OF PROPERTY FOR OVERDUE TAXES.

Mr. FAULKNER. Mr. President——

Mr. HALE. So much time has been taken in the unexpected debate that has arisen upon the pending amendment that I can not yield any further now. There is only one single amendment to pass upon in the naval appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Two amendments were reserved.

Mr. HALE. I feel constrained to insist on going on with the bill.

Mr. FAULKNER. I appeal to the Senator from Maine to permit me to call up House bill 10060. It will not take more than three minutes to pass it, and it is a very important and pressing matter in the District. It has only a few lines. If it takes more than three minutes I will withdraw it at once.

Mr. HALE. Go on.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask unanimous consent to call up Order of Business 1824, being the bill (H. R. 10060) prescribing the times for sales and for notice of sales of property in the District of Columbia for overdue taxes.

Mr. ALLISON. I should like to hear the bill read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read at length, subject to objection.

The Chief Clerk read the bill.

Mr. ALLISON. I should like to have the Senator in charge of this bill explain what will be the effect of the sale.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will say to the Senator from Iowa that this bill does not change the present law as to the methods of sale, but there have been two statutes passed in different years, which conflict in reference to the notice of the sales. One statute requires the notice to be given in September and another requires it to be in July, so that there could not be a sale until eleven months after the notice of sale was given; and that was occasioned by an error in the last statute which was passed requiring the notice to be in September instead of July. This is to rectify that and to put the law back where it was formerly.

Mr. HOAR. Is there no advertisement provided for except the advertisement in this pamphlet of real-estate sold for taxes?

Mr. FAULKNER. No, sir; there is no other provision of the statute now. This puts it back where it was formerly.

Mr. HOAR. I wish to inquire of the Senator from West Virginia if it be the law that the real estate of any absent owner, or of a minor or insane person, or aged person, may be sold for taxes with no other notice than that contained in a pamphlet of which 5,000 copies are printed to be delivered to persons on application?

Mr. FAULKNER. That is the only notice I find in the old law.

Mr. HOAR. I think if we are to pass a new law on the subject it ought to contain more protection for the classes I have named, and there ought to be added to the bill some obligation in regard to personal notice, or notice at the usual place of abode if the person be absent.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will withdraw the request for the consideration of the bill at this time, because I feel under obligations to the Sentor from Maine to do so.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The request for the consideration of the bill is withdrawn.

LAND PATENTS IN ARKANSAS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1082) to authorize the issuance of patent to certain land in Arkansas, which was to add to the bill the following proviso:

Provided, That nothing herein contained shall prejudice adverse rights, and that, should conflicting claims be presented, the rights of the claimants shall be adjudicated by the Department as in other cases.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I was requested by my colleague [Mr. BERRY], who reported this bill to the Senate, and who is absent, to move that the Senate non-concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives and ask for a conference with the House of Representatives thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. TELLER, Mr. PADDOCK, and Mr. BERRY were appointed.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. Now, I hope we shall proceed with the naval appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is now before the Senate.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10556) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for other purposes, the pending question being on concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole, striking out the clause from line 309 to line 314, inclusive, as follows:

For the expenses of a commission of three officers, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Navy, to report as to the most desirable location on or near the coast of the Gulf of Mexico for a navy-yard and docks for shipping and for the expenses of sounding and surveying and estimating expenses, $50,000.

Mr. CALL. I do not propose to delay the Senate any longer in the consideration of this amendment further than to state that a commission was appointed by the Secretary of the Navy on the 1st of December, 1883, in pursuance of the act of Congress of August 5, 1882, consisting of Commodore Luce, Chief Engineer Loring, and A. B. Mullett, civilian member. They made the following report, after an examination of all the navy-yards in the country:

The magnificent sheet of water forming Pensacola Bay, its fine and secure roadstead, and the water communication furnished by the Escambia and the Blackwater, the Yellow River and Santa Rosa Sound, with possibilities of future railroad and canal connections uniting it with the Perdido and Mobile Bay, the Alabama River, and the rich coal and iron districts of the neighboring States, all combine to render this site more advantageous in many respects than that of any other yard. The climate is delightfully mild and generally healthy; the character of the soil is such that slips for building, launching, and repairing ships may be constructed without undue expense. Live-oak and yellow pine, which enter so largely into wooden-ship building, are to be found in the surrounding country in abundance, and of excellent quality, and unlimited supplies of iron and coal, indispensable to modern navies, are already within easy reach. There is ample supply of good fresh water, and it has fine fresh-water ponds for the preservation of ship timber.

Pensacola Bay, at the entrance of which the yard is situated, is perfectly defensible. It is easy of access to vessels of moderate draught. Ships drawing 24 feet and over may find good anchorage off the yard, and those drawing 22 feet may approach the principal wharf. Recent soundings show that there have been no material changes in the depth during the past twenty-four years, so that no dredging is necessary. Mean rise and fall of tide, 1 foot.

The Government improvements now in progress contemplate the removal by dredging of what is known as the "inner bar" to a depth of 24 feet at mean low water. This bar is about 1 mile southeast of the ruins of Fort McRae, and extends across the main ship-channel.

During the Mexican war and the late war of the rebellion the military importance of this yard was fully demonstrated.

Pensacola Bay is almost the only suitable place for a naval station on the Gulf, and should a ship-canal be cut across the Florida peninsula its military and commercial value would be greatly enhanced.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, that report comes from very eminent men, but it does not reach the precise point we are trying to arrive at now, and that is as to the best place for the building of iron and steel ships. I understand it to be a settled fact that iron and steel ships ought to be built in fresh water, and they ought to be repaired in fresh water. It is necessary after these vessels have had extensive cruises that they should come back into fresh water to be cleaned of the barnacles and the sea-weed and other matters that adhere to them; and for that reason the navy-yard at Brooklyn and the navy-yard on the Delaware River are regarded as being almost indispensable in respect of the new navy we are trying to build.

I do not doubt that Pensacola is a very admirable place for a naval station. I think it would be fatuitous to abandon it. I have always regretted that the navy-yard at Pensacola was dismantled. As a place of repair for wooden ships it doubtless is a very excellent location. It is true it is hard to defend. Santa Rosa Island is rather a narrow strip of land lying outside of the navy-yard at Pensacola, and I suppose, according to the range of modern artillery, a ship stationed at a convenient distance from Fort Pickens might even fire across Santa Rosa Island into the navy-yard. More than that, if Fort Pickens should fall into the hands of an enemy, your navy-yard at Pensacola would not be worth anything to you. It would be of no avail whatever. The admirals in noticing this place even for a naval station took occasion to remark that a good deal of its future value depends upon a canal to connect it with the waters of the Alabama River, and also a canal to be built across the isthmus of Florida. These considerations have unsettled the opinion of a good many men who have to deal with questions of this kind as to that being a proper location for the building of steel and iron ships.

There is no convenient access to it, except by railway, nor is there to be, I suppose, for many years to come, unless we should build a canal across from the waters of the Alabama River to the Bay of Pensacola. If the commission which is to be sent out under this bill should indorse and ratify all that has been said on the floor by the Senator from Florida about the Pensacola navy-yard as a location, then that question would be forever settled and the whole strength of the South and of the interior of the country would be concentrated upon Pensacola as the proper place for the establishment, which I consider to be an indispensable one for the building of steel and iron ships and also for the building of heavy ordnance on the waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

I wish to remark in this connection that it is something of a task to carry one of these very heavy guns by rail across our country to supply the forts on the Mississippi River, at the Bay of Mobile, at Pensacola, and it may be other places where guns may be needed for defense, and it would be quite a saving, quite a convenience to the Government of the United States, to have these guns constructed in the South.

More than that, it is due to the enterprise of those people that the Government of the United States should give some attention to their great resources for the construction of guns of heavy caliber. I need not refer, I think, to the capacity of Alabama and of Tennessee and of North Georgia for the supply of ores, metals, coal, timber, and whatever else may be necessary in the construction of ships. These places are now very prominent before the attention of the enterprising men of the United States and ought to attract also the attention of the Government. We ought to avail ourselves of these facilities so far as we can.

But the starting-point is an agreement as to location. If a commission goes out and makes a report in favor of Pensacola as the proper place to build these ships and build these guns, I shall be found, "in season and out of season," advocating their construction at that place. If, however, in going about over the country there and making the soundings and tests and borings that are necessary to determine the location, they should find some better place, I should expect an equal support from the Senators from Florida.

It does not follow that because fifty or sixty years ago we established a navy-yard at Pensacola, when we built nothing but wooden ships, it therefore is to continue as a ship-yard, a place for building ships or heavy guns, when the entire structure of the navy has changed from wood to steel and iron. It does not follow, and we are not satisfied with it. But a commission organized under this bill, sent out to investigate this subject, can make a pretty good report in respect of all these modern methods of constructing vessels and heavy guns, and they can possibly find a better location than Pensacola. But I say again that if they do not, I shall take Pensacola, heartily take it, and I expect fully that the Senators from Florida would be entirely willing that we should have the opportunity of having this investigation made, so as to concentrate our influence and our efforts to satisfy everybody as to what is the best thing to be done in regard to this very important new enterprise.

I believe but one war ship was ever built at Pensacola, and that was a very magnificent one—I think only one—and since that time the navy-yard has been dismantled. There is nothing being done there now even in the way of repair of ships, but it has been abandoned, and that, too, after we had built the caissons and floated them around from the New England coast somewhere for the purpose of building a very large dry-dock.

Mr. CALL. It never has been built.

Mr. MORGAN. It never was completed. Why was it not completed? Simply because the Government of the United States did not find need for it; the Government of the United States was doubtful about it, and more than that, since the time the Senator speaks of, the report that was made by the admirals he has read here this morning, Pensacola has had several visitations of yellow fever, the most unfortunate thing we know, but something that none of our cities can escape. That is a very important factor in the question of the location of a ship-yard by the United States Government. We must try to find some place, if we can, that is exempt from that dreadful scourge. If it is suitable in all other particulars, that is an argument against it. I regret to allude to that. At the same time it is a factor in the case, and I think the Senators from Florida ought willingly to agree to have this matter investigated by a proper commission, so that the Congress of the United States may be informed officially, after a careful examination, as to what is best to be done in respect of the locality upon which we shall erect a ship-yard, a place for the construction and repair of ships.

I confess that I desire very much that the waters in the vicinity of Mobile should be found to be the proper location. Why should I not? Why should Mobile not have an equal opportunity with Pensacola in a matter of this kind?

I do not seek to deprive Pensacola of the possession of a naval station. Here is a naval station, a place for storing up coal and all sorts of naval supplies, easy of access to our ships. I should never think of abandoning Pensacola for that purpose, and it is all that it is used for now; it is all that the Government of the United States intends to use it for. I suppose the Government does not think of putting back the machinery that was taken out of the navy-yard at Pensacola for the purpose of the construction or repair of ships, and I wish to say that ships ought to be repaired at the navy-yard in Pensacola.

Our coast on that gulf is not going always to be in the condition that it is now. A time is coming, and it is not very far away, when there will be a canal through the Isthmus of Darien, when the ships of the world will find their way through that isthmus, through the De Lesseps Canal, or the Nicaragua Canal, or the Tehuantepec Canal or railway, and that will be the highway of the ships of the whole world. When that era comes, the fertile lands which border the Gulf of Mexico, furnishing splendid locations for residences, will produce not another Mediterranean, but a Mediterranean magnified and beautified in every respect as a place of delightful residence and of great business enterprise and capacity. Then Mobile and Pensacola will be considered somewhat distant from each other, as Philadelphia and New York and Boston are considered now somewhat distant from each other, as representing the various rich and industrial communities which lie behind them on the seacoast. Our country is not going to stand still. We need not be afraid of the future development of the Southern country, particularly along the Gulf of Mexico. There is no more inviting field on this earth than that for human enterprise. After a little while I think the decadence of the Spanish power in the Island of Cuba and in the other islands belonging to that kingdom will liberalize all the proceedings of commerce and of all the different industries of mankind, and the wealth that will be originated in that region for transportation into other markets and other places will be something that will astonish mankind, and that in addition to the great wealth that must be brought through the Gulf of Mexico from the transit through the Isthmus of Darien.

Now, let us not be narrow in our policy. Let us look to the future; let us unite our efforts in the South for the purpose of building up our country and meeting this development which time is so rapidly unfolding in our behalf.

I trust that Senators will not object further to what the other House has done.

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, when this clause first fell under my eye I had determined not to support it, for I supposed that the Secretary of the Navy had the authority already to appoint a commission to investigate the establishment of navy-yards, but I understand that he has not. The question of a proper location for a navy-yard and docks for shipping near the Gulf coast has been very much debated for the last eight or ten years among naval officers, and I am glad to have the opportunity to support a measure which will enable them after thorough investigation to give us the benefit of their judgment.

The country interested in the establishment of a navy-yard on the Gulf of Mexico may be divided into two grand divisions: First, that vast region penetrated by the Mississippi River and covering the entire area from the Alleghany to the Rocky Mountains, containing to-day a population of over twenty-five millions of people, and drained as tributaries of the Mississippi River by over 17,000 miles of navigable streams. Colonel Benton, of Missouri, estimated—and he was good authority for facts—that there were 50,000 miles of boatable streams tributary to the main trunk-line of the Mississippi River. This vast region embraces all the degrees of the temperate zone, and is rich in all the products of agriculture, manufactures, and mining, of underground wealth. The gate-way of this great valley, the largest in the world, is at the city of New Orleans, 110 miles from the mouth of the Mississippi River.

The second grand division of our country interested in the establishment of this navy-yard is that bordering on the Gulf of Mexico from the southeast extremity of Florida to the Mexican line. The proper point for the defense of the Mississippi Valley is near the mouth of the Mississippi River, and the best point for the defense of our own interest within the circle of the Gulf of Mexico would be upon the Island of Cuba, which lies just off the mouth of the Mississippi River, dominating and commanding the approaches to the Gulf by the Strait of Florida on the east and the Strait of Yucatan on the west.

Cuba is the key to the Mexican Gulf and to the mouth of the Mississippi River. Let me say at the outset that I know navy-yards do not of themselves defend anything. In fact, they would rather invite attacks in time of war. But a well-established navy-yard, equipped with all the apparatus and appliances for modern ship-building, would furnish the indispensable means and instruments for carrying on naval war; and a navy-yard should therefore be located where it would be absolutely safe from the enemy and within secure communication by water both to the country that yields the supply and material for war vessels, the skilled labor, and to the ocean. So long as Cuba is not in our possession we may exclude it in considering the important question before us.

We do not own Cuba, and so far as I am informed there is no public sentiment in the country to-day which demands the immediate acquisition of the island of Cuba. It would be foreign to our policy in any manner to wound the amour propre or national pride of Spain, with whose Government and people I am sure we have every motive of comity and interest to cultivate friendly relations, but we can not close our eyes to the state of affairs in Cuba and to the fact especially that an enormous debt paralyzes the development of the energies and industries of the people and that the excess of expenditures over the revenues point to a time when Spain herself may find relief by offering the island of her own accord to the Government of the United States for a sum quite within our ability and disposition to pay. The likelihood that France may complete the Panama Canal must prompt us to see to it that American interests in that quarter are not overshadowed by the ambitious designs of France competing with Germany and Great Britain for the trade of Mexico, South America, and the far East.

Mr. President, I repeat, the question, where should this navy-yard be located which shall supply the means of defense of the Mississippi Valley and to maintain our rights and interest in the Mexican Gulf?

The Senator invites our attention to the navy-yard at Pensacola—how it was selected even before the admission of Florida into the Union and was the chosen rendezvous for the Spanish and French fleet long years ago. All this may be true. I have no doubt the navy-yard there answered all the purposes for which it was established, had in view at the time it was established, and it may still answer certain good purposes. But I submit that it fulfills none of the conditions which should control us in the selection of a locus for a navy-yard.

When Pensacola was chosen as a naval station the entrance to the bay had more water than any other inlet or harbor on the Gulf of Mexico, while now it has less than the entrance to the Mississippi River. At that time rifled cannon were unknown, and consequently the site of the navy-yard was exempt from destruction through incendiary shells, while now vessels armed with ordinary cannon can take up a position outside of Santa Rosa Island and absolutely destroy the navy-yard without receiving any material damage, even if the vessels are not armor-plated, if they send boats in to point out their anchorages and come into position after night, and this, too, if the island of Santa Rosa should have heavy batteries placed in the best localities to assist Fort Pickens in the protection of the navy-yard.

At that time iron hulls of vessels were unknown, while now the classes of vessels most necessary for defense in the Gulf would have iron bottoms, which foul and deteriorate rapidly in salt water, and keep unimpaired and clean in fresh water, such as the Mississippi furnishes.

There is no other point within the Bay of Pensacola having a suitable depth and near the land, except the present site, which would serve as a navy-yard, shoal ground lying far out and extending to the shores everywhere; the depth of water on the bar is barely sufficient for frigates now and is decreasing. The entrance to the Mississippi furnishes not only deep water and fresh, now necessary to iron bottoms, but the river furnishes abundant supplies by water transportation for coal, materials of construction, and skilled labor, as well as stores of all kinds, all of which are deficient at Pensacola, or would be supplied in time of war by land-carriage from either long distances or less abundant sources of supply.

These are sufficient reasons for looking elsewhere. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] suggests that Mount Vernon should be considered by the commission, if appointed. I know something about the rivers in Alabama and the approaches of its water ways. Mount Vernon is situated just below the point at which the Tombigbee and the Alabama Rivers form the Mobile River—a noble, deep, broad river that flows into the bay at the city of Mobile. It is about 60 miles above Mobile, in an upland country, rich in woods and in underground resources—iron and coal—and capable of producing the highest quality of steel. The climate is delightful, the situation in every respect is inviting, and it is well adapted for a naval station.

But the drawback is the shallow water in Mobile Bay through which vessels must pass to reach Mount Vernon, and its liability to be destroyed by a force sent into the interior from any point on the coast, being only about two or three days' march distant, and at a point where the concentration of a large force of men and supplies would be difficult from adjacent States. It is not on a system of water ways nor of railways leading to the centers of population; it is detached and isolated. The place where the raw materials may be found is not always the best point to establish workshops or nurseries for war vessels and war supplies. No doubt vessels of the greatest tonnage and of the heaviest armament could be constructed here, and could be buoyed over the shallow bay at Mobile by casting aside the heaviest guns and taking them on again after reaching deep water.

But I submit that this process of stripping a vessel of her armament on going out to sea and on returning for repairs would under all circumstances be embarrassing and under some conditions might cause fatal delays. But I am disposed to give great respect and weight to any suggestions from the Senator from Alabama, and I have no doubt that the commission will give the most careful consideration to his views, and to the views of the distinguished chairman of the Naval Committee of the House of Representatives.

I trust, Mr. President, on account of the magnitude of the interests at stake, that the commission will ascertain whether or not there is not some place on the Mississippi River better fitted in all respects for the establishment of a first-class navy-yard capable of turning out vessels of war equal in tonnage and armament to any now afloat.

This was the opinion of the Navy Department and of Congress thirty-odd years ago, when this identical question was discussed and finally settled in favor of a point just below Algiers, on the opposite side of the Mississippi River from New Orleans, where the Government purchased a tract of land fronting on the river, which it owns this very day, and which was intended to be the site of a navy-yard for the defense of the great valley and the Gulf of Mexico.

At this point, which we will call Algiers, you have every requisite for a navy-yard, and every reason which prevailed thirty years ago for the selection of this spot has been strengthened by subsequent events and experience.

A navy-yard at Algiers would be situated near a great city full of skill, labor, and of schools where the arts and sciences as applied to naval warfare would be taught. Algiers itself is full of intelligent, honest, and skillful artisans and mechanics. A line of large dry-docks is in front of the town, many of whose inhabitants are seafaring and have experience that belongs to that noble class of our countrymen.

You have access to 50,000 miles of boatable streams, to all the mines of iron and coal, to all the resources of material and men, to the interior of any one of the States on the Mississippi River and its tributaries and to the cities like Vicksburg, Memphis, Louisville, St. Louis. You have fresh water. You have the best harbor, one of the very best in the country, 120 feet deep. You have at the mouth of the river a safe channel, with a minimum depth—thanks to the patriotic genius of Captain Eads—of 28 feet, and the jetties are as solid and secure as if built of granite. You would have absolute protection against any attack by a hostile power; for not only does it afford a rendezvous by land, by railways, and by water ways, but the natural advantages for defense, the topography, and local conditions render it as safe from destruction as any point within the bounds of the Union could possibly be.

With the exception of occasional epidemics of yellow fever, which recur at more and more distant intervals—and, I trust, may, with the means of prevention now applied, not appear again—Algiers and its neighborhood is one of the healthiest places in the United States. The death-rate is very low.

These are some of the suggestions I would like to submit to the commission. I trust the commission may be authorized.

Why should it not be appointed? Here are these vast interests, the Mississippi River, the Mississippi Valley, the people inhabiting that valley; here are the great States of Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Florida, all interested; here is the chief city of that Gulf region interested, having a commerce the third among the cities of the Union. I have a paper showing the commerce of the leading cities, the total exports and imports, for the last fiscal year, June 30, 1888:

New York	$781,653,250
Boston	120,335,182
New Orleans	92,873,204
San Francisco	74,337,796
Philadelphia	70,617,982
Baltimore	57,978,312

New Orleans, you will see, is third in rank. If we were to establish a navy-yard and to begin to construct ships there we might develop a commerce with the countries south of us, Mexico and Central Mexico, that would enrich our people, a commerce which exceeds $400,000,000 to-day and of which we have not 10 per cent.

I therefore submit to the Senator from Florida that while Pensacola is a very good place for a navy-yard to a limited extent, that is, to the extent for which it was established and to the extent to which it operates to-day, it is wholly inadequate for the needs of modern naval construction; wholly misplaced so far as an effective defense might be made of it; unsuitable for the kind of ships we are building now, made of iron and steel; out of the way because it can not be communicated with by water from the country rich in the raw material; and for these reasons that Senator ought not to insist that light shall be shut out, that we shall not have an investigation to ascertain if there be not some suitable place either at Mount Vernon, in Alabama, or at Algiers, in Louisiana, or Baton Rouge, or Memphis, or St. Louis, somewhere in this great valley, a place in which the resources of the valley may be made available in the construction of such ships of war and such guns as are absolutely indispensable to the safety and security of the people inhabiting that country.

I wish Senators who are inclined to vote against this commission would listen to what the New York Marine Journal says on this subject:

NEW ORLEANS AS A NAVAL STATION.

Congress having provided for the appointment of a commission of naval officers to visit the Gulf of Mexico and inspect the various ports with a view of selecting, after making careful surveys and soundings, the most suitable port for the establishment of a naval station it is not improbable that the commission may select New Orleans as the port containing the most advantages owing to its location, its being easily defensible by land or sea, and having the important element of fresh water, so important for the preservation of steel or iron vessels.

New Orleans is unquestionably the most advantageous point for the new naval station. It is contiguous to and within easy reach of food supplies, timber for ship-building, and the necessary iron and coal which lie quite at her doors in the inexhaustible fields of North Alabama. For the necessary dry-dock the timber is almost in sight for the construction of the finest known. In short, New Orleans easily fills all the requirements and demands for a first-class naval station.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, the preparations for the building of vessels of iron and steel, as suggested by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], ought to be in fresh water. I believe myself that the navy-yard at Pensacola ought not to have been dismantled, that it ought to have been preserved in proper condition for the repair of the immense amount of shipping of the Gulf of Mexico, but while I believe that, it does not conflict with the view I have as to the propriety of the selection of a suitable place for the construction of iron ships.

And in that connection I desire to supplement what has been said by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GIBSON] by saying if it is found that a suitable place can be obtained on the Mississippi, either at Algiers or Natchez or Vicksburg or Memphis or at St. Louis, for the construction of ships, that there would be this advantage connected with it: they could be there constructed where they would be in a convenient position for the defense of the mouth of the Mississippi and of the entire Gulf coast.

Connected with that, a thing which I have not heard suggested, but which it seems to me is worthy of very grave consideration, is that we ought to secure such an enlargement of the canal between Chicago and La Salle and secure such increase in the depth of water of the Illinois River as to be enabled to transfer gunboats from the Mississippi to the lakes and from the lakes to the Mississippi River.

We need not conceal it from ourselves that questions of a more or less troublesome character are continually to arise with Great Britain, and so long as we place it out of our power to assert the rights of the United States we shall be the sufferers from every attempt at negotiation. By the arrangement we now have with Great Britain we are not able to keep gunboats on the lakes. Canada has the control of the Welland Canal, and in case of trouble can transfer through the Welland Canal on to the lakes gunboats that would enable them to command the lakes before we could construct gunboats on the lakes to meet them.

Now, then, it seems to me as a wise precaution—and I call the attention of the Senators from Illinois to this matter—that one of the things which ought to be done is the enlargement and deepening of the canal between Chicago and La Salle, and the completion of the deepening of the Illinois River from La Salle to the Mississippi. By doing that and by giving necessary depth of water from the mouth of the Illinois River southward to the mouth of the Mississippi River we might transfer gunboats from the Lakes down the Mississippi to the Gulf, or by way of the Mississippi and the Illinois River through this canal to the Lakes, and give us a protection which we have not now, and which, in case of war, we would find the greatest necessity for.

Taking that view, while I do not undertake especially to discuss the question where a place should be located for the construction of these ships, it seems to me, considering depth of water, the availability of fresh water, the convenience of the transfer of such gunboats and warships to the Gulf, and what ought to be made the convenience for their transfer to the Lakes, would indicate that it is worth while to examine the question as to whether a place for the construction of such vessels as are contemplated can not be selected on the Mississippi River.

Mr. PUGH. Mr. President, I only desire to add a few words to what was so well stated by my colleague.

The question before the Senate is, where is the best location for a ship-building station on the Gulf of Mexico? Now, the difficulty of making an answer to that question, as shown by this debate, is strongly persuasive to my mind of the necessity of this commission.

I do not suppose that there is a Senator who is sufficiently familiar with this subject to be able to decide this question as a great public question. He might be able to decide it as a local question. For instance, the Senators from Florida could decide that Pensacola was certainly the best location; the Senators from Alabama could decide that certainly the best location was Mount Vernon, in Alabama; the Senator from Louisiana that New Orleans or Algiers was an admirable location. So with the Senator from Texas, that Galveston might have all the advantages necessary for a ship-building station. I repeat that this debate shows to my mind the necessity for the creation of a commission qualified to pass upon this question.

I admit I do not know enough about it to be able to give any information that would enable this Senate to pass upon it. I do not believe any other Senator has that information or qualification to pass upon this question. We must go elsewhere for information. That information must come from men who have had life training, skilled training in matters that will enable them to make a location for this great public use.

Now, so far as Pensacola is concerned, we all know that that is an admirable location for a navy-yard, but the difficulty about Pensacola is that it is too much exposed. I would say that one great advantage that a location of a ship-building station ought to have is its inaccessibility to the armed vessels or boats of other nations. Pensacola is exposed from the Gulf and from Santa Rosa Island and from Fort Pickens to being shelled, and we all know that the Pensacola navy-yard was shelled in the last war.

My knowledge of Mount Vernon enables me to say, as a physical fact that is observable by anybody having the power of observation, that Mount Vernon has all the advantages that are needed in the way of raw material and water and railway transportation to make a station of this sort valuable.

It seems to be in the minds of some Senators that the shallow water in the channel of Mobile Bay is an objection to Mount Vernon being made a ship-building station. I had a conversation with John Roach, the great ship-builder of this country, upon that very subject. I mentioned to him what I thought to be exceptional advantages of location of Mount Vernon for a ship-yard, and I told him that I could see no disadvantages, except the depth of the channel through Mobile Bay. Why, he said, that was no objection whatever, that the depth of the channel at this time was amply sufficient to float any sized vessel that could be built at Mount Vernon, and that it could be carried to deep water and armed; and I have no idea that these naval gentlemen when they investigate that matter will decide that it is any objection whatever to the establishment of a station at Mount Vernon that it has to be approached through a channel only 17 feet deep.

And, by the bye, we have now a plan for deepening that channel to 22 or 23 feet, that has been approved by the Engineer-in-Chief, and for which an appropriation has been made by this Congress. That plan, I have no doubt, will be carried into execution long before the plant could be established for ship-building at Mount Vernon. That is all I desire to say on that subject.

I do not see how any Senator can object to the creation of this commission. I have no doubt its report will be very valuable, and if Pensacola has all the natural advantages and the exceptional character given it by the Senator from Florida, he ought to desire the commission to make public to the world these remarkable advantages that Pensacola has over all other places.

Mr. McPHERSON. Mr. President, I wish to say a very few words on this proposition. I have had some experience upon the Committee on Naval Affairs of this body, and during that experience I have studied considerably the location of the different navy-yards and different naval establishments of the United States, and I can not imagine the intelligence which was behind a policy which has established in this country a naval establishment at Portsmouth, another at New London, one at New York, one at Philadelphia, one at Norfolk. In other words, the policy seems to have been to conserve local interests. The Government of the United States has frittered away its money. It has invested a certain amount of money at Portsmouth, another certain amount at New London, another certain amount at Pensacola, in establishing small naval establishments, insufficient in point of class, without the facilities even to repair ships and do it economically and cheaply. But, as I say, we frittered away thousands and millions of dollars in the attempt to maintain an impossibility.

Mr. BLAIR. Allow me to ask the Senator a question. Suppose that fifty years ago all this investment of money had been made in the navy-yard at Norfolk, what would have been the result?

Mr. McPHERSON. I should think it would have been, perhaps, a good policy to have done it, instead of scattering the money and investing it where it has been invested. Any man who will take the map of this country and will sit down five minutes and attempt in his own mind to forecast the future, will see where, of necessity, the great theater of national contest must be; and he will make up his mind that in the Gulf of Mexico, somewhere along that coast, there is a positive necessity for the establishment of a great navy-yard, not only for the construction but for the repair of naval ships. With two canals in contemplation across the isthmus which divides the Atlantic from the Pacific Ocean, with the naval establishments to-day owned by foreign Governments in the West Indies, with the only ground on earth that is upon this continent in which they have a foothold upon land anywhere, with their vast naval establishments and appliances, does it look reasonable that the naval appliances of the Government of the United States can be made adequate to a contest against the great naval force that may be brought to bear upon us?

What kind of policy should we consider it to be upon the part of this Government to send a disabled ship from the mouth of the Nicaragua or the Panama Canal either to New York or Philadelphia for repairs, two or three thousand miles from its base, whereas by the establishment of a suitable naval station in the Gulf of Mexico it would be immediately at the point where the naval repairs were needed?

Sir, we do want a naval establishment, and a large one, in New York. I think that Norfolk is another good location for a naval station; but certainly there should be one in the Gulf of Mexico. There should be another one and perhaps more on the Pacific side. With thousands and thousands of miles of seacoast which this Government is obliged to defend, and with a nationality to defend, it seems to me the very height of absurdity and nonsense to spend any longer a large amount of money in these little naval establishments, but something should be created commensurate with the needs and the responsibilities of the Government; and to omit, in making up the list of places, an investigation into the possibilities of the Gulf of Mexico, whether it be at Pensacola or at some other point in the Gulf, is to my mind omitting a very important thing. Although we do not expect in the immediate future, perhaps, to get into a war with any foreign power, certainly we must know that in the future, as I have already stated, with the great thoroughfares of commerce across this continent connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific Ocean, in the neighborhood of those canals will be found the war ships of a great many nations.

Hence it is that there should be some facility at the nearest practical point where a naval establishment can be created and also near to the source of supplies from which navies are constructed; and certainly there is no more desirable point than one on the Gulf of Mexico where you have the coal, the iron, the steel, the limestone, and everything that is needed for the purpose of bringing into use the raw material of that country and converting it into armed cruisers.

I hope that something will be done toward investigating the question, and I do hope there will be a settled policy on the part of this Government with respect to its naval establishments, that, while we undertake to create them, they shall be establishments suitable for the wants of the Government and its needs, and that we shall abandon the policy of frittering away money in uselessness and folly.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President, I am very glad, in listening to the continued remarks of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MCPHERSON], that I somewhat misapprehended his real meaning by construing too literally the language he used in opening his speech. I understood him to mention specifically several of the naval establishments of the country where he thought money had been wasted, and I understood that he was advocating a policy which would locate in some one portion of the country, and that the most desirable of all for a great naval station, the means for the construction and repair of the future navy of the United States.

To such a policy as that I think every Senator must feel the strongest objection. While the Government should make no provision, as I think, further than in the development of a truly and properly national spirit in the population of the whole country, the development of a militia, which, whenever called upon, can do battle for the preservation of the nation in its internal institutions and for the maintenance of its prestige and power abroad—while it should do everything that it can to develop the individual man, the hero who is to do the fighting of the future, it ought not, as I think, to so spend the money of the country as to create in the different localities within the exterior boundary of the United States the means of making any particular section strong as against any other section of the country or to maintain itself as against the national power in any effort to set up a local sovereignty.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). The Senator will suspend. The hour of 2 having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is the bill (S. 12) to provide for the formation and admission into the Union of the State of Washington, and for other purposes.

Mr. HALE. I ask for the present that the unfinished business be informally laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be informally laid aside in order that the Senate may proceed with the consideration of the naval appropriation bill. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BLAIR. But in whatsoever relates to the maintenance of our external boundaries, the assertion of the national power in a way which is truly defensive (for this nation will never be called upon, and it will never willingly indulge itself, I believe, in a policy of national aggression and will never engage in what can in any sense be called an aggressive war unless it be in a case where aggression is truly defense), I am in favor of the expenditure of such sum of money as may be necessary upon all those points of external contact which are liable to attack. Whatsoever money, I say, is necessary to make them entirely invulnerable against attack from abroad and to make them the proper sallying points, the points of preparation of that reserve force which every prudent nation will keep in readiness for the contingenceies of the future, I am willing to vote. And so I am certainly in favor of this commission of inquiry to ascertain not only the proper location for defense but for proper offense of a defensive nature in the Gulf of Mexico and everywhere along the entire line of our boundary, whether it be on the sea line or on a land boundary like that which is between us and Mexico on the south and between us and Canada on the north.

But, sir, it must not be concluded, and I think the Senator from New Jersey is hardly justified in concluding, that money expended in some of the places which he has mentioned, as at New London and certainly at the harbor of Portsmouth, is money wasted, or that it is not money properly and prudently expended, for it should be remembered that on our great Atlantic coast we have at least along the northern portion of that coast only the harbor of Portsmouth which is accessible during the winter, and probably the best harbor on the entire Atlantic coast really for defense against aggression from the navies of Europe. It is deep, it is full, it is ample; and with the river Piscataqua, which empties into it, we have at least ten, twelve, or fifteen miles of internal harbor, not properly a harbor, but a river, which is navigable and where the tide-water ebbs and flows, where the ocean currents are felt, which is practically a continuation of the harbor of Portsmouth; and there is no point on the Atlantic coast where on the whole the Government can so prudently and properly establish a great naval station, considering its nature and considering the cheapness of land and the facilities which can be afforded for the construction of vessels, as in that same harbor of Portsmouth and its appurtenances, to which the Senator has alluded in the way which I have stated.

The country must not expect that these tremendous sums are to be voted to develop naval stations in the South alone or at any one or two localities in this country. It is agreed by the representatives from all sections that there must be more than one naval station on the Pacific for the defense of that great line of coast, some 1,400 or 1,500 miles in extent. The idea that in the extreme Northwest, on Puget's Sound, or in the vicinity of Vancouver Island, where the English are now locating their immense naval station, there can be the only necessary expenditure made for defense upon the Pacific coast will not do. There will have to be an expenditure at the mouth of the Columbia and at San Francisco; and the Bay of San Diego is looming up into immense importance as a defensive position in the future. Just so at Mobile; it may be necessary to expend money there as well as at Pensacola, and also at New Orleans or in that vicinity, and one of the strongest arguments that has influenced my mind for a long time in favor of the Hennepin Canal is the connection to be made thereby between the waters of the Lakes and the Missouri and the Mississippi Rivers and by way of the Mississippi with the great Atlantic Ocean.

There is a direction of development which is in the nature of indicating a proper location for expenditure in a foreign and yet a defensive war, for we must be contemplating the fact—and the more the idea becomes familiar to the American people that the fishery question is but a twopenny affair compared with the real question which is behind and which is at issue—the more familiar the American people become with the thought that the future struggles in this country of a warlike and bloody character are more likely to be in the North than elsewhere on the face of the globe, the better it will be for us.

Canada and the United States may become one nation by union. I would never use the offensive word "annexation" as applied to Canada, but union between the two nations can be accomplished, and therein alone lies, in my belief, the road to peace. I take but very little interest in the discussion of the fishery question. I care very little what becomes of the treaty, if so be that we can reject it, but behind it all is the question of the union of these great peoples north and south of us. Why contemplate the idea for a moment that we are to enter upon the next thousand years with 4,000 miles of exposed boundary on the north, with our neighbors there in hostile alliance with the nations of Europe, capable of maintaining hundreds of millions of hardy and warlike people, and we maintaining that extended line of 4,000 miles by fortifications—by standing armies in a contest of perpetual war?

What else can it be, unless now in these earlier times, when the prejudices which separate and render permanently hostile the nations of Europe are as yet unformed, when both countries are comparatively unoccupied—for we have not one citizen in the United States where we are not able and shall not be able in the future to maintain ten, and Canada is without one per square mile where in the future she will maintain fifty—we consider the real question behind all the discussion of the fishery treaty, the real question which should agitate the minds of the people north of us and of our own people, which is, how shall we invent and pursue a policy of peace, how shall we unite, how shall we pursue this line; and if we are not to do it, then we must contemplate the armament of this entire extent of boundary and its defense in the future by standing armies as great as those which now crush the nations of Europe.

I rose, Mr. President, simply to express my strong approval of this proposition for a commission to locate, not one, as I hope, but to locate many navy-yards and stations at the most favorable points on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and the coast of the Gulf, and elsewhere if it be necessary, where the American Navy of the future may be constructed and may be maintained.

I do not think that it is worth while to indulge in any special discussion until we get in formation, such as will come from a reliable commission of the kind here proposed, as to the particular localities where these different stations should be placed; but we need, not a single one or several even upon the Atlantic coast, but we need many, and to such a policy as that I stand committed.

Mr. PASCO. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH] says the question before the Senate at this time is where is the best location for a navy-yard on the Gulf coast. I do not understand this to be the question at all. Time and experience and history have long since settled this question. The best location for a navy-yard has been found to be at Pensacola.

It would seem as though the purpose of this section of the bill which the Senate Committee on Appropriations proposes to amend by striking out, this commission scheme, was not to settle the question of the location of a navy-yard on the Gulf, but to unsettle it. But whatever may have been the purpose, the debate which has sprung up to-day, and which has been participated in by Senators from three or four of the Gulf States, plainly indicates that that will be the result if this plan of organizing a commission is adopted.

My colleague [Mr. CALL] yesterday and this morning set forth very eloquently and very ably the advantages that Pensacola possesses. It is a magnificent harbor; it has great depth of water; it is easy of access; there is a large plant already there; it has a fine back country filled with naval supplies; it is connected by rail with the iron fields and coal mines of Alabama; it has an inexhaustible supply of the very best timber for naval purposes in the forests of West Florida, near by. All of these advantages are there. The harbor is spacious enough to float the navies of the world.

It has been established as a navy-yard for two generations. While it has not been dismantled, as the Senator from Alabama suggests, it certainly has not been kept up, and perhaps one of the main reasons why the plant has not been kept equal to the advancement that has been made in naval science is because of the difference of opinion as to where a navy-yard should be located on the Gulf, and if this scheme for a commission is carried through it may be that this question will still remain unsettled for years to come.

It means delay. This is why I oppose the proposition for the appointment of a commission to select a location for a navy-yard on the Gulf coast, and not because I fear that other places have greater advantages than Pensacola has. I think the question of location ought to be regarded and considered as settled and fixed and determined.

It has been suggested that there are superior advantages near Mobile, but when we know how large an amount has been expended to deepen the channel of the river there, and how little has been accomplished, it must be manifest that it is not advisable to seek a new location in that direction.

It has been suggested by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GIBSON] that Algiers should be selected.

Well, it is only a few years ago since Algiers was washed away by the waters of the Mississippi, and we know that large annual appropriations have been made in order to protect the banks along the river front there by revetment from the overflow of that mighty stream. There have been no sufficient reasons urged here why any change in the location of the navy-yard should be made.

In the report made by Commodore Harmony, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, in the present year, in speaking of the advantages at Pensacola, he says:

> Pensacola, although defective in some respects, combines more advantages for a naval station than that afforded by a detached, exposed position like Key West or a site upon the uncertain and varying banks of a swift river like the Mississippi.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] has suggested the objection that Pensacola sometimes has an infliction of the yellow fever. Surely that is not the only point on the Gulf subject to this objection. All the large cities upon the northern shore of the Gulf have been visited by this scourge and Pensacola can be protected from it as readily as any other place that has been mentioned as suitable. If this objection is to be urged it will apply to other localities besides Pensacola.

Now, Mr. President, in view of all the advantages which have been already stated, in view of the fact that Pensacola has been found in the past to be the most desirable station, in view of the fact that the only result of the commission would be to postpone for one or more years the question of building up an efficient navy-yard upon the Gulf coast, I oppose this proposition for a commission.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] has stated another matter to which it is proper that some reference should be made, and that is that the present navy-yard is in an exposed position on account of its nearness to the waters of the Gulf, but as pointed out by Commodore Harmony in the report already referred to, it would be quite easy to move the navy-yard to another location further up the bay where an abundant depth of water can still be found, entirely beyond the reach of a hostile fleet lying in the Gulf, and at a point where it would be still further protected by the increased breadth of Santa Rosa Island. This I think fully disposes of that objection.

I understand that the action of the committee which has had this bill in charge with reference to this matter is unanimous, and that they have all united in the proposition to amend the bill by striking out the clause to organize this commission, and I hope that the amendment proposed will be adopted, and I shall sustain it by my vote.

Mr. CALL. I wish to say a very few words in conclusion of this matter. If it were not that Pensacola has been ascertained by the experience of the country and the reports of all the naval men who have attained to distinction in the country to be the only place on the Gulf of Mexico suitable for a naval station and for the construction of ships, and the only harbor where, if a ship was built of any size, it could get out to the sea—if these were not incontrovertible facts, so decided by the common consent of both naval and commercial people, I should hesitate to oppose this action; but whatever may be the fate of this motion to strike out this provision of the bill, I wish the facts to be known to the country and to be brought forth here.

These reports all state, in the face of the objections made by the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Alabama, and the topographical features of the country as delineated in the maps, and its geographical description, all testify to the fact that the bay of Pensacola has an abundance of fresh water without connecting it with the Alabama River.

The Yellow River and the Blackwater and streams emptying into Santa Rosa Sound and Pensacola Bay running far up into the country are fresh-water streams. The proposed new site of a navy-yard far removed beyond the reach of any enemy's guns is a place selected because of the abundance of fresh water. It is nearer to the coal and iron fields of Alabama than any other point, and the cost of transportation of supplies will be less. It is nearer in time, it is nearer in distance. One railroad already communicates with that portion of the country, another directly communicating with it is in process of construction, and another road has been organized with capital sufficient to build it, I am informed, connecting Memphis with Pensacola. It is unquestionably designed to be the great seat of commerce and of naval offense and of defense, as it has always been, of the Gulf of Mexico.

This subject, as I have said, has been considered ever since a period antedating the acquisition of the territory from Spain. Pensacola was the rendezvous of the Spanish and the English fleets, the only place of refuge, the only place where they could be accommodated safely, with easy and sure access to the Gulf and with egress from the harbor, and impossible of being blockaded, and that is an essential feature for any place as a naval station and for the construction of ships.

Now, compare these two places. Here is the Mississippi River. Military and naval men have reported the fact and Admiral Farragut, whose testimony is here, saying that the preservation of Pensacola as a navy-yard, as a place for assembling, rendezvousing, and supplying the ships of the United States, and for their construction, was worth a war in itself. What better testimony can you have than that? The same man who penetrated up the Mississippi River with all the defenses of the Confederacy there, with his fleet, and captured it, has given this testimony in favor of Pensacola, and who does not know that a single sloop, a single small vessel sunk in the artificial channel made at an immense cost by Captain Eads, and preserved there by constant care, attention, and expense, would at once prevent the egress of all the ships you might build in the Mississippi River?

Who does not know the impossibility of constructing the necessary docks in the ever changing and uncertain soil of a rapidly-running stream of 150 feet depth, a torrent always breaking over its banks? I am told by officers of the Navy who have examined the subject that the scheme is entirely impracticable, and that ships can not be built under those conditions with any certainty. You might as well undertake to establish a navy-yard for the building of ships under the falls of Niagara.

Mr. GIBSON. Will the Senator from Florida permit me to interrupt him there?

Mr. CALL. Certainly.

Mr. GIBSON. They are building now some of the largest ships in the United States on the docks right at Algiers.

Mr. CALL. They may build one or two ships, but it is an undeniable fact, and all the naval experience and all the reasonable probabilities are against the possibility of making a navy-yard in a stream that overflows and washes nearly everything away every few years, at times beyond the control of men, carrying destruction with it, and constantly threatening the city of New Orleans. You can not have the docks there. I was told this morning by a leading officer of the Navy that that was the settled and the better opinion of naval men who have studied the subject.

But suppose the statement of the Senator to be correct, how will you get your ships out? You pay millions of dollars to make and preserve a channel there.

What is the difficulty of blocking that exit to the sea? It requires great and constant care to keep it from closing itself, without any aid from an enemy. At Pensacola, however, we have a broad, magnificent exit to the ocean, which has always been used, not 50 or 200 miles, not 24 miles through a narrow channel, like Mobile Bay, where on either side a ship will be stranded outside of a 125 or 150 feet channel; you have but two miles and a half to defend for an exit to the sea, with a greater supply of water than anywhere upon the Gulf of Mexico.

Mr. President, as I said, here is the report of Commodore Tatnall, here is the report of Commodore Rodgers, and the reports of other officers upon the subject of the defense of the Gulf of Mexico, the one pointing to the Dry Tortugas as a valuable place for the southern portion, of Florida and the only appropriate place not for a yard of construction but a place of refuge, a fortified position, a Gibraltar, as he terms it, for the protection of the Gulf of Mexico, and the other for the port of Pensacola, where it properly belongs, with its magnificent harbor.

I only wish to say, in regard to this matter about Mobile, that here is the report of the Engineer Department. Here was an improvement commenced by the General Government in 1827, the depth of water then being 5½ feet through Choctaw Pass and 8 feet on Dog River Bar. That is a magnificent place to build a navy! The expense has been from 1827, under the several bills of improvement, to the present date about $1,400,000.

For what? Through a mud bar 24 or 28 miles long, with a channel of 125 feet, designed to be made 200 feet in width, and they have gotten at the highest rate 17 feet of water, and two vessels actually passed in one year through that 17 feet of water, the abrasions upon the shores on either side of this narrow channel having refilled it to the depth of 16 feet, as the engineer says; the ordinary safe depth is 15½ feet. If this money had been expended on Pensacola Bay, what a grand harbor you would have. With all this expenditure the commerce of Mobile, even with the rivers running into it from a rich upper country, has decreased until the report shows it has become an insignificant amount, and Pensacola now has a foreign commerce far greater than Mobile.

That is the result of the improvements from 1827 to the present day, not approaching by 5 or 6 feet, according to the report of the engineers and of the commission two years ago, the water on Pensacola Bar, with a harbor nearer to the coal and iron of Alabama and Georgia than any other place, with a capacity to accommodate the navies of the world, and with 22 to 24 feet of water from the time of the Spanish dominion to the present day, with fewer visitations of yellow fever than Mobile or New Orleans has had—not one-third as many—with every possible inducement to the commerce of the country now seeking connection with it from the Mississippi River at Memphis, from Selma in Alabama, and already connected by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad with the western portions of the country.

There is a magnificent harbor of defense and a proper place for egress of the fleets of the United States for the protection of the commerce of the Gulf of Mexico, and yet we are to have another inquiry to find out whether or not the Mississippi River, with its Eads jetties, its wicker-work protection, and the shallow, muddy flats of Mobile Bay, with its narrow channel of 125 feet for 28 miles, is to be selected as the yard for the construction of ships! Surely this can not be the object of this provision in the appropriation bill as sent from the House.

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, there is evidently a misapprehension on the part of the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. PASCO] with reference to the banks of the Mississippi River at Algiers. The village of Algiers has never been washed away. The banks are quite as permanent there as they are in the upper countries on the Mississippi River. In 1856 the Congress of the United States acquired land enough just below Algiers, on the opposite bank of the Mississippi River to the city of New Orleans, for a navy-yard, and it still owns that land.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL] referred to the wicker-work at the mouth of the Mississippi. I will say to the Senator that in the outset Captain Eads did build a line of wicker-work on either side of the Mississippi River, projecting out into the Gulf of Mexico over the bar; but by the deposits brought down from the upper country this wicker-work was filled up and became a solid embankment, and on top of that embankment stone was placed, and in the rear of the arms of these jetties, which penetrate into the Gulf of Mexico, the whole country is filled up, trees are growing on it, and it is as firm and solid as if it were made of granite, as I said before.

I can not understand why it is, if the Senator from Florida feels so confident of the superiority of Pensacola as a site for a navy-yard, that he should oppose the appointment of a commission to investigate and sustain the interesting statements which the Senator has made here this morning.

The navy-yard at Pensacola was established in colonial times, when Florida was a dependency of Spain or of France; but I repeat that at that time we had no rifled cannon; we had no iron ships. They went into the forests and built ships. They built them of wood. They had the material close at hand and they had Santa Rosa Island; they had a beautiful bay in which could be assembled the fleet of the United States; but naval warfare has entirely changed.

We have to-day heavy guns; we have iron-clad vessels. It is a matter of mechanism and of machinery rather than of individual exploit. Science is brought to bear in the construction of ships, and we need a great navy-yard near to the Gulf of Mexico in order not only to build but to equip the ships that are to be constructed. These vessels of war are necessary to defend not only the Mississippi Valley but the Gulf of Mexico itself, and, as the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MCPHERSON] has very properly said, on the completion of the canal at Panama, or Nicaragua, or Tehuantepec (and I am one who believe that the Panama canal will be completed).

The vast development of the commerce of the world in this quarter and our own growing intercourse with South America, with Cuba, and with Mexico, as well as the security of free institutions, demand that there should be a great navy-yard somewhere upon our Southern coast, either at the outlet of the Mississippi River or somewhere in Florida or somewhere in Alabama or in Texas. I am willing, for one, to leave that to a commission of scientific naval officers, who will not be swayed or biased by any political sentiment, either in favor of Florida, Alabama, or Louisiana, but who will give to us a report based upon facts and upon their own experience, their ability to classify and to analyze and to appreciate the facts that are developed.

Mr. REAGAN. I ask the Secretary to note an amendment I shall propose to this clause. It is to insert after the word "Mexico," in line 312, the words "or on the Mississippi River;" and I desire to call attention to the reason I have for making this suggestion.

The object of the establishment of a navy-yard is to give us a place where we can build vessels, and to give us fresh water in which we can build iron and steel vessels, and to build them where they will be available for the defense of the country. I renew the suggestion because I feel that it is one of importance. We can not hope always to escape trouble with Great Britain.

No one can foresee when that will be precipitated. At the present time, by an arrangement between the United States and Great Britain, we are precluded from having gunboats upon the Lakes, upon which so large a portion of the population and wealth of this country reside. The English Government, the Canadian Government, has built the Welland Canal, which would enable them at any time to throw gunboats enough into the Lakes to command the lakes in a military point of view, and to destroy our cities on the borders of the Lakes.

One of two things ought to be done, either the policy ought to be revised which precludes us from building and owning as many gunboats and vessels of war as we please upon the Lakes, or else we ought to enlarge the canal from Chicago to La Salle on the Illinois River, a canal that is already in existence, and complete the deepening of the water in the Illinois River from La Salle to the Mississippi. By doing that and getting a depth of water that would enable us to transfer gunboats from the Mississippi to the Lakes or from the Lakes to the Mississippi, as we pleased, it would give us a protection against the contingency which is created by the present policy and by the construction of the Welland Canal.

The military department of the Government it seems to me ought to have its attention drawn to this matter, and to this end I should be glad to see the commission authorized to look for a place for a navy-yard on the Mississippi River as well as upon the Gulf of Mexico, for a navy-yard established, as was suggested by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GIBSON] at Algiers, at Natchez, at Vicksburg, at Memphis, or at St. Louis, with that deepening of water which is necessary to get to the Gulf from St. Louis, or to get into the Lakes from the Mississippi by the way of the Illinois River and the La Salle Canal, would complete our preparations for defense or for aggression.

It seems to me that in connection with the proposition to establish this navy-yard we ought not to lose sight of the great uses to which it might be put. I regard this as one of the most important.

As suggested by the Senator from Louisiana, the construction of the canal now in progress across the Isthmus or the construction of a ship railroad or canal across by way of Tehuantepec or a canal by way of Nicaragua will increase the commercial activities of that country to an enormous extent, and, as I said yesterday on another subject, will operate more importantly to influence the commerce of the world than the construction of the Suez Canal did.

We would then need a position where ships could be built and repaired as conveniently as practicable to that great line of commerce and to cover the extensive coast region from the Rio Grande around the Gulf and the capes of Florida. So, it seems to me that whatever else may be presented by other places, when this inquiry is made it ought to be made as to the Mississippi as well as to the Gulf of Mexico.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN], to insert, after the word "Mexico," in line 312, the words "or on the Mississippi River."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I desire to offer an amendment to come in on page 26.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending amendment has not yet been disposed of. The question is upon concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole, to strike out the lines from 309 to 314, inclusive as amended. [Putting the question.] The noes appear to have it.

Mr. CALL. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Florida asks that upon this question the yeas and nays may be entered on the Journal.

Mr. GORMAN and others (to Mr. CALL). Withdraw the demand.

Mr. CALL. I withdraw the demand.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is non-concurred in, and the next reserved amendment will be stated.

Mr. ALLISON. What became of the amendment on the top of page 14, from line 309 to line 314?

Mr. HALE. The yeas and nays were ordered on it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The call for the yeas and nays was withdrawn, and the amendment was non-concurred in.

Mr. HALE. I do not think that was understood.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will then again submit the question.

Mr. HALE. I supposed the yeas and nays had been ordered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HALE. I do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine asks that upon concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole the yeas and nays may be entered on the Journal.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ALLISON. Before the amendment is voted on I should like to ask some Senator friendly to the provision to explain what is meant by "expenses of sounding and surveying and estimating expenses." Is it intended that this commission of three officers shall go along the Gulf of Mexico and make soundings, and, as the amendment moved by the Senator from Texas has been adopted, that they shall traverse the Mississippi River from its mouth to St. Louis, or to St. Paul, and examine that river with the view of establishing a navy-yard?

Mr. MORGAN. This part of the bill originated in the House of Representatives and with the Committee on Naval Affairs of that body. I am informed by the chairman of that committee that the purpose of putting in a provision for soundings, borings, and other methods of examination is to ascertain the nature of the ground upon which a ship-yard would be constructed, and also the opportunity which might be afforded on the margin of a river or an inlet of the sea to build dry-docks.

It may not take $50,000 to do this work. I do not know that it will. I do not know that it will not. I should dislike to exclude any part of the Mississippi River from this examination, any eligible location from St. Louis down. I should dislike also to exclude any part of the Mobile River from Mount Vernon down. I should dislike to exclude any of the inlets from the sea which might be considered as available. I can not name them now, though there are several places along the seaboard west of the Mississippi River, and several between that and Mobile, where the building of ships might be conducted with great success.

I will say to the Senator from Iowa that very little is known about that coast. Very little money has been expended upon it. What we need most is information. Very recently I obtained from the Coast Survey a survey of the Mobile River from Mount Vernon to Mobile, and, as I stated yesterday, I was greatly astonished to find that it was a good deal better river than the Delaware for getting ships out; that it was deeper water; that there were broader banks, the river was wider, and there was a greater collection of water.

I think that, in order to come to an intelligent conclusion about the right place to build a naval construction yard, these officers ought to have the opportunity to sound, bore, and test not only at the location where the yard may be placed, but also at intervening locations between that point and the seaboard, to see what it would cost to remove any mud bars or obstructions which might exist.

What we want, of course, is an interior place. We want fresh water. We want deep water. We want a broad channel in which to launch ships. We want that sort of a place which does not exist, for instance, at Wilmington, where they could not make contracts for large ships, because they did not have the opportunity to launch them. If we get a place, we want a good place.

Mr. ALLISON. I made the inquiry for the purpose of ascertaining how the $50,000 was to be expended. If the three naval officers who are to act as a commission are to make soundings and surveys of the areas embraced within the provision, it will cost instead of $50,000 a great many more thousand dollars.

Mr. MORGAN. Oh, not the entire bed of the river.

Mr. ALLISON. The Coast Survey has surveyed the entire coast of the Gulf of Mexico, so that a mere reference to their survey will be ample in that instance.

Mr. MORGAN. It might be.

Mr. ALLISON. So far as the Mississippi River is concerned, the depth of water is certainly well known.

Mr. GIBSON. If the Senator will permit me, I will state that the Mississippi River Commission have surveyed the Mississippi River completely.

Mr. ALLISON. Then it is not necessary to survey the Mississippi River or to sound it.

Mr. MORGAN. That is not contemplated.

Mr. ALLISON. So I think if we are to make the appropriation and allow the commission to make the examination, we ought to exclude the idea of making soundings and surveys.

Mr. MORGAN. Yes, of the river in a general sense, of course, but the soundings and surveys, as I understand, apply to the location.

Mr. ALLISON. To the location of the navy-yard?

Mr. MORGAN. Yes.

Mr. ALLISON. But they are not authorized to locate a navy-yard.

Mr. MORGAN. Not by any means, but they want to bring us information of the comparative merits of different localities.

Mr. ALLISON. For example, we have at Pensacola a navy-yard which I think has been established for over fifty years. Certainly it is not necessary to make a resurvey of the immediate vicinity of Pensacola.

Mr. MORGAN. Probably not.

Mr. ALLISON. I take it for granted that when the Pensacola navy-yard was established it was supposed to be the best location on the Gulf of Mexico. I should be glad to see an establishment somewhere on the Mississippi River, but it seems to me that the provision might well be projected in this way: A provision to dispense with the Pensacola navy-yard and establish one somewhere else on the Gulf of Mexico.

Mr. MORGAN. If the Senator from Iowa desires to treat the subject in that way he is welcome to do so, and we shall go into debate about it. If he wants to abolish the navy-yard at Pensacola I suppose he would undertake to do it by a general act of legislation applicable to that and all other navy-yards.

Mr. ALLISON. I will ask the Senator from Alabama if the provision does imply that Pensacola is not a suitable place for a navy-yard?

Mr. MORGAN. Not by any means.

Mr. ALLISON. We have a navy-yard there, one established long ago.

Mr. MORGAN. There is no implication of that sort by any means, and none can be drawn from the clause by any fair process of reasoning.

Mr. ALLISON. I think this sum is entirely beyond any necessity, such as is proposed by the Senator from Alabama or the friends of the measure. Therefore I move, before the word "thousand," in line 314, to strike out "fifty" and insert "ten;" so as to read: "$10,000."

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I have no information that would justify me in resisting the motion of the committee to strike out the provision, because this matter has come before me merely as one of the loose Senators about this establishment who never know anything and who are never permitted to know anything outside of what is done by a Committee on Appropriations. The gentlemen on the Naval Committee of the House of Representatives are supposed to understand something about matters of this kind, but their opinion is not worth anything here. You must get a man from the Committee on Appropriations before he knows anything about naval affairs in this country, or military affairs, or even scientific affairs.

I think that the Senator from Iowa ought to be able to define before the Senate, as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, why it is that $50,000 is not necessary. In the House of Representatives the Naval Committee took charge of this subject, investigated it upon their responsibility, reported it to the House, and the House voted the provision in the bill. It comes here to me and I have to defend it in the best way I can on the floor after the bill has been reported, without any time for consideration. I find that the committee, without asking anybody on the Gulf of Mexico a word about it, have stricken it out.

Perhaps if the Committee on Appropriations, instead of acting upon their own motion or upon the motion of one of the members of that committee who happens to have a navy-yard in his own State, had sought this information at any earlier day in the progress of the bill, I should have been able to inform the Senator from Iowa of the particular facts as reasons why $50,000 are necessary to conduct the borings and soundings and examinations of the bars, etc., in those unexplored and unexamined rivers, of which we have no surveys, and also of the particular localities there, at which dry-docks and naval construction yards might be built.

I understand that it is quite necessary when you commence the enterprise of building a dry-dock on the margin of a water course of any kind, particularly of a river, particularly of the Southern rivers, that you should conduct a series of borings to ascertain what is the nature of the soil beneath. That is the first thing you would undertake to do, and it would hardly be fair to any locality in the South that you should send a commission out into the field to locate a ship-yard of this kind without some means to conduct the soundings and borings which are necessary to develop, first, the nature of the foundations on which the yard itself would rest, and next, and very important, the character of the soil in connection with the building of dry-docks, for these are very important matters.

I am informed—I do not know anything about it beyond that—that the Secretary of the Navy desires to make these explorations. I infer from the fact that a committee of the House reported this provision, and the House passed it, that there was some reason for having the sum $50,000. Now, we are asked to vote $10,000 to oblige the economical disposition of the Senator from Iowa, who I find does not know anything more about it than I do. He can not state any more reasons why it should be $10,000 than I can state reasons why it should be $50,000. Let us vote $10,000 to accommodate the special spasm of economy that is on the heart of the Senator from Iowa, and let us send it into conference, and they will convince him whether it ought to be $50,000 or whether it ought to be $10,000. I can not do it.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator makes a gentle fling at the Committee on Appropriations because it has seen proper to strike out this provision, and he very kindly states that there was no one on the committee who was able to give information on the subject.

This is a provision to employ naval officers, and surely, although we have not a very great navy, we have vessels enough to transport them along these shores, and they are not to be paid out of this appropriation, because they receive pay now.

There have been but two suggestions made here as respects the location of this navy-yard. One is that it shall be in the neighborhood of the Senator from Alabama, in Mobile Bay, or on one of the rivers running into it. Another is that it shall be somewhere on the Mississippi River. It may be a spasm of economy in me to make this suggestion, or it may be otherwise. I do not make any great claim to any particularly economical spirit either on this provision or on any other, but I venture the suggestion that unless the men who are to constitute this commission are to take with them a corps for the purpose of exploring the rivers and sounding them and surveying them, they can not spend $50,000 in this examination, and that they will not expend it. Therefore I think it is an entirely unnecessary sum to put in the bill. The burden of proof is not upon the Committee on Appropriations to show that this is a necessary sum, but the burden is upon those who favor the proposition, and the Senator from Alabama very frankly states that he does not know anything about it.

Mr. MORGAN. I stated also that if I had had any notice that the committee intended of its own motion to strike out this provision without letting me or any person down there know anything about it I should have been prepared.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Alabama says that if he had known that the committee on its own motion would make this amendment, of course he would have furnished us with some information. But the Committee on Appropriations does nothing of its own motion.

The Senator has stated that the Secretary of the Navy desires to have this investigation made. Has any letter been read here from the Secretary of the Navy? Does any Senator in his place say that the Secretary of the Navy has committed himself to an expenditure of $50,000 for three Government officers to go in a Government vessel sailing around the coast of the Gulf of Mexico or up the Mississippi River?

When expenditures are presented to the Committee on Appropriations they are presented on estimates. Is there any estimate here for this appropriation? Is there any suggestion in the report of the Secretary of the Navy that we ought to examine the Mississippi River or Mobile Bay with a view to the establishment of a navy-yard?

Yet the Senator says the Committee on Appropriations ought not to have stricken out this provision. The Committee on Appropriations as a rule does not insert in these bills anything that is not found in the annual estimates. Now and then, of course, in the regular and ordinary appropriations for the existing public service it may put in an appropriation for a new vessel or for some additional supplies not mentioned in the estimates.

Mr. MORGAN. I will ask the Senator a question, if he will allow me. You put in the bill a provision for three cruisers of 2,000 tons each. Were they estimated for by the Secretary of the Navy?

Mr. ALLISON. That was a less appropriation for that purpose than was in the bill as it came to us from the House of Representatives. We substituted one for the other. But that is in the regular and ordinary course of the support and sustenance of the Navy. We have been building ships and cruisers for the last five or six years; and while I have not the estimates before me, I venture to make the statement that the Secretary of the Navy has estimated for more money for the purpose of building ships than is in the bill now or was in it as it came from the House. That is the general policy and the well-established policy as respects such things.

My colleague on the committee [Mr. BECK] suggests to me very properly that here is a report made by the House Committee on Naval Affairs giving the reasons for the various appropriations in the bill, and yet there is not in it one single word showing or stating that it is desirable to establish a new navy-yard on the Gulf of Mexico or on the Mississippi River. So when the Senator from Alabama says that the Committee on Appropriations acted of their own volition and motion he states what the facts do not disclose. There is no intimation anywhere except this naked provision that it is a desirable thing to do.

If the Senator from Alabama had been interested in this measure it would have been an easy thing for him even to have furnished the proof to the Committee on Appropriations. There is no letter from the Secretary of the Navy, there is no suggestion of the Secretary of the Navy, there is no recommendation of this provision either in the House report or any suggestion respecting it, except what is found on the face of the bill.

Therefore, when this matter came up in the Committee on Appropriations the committee decided, first, that it was not a wise thing to resound and resurvey the Gulf of Mexico, because we knew that the Coast Survey had made a pretty general survey of that coast; and we knew also that there was absolute knowledge as respects the Mississippi River, certainly as far up as Memphis, because not only has that survey been made by the Mississippi River Commission, but it has been made by the Coast Survey as well. It was made forty years ago by General Humphreys with great accuracy when he was an engineer upon that work.

So I think the Committee on Appropriations were justified in striking out this provision, and when I take the opportunity to inquire of the Senator from Alabama why it is that we are to engage in soundings of the rivers and in surveys of the rivers and the coasts, and why it is that $50,000 is required, he answers me by a criticism of the conduct of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MORGAN. When the Senator from Iowa put that question to me he knew very well that I was not a member of the Naval Committee or of the Committee on Appropriations of this body, and he knew just as much about this provision as I knew, which was that this feature came here from the House of Representatives in the bill. I had a right to suppose that the House of Representatives had some good sound reason for putting it in. I had a right to suppose even that there was an estimate for it. I stood upon that. I did not go before the Committee on Appropriations and file a brief. I am not very often found knocking at the door of that committee or any other money committee of this establishment with a view of trying to get a little help for my people. What few battles I have to fight in the Senate I fight on this floor, openly and above board, and I do not go around that committee with briefs, and touching of elbows, and pulling at buttons, and the like, to get gentlemen to favor plans that I think are valuable. I am willing to come before the people of the United States on the floor of the Senate and under the rules of this body to controvert in respect of the measures that I think affect my constituents or affect the good of the country to which I happen to belong.

So when the Senator complains that I did not file a brief, he can make the same complaint about everything else that comes up. I do not pursue that method. If we must here in the Senate of the United States hunt down the committee with briefs then we are in rather a bad position. I do not like that view of the subject.

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator will allow me, I will state that he criticised the Committee on Appropriations for taking hasty and inconsiderate action. I showed him that there was nothing before the Committee on Appropriations upon which it could act otherwise than it did act.

Mr. MORGAN. I never knew that until the Senator from Iowa, the chairman of the committee, stated that he did not know anything about it. I found the provision in the text of the bill. I found it struck out by the committee, and that was all I knew about it, and then I found the House of Representatives under fire for having made this appropriation without due consideration or proper estimate. I do know personally that the Secretary of the Navy was considerably interested three or four years past in looking out some location in the South where a navy-yard, a yard for naval construction, could be built. I think that that would commend itself to the sound judgment of any American statesman. That very view of the question would naturally attract the attention of any man who had the good of his country at heart and capacity enough to comprehend what would be best for it.

There ought to be a naval station in the South. I mean by a naval station a ship-yard. It ought to be somewhere there in convenient access to the great producing power of the interior of this country, which is transported to the seaboard upon the waters of the Mississippi River, and, if you please, upon the waters of the Alabama River.

I did not know that this provision was subject to a technical objection. I did not know that the committee had made a technical objection to it. I never thought about anything of that kind. They seem to have struck it out because there was no estimate for it. I am very sorry if there was no estimate. I am not able to answer upon that point. I have had nothing to do with presenting estimates. If the provision is to go out on a point of order, as a matter of course we can not help ourselves, though I understood that the Senator from Iowa by proposing to reduce the sum from $50,000 to $10,000 waived the point of order, and that the matter was before the Senate fairly for its consideration under our rules.

The subject has been debated here. I do not find that any member of that committee except the one whose State is interested has any objection to bringing in the information that the provision calls for from the commission proposed. I have not heard any other Senator on that committee say that the Senators from the Southern States should not have the benefit of this information as a predicate upon which they could hereafter propose something in the nature of an establishment for the building of ships of war, and dry-docks, and places of repair, and, if you please, for even heavy guns.

I know, Mr. President, that during the whole existence of this Government we have been neglectful of opportunities like this, but we are waking up now and taking an advanced line in respect of all industrial pursuits, and especially so in regard to the heavy mineral products, such as are necessary for the muniments of war and for the building of ships, and engines, and the like. We are coming to the front upon that subject. If Congress is not willing to assist us about it, or pay us any attention, we shall come to the front anyhow; it does not make any difference.

It will be but a very few years until we shall have absorbed in the Southern States the production of iron to such an extent that Great Britain will no longer control the markets of the world. We have to-day a capacity for producing very high qualities of iron, and very soon we shall have equal capacity for producing very high qualities of steel, which will override the power of Great Britain in the control and monopoly of this enormous industry. You will find that the wealth which Great Britain in the Cleveland district has so amassed and made herself so splendid with, will begin to crystallize about the establishments in the Southern States, and that, too, without the necessity of a high protective tariff. We shall send our productions out through this country so cheaply that the people can have the advantage of the beneficence of God Almighty in connection with the skill and enterprise of men who are now free to work and who are ready to do it.

Congress may neglect as much as it pleases; technical objections may be interposed here whenever gentlemen choose to interpose them; Senators may neglect us whose duty it is at least to look after us; jealousies may spring up and for a while cripple us in our progress, but still we shall act upon the broad idea of the general progress of the South. Our development is going to correspond with our resources, and when they do we shall be just as magnificent a people as exists in this world.

God has blessed us with resources which are not paralleled anywhere in the world. We are now beginning to wake up to the idea of our ability to handle them, and after a little while we shall not be at all dependent upon Congress. No, sir; Congress is dependent upon us more than we are upon her. Every Senator here knows that. In the event of a fierce war with any great maritime power, it would be an absolute necessity of the situation that we should have the means of producing ships and guns upon the waters of the Mississippi River or some other place accessible to the Gulf of Mexico in the most rapid and excellent manner that is possible.

No man can shut his eyes to the necessities of the situation connected with the conjecture of a war which may occur between us and a great maritime power. I would gladly shut my eyes to such occasions; I would gladly dismiss such prognostics from my thoughts; but they will come upon us for the very reason that the country which lies around us and contiguous to us, now under the domination of royal authority beyond the Atlantic Ocean, after a little bit will become a prize and a contention between us and the great powers of the earth. We can not avoid it. Our fathers did not have the means of capturing the picket-line which commences at Newfoundland and runs around to Yucatan. When we established this magnificent Republic upon this continent we did not have the means to do it. Nevertheless, it remains a duty for us to perform, or, if not for us, for our posterity to perform.

It is one of the necessities of our situation upon this hemisphere that those picket-lines and outposts shall fall into our possession and not be in the ownership of any other nation on earth. It is a part of the great mission of this constitutional Republic that it should be so.

What I am doing in regard to this matter is not to get a few dollars of your money expended in the South. That is not the idea. We are willing to furnish you with cheaper material for building your ships than you can get anywhere else, and we will build them in the very best waters to be found, better than the waters of the Delaware for floating ships to the sea. We are willing to furnish you with a variety of timber trees there which are not excelled in any part of the earth, either in quantity or quality, or in variety. We are willing to contribute all the resources of nature so abundantly lavished upon us to the Government of the United States in order to assist in building up a Navy, without which we are soon to cease to have even respectability among the nations of the earth. We are willing to do that, and all of that, and we are not here beggars for your favor—not by any means.

When I stand here advocating a measure which comes from the House of Representatives proposing to appropriate the paltry sum of $50,000 for explorations and soundings, I am met with the inquiry, where are you going to send the commission and what are you going to do? Sir, there are channels deep that lead to the sea, estuaries which are valuable to this country in a military as well as a commercial view, of which the people of the Northern and Middle States of the United States know nothing, because you have not favored us with surveys. I repeat that I had myself to go to the Bureau of the Coast Survey to ask as a favor that they would run lines up and down the Mobile River. The charts have been made and the development shows one of the most magnificent currents of deep fresh water to be found on this continent, of which Senators on this floor were just as ignorant as they are to-day of the waters of Iceland or of Lapland; and so in regard to other places.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator will allow me to ask him a question for information, has not the survey of the Coast Survey been made as thorough in regard to the part of the country in which the Senator lives as any other part of the country?

Mr. MORGAN. Not by any means. It is a mere fringe along the outer coast, along the ocean.

Mr. HOAR. I do not think that is the general understanding.

Mr. MORGAN. I know it is not. I have no doubt the Senator from Massachusetts is right about that. That is not the general understanding. But would the Senator from Massachusetts have believed that we have an arsenal at Mount Vernon, 50 or 55 miles north of Mobile, on the Mobile River, and that no line had ever been run from the city of Mobile or the Bay of Mobile up to that place in that broad, deep expanse of water, and that the Coast Survey charts did not show a mark in regard to it? Yet there are numbers of other points which are equally in an unfortunate and a neglected place. The territory represented here by the Senator from Louisiana is terra incognita in regard to some of the most important inlets from the sea. We have a mere fringe of survey around that border. That is all we have, and that is one reason which actuated me at least in urging that there should be some opportunity on the part of this commission to make some little investigations for themselves, for the Government of the United States has done it. All I claim here, Mr. President, is fair play.

Mr. BECK. Mr. President, we are spending a good deal of time over a matter about which I think there is very little difference of opinion. While a good deal can be said about the greatness of this country and the need of improvements everywhere, the Committee on Appropriations (and that is all I care to say) acted in this matter, as we thought, with absolute respect for the members of the other House in striking out the provision.

The bill came to us with an entirely new provision in it, not estimated for by the Navy Department. It came to us with a report from the chairman of the committee having charge of the bill, which made no reference to this provision. We turned to the RECORD of the proceedings of the House of Representatives, and I hold it in my hand from beginning to end, and there was no allusion made to this provision in the debates in the House. Therefore, having no estimate from the Department, there having been no reference made to it in the debates in the House, as the RECORD shows, and no reference made to it in the report the chairman of the House committee furnished in regard to the items in the bill, and it being entirely new, and being advised by a member of the committee that Pensacola is a great navy-yard, as we knew, or a great location for one, in striking it out we did the only wise thing according to our view, believing as I did at the time that the Navy Department had authority to make these surveys.

Striking it out in the Senate does not eliminate it from the bill. We do that all the time when we have no information either from the Navy Department or from the House debates or from the report made by the House committee and it is a new matter altogether. We strike it out because we do not know what to say about it nor what is the true amount to appropriate; and when we meet together in conference if the conferees on the part of the House advise us as to what reasons they had for putting it in, either as to amount or anything else, it is then open for settlement, and the Senate conferees have never resisted a fair explanation made on the other side. That would be the attitude of this provision if it should be stricken out in the Senate.

But since it has been suggested that some sum ought to be inserted, if $10,000, or $20,000, or $25,000, or $50,000 should be put in, I have no idea that the Department will spend any more than is needed. If the suggestion of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] is agreed to and the provision is reinserted with $10,000, and the conferees on the part of the House will show us that $50,000 is required, or if when the conference committee gets together it will send for the Secretary of the Navy, as it can very well do, and ask him what will be needed for this work, the true amount will be inserted. That is all there is of it. In any event it is still open.

I think the Senate will readily see, and the Senator from Alabama will readily see, that at first blush, as it was presented to the committee without an estimate, or a debate, or a suggestion in the report, all we could do in justice to the Senate was to say, for the time-being let the provision go out until further information is obtained. That is all there is of this whole thing.

I will vote for $10,000 or for $50,000, if that is the true amount, because I know there will be no survey made of the Mississippi River or of all the tributaries under this provision. I agree with the Senator from Alabama that surveys are necessary; that investigation ought to be had; that we ought to build a navy-yard on the Gulf, and that we ought to have it in the best place. If Pensacola is not the best place, as there may be difficulties about yellow fever or other climatic conditions, or if other reasons make some other place better, let us have it at the best place. A survey will have to be made to enable us to select a place so as to make an intelligible report as to what ought to be done; and the best survey ought to be had, so as to show sufficient reasons why it is proposed to be located there, and let the Secretary of the Navy have what money is needed to do it, and when we get that information we can act upon it intelligently. That is all there is of it, and that is all that influenced the committee.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] has good ground for his declaration of independence of the Government of the United States. He has good ground for saying that it is of little consequence to him or to some of those whom he represents what action Congress may take in the expenditure of the public moneys. He has good ground for saying that the protective tariff is a matter of comparatively little importance to his section of the country.

But, sir, the ground which I understand him to give as the reason of his independence does not seem to me to be the true and the correct ground of that independence which I concede. It is not because throughout the South there are vast and abundant resources as yet undeveloped but developing. It is not by reason of the abundance of nature as compared with other portions of the Union that the Senator is independent of the Government of the United States. By no manner of means is that the case. I desire that the ground of Southern independence shall be fully understood, and that it shall be placed upon its true foundation in this debate, if it is to be discussed at all.

It is this, that by reason of conditions which have previously existed there and which are still continuing, in a process of dissolution and disappearance I admit, and I am glad that it is so—by reason of those conditions still partially existing, the labor of the South is as a whole cheaper than the labor of Europe to-day. That is the reason of the independence of the Senator from Alabama and of the independence of the controlling influences in that section of the country who handle its capital and who look forward, many of them, to the control of the riches which are to be developed by that cheap labor in the future. It is because of a comprehension of that which is to come by reason of the control on the part of the few of the masses of the Southern people in the matter of their earnings in the future that they are independent, and that they insist upon opposition to such measures as the trifling appropriations which have been proposed here in this Congress and in former Congresses in the direction of the education of the people of the whole country.

The secret of the Senator's independence is the ignorance of the masses of those who perform his labor, for ignorance is slavery, and wherever you find an ignorant population, where the masses of those who work are ignorant, there their wages are low. It is because of the ignorance of those who possess the muscle of the South and its producing power that the Senator from Alabama is so independent upon the floor of Congress to-day, and there is no other basis for it.

To me it seems like a shame and an infamous disgrace that we deal as we do with these vast appropriations, millions for apparently the most trivial subject, appropriating $10,000,000 for a single ironclad yesterday, Southern Senators making that proposition, and Northern Senators supporting it—$10,000,000 for a single ironclad, more than we proposed as the appropriation for a single year for the equalization of the privileges of education all through the country.

There is not a political economist on the face of God's earth who does not know and does not proclaim as a fundamental proposition that the man in war educated is worth twice as much as the same man in war ignorant; that the thinking bayonet is worth at least double the bayonet of the ignorant man.

So as a matter of national defense it would be prudent for us to vote hundreds of millions to develop the souls of our people rather than to expend it upon dumb fortifications, continental floating fortifications, as well as the vast earth and other works which it is proposed to erect all along our coast, and perhaps bordering our defensive lines in the interior.

But, sir, the point to which I wish to call the attention of the Senate is that the South is independent to-day of the tariff by reason of the fact that she holds the great mass of her labor in substantial thraldom, and that there is nothing but education which can liberate them.

I am aware that there is force in the position which a portion of the Southern people take in their opposition to the education of the masses of their population. There is force in it; there is power in it. A great aristocracy is always formidable in war. We found it so in the late war. The South was an aristocracy then, and the war which they waged upon us taught us that such a power is well-nigh invincible under an equality of conditions.

But, sir, that has all passed away, and I am one of those who insist upon it that it is necessary that the revolution should not go backward, that the aristocracy as an aristocracy should cease to exist, and that the power, the sovereignty of the country should be diffused and equalized throughout the entire country. That can be done only by diffusing knowledge, for knowledge is power, and as you give an equality of knowledge, of intelligence among the masses of the people, just to that extent you destroy the one-man power which is the secret of the fact that the Senator from Alabama is able to boast on the floor of the Senate to-day that he cares nothing for this Government so far as his dependence upon it is concerned. He is proud of its power and wealth. He exults in the prospect of future acquisitions.

I concede to the Senator the warm impulses of the patriot in that sense; but, sir, his section is not able to dispense with the same sort of industrial protection which is indispensable to the life of the North on any other condition than that the average of intelligence among the people of the South is necessarily lower than that among the people of the North. He proposes to continue it by denying to the masses of the people the power of individual, personal self-development which will enable them to demand and to receive, dollar for dollar, the same amount which the laboring man gets at the North.

The policy which I advocate is not a policy which is hurtful to the South, or to the building up of the institutions of the South, or to the development of the resources of the South, for as you educate the masses you make them a consuming power. There is no way in which the institutions and civilization of the North can avoid destruction by the competition of cheap Southern labor save by the development and the elevation of the masses of the Southern people, who thereby will be enabled to demand those wages which, being the purchasing power that the laboring population everywhere must depend upon, will enable them to consume the very commodities which their increasing development creates.

Here is the true secret of American defense. It was a greater than any of us who said that "education is the chief defense of nations." I am speaking upon the development of the war power when I say, give a few millions to the masses of the people throughout the South and the North in proportion to the illiteracy and the need wherever it exists, and the Senator from Alabama will never again rise in his place on the floor of the Senate and say he is independent of the Government of the United States.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] in his remarks stated that a member of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate had a navy-yard in his State, and the implication was that the suggestion to strike out this provision of the House had originated with me. I desire to say that what was very unusual occurred when this amendment was before the committee. I happened to be absent from the committee when this clause of the bill was considered and the action was taken striking it out.

Had I been there, however, I should not have felt myself prevented by the fact that the navy-yard was in the State of Florida from doing what was manifestly right and what ought to have been done under the circumstances—voting to strike out this provision on the ground that the question had been settled by the common consent and judgment of all authorities on the subject for many years in favor of Pensacola Bay.

The only provision of this kind which with any propriety could have been inserted in the bill in relation to navy-yards in the Gulf of Mexico would have been an appropriation which would enable the Secretary of the Navy to remove the present site of the Pensacola navy-yard, as recommended by Commodore Harmony, to a higher point up the bay, where it would be entirely beyond the range of the artillery known to exist to-day.

There is no kind of a pretense why this attack upon the Pensacola navy-yard should be made, for that is what it means. It means a proposition to find another site for a navy-yard, and it is an implication that that navy-yard was not sufficient for the purposes of the Government; that it is not a suitable site. It is a mere assumption, and it is notable that not a single opinion of any military or naval man of any kind has been referred to by the advocates of this commission—not one.

The Senator from Alabama says that the Mississippi River, bearing its great productions to the Gulf and to the ocean, and the Alabama River, perhaps, ought to be considered in respect to the location of a navy-yard and the facilities for the defense of the commerce originating there. I have the reports before me which show how much is the commerce of the Alabama River as compared with Pensacola. How much of the production of Alabama passes through this great natural outlet to the sea? Pensacola sent 480 steam-ships, according to the report, out of her harbor in 1887, and how many ships of all sizes, little and great, went over Mobile Bar? About two hundred.

The ships that go into Pensacola do not go up a narrow, tortuous channel of 28 miles to reach that magnificent range of inland waters along the Alabama River, of which the Senator from Alabama speaks. Here are 480 steam-ships with a tonnage of about 280,000 tons. In the report as to Mobile there are only 200, with about half this tonnage, while Mobile has had $1,400,000 since 1827 to make fifteen and a half feet of water, and there has been an expenditure of $175,000 or $200,000 at Pensacola.

What is the use of discussing the proposition? How are you to make a channel if you have not been able to do it up to this time? Here is the report. Here is the survey for 28 miles through a mud bank, and who, except the Senator from Louisiana, ever heard of the idea of building a navy-yard up the Mississippi River for ships to go out in time of war, where a single ship sunk in the channel would destroy it, at least during the period of the war?

Mr. President, if the question of the removal of the navy-yard and the selection of a new site were brought into the Senate to be considered, and the subject should be fairly considered, it would be found that there is not a solitary objection to be made to Pensacola. There is fresh water there, as much as there is in Mobile Bay. There is any depth of water. There are several channels into the Gulf and from the Gulf into Pensacola Bay. It is the deepest harbor to be found anywhere upon the Gulf. It has the most capacious and safe anchorage. It has a better bill of health than New Orleans or Mobile or any other place on the coast, all of them having been more or less subject to yellow fever at times. If there had been any ground of objection I should have been very willing to have had it discussed, and to have had a commission to select a site; but there has been none pointed out on any reasonable ground. That is all I desire to say.

Mr. HALE. Now let us see if we can not get a vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 314, before the word "thousand," it is proposed to strike out "fifty" and insert "ten;" so as to read, "$10,000."

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is upon concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. MITCHELL. If the amendment of the committee striking out the clause is to be overruled, and if the clause is to be retained in the bill, I think it should be amended.

Mr. HALE. You desire to amend the part proposed to be stricken out?

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes, I move to amend the part proposed to be stricken out by inserting, after the word "dollars," in line 314:

That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, required to appoint a commission composed of three competent naval officers, whose duty it shall be to examine the coast north of the forty-second parallel of north latitude, in the State of Oregon and Territories of Washington and Alaska, and select a suitable site, having due regard to the commercial and naval necessities of that coast, for a navy-yard and docks, and, having selected such site, shall, if upon private lands, estimate its value and ascertain the price for which it can be purchased, and of their proceedings and action make full and detailed report to the Secretary of the Navy; and the Secretary of the Navy shall transmit such report, with his recommendations, to Congress. To defray the expenses of such commission the sum of $1,000 of the above amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, may be used.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL].

Mr. MITCHELL. I do not wish to take up the time of the Senate in regard to this proposed amendment, but I shall content myself with the simple statement that the amendment has heretofore been reported as a separate bill from the Committee on Naval Affairs, and passed unanimously by the Senate at the present session.

I believe all will agree that if there is any necessity for the establishment of new navy-yards or naval stations in the United States, one at least of the number should be established on the North Pacific coast. That seemed to be the view of the Committee on Naval Affairs who reported the bill of which this amendment is a copy. That seemed to be the view of the Senate when it passed the bill some two months ago without a dissenting vote. Therefore I now propose to add it as an amendment to the provision inserted by the House.

In this connection it will be observed that the amendment does not increase the appropriation one dollar. The bill as originally passed by the Senate simply appropriated $1,000. I understand that is all that will be necessary, in the opinion of the Department. The amendment as I now propose it provides that "$1,000 of the above amount," that is to say, of the $50,000, shall be used for this purpose.

I will state further that this naval station is recommended by the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks in a very strong recommendation contained in his last annual report. That report was referred to in the annual report of the Secretary of the Navy, and indorsed and approved by the Secretary of the Navy. It is most earnestly urged by the Admiral of the Navy in a lengthy letter which I hold in my hand, addressed to me some time since, which has already been printed not only in the RECORD but as an executive document.

As it has already been clearly indicated by the last vote of the Senate declining to reduce the amount of the appropriation in the bill that the proposition of the House is not to be stricken out by the Senate, it is but proper and just to another great section of the country that the provision should be amended as I propose.

Mr. HALE. If the clause in the bill is to be retained by the Senate, and if the Navy Department is to send out exploring expeditions to hunt up sites for new navy-yards, when we have so many now that we do not know what to do with them, I am, for one, entirely clear that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oregon should be adopted. If there is any portion of the country where a navy-yard would be useful, would supply a good need, and that good reasons could be urged for its establishment, it is upon the upper part of the Pacific coast, near by the place where Great Britain is to-day and has been for years establishing a great naval and military station.

The object of a navy-yard is not, as it seems to have been accepted by nearly everybody who has joined in this discussion, for defense. A navy-yard protects nothing. It only opens more Government property to destruction by the foe if it comes nigh. A navy-yard does not protect. A navy-yard is a place where shops may be built, stores may be collected for use; but none of the navy-yards are surrounded or connected with an elaborate system of fortifications. All that has been said in that regard does not apply to the establishment of new navy-yards anywhere.

But the temper of the Senate is evidently in favor of the Navy Department going forth on this new quest and finding more places where more money can be spent, where docks can be built, and where a civil force can be placed, increasing the number of what we have now so that they shall be more; and if that is to be done I hope that the amendment offered by the Senator from Oregon will be adopted. I commend his moderation in asking for only $1,000.

Mr. MITCHELL. On reflection I think the sum ought to be increased a little.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator does not make it too much, I shall not qualify my remarks.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will make it $5,000.

Mr. HALE. I was going to say that it is impossible to see how in an exploration conducted by naval officers, who are paid by the Government, upon naval ships which are maintained by the Government, with a complete outfit that is furnished for the survey by the Government, $5,000 or $10,000 or $15,000 could be spent. I hoped that the Senator would be content with his modest and simple request for $1,000. I do not think $5,000 would be very bad, but it is absurd to talk about spending on a survey of this kind $50,000.

Mr. MITCHELL. I knew I was very modest, but that was my innate nature; it was my natural modesty.

Mr. HALE. Everybody knows that.

Mr. MITCHELL. As everybody knows. I suggest, however, that my amendment be changed, making it "$5,000 of the above amount."

Mr. HALE. I do not think that is very bad.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated as modified.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, before the word "thousand," to strike out "one" and insert "five;" so as to read:

To defray the expenses of such commission the sum of $5,000 of the above amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, may be used.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PLUMB. I move to amend the provision by limiting the amount provided for by the House to $15,000. I do not believe that $50,000 could be usefully spent upon any theory whatever. I think that $15,000 is too much, but at the same time it is very much better to have it at $15,000 than to have it at $50,000. By appropriating an unnecessarily large sum undoubtedly some suggestion of extravagance and of going into unnecessary fields would occur to the commission. At all events, whether the money will be spent or not, I think it is proper that the appropriation should be somewhere within reasonable bounds. I therefore move to reduce the amount to $15,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 314, before the word "thousand," it is proposed to strike out "fifty" and insert "fifteen;" so as to read: "$15,000."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole, to strike out the clause which has been amended, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. STEWART. How does the clause stand as amended?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be read as amended.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

For the expenses of a commission of three officers, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Navy, to report as to the most desirable location on or near the Gulf of Mexico, or on the Mississippi River for a navy-yard and docks for shipping, and for the expenses of sounding and surveying and estimating expenses, $15,000.

That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, required to appoint a commission composed of three competent naval officers, whose duty it shall be to examine the coast north of the forty-second parallel of north latitude, in the State of Oregon, and Territories of Washington and Alaska, and select a suitable site, having due regard to the commercial and naval necessities of that coast, for a navy-yard and docks, and, having selected such site, shall, if upon private lands, estimate its value and ascertain the price for which it can be purchased, and of their proceedings and action make full and detailed report to the Secretary of the Navy; and the Secretary of the Navy shall transmit such report, with his recommendations, to Congress.

To defray the expenses of such commission the sum of $5,000 of the above amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, may be used.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. An affirmative vote strikes out the language which has been read. A negative vote restores it to the bill. The Secretary will call the roll on concurring in the amendment.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CAMERON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. MITCHELL (when Mr. DOLPH'S name was called). My colleague [Mr. DOLPH] is detained from the Senate by sickness in his family. He is paired generally with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BROWN]. If they were here both would vote "nay."

Mr. FAULKNER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY].

Mr. BATE (when the name of Mr. HARRIS was called). My colleague [Mr. HARRIS] is paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. If my colleague were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. PLUMB (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST]. Unless something may be said by his colleague [Mr. COCKRELL] to indicate that the pair would not apply probably to this vote, I shall withhold my vote.

Mr. PUGH (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. SABIN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KENNA].

The roll was concluded.

Mr. PLUMB. After consultation with the colleague of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] I will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], and I withdraw my vote.

Mr. MANDERSON. My colleague [Mr. PADDOCK] is paired generally with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. EUSTIS]. I do not know how my colleague would vote on this question if he were present.

Mr. GIBSON. My colleague [Mr. EUSTIS] would vote "nay" if he were present.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. CHACE] is paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT].

The result was announced—yeas 19, nays 24; as follows:

YEAS—19.

Allison,	Hale,	Jones of Arkansas,	Sherman,
Call,	Hampton,	Palmer,	Stockbridge,
Chandler,	Hawley,	Pasco,	Wilson of Iowa,
Dawes,	Hoar,	Platt,	Wilson of Md.
George,	Ingalls,	Sawyer,

NAYS—24.

Bate,	Cullom,	Hearst,	Reagan,
Beck,	Farwell,	Manderson,	Spooner,
Blackburn,	Frye,	Mitchell,	Stewart,
Blair,	Gibson,	Morgan,	Teller,
Cockrell,	Gorman,	Payne,	Vance,
Coke,	Gray,	Plumb,	Walthall.

ABSENT—33.

Aldrich,	Daniel,	Jones of Nevada,	Sabin,
Berry,	Davis,	Kenna,	Saulsbury,
Blodgett,	Dolph,	McPherson,	Stanford,
Bowen,	Edmunds,	Morrill,	Turpie,
Brown,	Eustis,	Paddock,	Vest,
Butler,	Evarts,	Pugh,	Voorhees.
Cameron,	Faulkner,	Quay,
Chace,	Harris,	Ransom,
Colquitt,	Hiscock,	Riddleberger,

So the amendment was non-concurred in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next reserved amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 42, in line 1002, after the word "manufacture," the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, struck out the following words:

At least one of said vessels shall be built in one of the navy-yards of the United States, and.

Mr. HALE. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] yesterday perfected an amendment that I think leaves the provision just as it should be; so that if the Secretary should not be able to contract for these ships he may make arrangements for building them in a navy-yard; but the provision ought not to be mandatory. It seemed to me, when the amendment was offered by the Senator from Alabama, that he had got it just right, and I hope the Senate will not strike out the remainder of the clause, as it was perfected on the motion of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the amendment be again reported.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment made as in Committee of the Whole was to strike out the words that will be read by the Chief Clerk.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 42, line 1002, after the word "manufacture," the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, struck out the following words:

At least one of said vessels shall be built in one of the navy-yards of the United States.

Mr. HALE. Yes, that should go out.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on concurring in the Senate with the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendment was concurred in.

Mr. HALE. There are one or two corrections to be made On page 33, line 788, the word "five" should be "twenty-five."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There are two words "five" in that line. To which one does the Senator refer?

Mr. HALE. The first one.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chief Clerk will report the proposed change.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 33, in line 788, it is proposed to change the word "five," where it first occurs, to "twenty-five;" so as to make the provision read:

To complete boat-house for steam launches, $25,000 in addition to the $5,000 heretofore appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is the bill (S. 12) to provide for the formation and admission into the Union of the State of Washington, and for other purposes.

Mr. STEWART. I ask unanimous consent that the special order be temporarily laid aside, and that the bill (S. 3304) to prohibit the coming of Chinese laborers to the United States, be now proceeded with. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] has not concluded his speech on that bill, and he suggested that he might be called away. I think we might have it disposed of this evening.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Pending the motion of the Senator from Nevada, will he allow the Chair to present business on the table for disposition?

Mr. STEWART. Certainly.

LIVE-OAK LANDS IN LOUISIANA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 196) to cancel certain reservations of lands, on account of live-oak, in the Southwestern land district of the State of Louisiana, which was, in line 13, after the word "laws," to insert the words "except section 2301 of the Revised Statutes."

Mr. PLUMB. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

SCHOOL AND UNIVERSITY LANDS IN WYOMING.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1782) to authorize the leasing of the school and university lands in the Territory of Wyoming, and for other purposes, which were, on page 1, to strike out, after the word "Territory," in line 7, all down to and including the word "Territory," in line 18; and on page 2, line 9, after the word "university," to insert the words "and school."

Mr. PLUMB. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 6264) to incorporate the Washington and Highlands Street Railway Company of the District of Columbia was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. DANIEL submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business be informally laid aside.

Mr. SAWYER. I have no objection to that, but I ask that we now take up private pension bills.

Mr. STEWART. I have no objection to the Senate taking up private pension bills, but I hope not at this moment. Let us finish this Chinese bill now.

Mr. FRYE. I desire to ask the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WILSON] whether or not it is his wish to proceed with the discussion of the fisheries treaty this afternoon?

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland. I would prefer to have it postponed until to-morrow, if agreeable to the Senate, as I am not feeling very well to-day.

Mr. FRYE. I desire to give notice that if the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] should not be present to-morrow morning, I shall move to proceed to the consideration of executive business with open doors immediately after the routine morning business.

Mr. ALLISON. I trust that will not be done, as I hope the Senate will take up the Army appropriation bill to-morrow morning.

Mr. SAWYER. I move that we now proceed to the consideration of individual pension bills under Rule VIII, or I will ask unanimous consent if that be preferable.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the unfinished business being informally laid aside?

Mr. HALE. What is the unfinished business?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is the bill (S. 12) to provide for the formation and admission into the Union of the State of Washington, and for other purposes. Is there objection to the unfinished business being informally laid aside? The Chair hears none.

Mr. SAWYER. I move now to proceed to the consideration of unobjected private pension bills.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin asks that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of private pension bills favorably reported. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The first pension bill on the Calendar will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. Order of Business No. 1710, being the bill (H. R. 2233) granting a pension to Bernard Carlin.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask my colleague to yield to me for a moment.

Mr. SAWYER. If it leads to any debate, I can not give way.

Mr. SPOONER. If it needs a word of explanation, and if I can not induce my colleague to give me a moment in which to make that explanation, I will not press it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ALLENTOWN, PA.

Mr. SPOONER. I am instructed by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to report favorably the bill (S. 3381) for the erection of a public building at Allentown, Pa., and I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered at this time. A similar bill passed both Houses, appropriating $100,000, and was vetoed by the President. This bill appropriates $70,000, and I ask that it may be considered at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The unfinished business having been informally laid aside and the pension bills being taken up by unanimous consent, the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] asks that the order for unanimous consent may be revoked and that unanimous consent be given for the consideration of the bill just reported, the title of which will be stated from the desk.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. No. 3381) for the erection of a public building at Allentown, Pa.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill; which was read at length.

Mr. HALE. Is this a general public-building bill?

Mr. SPOONER. No, it is a general public bill for one place, Allentown.

Mr. HALE. Only one building in it?

Mr. SPOONER. Only one building; one town.

Mr. HALE. And in one State?

Mr. SPOONER. One State, and one country.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SAWYER. I now move that we proceed with the consideration of private pension bills.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I suggest to the Senator that there are a number of bills on the Calendar, all of which ought to be considered, and it seems to me that it would be better to proceed with the regular Calendar, under Rule VIII. There are a number of House bills and other bills of much importance on the Calendar.

Mr. SAWYER. I am not willing to agree to that, because it will only take a short time to get through with the pension bills. To-morrow morning we can take up the Calendar and go through with it.

Mr. STEWART. I think there should be some time reached in which to finish the Chinese bill. The Senator from Wisconsin suggested to me that he would help me on that, and now he suggests taking up the Calendar to-morrow morning. That will not do.

Mr. SHERMAN. I thought unanimous consent had been given for the consideration of private pension bills now.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. That was laid aside, and it was so stated by the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The first pension bill on the Calendar will be announced.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I understood the Chair to announce that the unanimous consent that was given to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SAWYER] to take up pension bills was set aside on the motion of the other Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] to take up another bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It was.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. And that bill was disposed of. I should like to know by what means another order of business can be taken up now? The Chief Clerk, however, was proceeding to read a bill without any consent on the part of the Senate.

Mr. SPOONER. I hope the Senator from Arkansas will not object to proceeding, under the circumstances, with the pension bills.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I do not object, but I do think there ought to be some sort of reply made to the proposition I made, that the Calendar be proceeded with regularly. I suppose there ought to be no objection to that. It seems to me that it ought to be done by consent of everybody. If the Senate does not see fit to go on with the regular call of the Calendar, I shall not object to the consideration of pension cases.

Mr. SPOONER. I agree with the Senator that the regular call of the Calendar should be proceeded with as soon as possible, but unanimous consent having been given to proceed with pension cases I hope the Senator will not object.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. That unanimous consent was set aside.

Mr. SPOONER. I hope the Senator will not object to the consideration of pension cases.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I will not object.

Mr. SPOONER. I thought the regular order was only temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of private pension bills on the Calendar favorably reported? [A pause.] The Chair hears none. The first private pension bill will be stated.

BERNARD CARLIN.

The bill (H. R. 2233) granting a pension to Bernard Carlin was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Bernard Carlin, late of Company A, Fourteenth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WIDOW OF SAMUEL CLARY.

The bill (H. R. 7253) granting a pension to the widow of Samuel Clary was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Ann Clary, the widow of Samuel Clary, late a private in Company I, Twenty-fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteers, war of 1861.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROSANNA K. GRIFFIN.

The bill (H. R. 4785) granting a pension to Rosanna K. Griffin was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Rosanna K. Griffin, widow of James Griffin, late of Company I, One hundred and fifty-fifth New York Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY NEVELS.

The bill (H. R. 7162) for the relief of Mary Nevels was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-rolls the name of Mary Nevels, a blind orphan, whose father, Thomas Nevels, of Company G, Twelfth Regiment of Kentucky Volunteers, was killed in battle in October, 1863, at $18 per month during the term of her natural life.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REBECCA MANLOVE.

The bill (H. R. 9808) granting an increase of pension to Rebecca Manlove was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Mrs. Rebecca Manlove, widow of David Manlove, who served in the Navy in the war of 1812, from $12 to $30 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES M'INTYRE.

The bill (H. R. 7713) granting a pension to James McIntyre was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James McIntyre, late a private in Company G, Tenth Michigan Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ISAAC N. JOHNSON.

The bill (H. R. 5443) granting a pension to Isaac N. Johnson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Isaac N. Johnson, late a private of Company B, Second Regiment of Tennessee Mounted Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL F. C. GARRISON.

The bill (H. R. 185) granting a pension to Samuel F. C. Garrison was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Samuel F. C. Garrison, late chaplain Fortieth Regiment Iowa Volunteers, now a resident of El Dorado, Kans., on the pension-roll.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CAROLINE PAUTEL.

The bill (H. R. 7111) granting a pension to Caroline Pantel was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Caroline Pantel, widow of Frederick Pantel, late of Company D, Thirty-second Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES T. BOURLAND.

The bill (H. R. 8428) granting a pension to James T. Bourland was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of James T. Bourland, late of Company A, Twenty-sixth Regiment of Illinois Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. ANNA BUTTERFIELD.

The bill (H. R. 8761) granting a pension to Mrs. Anna Butterfield was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Anna Butterfield, dependent mother of James A. B. Butterfield, late a sergeant in the Second Illinois Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRIETTA BROWN.

The bill (S. 2977) granting a pension to Henrietta Brown was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Henrietta Brown, widow of Charles F. Brown, late of Company F, First Connecticut Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JONAS DOERING.

The bill (S. 3141) granting an increase of pension to Jonas Doering was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll at $50 per month the name of Jonas Doering, late private of Company A, Eighth Battalion Turner Rifles, District of Columbia, in lieu of pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MATHEW O. REGAN.

The bill (S. 3118) for the relief of Mathew O. Regan was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to pay to Mathew O. Regan, late of Company E, Third United States Artillery, now on pension-roll for loss of his right arm at elbow-joint, the amount allowed for loss of arm at or above elbow where artificial limb can not be worn, according to provisions of act increasing pensions, approved August 4, 1886, instead of the rate he has been receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHRISTIAN WINKEL.

The bill (S. 3186) granting a pension to Christian Winkel, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Christian Winkel, late a private in Company B, Sixth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES B. BRAY.

The bill (S. 2864) granting a pension to James B. Bray was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James B. Bray, late a private of Company H, Eighty-fifth New York Volunteers, at $72 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. CAROLINE G. SEYFFORTH.

The bill (H. R. 9126) granting a pension to Mrs. Caroline G. Seyfforth was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Caroline G. Seyfforth, widow of the late Edmund Seyfforth, a contract surgeon in the United States Army.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM CHURCH.

The bill (S. 2858) granting a pension to William Church was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William Church, late second lieutenant of Company C, Second Regiment West Virginia Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM THIELDS.

The bill (S. 3035) to grant a pension to William Thields was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William Thields, late a private in Company H, Eighth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NANCY A. HAYES.

The bill (S. 3144) granting a pension to Nancy A. Hayes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Nancy A. Hayes, widow of Josiah E. Hayes, late lieutenant-colonel of the Twelfth Regiment Kansas Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY J. FOSTER.

The bill (S. 3030) granting a pension to Mary J. Foster was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Mary J. Foster, widow of Milton S. Foster, late a private of Company A, Fifth Regiment Kansas Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RACHEL DIXON.

The bill (S. 3059) granting a pension to Rachel Dixon, mother of James Dixon, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Rachel Dixon, dependent mother of James Dixon, deceased, late of Company A, Forty-ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIRS OF JOHN M. POWELL.

The bill (S. 3145) for the relief of the heirs of John M. Powell, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to pay to the heirs of John M. Powell, deceased, late of Company E, Twenty-sixth Regiment of Indiana Volunteers, the amount of pension allowed him under certificate numbered 226727, dated February 6, 1883, the provisions of section 4718 of the Revised Statutes of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is there a report in that case?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. SAWYER July 5, 1888:

This bill proposes to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to pay to the heirs of John M. Powell, deceased, the accrued pension as allowed under certificate No. 226727, as late private Company E, Twenty-sixth Regiment of Indiana Volunteers.

The soldier died, leaving neither widow nor minor children surviving. The certificate issued prior to the death of soldier, but the same did not reach the soldier during his life-time. The soldier was sick and confined to his house and bed for several years prior to his death. Being without property and means of support, and without the ability to earn one, he was dependent on his friends and relatives for support and maintenance. During the time he was in such helpless and disabled condition, from disability for which he was pensioned and from which the death-cause ensued, he was taken care of, supported, nursed, and provided for by his daughter; also the expenses of his last sickness and burial were paid by his relatives. The heirs who furnished the support are in very poor and needy circumstances.

Your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NICHOLAS T. LAWRENCE.

The bill (S. 2490) granting a pension to Nicholas T. Lawrence was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Nicholas T. Lawrence, late of the Tenth Battery Light Artillery, Wisconsin Volunteers, at $20 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM MEYER.

The bill (S. 3013) granting a pension to William Meyer was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William Meyer, late a private in Company B, Forty-ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, afterward of Company L, First Regiment United States Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. JANE FLYNN.

The bill (S. 1683) granting a pension to Mrs. Jane Flynn was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Jane Flynn, mother of Lawrence Flynn, deceased, late a member of Company A, Third Regiment Rhode Island Heavy Artillery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. CAROLINE TAYLOR.

The bill (S. 3175) granting a pension to Mrs. Caroline Taylor was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Caroline Taylor, of Logansport, Ind., widow of Dr. J. A. Taylor, a volunteer assistant surgeon to the Indiana troops engaged South in the year 1863 in the war of the rebellion.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN V. HENNESSEY.

The bill (S. 2321) granting a pension to John V. Hennessey was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of John V. Hennessey, late of Company I, First Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, and Company M, Third Massachusetts Heavy Artillery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES JEWETT.

The bill (H. R. 9318) granting an increase of pension to Charles Jewett was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Charles Jewett, late a private in Company I, Third New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, at $40 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MALINDA HARDIN.

The bill (H. R. 9729) granting a pension to Malinda Hardin was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Malinda Hardin, mother of J. G. Hardin, late a second lieutenant in Company K, Fifth Regiment of Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM M. DICKEN.

The bill (H. R. 9467) granting a pension to William M. Dicken was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William M. Dicken, of Clinton County, Kentucky, late a member of Capt. Abijah Guthrie's company of Kentucky Home Guards.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES C. WHITE.

The bill (H. R. 9344) granting a pension to James C. White was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James C. White, late a private of Company I, Twenty-first Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM P. RIDDLE.

The bill (H. R. 9183) granting a pension to William P. Riddle was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William P. Riddle, late private of Company E, Fifth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH PEVE.

The bill (H. R. 737) granting a pension to Joseph Peve was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Joseph Peve, late a private in Company H, Fifty-first Regiment Illinois Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RACHEL BARNES.

The bill (H. R. 149) granting a pension to Rachel Barnes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Rachel Barnes, widow of William Barnes, who served in Company I, Second United States Infantry, from February 24, 1836, until February 24, 1841, and to pay her a pension as such widow.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MANUEL GARCIA.

The bill (H. R. 3521) granting a pension to Manuel Garcia, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Manuel Garcia, late of Company I, Eighth New Jersey Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. FLOWERS.

The bill (H. R. 5383) granting a pension to George W. Flowers was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of George W. Flowers, late a private in Company C, Fifty-second Pennsylvania Militia Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CYNTHIA J. CARLTON.

The bill (H. R. 154) restoring to the pension-roll the name of Cynthia J. Carlton was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to restore to the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Cynthia J. Carlton, widow of Henry Carlton, late captain in the Twenty-second Regiment of Michigan Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN H. CLAUS.

The bill (H. R. 8150) for the relief of John H. Claus was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of John H. Claus, late a private in Company K, One hundred and eighth Regiment Ohio Infantry Volunteers, and also late a private in the Ordnance Department of the United States Army.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. DURFEE.

The bill (S. 3052) granting an increase of pension to George W. Durfee was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 5, after the words "rate of," to strike out "seventy-two" and insert "fifty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, at the rate of $50 per month, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George W. Durfee, late private of Company I, First Regiment New York Volunteer Dragoons; this act to take effect from its passage, and the pension hereby granted to be in lieu of that which he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN N. BOVEE.

The bill (S. 3018) granting an increase of pension to John N. Bovee was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of John N. Bovee, late of Company E, Eighteenth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, from thirty to forty dollars per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. BRIDGET HACKETT.

The bill (S. 2050) granting a pension to Mrs. Bridget Hackett was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Bridget Hackett, of Decatur, Ill., widow of Michael Hackett, who served as a seaman in the naval service of the United States during the war of the rebellion.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KEYES P. COOL.

The bill (S. 3219) to increase the pension of Keyes P. Cool was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 5, after the name "Cool," to strike out "a volunteer soldier" and insert "a private in Capt. G. Spencer's Company of Vermont Militia;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of Keyes P. Cool, a private in Capt. G. Spencer's Company of Vermont Militia in the war of 1812, from $8 to $40 per month, in accordance with the provisions and limitations of the pension laws.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EDSON SAXBERRY.

The bill (H. R. 6193) for the relief of Edson Saxberry was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Edson Saxberry, late private Company C, Ninety-ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, on the pension-roll, at the rate prescribed by existing provisions of laws.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM J. HEADY.

The bill (H. R. 9910) increasing the pension of William J. Headly was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 3, before the word "who," to strike out "Headly" and insert "Heady;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the pension of William J. Heady, who was pensioned by act of Congress approved July 6, 1886, be increased to the sum of $50 a month, from and after the passage of this act, owing to increased disability.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill increasing the pension of William J. Heady."

WILLIAM M. WHALEY.

The bill (H. R. 621) granting an increase of pension to William M. Whaley was considered as Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of William M. Whaley, late of Company C, Sixth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers, and of Company C, Forty-eighth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers, on the pension-roll, at $40 per month, in lieu of the pension now received.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN A. ROLF.

The bill (H. R. 7093) granting an increase of pension to John A. Rolf was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of John A. Rolf to $45 per month, in lieu of the pension now received by him under certificate 63064.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM F. PIKE.

The bill (S. 3166) granting a pension to William F. Pike was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William F. Pike, late of Company H, Thirteenth Regiment United States Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ABBIE L. HAM.

The bill (S. 3197) granting a pension to Abbie L. Ham was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 6, after the name "Ham," to insert the words "widow of John S. P. Ham;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Abbie L. Ham, widow of John S. P. Ham, late captain of Company C, Thirteenth Maine Volunteers.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY MURPHY.

The bill (S. 3198) granting a pension to Mary Murphy was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary Murphy, widow of Jeremiah Murphy, late of Company D, One hundred and fifty-fifth New York Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM SHAFFER.

The bill (S. 3150) granting a pension to William Shaffer was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William Shaffer, late of Company I, Third United States Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM T. HUTTON.

The bill (S. 3189) granting a pension to William T. Hutton was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William T. Hutton, late of Company H, Fifth Regiment Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARTHA J. COLE.

The bill (S. 3230) granting a pension to Martha J. Cole was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment in line 6, after the name "Robert," insert the letter "E," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Martha J. Cole, mother of Robert E. Horner, late a second lieutenant in the Twenty-seventh Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ISAAC N. HAWKINS.

The bill (S. 3221) granting a pension to Isaac N. Hawkins was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, after the word "Volunteers," to insert the words "at the rate of forty-five dollars a month;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Isaac N. Hawkins, late a captain in the Seventy-third Regiment Ohio Volunteers, at the rate of $45 a month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RUTH AMES.

The bill (S. 3137) granting a pension to Ruth Ames was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Ruth Ames, widow of George Ames, late of Company D, Sixth Regiment Minnesota Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH O'LAUGHLIN.

The bill (H. R. 10334) to grant a pension to Elizabeth O'Laughlin, the helpless and invalid daughter of Dennis O'Laughlin, late a member of Company I, Ninth Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll, at $18 per month, the name of Elizabeth O'Laughlin, the helpless and invalid daughter of Dennis O'Laughlin, deceased, and late a member of Company I, Ninth Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and pay the same to her legally constituted guardian.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH S. WILSON.

The bill (S. 3157) granting a pension to Joseph S. Wilson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Joseph S. Wilson, late a private of Company F, First Regiment Pennsylvania Reserves, and lieutenant of Company E, One hundred and seventy-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NANCY L. HUFFMAN.

The bill (S. 3158) granting a pension to Nancy L. Huffman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Nancy L. Huffman, widow of Archibald Huffman, deceased, late of Company G, One hundred and thirty-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELNATHAN MEADE.

The bill (H. R. 4069) granting a pension to Elnathan Meade was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Elnathan Meade, late of Company C, Forty-fourth Regiment New York Volunteers, at the rate of $45 a month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DAVID A. YEAW.

The bill (H. R. 9595) granting a pension to David A. Yeaw was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of David A. Yeaw, late a private in Company D, Eleventh Regiment of Rhode Island Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SUSAN F. SCOTT.

The bill (H. R. 8523) granting a pension to Susan F. Scott was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Susan F. Scott, mother of John B. Scott, late of Company G, Eighteenth Connecticut Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COBURN D. OUTTEN.

The bill (H. R. 7624) for the relief of Coburn D. Outten was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension allowed to Coburn D. Outten to $30 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZA MATHEWS.

The bill (H. R. 8953) granting a pension to Eliza Mathews was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Eliza Mathews, dependent mother of John Mathews, late a private in Company F, Thirty-second Maine Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STEPHEN BUTLER.

The bill (S. 1766) granting a pension to Stephen Butler was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 6, after the name "Butler," to insert the words "late a private in Company B, Second Nebraska Cavalry;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Stephen Butler, late a private in Company B, Second Nebraska Cavalry.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. BETSY LOCKWOOD.

The bill (H. R. 10244) granting a pension to Mrs. Betsy Lockwood was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Betsy Lockwood, daughter of Joseph Mather, deceased, and a commissioned officer of the war of the Revolution, and to pay her a pension of $20 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SARAH A. CORSON.

The bill (H. R. 6307) granting a pension to Sarah A. Corson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Sarah A. Corson, widow of the late Joshua Corson, late a corporal in Company B, Twenty-fourth Regiment New Jersey Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZA RUSSELL.

The bill (H. R. 24) for the relief of Eliza Russell was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Eliza Russell, widow of Eldridge Russell, of General Harris's command, war of 1836, on the pension-roll at $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. PITNER.

The bill (H. R. 490) granting a pension to George W. Pitner was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of George W. Pitner, late of Company E, Seventy-seventh Regiment of Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. MINERVA EAGLE.

The bill (H. R. 8988) to increase the pension of Mrs. Minerva Eagle was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase to $30 per month the pension of Mrs. Minerva Eagle, widow of Commodore Henry Eagle, who was an officer of the Navy of the United States from 1818 to 1882.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FREDERICK W. TRAVIS.

The bill (H. R. 2531) granting a pension to Frederick W. Travis was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Frederick W. Travis, formerly of Company D, First Regiment United States Infantry, in the war with the Florida Indians.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN TAAFFE.

The bill (H. R. 6220) granting a pension to John Taaffe was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of John Taaffe, late a member of Company F, Sixth Kentucky Infantry, at $8 a month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN A. GRIFFEY.

The bill (H. R. 6783) to place the name of John A. Griffey on pension-roll was announced as the next pension bill on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. Do they not know the name of that soldier? The bill reads:

Dependent father of —— Griffey, late private of Company D, Second North Carolina Regiment, etc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is reported as it came from the House of Representatives and there seems to be no amendment. The name of the soldier is given, but the first name of the father is apparently unknown.

Mr. COCKRELL. Unless the soldier's name is given, the bill ought not to pass.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is given.

Mr. COCKRELL. I beg pardon, the bill reads:

John A. Griffey, dependent father of —— Griffey, etc.

If we do not know the name of the soldier, I do not know how we can pension his father.

Mr. PLATT. Let the bill be read again.

The Chief Clerk read the bill.

Mr. DAVIS. Let that bill be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be passed over.

WILLIAM H. PORTER.

The bill (H. R. 8423) for the relief of William H. Porter was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of William H. Porter, of Madisonville, Ky., upon the pension-roll for services rendered in the war with Mexico, in the company commanded by Captain Leftwich, in Third Regiment of Tennessee Volunteers, as shown by testimony on file with Porter's application for a land warrant issued by the Commissioner of Pensions on the 18th of January, 1888.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MYRON TEACHOUT.

The bill (H. R. 9894) granting a pension to Myron Teachout was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Myron Teachout, late of Company G, One hundred and twenty-third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL MASSEY.

The bill (H. R. 10579) to place the name of Samuel Massey on the pension-roll was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Samuel Massey, of Charleston, Swain County, North Carolina, on the pension-roll, and pay him the pension of a captain.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZA SMITH.

The bill (H. R. 2140) granting a pension to Eliza Smith was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Eliza Smith, widow of Clinton D. Smith, late first lieutenant of Company C, Eighty-fourth Regiment of Indiana Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MOSES T. COFFEY.

The bill (H. R. 9878) granting a pension to Moses T. Coffey was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Moses T. Coffey, late a private in Company H, One hundred and forty-eighth Regiment Indiana Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LYDIA A. HEINY.

The bill (H. R. 9034) granting a pension to Lydia A. Heiny was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-rolls the name of Lydia A. Heiny, widow of George Heiny, late a member of Company E, Thirty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, and Company E, Eighth Indiana Cavalry Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FREDERIC RONICKE.

The bill (H. R. 3923) to place the name of Frederic Ronicke on the pension-roll was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Frederic Ronicke, late of Company A, Fifty-eighth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, on the pension-roll.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. CATHARINE SINNOTT.

The bill (H. R. 5490) granting a pension to Mrs. Catharine Sinnott, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Catharine Sinnott, widow of Patrick Sinnott, otherwise known as Edward Clark, late a member of Company F, Fortieth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM C. LORD.

The bill (H. R. 7202) granting a pension to William C. Lord was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William C. Lord, of Portland, Me., at $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANNA M. ARNOLD.

The bill (H. R. 8075) granting a pension to Anna M. Arnold, widow of John Arnold, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-rolls the name of Anna M. Arnold, widow of John Arnold, late of Company C, Forty-first New York Volunteers, at $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM E. TAYLOR.

The bill (S. 2836) granting a pension to William E. Taylor was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, after the words "Company B," to strike out "Forty-fifth" and insert "Sixtieth;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William E. Taylor, of Missouri, late a member of Company B, Sixtieth Missouri Enrolled Militia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM C. TILLY.

The bill (H. R. 4270) granting a pension to William C. Tilly was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William C. Tilly, late a private of Company B, Fourth Tennessee Infantry Volunteers, at $8 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY KELLEY.

The bill (H. R. 945) granting a pension to Mary Kelley was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Mary Kelley, widow of Daniel Kelley, late private of Company B, of the Eighth Regiment of Pennsylvania Cavalry Volunteers, on the pension-roll.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. MARIA HULSE.

The bill (H. R. 9911) granting a pension to Mrs. Maria Hulse was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Maria Hulse, dependent mother of Silas Hulse, who was a soldier in the Mexican war, and subsequently joined the regular Army of the United States, and was killed in the service of his country.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CATLENA LYMAN.

The bill (S. 2626) granting a pension to Catlena Lyman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Catlena Lyman, widow of William C. Lyman, late surgeon United States Navy, at $50 per month, in lieu of the pension now allowed her.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JACOB LOGAN.

The bill (S. 2803) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Logan was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Jacob Logan, member of Company H, Fifty-ninth Indiana Volunteers, at $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. CROOP.

The bill (H. R. 8256) granting a pension to George W. Croop was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of George W. Croop, late a private of Company A, Thirty-ninth Illinois Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STERNE H. FOWLER.

The bill (S. 2924) to increase the pension of Sterne H. Fowler was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 5, to fill the blank before the word "dollars," by inserting "sixteen;" and in line 6, after the word "laws," to insert "in lieu of the pension now paid him;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of Sterne H. Fowler to $16 per month, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, in lieu of the pension now paid him.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

W. A. SHAPPEE.

The bill (S. 1873) increasing the rate of pension of W. A. Shappee was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 3, after the name "Shappee," to insert the words "of Company A, Eighty-first Pennsylvania Volunteers;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the pension of W. A. Shappee, of Company A, Eighty-first Pennsylvania Volunteers, be rated and allowed as if he had lost a leg at, instead of immediately below, the knee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. MARY MORRISON ELLIOTT.

The bill (S. 2951) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary Morrison Elliott was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "twelve;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mrs. Mary Morrison Elliott, who was a volunteer nurse during the war of the rebellion, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EASTER A. JACKSON

The bill (S. 3241) granting a pension to Easter A. Jackson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Easter A. Jackson, widow of Moses H. Jackson, Company D, First Tennessee Mounted Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY STURGESS.

The bill (S. 2913) granting a pension to Mary Sturgess was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary Sturgess, a volunteer nurse in the late war, at $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RALPH P. WILBORN.

The bill (H. R. 9733) granting a pension to Ralph P. Wilborn was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Ralph P. Wilborn, late a private in Company F, Twenty-first Regiment of Kentucky Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SARAH RIDDLE.

The bill (H. R. 9732) granting a pension to Sarah Riddle was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Sarah Riddle, mother of James H. Riddle, late a private of Company J, First Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARTHA J. RUSHFORD.

The bill (H. R. 9540) granting a pension to Martha J. Rushford, widow of John Rushford, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Martha J. Rushford, widow of John Rushford, late of Company F, Sixteenth Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LYDIA CALHOUN.

The bill (H. R. 486) granting a pension to Lydia Calhoun was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Lydia Calhoun, widow of William Calhoun, of Company I, Twelfth Michigan Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM A. HUMES.

The bill (H. R. 9731) granting a pension to William A. Humes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William A. Humes, late a private of Company I, Thirteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. CATHARINE PETERSON.

The bill (H. R. 3913) granting a pension to Mrs. Catharine Peterson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Catharine Peterson, widow of Anthony Peterson, late first lieutenant Company F, Thirty-seventh Regiment Ohio Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM JACK.

The bill (H. R. 2776) granting a pension to William Jack was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William Jack, late a private in the Seventy-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. DELILAH WHIPPS.

The bill (H. R. 3764) for the relief of Mrs. Delilah Whipps was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Mrs. Deliah Whipps, widow of Lloyd Whipps, late a private in Capt. Joseph J. Jones's company, in the war of 1812, on the pension-roll.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH B. SAILER.

The bill (H. R. 160) granting a pension to Elizabeth B. Sailer was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Sailer, of Washington, D. C., widow of Jacob F. Sailer, late a private in Company L, Fifteenth Regiment Heavy Artillery, New York State Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE H. JOHNSON.

The bill (S. 2887) granting a pension to George H. Johnson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of George H. Johnson, late a seaman in the United States Navy.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

"MUCK-A-PEC-WAK-KEU-ZAH."

The bill (H. R. 6764) to grant a pension to "Muck-a-pec-wak-keu-zah," or "John," an Indian who aided in saving the lives of many white people in the Indian outbreak in Minnesota in the year 1862, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll, at $15 per month, the name of "Muck-a-pec-wak-keu-zah," or "John," an Indian of the Dakota or Sioux tribe, now residing near the city of Hastings, Minn., and who rendered valuable services in behalf of the white settlers, and who was instrumental in saving the lives of many white people during the Sioux outbreak and war in Minnesota, in the year 1862, and who then served the United States as a scout.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

A. W. ROSE.

The bill (H. R. 7160) granting an increase of pension to A. W. Rose was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-rolls the name of A. W. Rose, at $30 per month, in lieu of any pension he may now be receiving under the general law, by virtue of certificate No. 80590.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY E. FORREN.

The bill (H. R. 8677) granting a pension to Mary E. Forren was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-rolls the name of Mary E. Forren, widow of Morris Forren, late a private in Company I, Thirty-first Regiment Maine Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY FOSTER.

The bill (H. R. 817) granting a pension to Mary Foster was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Mary Foster, mother of Ezra P. Foster, late a private of Company A, Eighth Maine Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SALLIE T. WARD.

The bill (H. R. 8574) granting a pension to Sallie T. Ward, widow of the late W. T. Ward, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Sallie T. Ward, widow of the late W. T. Ward, at $50 per month during her natural life.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEVI LITTLE.

The bill (H. R. 8794) granting a pension to Levi Little was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-rolls the name of Levi Little, late of Company E, Fourth Regiment Delaware Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY C. DAVIS.

The bill (H. R. 10318) granting a pension to Mary C. Davis was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Mrs. Mary C. Davis, formerly widow of William M. Worsham, major of the Twelfth Regiment of Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, United States Army, on the pension-roll.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN J. MITCHELL.

The bill (H. R. 8460) to place the name of John J. Mitchell on the pension-roll was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of John J. Mitchell, late of Company A, One hundred and tenth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. JUDITH DEIG.

The bill (H. R. 9314) granting a pension to Mrs. Judith Deig was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Mrs. Judith Deig on the pension-roll.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZA TREFREN.

The bill (H. R. 4098) granting a pension to Eliza Trefren was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Eliza Trefren, widow of James Trefren, late of Company F, Seventeenth Vermont United States Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STEPHEN A. SEAVEY.

The bill (H. R. 7510) granting a pension to Stephen A. Seavey was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Stephen A. Seavey, formerly of Company C, Twelfth Regiment Maine Volunteers, at $30 a month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE C. CHASE.

The bill (H. R. 9119) granting a pension to George C. Chase, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of George C. Chase, late of Company F, Third Regiment Vermont Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DANIEL K. HARRIS.

The bill (H. R. 9920) granting a pension to Daniel K. Harris was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Daniel K. Harris, late a member of Company I, Fifty-eighth Indiana Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HIRAM R. ELLIS.

The bill (H. R. 881) granting a pension to Hiram R. Ellis was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Hiram R. Ellis, formerly first lieutenant and adjutant of the Twenty-eighth Michigan Infantry, and to pay him a pension as of the rank of first lieutenant, in lieu of the pension allowed him under the general pension law of the rank of sergeant of Company I, Fifth Michigan Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE E. WELLS.

The bill (H. R. 965) granting a pension to George E. Wells was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of George E. Wells, late a member of the Sixth Ohio Independent Battery, on the pension-roll of the United States, at $8 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARSHALL BURTRUM.

The bill (H. R. 9029) for the relief of Marshall Burtrum was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Marshall Burtrum, of Lewis County, Kentucky, late first sergeant in Company K, Fortieth Kentucky Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY E. COTRILL.

The bill (S. 3255) granting a pension to Mary E. Cotrill, widow of Hugh B. Cotrill, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Mary E. Cotrill, widow of Hugh B. Cotrill, Company H, Eighty-eighth Indiana Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SCOTT S. HAWN.

The bill (S. 3200) granting a pension to Scott S. Hawn was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Scott S. Hawn, late of Company M, Twenty-second Regiment of Pennsylvania Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. SAWYER. We have only nine more pension cases. I hope my friend will withhold his motion until we get through with them.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I withdraw the motion.

MRS. ELLEN HAND.

The bill (S. 3264) granting a pension to Mrs. Ellen Hand was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Ellen Hand, widow of Swaim Hand, late a private in Company D, Nineteenth Regiment of Iowa Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARGARET E. ADAMSON.

The bill (S. 2939) granting a pension to Margaret E. Adamson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Margaret E. Adamson, dependent mother of Francis A. Adamson and Charles C. Adamson, both deceased, who were privates in Company A of the Sixteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. THOMAS.

The bill (S. 3330) granting a pension to William H. Thomas was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to restore to the pension-roll the name of William H. Thomas, late a captain of Company H, Third Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MICHAEL SHONG.

The bill (S. 2514) granting a pension to Michael Shong was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Michael Shong, late of Company I, Fourteenth New York Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. ELIZABETH E. GROFF.

The bill (S. 3309) for the relief of Mrs. Elizabeth E. Groff was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Elizabeth E. Groff, widow of Charles H. Groff, late a private in Company K, Forty-fourth Regiment Iowa Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. ADELAIDE H. WOODALL.

The bill (S. 3266) granting a pension to Mrs. Adelaide H. Woodall was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 4, after the word "pension-roll," to strike out "at $50 per month;" and in line 7, after the word "volunteers," strike out "and that said pension be paid from the date of the death of the said Col. French B. Woodall;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Adelaide H. Woodall, widow of French B. Woodall, late colonel of the One hundred and fifty-first Regiment of Illinois Volunteers.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JASPER N. WARREN.

The bill (S. 3316) granting a pension to Jasper N. Warren was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Jasper N. Warren, late of Company G, Forty-first Regiment Second Cavalry Indiana Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PATRICK WELCH.

The bill (S. 3130) granting a pension to Patrick Welch was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Patrick Welch, late of the United States Navy, war of the rebellion.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY FRANTZ.

The bill (S. 3369) granting a pension to Henry Frantz was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Henry Frantz, late private Company D, Forty-sixth Pennsylvania Volunteers, by placing his name on the pension-roll at the rate of $4 per month instead of the rate of $2 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I shall move to-morrow that we take up the Calendar in regular order, and I rise to give notice that I will object to the consideration of any bill on the Calendar that requires unanimous consent unless the Calendar shall be gone on with in regular order. I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. SAWYER. Why not go on with the Calendar for half an hour to-night? We can do it just as well as not. Suppose the Senator makes that motion?

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I have moved that the Senate adjourn.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas moves that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, July 26, 1888, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, July 25, 1888.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

UNITED STATES COURTS, NEBRASKA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1612) to provide for holding terms of the United States circuit and district courts in the State of Nebraska.

Mr. DORSEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House non-concur in the amendments of the Senate, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate thereon.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

JAMES O'BRIEN.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the Senate amendments to the bill (H. R. 6602) for the relief of James O'Brien.

Mr. BUTLER. This is simply a change in the name, and being a mere verbal correction I ask that the Senate amendment be agreed to. The title of the bill is also to be amended to conform to the body of the bill.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI, SIOUX CITY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendments of the Senate to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1701) authorizing the construction of a wagon-bridge across the Missouri River, at or near Sioux City, Iowa.

Mr. STRUBLE. I would like to have the amendments of the Senate read.

The amendments were read at length.

Mr. STRUBLE. I ask unanimous consent to non-concur in the amendments of the Senate to the House amendments, and request a conference thereon.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

UNITED STATES COURTS, OWENSBOROUGH, KY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3361) to provide for holding terms of the circuit and district courts of the United States for the district of Kentucky at Owensborough, in said district, and for other purposes.

Mr. LAFFOON. I ask unanimous consent that the House concur in the Senate amendments, which are merely formal.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let the amendments be read.

The amendments were read at length.

There being no objection, the Senate amendments were concurred in.

REFERENCE OF A SENATE BILL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a Senate bill of the following title; which was read twice and referred as follows, namely:

A bill (S. 308) for the relief of Faran & McLean—to the Committee on Claims.

UNITED STATES COURT, SALINA, KANS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 856) to provide for the holding of the district court of the United States at Salina, Kans.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to consider this bill at present. It is word for word a House bill which has been reported by the Judiciary Committee, and will not take up any time, I think.

Mr. CULBERSON. I hope that consent will be given. It is an exact copy of the bill reported from the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. DOCKERY. I unite in the request of the gentleman from Kansas, and hope the consideration of the bill will be allowed.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there shall be one term of the United States district court for the district of Kansas held in the city of Salina in each year, the term of said court to be held on the second Monday of May from and after the passage of this act. But no cause, action, or proceeding shall be tried or considered in the court herein provided for unless by consent of all the parties thereto or order of the court for cause.

SEC. 2. That the clerk of the district court for the district of Kansas, the marshal and district attorney for said district shall perform the duties pertaining to their offices, respectively, for said courts; and said clerk and marshal shall appoint a deputy to reside and keep their offices at Salina, and who shall, in the absence of their principals, do and perform all the duties appertaining to their said offices, respectively.

Mr. OATES. I am opposed to the bill, but I will not object to its consideration. It amounts to nothing but arbitration to try causes there by consent. It is not in my judgment proper legislation.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The bill H. R. 1436, of the same title, was ordered to be laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is pursuing the regular order of business now.

REFERENCE OF SENATE BILLS.

Bills of the Senate of the following titles were read twice, and referred as follows:

The bill (S. 878) for the relief of the estate of Thomas Niles, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

The bill (S. 2636) for the relief of Thomas L. Hoffman—to the Committee on Claims.

The bill (S. 3125) restoring the right of pre-emption to Alfonso Roberts—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

The bill (S. 3159) for the relief of the Oregon Paving and Contract Company—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

The bill (S. 2185) to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of Matthew S. Whitney, administrator of Franklin S. Whitney, deceased, heretofore referred to said court.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I ask unanimous consent that the bill the title of which has just been read will be allowed to lie on the table for the present.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection.

OFFICERS IN MEXICAN WAR.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, in response to a resolution calling for information relative to officers who served in the Mexican war whose names have been dropped from the pension-rolls.

The SPEAKER. This communication will be referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. It is in response to a resolution of inquiry addressed to the Military Committee and by it reported to the House.

The SPEAKER. But it relates exclusively to pensions.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. That may be; but it was originally referred to that committee and reported back by them. I think it more particularly applies to military affairs.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the communication will be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. MORROW, for ten days, on account of service on the Special Committee to Investigate Foreign Immigration.

To Mr. GALLINGER, for the day, on account of sickness.

REPRINT OF BILL.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FELIX CAMPBELL] asks that the bill (H. R. 1687), which has been partially considered, be printed with amendments. If there be no objection, it will be so ordered.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will appoint as managers of the conference on the part of the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on House bill 612, Mr. ROGERS, Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina, and Mr. FULLER.

WELLAND CANAL.

The SPEAKER. Yesterday morning the Chair laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the House, a report from the Commissioner of Navigation, relative to the use of the Welland Canal, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. DINGLEY] asks that that reference be changed, and that it now be referred to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. DUNN. I was about to ask for the change of reference, and I request that the committee have leave to report at any time. I am informed that it is the information of the Department that legislation will be necessary to correct the disturbance, and it may be necessary to report by a bill. In fact, I am informed that the Department will prepare a bill for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. DUNN] asks that the committee be authorized to report at any time on this subject. Is there objection?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I desire to inquire of the gentleman from Maine whether the resolution would affect the railways as well as the canal?

Mr. DINGLEY. It affects the canal only.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the change of reference will be made, with the power to report at any time.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. MCKENNA. The RECORD of last night's proceedings, page 7386, might bear an interpretation that the bill to grant the State of California 5 per cent. of the net proceeds of the cash sales of public lands in that State came up for consideration and was not considered on account of my absence. The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that the evening was set apart entirely for bills reported by the Committee on Public Lands to which there was no objection; and as this bill would inevitably receive objection it was the understanding of the committee that it would not be offered at all. Hence, sir, as the bill could not be considered, my absence is to be explained on account of the understanding that it could not be offered, as no bill was to be offered without unanimous consent for its consideration.

Mr. HOLMAN. The statement of the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKENNA] is entirely correct.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the consideration of private land claims; and the regular order is demanded. Some gentlemen have reports to make, and if there be no objection they will be permitted to hand them to the Clerk.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

FILING OF REPORTS.

The following reports were filed by being handed in at the Clerk's desk:

PUBLIC BUILDING, CITY OF DETROIT.

Mr. NEWTON, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 9447) to restore certain money to the fund for erecting a public building at the city of Detroit; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HEIRS OF ASA O. GALLUP.

Mr. BROWER, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 7459) for the relief of the heirs of Asa O. Gallup; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

THIERMAN & FROST.

Mr. MASON, from the Committee on Claims, reported back the bill (H. R. 330) for the relief of Thierman & Frost; which was laid on the table.

Mr. MASON also, from the Committee on Claims, reported, as a substitute for the foregoing, a bill (H. R. 10985) for the relief of Henry Thierman and White Frost, late partners, doing business under the firm-name and style of Thierman & Frost; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SERVICE PENSIONS.

Mr. GALLINGER (by request), by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 10986) to grant pensions for service in the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps of the United States during the war against rebellion; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

FRENCH SPOLIATIONS CLAIMS.

Mr. ROGERS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, filed the views of the minority of that committee on the bill (H. R. 1990) to amend the act of the 20th of January, 1885, entitled "An act to provide for the ascertainment of claims of American citizens for spoliations committed by the French prior to the 31st of July, 1801;" which were ordered to be printed with the report of the majority.

EMMA BIDDLE.

Mr. BLISS, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 4074) granting an increase of pension to Emma Biddle; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

STEPHEN C. SLAYTON.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 55) granting a pension to Stephen C. Slayton; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. ELIZA BOWMAN.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5157) granting a pension to Mrs. Eliza Bowman; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LEWIS G. CLARK.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 420) granting an increase of pension to Lewis G. Clark; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SARAH A. CRONE.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3741) granting a pension to Sarah A. Crone; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ARLINGTON M. HARRINGTON.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3152) for the relief of Arlington M. Harrington; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MARY WHITE.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3199) granting a pension to Mary White; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. M. M. BOYLE.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 10557) granting a pension to Mrs. M. M. Boyle; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HENRY ROSE.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 10007) for the relief of Henry Rose; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

REBECCA FRANKLIN.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 8924) for the relief of Rebecca Franklin; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. MARY L. RODERICK.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7112) for the relief of Mrs. Mary L. Roderick; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SAMUEL PURCELL.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 8545) for the relief of Samuel Purcell; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. EMILY HORTON.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5743) for the relief of Mrs. Emily Horton; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN HORN.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6388) granting a pension to John Horn; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LANKFORD PUGH.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 10558) granting a pension to Lankford Pugh; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JAMES M'EVOY.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3111) for the relief of James McEvoy; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CATHARINE G. BODFISH.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 382) granting a pension to Catharine G. Bodfish; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

RICHARD HOGAN.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 9253) granting an increase of pension to Richard Hogan; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CHARLES W. GEDDES.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 9791) for the relief of Charles W. Geddes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MALINDA LEMON.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5754) granting a pension to Malinda Lemon; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JAMES MORGAN.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 7349) for the relief of James Morgan; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

EZEKIEL RAWLINGS.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 8983) to grant a pension to Ezekiel Rawlings; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MICHAEL HARGAIN.

Mr. BLISS also, from the committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 4575) granting a pension to Michael Hargain; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN WARD.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 2417) granting a pension to John Ward; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

GEORGE HARLAN.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 9003) for the relief of George Harlan; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

NANCY MURPHY.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 6470) for the relief of Nancy Murphy; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM THOMPSON.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 10559) granting a pension to William Thompson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN S. DILL.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 2089) for the relief of John S. Dill; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN A. MILLER.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 2739) granting a pension to John A. Miller; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MICAH FRENCH.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 4737) granting a pension to Micah French; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HANNIBAL KIMBALL.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 10245) granting an increase of pension to Hannibal Kimball; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HENRY MITCHELL YOUNGBLOOD.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 10907) granting a pension to Henry Mitchell Youngblood; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MARTHA F. LEE.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 9704) granting a pension to Martha F. Lee; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN BUSH.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (S. 2124) granting a pension to John Bush; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WINEMAH RIDDELL.

Mr. FINLEY, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (S. 2126) to pension Winemah Riddell; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

RICHARD H. VAN DORIN.

Mr. STRUBLE, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (S. 2118) granting a pension to Richard H. Van Dorin; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CASPAR BLANKE.

Mr. BLISS, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (S. 2833) granting a pension to Caspar Blanke, of Portland, Oregon; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

H. R. BLAKISTON.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (S. 1988) granting a pension to H. R. Blakiston; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendment the bill (S. 2816) to authorize the construction of a bridge for railway purposes across the Mississippi River, between the States of Wisconsin and Minnesota, to be located north of and in the vicinity of the city of Elma, Wis.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

P. DUNPHY.

Mr. LAIRD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3821) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of P. Dunphy; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

EXTRA COPIES OF THE TARIFF BILL.

Mr. McCREARY. I yield for a moment to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE].

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I ask, by unanimous consent, to have the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk read, and that it be considered at this time.

Mr. COWLES. I insist upon the regular order.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. It is not a claim, and I really do not care whether it is offered or not, but I offered it at the request of a great many gentlemen on both sides of the House. It is simply a request to have an unusual number printed of the bill passed by the House on Saturday last.

Mr. COWLES. The bill I propose to call up is a very meritorious bill, and yet the regular order was demanded and it was not considered. I have a letter from the United States district judge in favor of the measure I desired to call up. It is for the relief of some poor men, and the district attorney joins with him. The Secretary of the Treasury has ordered the judgment suspended in the case, and there is merit in the case.

Mr. McCREARY. I yielded to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE] for a moment to ask leave to have a number of copies of the tariff bill reprinted, but if there is to be debate I shall have to claim the floor.

Mr. COWLES. I withdraw my objection to the joint resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That 100,000 copies of a comparative statement embodying the present tariff law (act of March 3, 1883) with proposed amendments of H. R. 9051 (Mills bill), to be prepared by the Committee on Ways and Means, be printed for the use of the House.

Mr. BURROWS. I would inquire if the bill as proposed to be printed will indicate the amendments that were offered?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. The proposition is to print, under the supervision of the Ways and Means Committee, the present tariff law as passed in 1883, with the provisions italicized and put in the body the text contained in the bill which passed the House on last Saturday. The work has already been substantially compiled by the clerk, and I would be glad that the gentleman should see it and see whether it is in accordance with his views, and make whatever suggestion may strike him concerning it.

The SPEAKER. If the cost of this printing will exceed $500 it must be done by a concurrent resolution.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I doubt whether it would; but I ask to have it referred to the Committee on Printing.

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Printing.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. McCREARY. This is the day set apart for the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Private Land Claims, and I call up Senate bill 2316.

The Clerk read the title of the bill, as follows:

A bill (S. 2316) restoring the right of pre-emption to Jesse A. Corn.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask, by unanimous consent, that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of this bill, and that the same be considered in the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas Jesse A. Corn, in 1874, filed a pre-emption claim upon a tract of public land in Colorado, which said land in 1875 became worthless for agricultural purposes by reason of an overflow of the Arkansas River, and thereupon he relinquished the same to the United States; and

Whereas said Corn, in 1884, settled and filed upon another tract of public land in Colorado, believing that he had the legal right so to do, and has since resided upon, improved, and cultivated the same in good faith, and now has a claim for entry thereof pending in the Land Department, which the said Department has refused to approve for patent, and to which there is no adverse claimant: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the said Jesse A. Corn be, and he is hereby, authorized to pre-empt the said land now claimed by him on making the proofs required by the provisions of the pre-emption law.

Mr. McCREARY. Under section 2261 of the Revised Statutes it is provided:

No person shall be entitled to more than one pre-emptive right by virtue of the provisions of section 2259, nor where a party has filed his declaration of intention to claim the benefits of such provisions for one tract of land shall he file at any future time a second declaration for another tract.

As the preamble of the bill shows, this gentleman, after living upon the land for some time, on account of sickness lost his right, and he now simply asks that he be allowed to pre-empt another claim.

Mr. PETERS. I would like to ask the gentleman from Kentucky a question, if he will yield to me.

Mr. McCREARY. Certainly.

Mr. PETERS. Has the committee taken into consideration a bill covering all cases of that kind?

Mr. McCREARY. There is a bill of that kind, but it has not passed the Senate, and we do not know that it will.

Mr. PETERS. There are quite a number of cases that are similar to this, and this seems to have come from the Committee on Private Land Claims and not from the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. McCREARY. This is the only one of that kind that we have. I ask that the bill be passed to a third reading.

Mr. PAYSON. I am in favor of the passage of the bill; but I rise simply to say that I can not understand how it got before the Committee on Private Land Claims. The Committee on Public Lands has jurisdiction of claims of this kind, and they ought to go to that committee. As a member of the Public Lands Committee, I simply protest against these bills going to the Committee on Private Lands, although I will not object to the passage of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is of opinion that the bill has gone to that committee through the petition-box.

Mr. McCREARY. I spoke to the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands about the bill and he was willing that the bill should be retained by the Committee on Private Lands.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCREARY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

M. F. VANCE.

Mr. McCREARY. The next bill I will call up is Senate bill 2009, to restore the homestead right of M. F. Vance, of Akron, Colo.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the homestead right of M. F. Vance, of Akron, Colo., be restored, and that he be entitled to all the privileges accruing under sections 2289 and 2317, chapter 5, Title XXXII of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Mr. McCREARY. This is simply a bill to restore the homestead right of M. F. Vance, of Akron, Colo., and I ask by unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of the bill and that it be considered in the House.

Mr. PAYSON. How many of these bill have the Committee on Private Land Claims? If it is going to usurp entirely the duties of the Committee on Public Lands, we will give its duties to them.

Mr. McCREARY. This is the only one we have, and I mentioned that to the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, that it had been referred to the Committee on Private Lands.

Mr. PAYSON. Do they go there through the petition-box?

The SPEAKER. They could get there in no other way.

Mr. PAYSON. If this is the only one I do not object.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. McCREARY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2009) to restore the homestead rights of M. F. Vance, of Akron, Colo., having had the same under consideration, report:

The bill was submitted to the Secretary of the Interior for information thereon when the bill was pending in the Senate, and he sent the following letter:

"DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
"Washington, D. C., February 29, 1888.

"SIR: I am in receipt, by your reference, of a letter from Hon. P. B. PLUMB, dated United States Senate, February 20, 1888, inclosing Senate bill 2009, to restore the homestead right of M. F. Vance, of Akron, Colo., and requesting the views of this Department thereon.

"In reply I have the honor to report that the records of this office show that M. F. Vance made H. E. No. 4031 July 12, 1876, for the E. ½ SW. ¼ and S. ½ NW. ¼ sec. 3, tp. 3, R. 9 west of the 6th P. M., Kansas, and that said entry was canceled by this office upon his voluntary relinquishment, July 6, 1878, and the land entered by another party March 27, 1880.

"Accompanying the said relinquishment was an affidavit by Mr. Vance, stating he proceeded to improve and cultivate the land embraced in said entry, according to the requirements of the homestead law, until about the 27th day of September, 1876, at which time he was disabled from doing manual labor by reason of disease in his right arm and was compelled to go East for medical treatment by a competent surgeon; that he left his claim about February 1, 1877, and had been under the medical treatment of Dr. R. J. Morrh, whose certificate as to his disability accompanies his affidavit. Further, that since September 27, 1876, he had not been, nor is he at date of affidavit (January 23, 1878), able to perform manual labor, and by reason of said disability he relinquished his said entry, without compensation, and asked to be allowed to make a new entry at some future time on any vacant public land, with credit for fee and commissions already paid on former entry.

"The case was not considered to justify the allowance of a second entry under the law, and his application was rejected by office letter of April 20, 1878, addressed to the local officers at Kirwin, Kans., and a second application was rejected December 29, 1887.

"If there is satisfactory evidence presented to Congress of Mr. Vance's good faith in the matter, and that he is now prepared to comply with the legal homestead requirements, I see no objection to the passage of a special law for his relief.

"Attention is called to the fact that the act of May 20, 1862, was repealed by act of June 22, 1874 (Revised Statutes), and it is suggested that the bill should be amended so as to refer to sections 2289 and 2317, chapter 5, Title XXXII, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in lieu of the act so repealed.

Very respectfully,

"S. M. STOCKSLAGER,
Acting Commissioner.

"Hon. W. F. VILAS,
"Secretary of the Interior."

The committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to make a statement in reference to the manner in which these bills went to the Committee on Private Land Claims. They are Senate bills and did not go through the petition-box, but were presented to the Clerk as the Chair discovers, and under an order made by unanimous consent that bills be referred to certain committees, went to the committee in that way.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCREARY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCOOK, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2252) to incorporate the Georgetown Barge, Dock, Elevator, and Railway Company, asked a conference upon the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed as conferees on the part of the Senate Mr. RIDDLEBERGER, Mr. FARWELL, and Mr. HARRIS.

The message also announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2742) to incorporate the Brightwood Railway Company of the District of Columbia, asked a conference upon the disagreeing votes of the two Housee thereon, and had appointed as conferees on the part of the Senate Mr. HARRIS, Mr. SPOONER, and Mr. FARWELL.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill (H. R. 1912) providing for a term of court at Quincy, Ill.

WILLIAM R. M'KEE.

Mr. McCREARY. Mr. Speaker, I now desire to call up the bill (H. R. 10082) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of the widow and orphan children of Col. William R. McKee, late of Lexington, Ky."

The SPEAKER. That bill is in Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of the bill, and that it be put upon its passage.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to carry into effect the grant of one quarter-section each to the orphan children of Col. William R. McKee, made in the second section of said act, be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to issue to the surviving children and grand children of said McKee, or the owners and holders thereof, other certificates for those they now hold, issued by authority of said act, which new certificates they may enter and locate for themselves upon any lands in satisfaction of said grant of the class described in the act to which this is an amendment.

The report (by Mr. McCREARY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10082) for the relief of the children of Col. William R. McKee, have had the same under consideration, and report as follows:

The act proposed to be amended is that approved January 25, 1853, entitled "An act for the relief of the widow and orphan children of Col. William R. McKee, late of Lexington, Ky." (10 Stats., page 745).

The second section of said act is as follows:

"That to each of the orphan children of the said McKee there shall be, and hereby is, granted one quarter-section of land to be located upon any vacant land of the United States, and to be located where and in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct."

The Commissioner of the General Land Office states that "certificates were issued for location in satisfaction of the grant herein referred to, one of which was located and patent issued therefor, but other certificates are outstanding."

The present amendment to the original act authorizes the Commissioner of the General Land Office to carry into effect the grant of one quarter-section each to the orphan children of Col. William R. McKee, and he is hereby authorized and directed to issue to the surviving children and grandchildren of said McKee, or the owners and holders thereof, other certificates for those they now hold issued by authority of said act, to be located by them for themselves upon any lands in satisfaction of said grant of the class described in the act to which this is an amendment.

Colonel McKee, who was killed at the head of his regiment at the battle of Buena Vista, in Mexico, left several minor children, one of whom was Hugh McKee. At the time the original certificates were issued it was intended to change his name to that of his illustrious father, William R. McKee, and the certificate was issued to him by that name. The change, however, was never made, and he entered the Navy and was killed June 11, 1871, leading the famous assault on a fort in the Coren. It is said he gave his certificate to his mother, and she gave it to her granddaughter, Alice Jones, who now holds and claims it. To allow the Commissioner to give her certificates in her own name if she proves herself the owner and holder of those now unlocated, and avoid the complications the Land Office experiences growing out of the original mistake of name, is one of the objects of the bill.

Martha McKee, another of the orphan children of William R. McKee, married Stephen E. Jones, and died without locating her certificate, leaving three children, one of whom is a minor, the others of age. They wish to divide the certificates they now hold among themselves and get new ones they can locate, which the committee think can and ought to be allowed.

They have experienced great difficulty in making their locations on account of these facts and the requirements of the President's direction, which is now wholly unnecessary, as they are all about of age and can act for themselves.

The committee believe the original act should be amended as proposed in the bill, which has been submitted to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and no objection found to its provisions. They therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. PAYSON. Mr. Speaker, let the bill be read again.

The bill was again read.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I desire to ask the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. McCREARY] whether this bill will give these parties any more land than they would otherwise have had.

Mr. McCREARY. It does not give them any more than the original act gave.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. It simply settles the question of heirship.

Mr. McCREARY. Yes. The bill was referred to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and he approved it.

Mr. PAYSON. Is there any provision for the return and cancellation of the original certificates? I ask that question because these certificates stand ordinarily as land scrip and are treated as assignable, and, as I understand from the reading of the bill, if it should become law and be carried into effect there will be outstanding certificates of allotment for double the amount of land that is intended to go. Clearly, therefore, the old certificates should be surrendered and canceled before new ones issue.

Mr. McCREARY. If the gentleman will examine the bill he will see that there can be but one set of certificates.

Mr. PAYSON. I have read it twice and have not noticed any such provision.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCREARY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

W. H. TIBBITTS.

Mr. McCREARY. Mr. Speaker, I now ask that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 3830) for the relief of W. H. Tibbitts, and that the bill be considered in the House.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas it appears from the records of the General Land Office that W. H. Tibbits did, in good faith, on the 4th day of January, 1872, make homestead entry of the northeast quarter of section 21, township 9 north, range 11 east, in the State of Nebraska, and resided thereon for the full period of time required by existing statutes, and improved and cultivated the same; and

Whereas it further appears that the said tract of land was patented to the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad at a time subsequent to said homestead entry, and sold by said railroad company to other parties: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the said W. H. Tibbits, or his legal representatives, is hereby authorized to locate 160 acres of any of the public lands, subject to private entry at $1.25 per acre, of the United States; and patent shall issue to him or his assignees as in other cases of a like nature.

Mr. McCREARY. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. DORSEY], who made the report in this case.

Mr. DORSEY. The Senate has passed a bill for this purpose, and I ask unanimous consent that the Senate bill be taken up and acted upon instead of the House bill.

The SPEAKER. The Senate bill has been referred to the Committee on the Public Lands. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. DORSEY] asks unanimous consent that the Committee on the Public Lands be discharged from the further consideration of the Senate bill, and that it be considered in place of the House bill.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The Senate bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DORSEY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

WESLEY MONTGOMERY.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 3829) for the relief of Wesley Montgomery, and that the bill be now put upon its passage.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of the General Land Office be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to permit Wesley Montgomery, of Adams County, State of Nebraska, to enter 160 acres of any of the unappropriated public lands of the United States, not mineral nor in the actual occupation of any settler, in lieu of the northeast quarter of section 23, of township 28 north, of range 14 west, in Iroquois County, Illinois; which land was entered by said Wesley Montgomery on February 20, 1874, under the homestead laws, in accordance with instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to the register and the receiver of the date of August 9, 1873, the title to which land failed because of a prior disposition of the same which did not then appear upon the records of the land office: Provided, however, That the said Wesley Montgomery shall not have made any other entry of land of the United States under the homestead laws.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, I remember that when some time ago we had a bill somewhat like this before the House, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] moved, or I moved (I have forgotten which), a provision that the land should not be laid out within the limits of any incorporated town or city. I desire to ask my colleague from Illinois [Mr. PAYSON], who is familiar with this subject, whether that provision is not a proper one in all such bills, and whether it is not necessary?

Mr. PAYSON. I think the bill ought to be amended in the manner proposed by my colleague, and I suggest to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. DORSEY], whose constituent is interested in this bill, that he had better let it be so amended.

Mr. ADAMS. Then, Mr. Speaker, I move to amend the bill by adding the proviso which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That such land shall not be located between the limits of any incorporated town or city.

Mr. DORSEY. I have no objection to that; but the land could not possibly be located within any incorporated town or city.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DORSEY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

COURT FOR PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS IN ARIZONA, NEW MEXICO, AND COLORADO.

Mr. MCCREARY. I now ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7643) to establish a United States land court, and to provide for a judicial investigation and settlement of private land claims in the Territories of Arizona, New Mexico, and in the State of Colorado.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from the further consideration of the bill indicated by him. Is there objection?

Mr. PAYSON, and Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I object.

Mr. MCCREARY. Then I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. BLOUNT in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7643) to establish a United States land court and to provide for a judicial investigation and settlement of private land claims in the Territories of Arizona, New Mexico, and in the State of Colorado.

Mr. MCCREARY. I ask that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with (as the bill has already been read in the House) and that it be now read by sections.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, that order will be made. The Clerk will proceed to read the bill by sections under the five-minute rule.

Mr. PAYSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I desire at the proper time to offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute for this entire bill. Will that be in order when the reading shall be concluded?

The CHAIRMAN. It will.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there be established a court, to be called the United States land court, to consist of a chief-justice and two associate justices, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and to hold their offices for four years. The chief-justice shall receive a compensation of $5,000 per year, and each of the associate justices shall receive a compensation of $4,500 per year, payable monthly from the Treasury of the United States; and each shall, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, take and subscribe an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and to discharge faithfully the duties of his office. Each of said justices shall be entitled to appoint and remove at will a stenographer, who shall receive a compensation of $1,200 per year, payable monthly from the Treasury of the United States, each of whom shall, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, take and subscribe a like oath. The Secretary of the Interior shall detail from his Department a person to act as clerk of the said court, and shall also, upon the application of the said chief-justice, detail from his Department such additional clerical force as shall from time to time be necessary to transact the business of the said court. The said court shall have power to adopt all necessary rules and regulations for the transaction of its business and to carry out the purposes of this act; to adopt a seal and to alter the same at pleasure; to issue any process provided for by law and necessary to the transaction of the business of said court, and to issue commissions to take depositions as provided in chapter 17 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. Each of said justices shall have power to administer oaths and affirmations. It shall be the duty of any United States marshal or deputy marshal to serve any process of said court placed in his hands for that purpose. That said court shall sit continuously, except as hereinafter provided, in the city of Washington, with a vacation not exceeding one month in any one year, to be taken at such times in the months of July or August as the court shall determine. The Secretary of the Interior shall provide in his Department suitable rooms for the occupation and use of said court. The Secretary of the Interior shall detail a clerk to act as reporter of said court, who shall from time to time cause the decisions of the said court, both in Department and in bank, to be published in the same manner that the decisions of the Department of the Interior relating to public lands have been heretofore published. The said court shall have jurisdiction to examine, hear, and decide all cases of private land claims which shall come before it in the manner hereinafter provided for.

SEC. 2. That the said court shall, upon its organization, be divided into three departments, to be known as departments numbers one, two, and three of the United States land court, to each of which departments one of the said justices shall be assigned by the chief-justice. Such departments may sit simultaneously, and the justice of each department shall have full power to examine, hear, and determine any cause coming before him in said department; and from time to time, as in the judgment of the chief-justice the exigencies of the business of the court may require, the three justices shall sit in banc for the determination of such cases as may, in the manner hereinafter provided, be brought before the court in banc. There shall also be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a competent attorney to represent the United States in said court in all cases where the United States is interested, and particularly in the adjudication of all private land claims. Such attorney shall receive a compensation of $4,000 per year, payable monthly out of the Treasury of the United States, and shall, before entering upon his duties, take and subscribe to an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and perform the duties of his office.

Mr. MCCREARY. I move to amend by striking out at the end of line 5, in section 2, the word "may," as that word is repeated at the beginning of line 6.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 3. That immediately upon the organization of the said court it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and he is hereby required, to transmit to the said court the testimony and papers in each and every case of contest where two or more parties claim the right to enter, locate, select, or otherwise acquire title to the same tract of land, in whole or in part, and wherein testimony has been taken by the district land officers or surveyors-general in the manner now provided by law and regulations, and wherein no decision upon the merits has been rendered by the said Commissioner; and the said cases shall be divided among and submitted to the several departments of said court in such manner as the chief-justice shall determine. And thereafter it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, immediately upon the receipt by him of the testimony in any such case, to transmit the same to the said court, and upon its receipt in the said court it shall be assigned by the chief-justice to one of the said departments for examination, hearing, and decision. And in all such cases in which decisions have been rendered by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, but which decisions have not under existing laws and regulations become final, the party against whom such decision has been rendered may, within sixty days from the date of the approval of this act, file an appeal to the said court in the same manner as appeals have heretofore been taken from decisions of the said Commissioner to the Secretary of the Interior; upon receipt of which appeals, properly taken, the said Commissioner shall certify the case to the said court, where it shall be received and considered in the same manner as if no decision had been therein rendered by the Commissioner. In the event that in any such case no appeal shall be filed from the decision of the Commissioner within sixty days from the approval of this act, such decision shall be considered as final, and shall not thereafter be reopened except upon a showing of newly-discovered evidence. And all cases in which at the date of the approval of this act appeals have been taken from decisions of the said Commissioner to the Secretary of the Interior, but which appeals have not been submitted to the said Secretary, shall, immediately upon the organization of said court, be transmitted to said court in like manner.

SEC. 4. That immediately upon the organization of the said court it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to transmit to said court the records of all cases then pending before him on appeals from the decisions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and all cases pending before him on motions for review of his decisions therein. Such cases shall also be divided among the departments of said court, in the same manner as provided in the foregoing section for cases received by the court from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, except that they shall have precedence in the order of examination and decision.

SEC. 5. That the said justices, in their respective departments, shall proceed with the examination, hearing, and decision of the cases so coming before them, as nearly as practicable in the order of their submission, except that the cases transferred to the court by the Secretary of the Interior, as provided in section 4, shall have precedence. Each of said justices may, however, upon sufficient cause being shown, advance any case pending before him and set same for immediate examination, hearing, and decision. Each justice shall cause to be kept a record of the proceedings in his department and of the decisions rendered by him.

The following amendment of the Committee on Private Land Claims was read:

Strike out sections 3, 4, and 5.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 6. That in every case where it is not made to appear, by evidence satisfactory to the court, that the value of the property involved, with the improvements thereon, exceeds the sum of $2,000, the decision of the justice rendered in department shall be final. In every case where the value of the property involved, with the improvements thereon, is so shown to exceed the sum of $2,000, either party not satisfied with the decision rendered shall have the right of appeal to the court in bank: Provided, That notice of the intention to take such appeal be filed in the department where the decision is rendered within sixty days from date of notice of such decision, and the appeal thereafter perfected in accordance with such rules as shall be prescribed by the court in that regard. The court in bank shall proceed with the examination, hearing, and decision of the cases so brought before it by appeal as nearly as practicable in the order of submission, except that upon sufficient cause shown the chief-justice may advance any such case and set same for immediate examination and hearing.

SEC. 7. That in every case where it is not made to appear, by evidence satisfactory to the court, that the value of the property involved, with the improvements thereon, exceeds the sum of $5,000, the decision of the court in bank shall be final. In every case where it shall be so made to appear that the value of the property involved, with the improvements thereon, exceeds the sum of $5,000, either party not satisfied with the decision rendered shall have the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, in the same manner and upon the same conditions as is provided by law for the taking of appeals from the decision of the district courts of the United States: Provided, however, That if such appeal be not taken within six months from the date of such decision, the right of appeal shall be barred, and such decision thereupon become final, and the attorney for the United States shall also have the right to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States on the same conditions.

SEC. 8. That whenever the decision of the court in any case shall become final, either by failure to appeal or otherwise, as herein provided, the clerk of the court shall certify that fact to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, transmitting to him at the same time the record of said case; and the said Commissioner shall thereupon promptly execute and enforce such decision.

SEC. 9. That the said court shall have jurisdiction over all private land claims in the Territories of Arizona, New Mexico, and the State of Colorado which have not become final by the action of Congress or of the Executive or Judicial Departments. The said court shall by one or more of its members, in the discretion of the chief-justice thereof, be in session at least six months in each and every year at Santa Fé, in the Territory of New Mexico, at Tucson, in the Territory of Arizona, and at Denver, in the State of Colorado, until the business arising under this section is completed. The duration of the terms of said court, at the respective places named, shall be regulated by the chief-justice of said court, who shall give notice of the time and place of holding such courts by publication, for thirty days in both the English and Spanish languages, in a newspaper of general circulation, at the capital of the State or Territory where such court is to be held, and said chief-justice shall make such orders as may be necessary in order to carry out the provisions of this section. There shall be appointed by the court trying the case such persons as may be necessary, skilled in the Spanish and English languages, to act as interpreters in said court; such persons shall be entitled to a compensation of $6 per day while actually engaged, payable from the Treasury of the United States on the certificate of the court, and shall, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, take and subscribe an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and to faithfully perform the duties of his office.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I move to amend by striking out the word "Arizona" wherever it occurs in the bill.

Mr. McCREARY. That word occurs all through the bill; and I make the point of order that the proper time to vote on the amendment will be after the entire bill has been read.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I want to be heard on the amendment now.

Mr. McCREARY. I withdraw my point, if the gentleman desires to be heard.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the passage of this bill, so far as it affects the Territory of Arizona, and I think it but just that I should state the reasons which actuate me in opposing it. I do not believe the bill is a wise one, except probably where it applies to those small holdings in the Territory of New Mexico where Mexican settlers have held their lands for years and in small quantities. Some bill to afford relief in such cases ought to be passed; there ought to be some speedy mode of settling the title to those holdings. But when I see that under the operation of this bill the settlers of my Territory, scattered miles and miles apart yet not far enough to get off of some of these pretended land grants, are to be called into court, and that in the face of the treaty with Mexico every promise which was made to valid claimants of land under the treaty is to be violated—when I see this staring me in the face—when I remember what was enacted in California under a commission composed of most excellent men, men who had national reputations, yet the machinations of the land thief and the determination of the land grabber were enough to overcome even that tribunal, so that we find great tracts of California land to-day held under titles that were notoriously fraudulent, I feel convinced that the same thing may be repeated in Arizona.

We have only eight or ten claims in Arizona, twelve at the outside; and only two, so far as I know, have any validity, and both of those are extremely small.

Mr. McCREARY. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Yes, sir.

Mr. McCREARY. I hold in my hand a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in which he says that there are fifteen claims from Arizona which have already been submitted to Congress by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. The gentleman will oblige me by letting me have that document. I want to show the facts about these particular claims. I am glad the gentleman has the document here.

These land claims embrace, according to this showing, fifteen claims, one, the Rancho San Rafael del Valle, 17,000 acres; another, the Rancho San Ignacio del Babacomori, 34,000 acres; another, the Rancho San Ignacio de la Canoa, 17,208 acres; another, the Rancho El Paso de los Algodones, 22,193 acres; another, the Rancho Tumacacori and Calabazas, 52,000 acres.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. PAYSON. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Arizona be permitted to continue his remarks until he concludes. This is a matter of great importance.

Mr. McCREARY. I have no objection to the gentleman occupying five minutes more. He has already made a speech on this subject when this bill was up before, and I made a speech myself, treating this question elaborately. I have no objection to an extension of five or seven minutes.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I would like to occupy twenty or possibly thirty minutes.

Mr. McCREARY. I suggest ten.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. McCREARY] asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Arizona may proceed for ten minutes.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I will close within thirty minutes. I will not occupy more time than that, and it will not do any good to try and shut me off. Gentlemen will not gain any time in that way.

Mr. McCREARY. How much time does the gentleman want?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I will close within thirty minutes at the most.

Mr. McCREARY. I have no objection.

Mr. SENEY. Why not give the gentleman as much time as he desires?

Mr. McCREARY. The gentleman says he will be satisfied with thirty minutes. I ask that he be allowed thirty minutes, deducting the time he has already occupied.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Arizona may occupy thirty minutes, the five minutes he has already occupied being deducted. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Now, sir, in connection with these names that I have read, and because some members asked me not to give any more of these Spanish names, I will gratify their wish in that respect, but in connection with these there are other claims to which I must briefly call attention. The objection is made that these are old Spanish claims, and the great majority are held by purely land speculators, and to this point I wish to call your special attention. There is one other claim to which I referred in my former address to the House on this question, a modest little claim amounting to some 4,600,000 acres, that was bought, I am informed, for a few sore-backed pack-mules, [laughter], 4,600,000 acres of the best land in the world, covered by a hard-working, prosperous population, most of whom hold their patents from the Government.

Yet they are to be thrown into the courts at great expense, or have their lands taken from them, and the only question is, whether the lawyer or the land grant shall take the farm. They are to go into court under the patent held from the Government to defend their own title against the land grant which is some sixty or seventy years old; and not only this, but other Mexican claims will be trumped up by the speculators, for they are very easily bought.

Now, the result of this bill will be, as far as the Territory of Arizona is concerned, as I say, to drag these people into the courts to test the questions that the Government itself, under the treaty, is bound at its own expense to settle for itself. But it gives a power to command them to appear before a court to defend the patents of the Government against the land grant in Mexico. It is all wrong. It simply amounts to forfeiture of these lands, or else an expenditure of an amount of money that many of these people can not afford in order to protect themselves.

Now, there is another subject to which I wish to call attention, and I do not want to detain the House, and that is in reference to a claim, being one of the fifteen to which I have referred, called the El Paso de los Agodones grant, for the forfeiture of which I have already introduced a bill at this session of Congress. What are the facts in that case? That grant was bought in 1879 or 1880 by some gentlemen in California, most of whom are now dead. But they went into an organization or corporation known as the "Land and Cattle Company." They had a survey of the grant made, and under operation of law it was withdrawn from public entry. When the surveyor-general made his report to the Secretary of the Interior, as under the law he is bound to do, it was such a notorious case of forgery and fraud that when it came down to the Private Land Committee of the House the agent of this company or corporation got leave of the House to withdraw all of the papers connected with it; and so it stands, with the House having no jurisdiction, the Secretary or the Department having no jurisdiction, and the land left there from that day to this without settlement, the corporation dissolved, and no man claiming it.

The Interior Department is unable to act, because it did all it could in transmitting to Congress the facts in connection with the case, and Congress can not act because we can not get any report; and that old claim now, which has all this before it, is to be brought in to be tried again after all these years of abandonment before this land court in order to settle the title.

And not only that, Mr. Chairman, but another objection is that this will encourage other and wider speculations and trade in Mexican titles, which are procurable for money at any time. It will induce other corporations and crowds to get together and attempt to make up another "valid" land grant, no matter how old they may be; the older the better. If they can run the claim back to the discovery of America by Columbus, it is the very best title they could have, because no living person can possibly contradict it. [Laughter.] They run back now to 1700, quite a number of them, and we did not hear of them until 1883 or 1884. Now, you pass this bill and they will be trumped up all along the line running away beyond that. And hence I suggest that whatever the representatives of the other Territories may think best for their people, I know this bill in its present form is not best for the people of mine.

Mr. DUNN. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. How would you settle the title of the actual settlers? I want to know how they are going to get their titles. Are they to remain in uncertainty and in a disturbed condition for all time, rather than have a final settlement of the title by such a provision?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Most certainly not.

Mr. DUNN. Since Congress has failed to act, and if the court proposed to be established here shall not be permitted to act, how will these settlers get their titles?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. That will be done under the provisions of a substitute bill, which will be proposed as an amendment.

Mr. DUNN. There can be no presumption that this court will be more unfriendly to the occupants of the lands than to the claimants under the grant. You must presume that the court will be fair in its determination of these questions.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. It is all well enough to talk of a fair court. But you take the very best lawyer in this House and send him out to Arizona and give him authority to consider such questions, and he will find difficulties that you do not dream of. The testimony itself will be given in a language foreign to his own and with which he is not familiar. He knows nothing about the people and nothing of the circumstances surrounding the lands.

The fairer and more honest the court is the more difficult it will be for the people to get justice, because the best and the wisest court will be misled by conditions that are existing, and the more difficult it will be for these people to prove their titles when brought face to face with these Mexican grants.

Mr. BRUMM. The reason you have assigned for opposing this bill as far as it applies to Arizona, would that not apply naturally to all of the Territories of the United States?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. That is for those from the other Territories to determine.

Mr. BRUMM. But would not the same provisions apply equally to all the Territories?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I do not believe it exactly would, and for this reason: The Territory of Arizona is covered by fifteen of these claims. In New Mexico there are a great many of these claims. This land has been settled by hundreds and hundreds of men who have had these small holdings for years and years, which were handed down from father to son, and it is impossible to perfect their title, but their title is such as everybody would accept as just. There ought to be some speedy means of settling these small holdings, but there ought not to be any means directed by this Congress to promote the interest of those large land-grant claims, and the men interested in them ought to have no further or better chance to get a grip on the people.

Mr. BRUMM. If there are such cases in the other Territories it ought to apply to them as well as Arizona.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I can not speak for the other Territories.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman from Arizona yield for a question?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Certainly.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. Is it not a fact that under the present law if the land has been surveyed by the surveyor-general and settled on, whether the land grant is small or not, these land-grant claimants get possession of it?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. That is very true; but fortunately for my people, with an honest surveyor-general, not a single one of them has been surveyed, and we are in possession.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. Have they not surveyed Tres Alamos No. 17? That is occupied by land-grant claimants, and is in just the same condition as the fifteen or sixteen other claims.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. In Arizona?

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. Yes.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Will you name one of these in Arizona?

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. Tres Alamos.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I know something about Tres Alamos. I happen to live near it myself, but the body of it is owned by a member of the Senate. The Tres Alamos claim was placed on the San Pedro River, below the town of Benson. The grant, as far as the original claim was concerned, was before the Private Lands Committee. It went from where the San Pedro River sinks into the sand away towards the setting sun, and it trended its course until it had gone on and almost touched Mexico, as far as the Reavis claim on the north, and it had on it hundreds and hundreds of the most prosperous farmers in Arizona.

The present surveyor-general has made a report on the Tres Alamos claim, that the Private Lands Committee ought to have brought in to this House, where he surveyed the whole of that land. My people are in possession of it and we do not propose that it shall be taken out of their possession and an opportunity given to the land-grant people to create a court to aid in wasting and plundering them. There is a better way than this. Every other claim in the Territory is in the same condition. These are some of my reasons for objecting to this measure as far as Arizona is concerned. I can not speak concerning any other Territory. I am here to represent Arizona and nothing else. I do not know the condition of the people in New Mexico or Colorado, but I know the condition of things in Arizona from talking with the people, and they ought to be protected against the land-grant claims, and the only answer I can give is that these claims must be settled by the Government as the Government promised to do in the treaty with Mexico.

Mr. DUNN. Can not your people prove up these frauds in the court?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Can the poor men who live down on the San Pedro go to Tucson and go over to Mexico and over to Spain and examine the royal archives to find record of their title?

Mr. DUNN. That will apply to New Mexico as well as Arizona.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Can the poor claimant go over to Spain and search the royal archives and find where the theft lies?

Mr. DUNN. How do you find out that these frauds exist?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. By searching time and time again, by my people paying money out of their pockets, and by the surveyor of the Territory paying $1,000 out of his own pitiful salary to assist in it, and by his going into Mexico and making examination; and this Congress will not give him money enough to go to look into the subject. Then they tell the poor occupant to go and look into the royal archives of Spain and find out the title.

Mr. DUNN. I will ask if it does not look like a suspicious title that is not willing to be tried.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I do not want to be tried on a dead muniment. I want my people to have these claims settled, and I want Congress to make an appropriation to settle this question. It has not got the machinery, and until it creates it they can not do it. The court can not stop it when it starts. It has got to be investigated before a tribunal that can stop it.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. Does this bill make anything title which would not be title irrespective of this bill, or does it make evidence that which is not to be evidence irrespective of this bill?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I think it does.

Mr. SYMES. I heartily agree with what the gentleman from Arizona has said regarding the fraudulence of numerous large grants, but there are a great many grants that are just and correct so far as not being fraudulent in title is concerned. It has been the practice for squatters to settle on this land and for men to pursue their avocation in farming and agriculture. I heartily agree with all that. Alleged grant titles cover large tracts of this land. I have witnessed the practice, and I have seen for thirty years that the Interior Department have absolutely failed to afford any relief and to confirm their titles or eliminate them and restore lands to the public domain, or confirm the grants where they are legal. Now, the gentleman from Arizona was before our committee when this subject was before it, urging a bill for this purpose. I want him now to explain to this House why it is that he is opposed to this bill, and why it is he will not suggest a better remedy. I am with him in everything he says, except that I want Congress to adopt a remedy to cure the evil he complains of.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. The gentleman has made a good speech and a fine peroration, but the misfortune is that it does not exactly comport with the facts in the case. He intended it should, but he missed it nearly as far as this bill misses the proper remedy for my Territory. [Laughter.] There was a question before the Public Lands Committee upon which I was heard, and inasmuch as the gentleman has brought that matter up, I am forced to make an explanation, because I do not wish to appear of record as having held two different views upon a question of so much importance to my people. We went before the Public Lands Committee upon the question of the formation of a commission having certain judicial powers, on the statement before that committee that this bill was to be reported for the purpose of forcing a conference with the Senate to see what views the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS] would entertain about this scheme to which he had always objected.

I had no right to vote on the Public Lands Committee, because I was not a member of it, and if I was I could not have voted; but in the Private Lands Committee, when this bill came up at the very last meeting, I said to the gentleman who happened to be beside me, the honorable gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAYERS], "When that bill comes to the House it shall never pass, so far as Arizona is concerned, with my consent." I was opposed to it then, and I have been opposed to it from that day to this, so far as it applies to Arizona. I do not care for Colorado. The gentleman from that State [Mr. SYMES] undoubtedly knows better than I do what is best for the people there, and let him advocate it. I do not care for New Mexico, except to say that the House would probably act wisely in following the advice of the gentleman who has been so persistent, so honest, and so earnest in pressing this measure in the interest of his people.

Mr. SYMES. Will the gentleman permit another question?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Yes; a question. [Laughter.]

Mr. SYMES. Did you not appear before the subcommittee of the Committee on Territories, of which I was a member, and suggest amendments and discuss the matter and give us the benefit of your practical information, which was valuable to us in fixing up a bill similar to this one providing for a judicial tribunal to settle these claims?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I believe I did have the misfortune to have to go before a subcommittee that had Judge SYMES on it. [Laughter.] I expected then that I would probably never hear the last of it if I should feel called upon to oppose any bill here that he desired to have passed.

Mr. Chairman, I have gone as far into that Public Lands Committee business as I intend to go now, except to say that I did not there advocate, I do not here advocate, and if I can help it I will not let pass, a bill like this, that would compel the people of Arizona to rush into court at the beck of a large corporation to be either blackmailed or robbed or forced to pay out their inheritance for lawyers' fees. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. MCCREARY. I wish to ask the gentleman a question. Is it not true that you are a member of the Committee on Private Land Claims, and that this bill was not opposed by you in that committee?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. It is true that I have the privilege of sitting in the Private Land Claims Committee, and I am sorry that it is made a matter of reproach to me that, recognizing the modesty which I thought would probably befit a poor Delegate who could not vote either in committee or in the House, I so far departed from the general character and conduct of certain members of the committee. Gentlemen appear to be greatly surprised that I did not tear my shirt in committee where I knew it would do no good. [Laughter.] I did there what I have done here. I presented my objections to this bill, and made efforts to have other provisions inserted in it; and I claim that if there be salvation for my people through this bill it will only be by adopting the amendments which I suggested.

Mr. McCREARY. Another question. Have you received from the Bar Association of Pima County, Arizona, of which Tucson is the county seat, a petition asking you to advocate this bill and declaring that they are in favor of the bill now pending?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Just as I told you, gentlemen! There it is; between the land grants and the lawyers! [Laughter.] There is a little coterie of lawyers in Tucson, able men, good lawyers, and if this bill should pass they would get very rich. [Renewed laughter.] I ought to be amongst them, getting rich too, because if this bill passes I think I would probably have the pleasure of being employed in some of these land-grant cases. The passage of the bill might be a benefit to me, just as it would be to those lawyers. But did the gentleman ever hear of other petitions that have come up from that country? Did you ever hear that from the hot plains; did you ever hear that along the desert track; did you ever hear that from wherever the sweat was rising from the toiling masses in that Territory there came petition after petition, telegram after telegram to me crying out, as was done in days of old, "For God's sake come over and help us against the land thief and the lawyer?" [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. McCREARY. Have those petitions been filed?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. If they have not, there is a desk full of them over there which the gentleman would be edified by reading. [Laughter.] I think some of them have been filed, but I know that he will find one of them incorporated in the remarks which I addressed to the House some time ago.

Now, Mr. Chairman, these are my reasons for objecting to this bill, and I ask this House, in the name of my people and so far as they are concerned, to do me and to do them the justice to let us for once say what we prefer in this matter, so far as our titles are concerned, and if, later, some wiser plan can be found, as I am sure there can be, we shall be prepared to take what you give us. I think it is only fair to assume that Colorado and New Mexico know best what they want; but we in Arizona certainly do not want this bill.

The conditions are so absolutely different that Arizona ought not to have been included in the original bill. I admit that of all the bills on this subject which have come before the House, this certainly in my opinion is the wisest and the best considered. I grant that freely; but while the bill may properly apply to the conditions existing in Colorado and New Mexico, the wisdom which may belong to a measure applicable to certain circumstances may become anything else than wisdom when applied to an entirely different state of facts. While this is a good bill for the settlement of land claims in New Mexico and Colorado, it certainly does not apply to the natural physical conditions surrounding my people. I hope, therefore, that the amendment I propose striking Arizona from the bill may be adopted.

Mr. McCREARY. Mr. Chairman, I hope I shall not be limited to five minutes in responding to the gentleman from Arizona.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will remark that this bill is being considered by paragraphs, and amendments must properly be offered to each paragraph as read.

Mr. McCREARY. I suggest that the gentleman from Arizona withhold his amendments until we get through with the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. That arrangement can be made by unanimous consent.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. With the understanding that I may offer the amendments to these paragraphs after the reading of the bill is concluded, I will withdraw my amendment for the present.

The CHAIRMAN. The arrangement suggested can only be made by unanimous consent.

Mr. ROGERS. I ask unanimous consent.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas asks unanimous consent that after the reading of all the paragraphs under the five-minute rule, the gentleman from Arizona may be permitted to submit an amendment striking out the word "Arizona" wherever it occurs in the bill. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. ROGERS. I now ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. McCREARY] in responding to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] be allowed not exceeding thirty minutes.

Mr. McCREARY. I shall probably not want so much time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kentucky may be permitted to occupy the floor for thirty minutes in response to the gentleman from Arizona. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. McCREARY. I think my friend from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] is mistaken in the view which he takes of this bill in regard to its application to Arizona. He stated that he regarded the bill as one of the wisest and best measures which had been presented to this House in its application to New Mexico and Colorado, but he says he does not regard it as a good bill when applied to the Territory of Arizona. If the bill under consideration is a wise and appropriate measure for New Mexico and Colorado, it certainly is a good measure for Arizona. Now, in order that we may know exactly what we are doing, I wish to state briefly the object of the bill. The object is to provide for a judicial investigation and settlement of private land claims in the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona and in the State of Colorado, arising by virtue of any right, title, or authority derived from the Spanish or Mexican Governments, which the Government of the United States is bound to respect under the provisions of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, or the treaty known as the Gadsden treaty with Mexico, or under the laws, usages, or customs of Spain or Mexico concerning the disposal of lands.

The bill was carefully considered for more than a month by the Committee on Private Land Claims. The governor of the Territory of New Mexico, the ex-chief-justice of that Territory, a very able lawyer, and a number of prominent citizens from the Territory, were time and again before the committee and approved of the bill. The gentleman on my right, the Delegate from New Mexico [Mr. JOSEPH], was there time and again, and he approved the bill then, as he approves it now. The distinguished Representative from the State of Colorado [Mr. SYMES] approved the bill and made a speech in its favor when it was up the first time. The gentleman from Arizona, a member of the Committee on Private Land Claims, did not object to the bill when it was voted on in committee, and I was surprised to find him objecting to the bill today and desiring to except the Territory of Arizona from the bill.

This is a very important measure. It is important because its object is to settle private land claims amounting to nearly 10,000,000 acres in the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico, and the State of Colorado. I have here, in response to my letter, a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in which that officer states that there are now pending in Congress and awaiting confirmation, reports of surveyors-general upon private land claims as follows: New Mexico, 107 claims, covering 8,704,785 acres; in Arizona, 15 claims, covering 414,833 acres; in Colorado, claims covering 229,814 acres; making a total of 9,349,433 acres.

The number of acres for which no claim has been filed, and the number of acres for which claims have been filed but which are undecided are not included in these figures.

It is estimated that the total number of acres claimed under private land grants, and which are unsettled, in New Mexico, amount to about 10,000,000 acres, and in the Territory of Arizona to about 6,000,000 acres, and in the State of Colorado to about 1,500,000 acres; making about 17,500,000 acres, embracing altogether a territory nearly equal to the combined area of the States of Massachusetts, Connecticut, and New Hampshire.

Where does the demand come from for relief? It comes from the most prominent people in New Mexico and Colorado. It comes from the Representative from Colorado and from the Delegate from New Mexico. It comes from the Democratic convention and the Republican convention which were recently held in the Territory of New Mexico. The Republican convention was held but a short time ago in the Territory of New Mexico, and that Republican convention passed a resolution which I have now upon my table earnestly petitioning and requesting Congress to pass a bill to provide for a judicial investigation and settlement of private land claims. Shortly afterward the Democratic convention met in New Mexico, and that convention passed a resolution earnestly petitioning Congress for relief and for a judicial investigation and settlement of these claims.

Mr. Chairman, not only justice to the people of these Territories and the State of Colorado, but justice to the Government of the United States, which is honorably bound by solemn treaty obligations, demands that these private land claims shall be settled. Why? Congress has been far more generous and attentive to private land claimants on all other lands acquired by purchase or treaty than to the claimants residing in Arizona, New Mexico, and Colorado. In 1803, under Mr. Jefferson's administration, we acquired the Louisiana territory from France, 757,000,000 acres of land, and in less than two years after we acquired that territory we had three sets of commissioners in the field settling private land claims. In 1819 we acquired Florida from Spain under Mr. Monroe's administration, and we sent into the field in less than a year a board of commissioners to settle private land claims in Florida.

In 1848 we acquired from Mexico 334,000,000 acres of land under the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo. In 1853 under the Gadsden treaty we again acquired 30,000,000 acres more from Mexico.

What has the Government of the United States done as regards the territory acquired from Mexico? We settled private land claims in California, but instead of settling private land claims in other parts of the territory acquired from Mexico we passed the act of 1854. It is as follows:

And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the surveyor-general, under such instructions as may be given by the Secretary of the Interior, to ascertain the origin, nature, character, and extent of all claims to lands under the laws, usages, and customs of Spain and Mexico, and for this purpose may issue notices, summon witnesses, administer oaths, and do and perform all other necessary acts in the premises. He shall make a full report on all such claims as originated before the cession of the territory to the United States by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, of 1848, denoting the various grades of title, with his decision as to the validity or invalidity of each of the same under the laws, usages, and customs of the country before its cession to the United States; and shall also make a report in regard to all pueblos existing in the Territory, showing the extent and locality of each, stating the number of inhabitants in the said pueblos respectively, and the nature of their titles to the land. Such report to be made according to the form which may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, which report shall be laid before Congress for such action thereon as may be deemed just and proper, with a view to conform bona fide grants and give full effect to the treaty of 1848 between the United States and Mexico; and until the final action of Congress on such claims all lands covered thereby shall be reserved from sale or other disposal by the Government, and shall not be subject to the donations granted by the previous provisions of this act.

I have read the eighth section of the act of 1854 in order that the members of the House might understand the situation in Arizona, New Mexico, and Colorado. There are places in New Mexico and Arizona where men have purchased 160 acres of land and expanded the purchase into thousands of acres. They are now in possession and have been in possession for many years. One of the objects of this bill is to furnish a remedy to drive out land thieves and land pirates who have gone out and, under the act of 1854, which has proved to be a failure, taken possession of and inclosed hundreds of thousands of acres of land which they are illegally holding to-day. They do not want land grants confirmed; indeed, they do not want anything done.

The report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office shows that under the act of 1854, from the end of the year 1860 to the end of the year 1870, there were but seven land grants confirmed by Congress. From 1870 to 1879 there were but three, and from 1879 down to the present time not one solitary land grant has been confirmed. The act of 1854 therefore does not give the relief needed in Arizona, New Mexico, and Colorado.

The people there are at the mercy of land sharks and land pirates. That is the reason that the demand is so pressing for the passage of some kind of a bill that will remedy these evils. That is the reason that a large delegation of gentlemen came from New Mexico to the city of Washington last winter. They earnestly asked for a judicial tribunal to settle private land claims, which, as I have said before, embrace nearly 10,000,000 acres in New Mexico, 6,000,000 acres in Arizona, and 1,500,000 acres in Colorado.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. There is in addition to that 4,600,000 acres to be added to the Arizona portion. This has just sprung up lately.

Mr. McCREARY. And I am surprised that my friend from Arizona should express himself as so much opposed to a measure the only object of which is to settle these land claims. It seems to me that any man, where there is a contest about his land, ought to be willing to submit the questions raised to an honest judicial tribunal, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

Mr. Chairman, I have a letter which was sent to me as chairman of the Committee on Private Land Claims, which I desire to have read from the Clerk's desk, to show the views of distinguished citizens of Arizona.

The Clerk read as follows:

TUCSON, ARIZ., April 11, 1888.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to transmit, herewith inclosed, a copy of resolutions adopted by the bar of Pima County, Arizona Territory, in favor of the establishment of a court or tribunal for the settlement of Spanish and Mexican land grants in this Territory.

Yours, etc.,

S. M. FRANKLIN,
Secretary pro tempore Bar Association.

The COMMITTEE ON PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Preamble and resolutions adopted by the Bar Associations of Pima County, Arizona Territory, at their meeting held at Tucson, Saturday, February 25, 1888.

Whereas there are in the Territory of Arizona vast tracts of agricultural lands which are covered by Spanish and Mexican grants; and

Whereas the prosperity of this Territory is dependent upon action by the United States whereby the title to said lands can once and forever be determined and adjudicated: Therefore,

Be it resolved, That the bar of Pima County, Arizona Territory, earnestly recommend to Congress the passage of an act establishing a court or tribunal to determine all claims to such lands and land grants, such court to hold sessions, take testimony, and hear arguments in the Territories where such grants are situated; with the right to appeal from the judgment of such court or tribunal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded by our secretary to Hon. MARK A. SMITH, our Delegate to Congress, and to the respective Committees on Territories and Private Land Claims of the United States Senate and House of Representatives.

Passed by unanimous vote.

WM. H. LOVELL, President.
S. M. FRANKLIN,
Secretary pro tempore.

Mr. McCREARY. I had that letter read, from the Bar Association of Pima County, Tucson, the county seat of Pima, being the largest city in the Territory, to show what the Bar Association of that city desire, and to show further that an association of able and honorable attorneys indorse this bill. I want to say in this connection that I do not believe the Bar Association of Pima County would deliberately petition the Congress of the United States to do a thing that they believed to be unwise and commend it in order to put fees in their pockets. I put these statements on record in answer to the statements of the Delegate from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] in regard to the lawyers of the Territory which he represents.

Now, sir, some plan for the settlement of these private land claims should unquestionably be devised. Upon that point there seems to be but little difference of opinion. The demand comes from the Delegate from the Territory of New Mexico and the Representative from the State of Colorado, and I referred this bill to the Secretary of the Interior in order to have the views of the Interior Department on that question. I have received a letter from Mr. Vilas, the Secretary of the Interior, approving the bill and saying that the Congress of the United States should promptly pass a bill for the relief of land claimants in the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico, and in the State of Colorado. The letter is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, July 24, 1888.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of the 7th instant, transmitting for my consideration House bill 7643, entitled "A bill to establish a United States land court and to provide for a judicial investigation and settlement of private land claims in the Territories of Arizona, New Mexico, and the State of Colorado."

I referred said bill to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, whose report thereon is herewith transmitted.

In the copy of the bill submitted for my consideration sections 3, 4, and 5 have been crossed with a pen. As these are the only sections conferring upon said court jurisdiction over all cases of contest in land matters, I presume that it is the intention to so amend the bill as to provide for a court whose jurisdiction shall be confined solely to the judicial investigation and settlement of private land claims in the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico and the State of Colorado.

It is evident that existing laws requiring private land claims to be submitted to Congress for final confirmation thereof have proven inadequate to such a speedy and final settlement of private land claims as the rights of the claimants and the interest and welfare of the public and the Government alike demand.

Some other provision should be made by which these claims may be fully investigated with the view to a speedy and final decision upon the rights of the claimants thereto, whether it be by conferring upon the General Land Office, under the supervision of this Department, jurisdiction to hear and determine such claims in the manner proposed by my predecessor as set forth in the report of the Commissioner, or by the creation of a separate tribunal invested with full and ample jurisdiction to dispose of all questions affecting the rights of claimants under said claims with the right of appeal as provided for in the bill now under consideration.

While I concur in the views of the Commissioner that the Department has a skilled and competent force sufficiently able to make a thorough investigation and properly dispose of said claims, I am satisfied that a separate tribunal, untrammeled with other matters, and whose jurisdiction shall be confined solely to the investigation of such claims, would be more effective in securing a prompt disposal of them; that it would possess equal if not superior facilities and advantages to the General Land Office for such investigation, having the usual advantages possessed by courts in presenting testimony with the aid of counsel for both parties, and the decision of a court rendered after such investigation would be more satisfactory to all parties in interest.

But the end most to be desired is that the proper settlement of these claims shall be speedy and final, so that the claimant may be secure in his title to the land to which he has a rightful claim, and that the land to which no lawful claim can be shown may be restored to the public domain to be disposed of under the general land laws.

The bill as originally proposed provides for a court having jurisdiction over all contested land cases now pending in the General Land Office as well as for the investigation and settlement of private land claims in the Territories and State named therein. But sections 3, 4, and 5 having been stricken from said bill, it may require some minor amendments, by way of omitting therefrom certain phraseology, depending for its significance upon the said sections stricken out.

I see no objections to the general frame of the bill, and I believe that the organization of a court, with the powers and jurisdiction as therein provided, will accomplish the objects and purposes above indicated more effectively than the existing law or the plan proposed by my predecessor.

In view of the great and pressing demands for the speedy settlement of land titles in the State and Territories mentioned, I beg leave most earnestly to urge the crying necessity for prompt and efficient Congressional action in the premises.

Very respectfully,

WM. F. VILAS, Secretary.

Hon. JAMES B. McCREARY,
Chairman Committee on Private Land Claims,
House of Representatives.

If, then, this bill has been carefully prepared, if the demand comes from the Territory of New Mexico and from the State of Colorado through their representatives on this floor, and is approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and is desired by the people who are interested, we ought to pass it, unless it can be shown that there is something objectionable or unconstitutional in the measure.

Various plans have been suggested within the last twenty years for the settlement of these land claims. One is to appoint a board of commissioners, and in this connection let me say, Mr. Chairman, that the bill now under consideration is almost exactly like the bill which was passed by the Forty-seventh Congress, except that it provides for a judicial tribunal instead of a board of commissioners. The board of commissioners did not work well in California, and I am not in favor of a board of commissioners to settle private land claims when a judicial tribunal can be obtained.

Another plan was to give jurisdiction to the United States district courts in the two Territories and in the State mentioned; but when the committee examined this plan we found that the courts are already overburdened with business, and if we give them jurisdiction there is no probability that the cases would be reached for trial in many years. We therefore concluded that the best and wisest plan to give speedy relief would be found in a bill providing for a judicial tribunal according to the terms of the bill under consideration.

The bill provides a fair, comprehensive, and speedy plan for the settlement of private land claims. The court which is created only lasts for four years, and it is believed in that time the relief so earnestly demanded will be granted.

Mr. JOSEPH. Mr. Chairman, as a representative on this floor of the Territory of New Mexico, I will state here and now that the people of the Territory of New Mexico are a unit in favor of the passage of the present bill for their relief from the condition of things which has been so well explained by the gentleman from Kentucky.

I readily understand why my friend representing the people of the Territory of Arizona is opposed to this measure. I am reliably informed that these grants, or pretended grants, as he alleges them to be, are occupied by squatters in his Territory, while in the Territory of New Mexico, that I have the honor to represent, all these grants are occupied by bona fide claimants and settlers who have lived upon these grants for many years.

I will now refer to the condition of such grants as were reported by the Secretary of the Interior in his report for 1888, page 32, in which he says:

> After a lapse of nearly thirty years, more than one thousand claims have been filed with the surveyors-general, of which less than one hundred and fifty have been reported to Congress, and of the number so reported Congress has finally acted upon only seventy-one.

Now, Mr. Chairman, that number has not since then been increased, for the reason that Congress has in almost every instance refused to take up and consider any of these claims which have been submitted to this House from the Secretary of the Interior under existing law.

This act has now been in operation for thirty-four years; and but 7 per cent. of the claims filed have been disposed of. At the same rate of progress it must be several centuries before all of these claims are acted upon under existing law. It is not surprising, therefore, that the Secretary of the Interior says of this law in his report for 1880, page 32:

> Its operation has been a failure, amounting to a denial of justice both to the claimants and to the United States.

Now, under the act of 1854 by the mere fact of the presentation of a claim the land is reserved from disposition by the Government of the United States. The settlement and development of the country are wholly thus barred. We are constructing railroads through New Mexico, and the constant influx of population into this Territory renders it imperatively necessary that these claims shall be definitely settled with the least possible delay.

Year after year, Mr. Chairman, the Commissioners of the General Land Office and the surveyors-general in New Mexico have called attention to the necessity of some legislation to cure these evils, but Congress has turned a deaf ear to all complaints. Congress has refused to act upon the claims reported to it under the act of 1854 for confirmation, and it is now desired to create a new tribunal to consider and decide them.

Every interest demands the promptest possible settlement. The people in general demand the removal of this clog upon their progress, and the interests of the United States demand that these lands to which no valid adverse title can be asserted should be recognized as a portion of the national domain and furnish homes for the bona fide settlers of our country now seeking homes in the far West.

The settlement of these long-unsettled titles is absolutely demanded by every interest of the Territory of New Mexico. Her development for the last forty years has been retarded by this harassing uncertainty. Thousands of acres of the public lands have been withdrawn from settlement and thousands of acres of private grants rendered unavailable for sale to actual settlers because Congress has neglected to carry out treaty stipulations. Improvements languish because no one knows what will be done with titles to land. New Mexico desires an opportunity for a free development of her great natural resources. Nothing will aid her more than the final settlement of her land titles.

The last House passed without opposition (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 17, part 5, pages 4370 to 4381) a bill designed to cure these long-existing evils. The bill now before the House is offered as a practicable solution of the question and promises a speedy settlement of the forty years' trouble and delay. The whole Territory of New Mexico awaits its passage with the utmost anxiety.

Mr. SYMES. The people of Southern Colorado, of New Mexico, and, as I always understood from my friend, Mr. SMITH, of Arizona, when he was helping to get a similar bill, are confronted by a condition. Mr. Chairman, that condition is that very large tracts of land in that country are included within the boundaries of Mexican grants. They have what are called "paper titles." The Mexican grants take in not only whole counties, but some of them cover about one-eighth of the Territory of New Mexico, as shown by my friend from that Territory [Mr. JOSEPH], and as large as one-eighth of the Territory of New Mexico, and a large tract in the southern part of the State of Colorado.

Mr. Chairman, those grants conflict with each other in their boundaries, and often are plastered, so to speak, by these paper titles, some of them fraudulent and some of them not fraudulent, from two to ten thick. That is the first class of what may be called the Mexican grant paper titles that have existed since the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848 and the Gadsden treaty in 1853 over large portions of that domain. Now, we have another class of titles that we are seeking here to protect by this bill. The special object of this bill, the special object of the gentlemen who have had experience and who have spent time in maturing this bill, is to protect what may be called the small holders.

All through New Mexico, through a portion of the southern part of Colorado, and, as I had understood from the Delegate from Arizona, in portions of that Territory also, there are what may be called Mexican settlements, little settlements along the small streams, where the people have their farms, the sovereignty of which was transferred from Mexico to this country after the Mexican war. They have their little irrigating ditches, and they have occupied those little farms for generations, many of them living there before the war with Mexico. Now, Mr. Chairman, those are the conditions that confront the occupants of that domain in the Territories and State that I have mentioned. How shall they obtain relief?

In 1854 Congress passed an act which provided that claimants should present their claims to the surveyors-general of the States and Territories. Over a thousand such claims have been so presented; evidence has been taken in them; they have been reported to the Commissioner of the General Land Office and a few of them have found their way to Congress; but during the thirty years that have elapsed, as the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MCCREARY] has shown, only about a score of them have been confirmed, and the balance of those claimants have no title to-day. That is to say, Mr. Chairman, the Government of the United States has not carried out the guaranties of the treaties that I have mentioned by giving to these people muniments of title and a certainty of title to the holdings which they possessed when those treaties were made. Now, what relief do they need? I might add in that connection that under the present system of law there have been confirmed, as the gentleman from Kentucky has shown, a number of grants; but what kind of land grants have been confirmed?

Why, sir, the Maxwell land grant, the Sangre de Christo grant, and about a dozen others that I might name have been confirmed for millons of acres. Those claims were reported to Congress and they passed through one at a time in the course of years, I think it is fair to say for millions of acres more than they were entitled to. What is the consequence under the present system? Here is a large settlement of small holders up and down——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MCCREARY. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Colorado be permitted to continue for five minutes more.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. SYMES. Mr. Chairman, these small holders, these settlers upon lands that are within the exterior boundaries of these large grants, wake up some morning, so to speak, and find that a patent has been issued for a confirmed Mexican paper title grant, the exterior boundaries of which inclose their whole settlement and everybody living within it. Such patent has been issued and suits have been brought from time to time under the order of the Attorney-General of the United States and conducted to a conclusion by the United States attorneys and have been appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the result has been that the Supreme Court have held those patents could not be attacked.

The question has been treated as res adjudicata, and the people living within the boundaries of these land grants will be ousted by suits in ejectment. Now, as I say, where these grants have not been confirmed the paper titles to them are in some instances almost ten deep, and within the exterior boundaries of these immense grants are these small settlements, where people—the Mexicans—were living when the treaties were made. Other people have settled upon what they have taken to be the public domain. Whether it is the public domain or not, the Government is bound to determine in a proper proceeding, to eliminate and regulate the land grants, and to determine what is the public domain, so that these pioneer settlers may know whether they are living upon a Mexican grant title or whether they are living upon a United States title, with the right to have it conveyed by patent hereafter.

That is the state of things. Now, this bill provides in section 15 that any small holder of less than 160 acres who has occupied a holding since those treaties were made may go before a judge of this court when he is sitting there and make proof—not present a paper title, but make proof—that he and his predecessors in interest have occupied his land, not exceeding 160 acres, for forty years, and that upon such proof being made the title shall be confirmed to him, notwithstanding the fact that the exterior boundaries of some great land grant within which his farm is situated extends around it. And, Mr. Chairman, it is in behalf of those small holders, those pioneers, that I ask to-day for this tribunal, in order that their titles may be confirmed and their little farms be made secure. To-day they can not raise a dollar upon those farms; to-day one of those pioneers could not raise $25 upon a good farm of 160 acres. Why? Because these paper titles are filed over them.

They are pending in the Interior Department, as I have said, over 1,000 of them plastered all over the country. It is such cases that this tribunal is to be constituted to adjudicate properly and confirm. Then, sir, these claimants who contend that they have good titles to these large grants by virtue of the Mexican or Spanish archives can go into this tribunal. The court will sit in banc upon those cases. They can be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States. There may, perhaps, be ten different litigants, each claiming that the exterior boundaries of his grant take in a certain scope of country. The question will finally be settled by the only tribunal that the history of civilization, and especially the history of this country, show is competent to settle property rights where the cupidity of man is excited by large amounts involved—the judicial tribunals and, as a last resort, the Supreme Court of the United States.

I could discuss this question, Mr. Chairman, by the hour—I have had practical experience in it; I have conducted grant suits—but it is not necessary to do so at present.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to state that the amendment of the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] was withdrawn, and there is now no amendment pending.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. I move a pro forma amendment. Mr. Chairman, in my judgment this proposition to exempt Arizona from the operation of this bill ought not to prevail. If this bill ought not to apply to the Territory of Arizona, it ought not to apply to any Territory whatever. In the Territory of Arizona, so far as I have been able to ascertain, the boldest, most reckless, and gigantic schemes of robbery have been attempted in relation to these land grants. In the Forty-ninth Congress the men interested in these grants in the Territory of Arizona had their lobbyists filling the corridors of this Capitol seeking to have the Committee on Private Land Claims recommend the confirmation of these grants and to have Congress adopt that recommendation.

I hold in my hand a favorable report made by the Committee on Private Land Claims of the Forty-ninth Congress in relation to Tres Alamos claim No. 17, occupying a whole county of that Territory. The evidence transmitted by the surveyor-general of that Territory was such that any man not cognizant of the actual facts would have been led to believe the grant was legal and ought to be confirmed. A gentleman, not now a member of this House, but who occupies the position of governor of a great State of this Union, an honest, able, capable man, had charge of the case at that time and presented the facts to the Committee on Private Land Claims in this report, which convinced the committee that the claim was just. And, sir, it was only on account of the late presentation of the report and the impossibility of calling the attention of the House to it that it did not pass Congress, thereby confirming beyond the power of reversal a gigantic robbery of the public lands, to the detriment of a thousand men who occupy farms upon that grant.

Can it be possible, sir, that any measure which will give those settlers a remedy by judicial trial, will confirm their titles, and do away with these fraudulent titles, is to fail here? The grant to which I have referred was never made by Mexico or Spain. It has no foundation. It can not be found anywhere. It is a forgery from beginning to end. That grant is but a sample of nearly all the others. Every land-grant claimant in the Territory of Arizona is opposed to this bill. Every man who is not a land-grant owner, so far as I have been able to learn, is in favor of it.

Mr. PAYSON. Oh, no. Does the gentleman speak by authority of the surveyor-general of that Territory?

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. No, sir; but I have heard from a great many men who live upon those land grants and who say this bill ought to pass.

Mr. PAYSON. Will the gentleman permit an inquiry?

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. Certainly.

Mr. PAYSON. Does not the gentleman know that the surveyor-general of Arizona, John Hise, is opposed to the passage of this bill and in favor of the plan recommended by Mr. Lamar as Secretary of the Interior, in his last two official reports to Congress?

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. I have not time to discuss that matter——

Mr. PAYSON. I am not asking for discussion, but for the facts.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. I do not know the reasons for the position which Mr. Hise has taken. I presume he is an honest man. I have been informed that he has been offered $60,000 to confirm a land grant in the Territory of Arizona, which he has refused. Put a dishonest man in his place, and under the present system, what might happen? The effect of the opposition to this bill, if successful, will be to continue the present system of wrong, of robbery, of outrage, inflicted upon the settlers in that and every other Territory where these land grants exist. Sir, in my opinion, if every land claimant in New Mexico, Colorado, or Arizona were consulted, he would be opposed to everything except an act to confirm his grant.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection, and the formal amendment will be considered as withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 10. That immediately upon the organization of said court the clerk shall cause to be inserted for a period of thirty days, in five newspapers published in each of the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico and State of Colorado. Such notices shall be published in both the Spanish and English languages, and shall contain the substance of this act, so far as same relates to private land claims.

Amendment of the committee:

"Insert, after 'Colorado,' these words: 'notice of the passage of this act.'"

Mr. MCCREARY. That is the amendment to which I desire to call attention.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 11. That each and every person, corporation, or association claiming lands in either of said Territories or State, under or by virtue of any right, title, or authority derived from the Spanish or Mexican Governments, which right, title, or authority it is claimed the Government of the United States is bound to respect under the provisions of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, or the treaty concluded December 30, 1853, commonly known as the Gadsden purchase, with the Government of Mexico, or under the laws, usages, and customs of Spain or Mexico in the disposal of lands, shall, within two years from the date of the approval of this act, present to the said court, or any justice thereof, as hereinbefore provided, a petition setting up the facts upon which such claimant relies in support of his said claim, stating the location, boundaries, and extent of the land claimed, with a map of same, and praying confirmation of the land claimed. At the time of filing such petition, or within ninety days thereafter, such claimant shall present to said court the documentary evidence and the testimony of witnesses upon which he relies in support of such claim. The evidence heretofore taken before the surveyors-general under the acts approved July 22, 1854, entitled "An act to establish the offices of surveyor-general of New Mexico, Kansas, and Nebraska, to grant donations to actual settlers therein, and for other purposes," and the act approved July 15, 1870, entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1871, and for other purposes," shall be competent evidence in said court of such weight and credibility as the court shall deem it entitled to, having in view the manner and circumstances under which it was originally taken. In case it shall be desired to take additional testimony, either on the part of the claimants or of the Government, same may be taken by depositions upon notice to the claimants or their attorneys and to the United States district attorney for the district in which the deposition is to be taken, or if the deposition is to be taken in Washington, then to the attorney appointed under this act, who shall, in the matter of taking such deposition, represent the United States. On the trial, if the same shall be had in either of said Territories or State as herein provided, oral testimony shall be received under such rules and regulations as shall be made by the court, which shall be taken down by a stenographer as herein provided, and which evidence so taken shall be transcribed in long-hand, which testimony shall be a part of the record.

Mr. PAYSON. I rise for the purpose of offering an amendment to come in at the end of section 11. I send it up to the Clerk's desk to be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That the limitation of two years in this section shall not apply to any tract of land of 160 acres or less in possession of any person of Spanish or Mexican descent, and so held in possession or occupancy by such person or his ancestors for twenty years, nor to any land occupied as a pueblo or village site.

Mr. PAYSON. I think that amendment will perhaps be satisfactory to the chairman of the committee without consuming any of the time of the Committee of the Whole in explaining the necessity of this amendment.

Mr. MCCREARY. I will ask the amendment to be again reported.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. PAYSON. It seems to be satisfactory to everybody.

The amendment was agreed to.

SEC. 12. That any person, corporation, or association claiming an adverse title or right under the United States or otherwise to any part of the land so claimed, or who shall, at the date of the approval of this act, be in actual possession of the land so claimed, or any portion thereof, otherwise than by the lease or permission of the claimant, shall have the right to intervene as a party in interest in the cause or proceeding in said court, at any time before decision has been rendered, and, upon notice to the claimant or his attorney, to submit evidence contesting, in whole or in part, the right of the claimant or the existence or validity of the alleged grant or claim, which evidence shall be considered by the court in making its decision.

There being no amendment proposed, the Clerk read the next section, as follows:

SEC. 13. That after the evidence in any case so presented is completed, the court shall proceed promptly to examine same, with such arguments as may be presented, and thereupon to determine as to the validity, in whole or in part, of the claim. In arriving at such determination the court shall be governed by the provisions of the treaty applicable to such claim, the law of nations, the laws of the government from which the claim is derived, the principles of equity, and the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States so far as they are applicable. The said court shall not in any case confirm a claim for a greater quantity of land than was originally granted, or for a greater quantity than was authorized to be granted by the laws of the government under which the claim had inception. And in confirming any such claim, in whole or in part, the court shall in its decree specify plainly the location, boundaries, and probable area of the land the claim to which is so confirmed. When, however, the description of the land in any such grant or concession shall require the location to be ascertained by mountain ranges, mountain tops, forests, and like natural objects, whereby or by any description thereof, the quantity of land in any such grant or concession is uncertain, or too vague for location, said court shall declare and adjudge such grant or concession void and of no force, by reason of such indefinite description, except as to the quantity of land in such grant or concession in the actual possession of the grantee, or his assigns, or legal representatives, at the dates of the treaties of cession.

Amendment of the committee: In line 22 substitute the word "and" for "or;" so it will read:

"The quantity of land of any such grant or concession is uncertain and too vague for location, etc."

The amendment was agreed to.

SEC. 14. That whenever the Government, by its attorney, or any person, corporation, or association, shall deny the existence of the right, title, or grant from the Spanish or Mexican Government, under which any petitioner claims lands by petition before said court, or shall allege that the said right, title, claim, or grant was fraudulently obtained, or that there is good reason to believe that the papers or documents under which any such right, title, or grant is claimed are forgeries, then, and in any such case, the petitioner or petitioners shall, upon the order of said court, exhibit to the court, at a time and in such order to be specified, the original papers or documents upon which any such right, title, claim, or grant is alleged to be founded, if the same are in possession of such petitioner or can be obtained by him; if such originals can not be produced by such petitioner, he shall exhibit and file in the office of said court, within such time as the court shall direct, duly authenticated copies of all papers upon which he depends to establish his claim; whereupon if the Government, by its attorney or any proper person, shall certify said court that there is doubt as to the validity of such claim, right, or grant, it shall be the duty of the court to transmit to the Secretary of State of the United States a request that the question in controversy be thoroughly investigated by the representative of the United States Government in Spain or Mexico, or any of the States thereof from which it is claimed any such right, title, or grant is derived; and thereupon the Secretary of State shall authorize and direct such representatives to said foreign government to ascertain and report the exact facts in relation to any such claim, right, title, or grant as the same shall appear by the records of such foreign government, accompanied by duly authenticated copies of any documents or papers he may find in relation to the same, upon the receipt of which by the Secretary of State he shall transmit the same to said court, and the court shall duly notify the parties or their attorneys thereof, and said report and authenticated copies, if any, shall be received by the court as evidence, and shall receive such weight as the court may think proper.

There being no amendment proposed, the Clerk read the next section, as follows:

SEC. 15. That wherever any claimant shall produce evidence to the satisfaction of the said court of the continuous occupancy and possession, by himself, his ancestors, or grantors, for forty years next preceding the date of the approval of this act, of a piece or parcel of land in either of said Territories or State, not exceeding 160 acres in extent, and not included within the limits of any grant for the establishment of a city, town, or village, no further evidence of title or ownership shall be necessary or required from such claimant, but he shall thereupon be entitled to confirmation of his title to such piece or parcel of land.

Mr. DUNN. I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking a question, and if I find it to be necessary, of offering a substantial amendment. Now this section provides that proof of simple occupation unconnected with the character of title by which the tenant holds occupation shall be evidence of title. To explain my question I desire to say this: Those familiar with that country and those titles know the Pueblo Indians hold their titles under pueblo or village grants. We also know that under the laws of Spain and Mexico that is a title in fee-simple in these Indians. Suppose the tenant and his ancestors shall have occupied as tenants by the permission of the Indian tribe, by the permission of the headman or trustee of this village for forty years, do the gentlemen intend to allow that tenancy to be proved up adversely to the title of the real landlord or owner?

Mr. McCREARY. I do not think that criticism of section 15 is well taken, because the section refers to any claimant, and there is a distinction between a claimant and tenant.

It provides:

SEC. 15. That wherever any claimant shall produce evidence to the satisfaction of the said court of the continuous occupancy and possession, by himself, his ancestors, or grantors, for forty years next preceding the date of the approval of this act, of a piece or parcel of land in either of said Territories or State, not exceeding 160 acres in extent, and not included within the limits of any grant for the establishment of a city, town, or village, no further evidence of title or ownership shall be necessary or required from such claimant, but he shall thereupon be entitled to confirmation of his title to such piece or parcel of land.

Mr. DUNN. I desire to call the attention of the gentleman from Kentucky to the Hot Springs case. That was a Government reservation. The people went there and built up a town.

Mr. McCREARY. Let me interrupt the gentleman a moment just at this point with reference to his suggestion. If you say "adverse claim," would that not make it perfectly clear?

Mr. DUNN. I want to give the gentleman an illustration by this Hot Springs case. First, there were two or three claimants to the title of this property. The Supreme Court decided finally that the title was in the Government. During the forty, fifty, or sixty years that the property was in the possession of these landlords some persons were admitted as purchasers and others were admitted as tenants by terms, or at will, under them. When the Government took possession of the property and appointed a commission to adjudicate the title, all these tenants became claimants, and set up a claim of title by occupancy to that part of the reservation they occupied, and it has required adjudication, and finally a decision by the Supreme Court of the United States to settle the question as between them and their former landlords. Now, if that decision had been final, and without the possibility of appeal, these tenants at will would have taken the property of their landlords, who were given under the act a preference to the purchase of the property, at the price fixed by the Government.

The section of this bill ought to be now amended to meet such a condition.

But I desire to call the attention of the House also to the experience of the Mission and Pueblo Indians of California. I have traveled over the region of country affected by this bill and have some knowledge of the existing conditions there. When the commission of 1851 was created to adjudicate these titles in California, nobody imagined that the rights of the Indians were to be impleaded there; and the commission was directed to ascertain and report upon the tenure by which the Mission Indians held their titles. That commission never made that report, because they did not leave anything to the Mission Indians to report upon. Their titles were all swept away. The Mission title is a different title from that of the Pueblo Indian. The Mission title was simply a right of occupancy given by the Mexican government and which could be secularized—restored to the public domain at any time by the Government.

A strict and technical ruling under the law applicable to California would bar every Pueblo Indian title in California, if the court holds that the Indians were impleaded in those cases.

Now, strict care should be taken in this bill to protect the right of these Pueblo Indians as well as the Mission Indians, if there be any there; and no bar or pretended bar or statute of limitations by a State or Territory or a Congress should be allowed to operate against them; nor should any trespasser or tenant upon their lands be allowed to set up an adverse title. These Indians are the wards of the Government. They are at the mercy of the Government; and just here I will advert to some other possibilities that may arise in connection with such legislation. I regretted exceedingly to see that the Delegate from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] was prepared to assume that justice could not be administered in these matters in Arizona. It is a sad state of affairs if there is a square yard within the jurisdiction of the United States Government where justice can not be administered to the citizens. It is a sad state of affairs, I repeat, if there be such a condition of things existing anywhere in this country.

I can understand very well, from the knowledge of existing conditions, that there are three classes of people who do not want these titles adjudicated in any way.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. McCREARY. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Arkansas may be permitted to continue for five minutes longer.

There was no objection.

Mr. DUNN. There are three classes of claimants who do not want any adjudication of title whatever. One is the land grabber, who is in possession of his so-called grant, but in possession of a grant two, three, or four times as much in area as his original grant entitled him to take. He does not want the scrutiny of the court or any inquiry into his metes and bounds. Another is the settler, who has gone upon somebody's grant and is occupying it, but has a shrewd suspicion in his own mind that a trial between himself and the claimant to the grant who can set up a title will set him off the land. He does not want any trial. He is an "honest settler." He is a "sacred pioneer." [Laughter.] Another is the bully or desperado, who is a tenant by contract, who has entered upon these Indian Pueblo grants and has occupied them with a Winchester and six-shooter for a long term of years, and he thinks when the Indian title is inquired into and established he will have to "go." He does not want any trial. But others who honestly believe they have valid and legal titles naturally want their titles adjusted and settled.

It is a question that no honest man wants to leave open. No community and no country can prosper—no community can have peace and order, without quieting and securing the titles to their lands and their homes. If titles are to be held by the shotgun, the Winchester, the revolver, and the six-shooter—if such a condition prevails the man who is the chief desperado is the largest landlord. All good and law-abiding citizens want their titles secured and fixed and made certain, and they desire to enjoy them in the peace of the State and of the Government. It is the duty of Congress to give them the opportunity of settling their titles, and to make it through tribunals which will administer justice as nearly as human tribunals can administer justice. I listened therefore to the remarks of the gentleman from Arizona with a feeling of sincere regret. I regretted to see that he did not consider his own profession in his own Territory an honorable one. I would not hold my license to practice law if I did not believe my profession an honorable one. I would scorn to enter any court in the country unless I believed it would administer justice, and Congress ought not to be deterred from providing tribunals to administer justice, to settle titles, and to preserve peace and order in every community by the flippant remarks of anybody.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. Is it not the experience and observation of every lawyer that these unconscionable fees are obtained before tribunals that are not courts, but where they take contingent fees?

Mr. DUNN. Oh, yes; there is rascality in that business, as there is in all other businesses, but it is an exception to the general rule. All the courts of the country will compel lawyers to take just and reasonable fees.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has expired.

Mr. DUNN. I desire to ask the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. McCREARY] to yield time to offer an amendment.

Mr. PAYSON. I have an amendment which I think will answer the gentleman's purpose.

Mr. DUNN. Then I withdraw the request for unanimous consent.

Mr. PAYSON. Before offering that, I desire to say one word in reference to the observations first submitted by the gentleman from Arkansas, and to offer an amendment prior to the one which I now hold in my hand. I do not think, Mr. Chairman, that the criticisms which the gentleman from Arkansas has made upon this section are well founded. I think the section as it stands will accomplish exactly what the committee intends the section shall accomplish, but I think that some of the provisions are too broad.

In this bill the limitation is fixed at forty years. In my judgment that is entirely too long, for two reasons. First, it is not in consonance with the land legislation of this country. So far as I know twenty years of open adverse possession to a piece of land in every State in this Union is regarded equivalent to title, and I think that the limitation should be made twenty years and thus conform to legislation in similar cases all over the country.

Mr. HOOKER. Will the gentleman allow me to suggest to him that in some of the States ten years' open adverse possession gives title?

Mr. PAYSON. In most of the Western States where there is claim of color of title seven years of open and adverse possession is considered sufficient to give title; but in this case of the Territories, where the rights of persons are possible to be interfered with, and the question is one simply between them and the Government, I think twenty years of open adverse title is sufficient for all purposes, and I think so for the further reason that in the sections of country such as that there is a difficulty in securing evidence of open adverse possession for forty years, but that in an older section, such as where the gentleman from Mississippi lives, forty years adverse possession would not be proper. Therefore I move to strike out, in line 4, the word "forty" and insert "twenty." It has been suggested by gentlemen that there may be cases where people who claim under these fraudulent grants have gone into possesion of them and claim 160 acres, and in connection with this amendment I offer another. In line 7, after the word "extent," insert "and whose original claim did not exceed 160 acres." These two amendments would perfect this clause.

Mr. McCREARY. With that qualification I have no objection to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois. By the limitation to forty years in these Territories in the State of Colorado there are persons who may have been in possession where they have illegally taken possession for over twenty years, and with the qualification of the gentleman from Illinois I have no objection to that amendment.

Mr. HOVEY. Do you hold that time runs against the States?

Mr. McCREARY. Oh, no; only against persons.

Mr. HOVEY. That amendment is broad enough to cover the limitation of the State against the Government.

Mr. PAYSON. It is not a question of saving to the Government. Here is public land, and the public lands that the Government owns are for the use of the people. There is a situation of affairs in the southwest portion of the Union where men can not get title. The ordinary provisions of the homestead law will not apply, nor will the provisions of the pre-emption law. In this situation it was thought best by the committee to provide that as these little disconnected tracts of land in these Territories where a person has been in open adverse possession should be confined to not more than 160 acres. Under the homestead laws he gets title in five years. That is the reason for this amendment. It does not save land to the Government, but simply is to give them title to land of which they have had adverse possession.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. I would like to ask the gentleman from Kentucky for information why the limit is placed at 160 acres. Is it to be analogous to the homestead law?

Mr. McCREARY. It will be analogous. It is said by the Delegate from New Mexico that all of these claimants are small and the holders have not more than 160 acres.

The question on the amendment to strike out "forty" and insert "twenty" was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment to insert, after the word "extent," in line 7, "and whose original claim did not exceed 160 acres" was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 16. That whenever any decision of confirmation rendered by said court in any case shall become final, either by the failure of the United States to appeal therefrom or by its affirmance by the Supreme Court, the clerk of the court shall certify that fact to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with a copy of the decree of confirmation, which shall plainly state the location, boundaries, and probable area of the tract confirmed; the said Commissioner shall thereupon cause the tract so confirmed to be surveyed at the cost of the United States. When any such survey shall have been made and returned to the surveyor-general of the respective Territory or State, and the plat thereof completed, the surveyor-general shall give notice that same has been done, by publication once a week for four consecutive weeks in two newspapers, one published at the capital of the Territory or State, and the other published near the land so surveyed, such notices to be published in both the Spanish and English languages; and the surveyor-general shall retain such survey and plat in his office for public inspection for the full period of ninety days from the date of the first publication of notice in the newspaper published at the capital of the Territory or State. If at the expiration of such period no objection to such survey has been filed with him, he shall approve same and forward it to the Commissioner of the General Land Office. If within the said period of ninety days objections are made to such survey, either by any party claiming an interest in the confirmation or by any party claiming an interest in the tract embraced in the survey or any part thereof, such objection shall be reduced to writing, stating distinctly the interest of the objector and the grounds of his objection, and signed by him or his attorney, and filed with the surveyor-general, with such affidavits or other proofs as he may produce in support of his objection. At the expiration of the said ninety days the surveyor-general shall forward such survey, with the objections and proofs filed in support of or in opposition to such objections, and his report thereon, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office. Immediately upon receipt of any such survey, with or without objections thereto, the said Commissioner shall transmit same, with all accompanying papers, to the court in banc for its examination of the survey and of any objections and proofs that may have been filed; and the said court in banc shall thereupon determine if the survey is in substantial accordance with the decree of confirmation. If found to be correct, the court shall direct its clerk to indorse upon the face of the plat its approval. If found to be incorrect, the court shall return same for correction in such particulars as it shall direct. When any survey is finally approved by the court, it shall be returned to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who shall cause a patent to be issued thereon.

Mr. PAYSON. I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk, to go in at the end of the section.

The Clerk read as follows:

All persons of Spanish or Mexican descent in possession or occupancy of a tract of land of less area than 160 acres, and who by themselves or ancestors have been in such occupancy for twenty years or more, shall have their respective holdings ascertained and certified under the direction of the surveyor-general and patented to them without expense to them, and this shall be done also to all pueblo or village sites and locations; and hereafter all application to enter land in any of said Territories or the State of Colorado under the land laws of the United States shall show and full proof be made to the register that no part of the land sought to be entered is in possession of any person of Spanish or Mexican descent, and as to all such tracts of land the limitation of the act shall not apply.

Mr. PAYSON. I may say that I have submitted this amendment to the Delegate from New Mexico, and it is satisfactory to him as well as to the members of the committee. Therefore, unless some explanation is desired by gentlemen who are not familiar with the subject, I will not consume time by stating the reasons for the amendment, except to say that I agree fully with the idea suggested by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. DUNN] as to the necessity of full protection to all the inhabitants of these pueblos and village sites in these Territories. They are a simple, harmless, ignorant people, who believe that their titles are as absolute and perfect as we believe the title of the Government to be in the building in which we stand; and as to them I think that their holdings should be ascertained and patented by the Government without expense, and that there should not be any entry permitted by anybody in any land claimed to be in these neighborhoods without an affirmative showing in the application that the lands are not in possession of any of the people sought to be protected by this amendment. The amendment is broad and covers the whole field.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 17. That no allowance or confirmation of any claim shall confer any right or title to any gold, silver, or quicksilver mines, or minerals of the same, unless the grant claimed affected the donation or sale of such mines or minerals to the grantee, or unless such grantee has become otherwise entitled thereto, in law or in equity, but all such mines or minerals shall remain the property of the United States, with the right of working the same and authorizing the same to be worked, and every confirmation made and patent issued under this act shall be made and issued subject to the rights of the United States to authorize the lands included in such confirmation and patent to be entered upon by its citizens for the purpose of cession for locating and working gold, silver, and quicksilver mines, or minerals of the same, that may be found therein, and to pass such laws as shall procure such rights and make the same effectual, which shall be stated in any patents issued under this act.

Mr. WICKHAM. I move to amend that section by striking out, in line 4, the word "affected," and inserting in lieu thereof the word "effected."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 18. That all lands the claim to which shall be finally rejected by said court, or by the Supreme Court, and all lands to which no claim is presented to the said court within two years from the date of the approval of this act, shall be deemed, held, and considered to be a part of the public domain of the United States.

The Committee on Private Land Claims recommended an amendment, as follows:

After the word "lands," in line 3, insert "claimed in either of said Territories or State under or by virtue of any right, title, or authority derived from Spain or Mexico, or under the laws, usages, and customs thereof."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PAYSON. I think that perhaps a verbal amendment ought to be added to make this section harmonious with those that have been amended preceding it, and I send such an amendment to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "act," in line 4, insert "except as otherwise herein provided."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 19. That the filing of a petition for the confirmation of any private land claim in the court, as herein provided, shall have the effect of lis pendens as to all persons subsequently entering upon or acquiring any interest in the lands embraced in such claim or any part thereof, and said court may submit, in accordance with the usages of the court of equity, any question of fact that may arise during investigation of any claim to a jury to be summoned, impaneled, and paid in the same manner as juries in the United States district courts.

Mr. WICKHAM. I move to amend that section by striking out the words "the court," in line 6, and inserting "courts."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 21. That section 8 of the act of Congress, approved July 22, 1854, entitled "An act to establish the office of surveyor-general of New Mexico, Kansas, and Nebraska, to grant donations to actual settlers therein, and for other purposes," and all acts amendatory or in extension of said section 8, or supplementary thereto, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I would like to add, as an amendment, the words: "Except as to the Territory of Arizona." The court here provided for takes the place of the surveyors-general of the various Territories; and inasmuch as I feel that the present system is a better one for Arizona than the one proposed in this bill, I ask to have that Territory excepted, and I would like to have it done by unanimous consent.

Mr. McCREARY. I suggest to the gentleman from Arizona that he withhold that amendment until a vote is taken upon his other amendment, to strike out Arizona from the operation of the bill.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Then I ask unanimous consent to consider the amendment to section 21 after the vote shall have been taken on the amendment first offered by me.

There was no objection.

The Clerk completed the reading of the bill.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio. I ask unanimous consent to return to sections 6 and 7, to which I desire to offer amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. THOMPSON] asks unanimous consent to return to section 6 for the purpose of proposing an amendment. Is there objection?

Mr. SPRINGER. I shall object for the present; or I will hear a statement of the object in view, reserving the right to object.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio. The object of the amendment is to put no limitation upon the right of appeal. I do not understand why there should be any limitation upon the right of appeal provided for in that section. These claims arise under grants made by the Mexican or the Spanish Government. We are under treaty obligation to respect those rights when established, and I think the fullest opportunity ought to be given to have them investigated in the court of last resort, and that no distinction should be made between them because of the value or the want of value of the property. The property of the small holder is as important to him as that of the large holder is to him.

Mr. SPRINGER. What would be the effect of the change which you propose?

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio. The effect would be to give an appeal in all cases from the department judge to the court in bank. The appeal is now limited to cases where the value of the property exceeds $2,000.

The amendment was read, as follows:

In section 6, strike out lines 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and the words "right of appeal to the court in bank" in line 9, and insert in lieu thereof the words following: "and there shall be a right of appeal in all cases from the department court to the court in bank."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. THOMPSON] asks unanimous consent to return to section 6. Is there objection?

Mr. PAYSON. I desire to inquire whether the section to which this amendment applies is not one of those sections which were struck out?

Mr. McCREARY. No, sir; this refers to section 6.

Mr. PAYSON. Was not section 6 struck out?

Mr. McCREARY. No, sir; sections 3, 4, and 5 were struck out, leaving the bill in such a shape as to apply only to private land claims.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the Clerk had better report the amendment, that it may be understood whether there is objection to returning to that portion of the bill.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio. I ask that the lines which I propose to strike out be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

In section 6 strike out "That in every case where it is not made to appear, by evidence satisfactory to the court, that the value of the property involved, with the improvements thereon, exceeds the sum of $2,000, the decision of the justice rendered in department shall be final. In every case where the value of the property involved, with the improvements thereon, is so shown to exceed the sum of $2,000, either party not satisfied with the decision rendered shall have the right of appeal to the court in bank," and insert "There shall be a right of appeal in all cases from the department court to the court in bank."

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio. That leaves the remainder of the section stand.

Mr. McCREARY. I see no objection to that amendment. As I understand, it simply allows an appeal to be taken to the court in banc no matter what may be the amount involved.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio. In all cases.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio to return to section 6 for the purpose of considering this amendment? The Chair hears none.

The amendment was considered and adopted.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio. I now ask unanimous consent to submit a similar amendment to section 7.

The Clerk read as follows:

In section 7 strike out "That in every case where it is not made to appear, by evidence satisfactory to the court, that the value of the property involved, with the improvements thereon, exceeds the sum of $5,000, the decision of the court in bank shall be final. In every case where it shall be so made to appear that the value of the property involved, with the improvements thereon, exceeds the sum of $5,000," and insert "In all cases determined by the court in bank;" so as to read "SEC. 7. In all cases determined by the court in bank, either party not satisfied with the decision rendered shall have the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, in the same manner and upon the same conditions as is provided by law for the taking of appeals from the decision of the district courts of the United States."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to return to section 7 for the purpose of having this amendment considered.

Mr. SPRINGER. I object.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio. Why does the gentleman object?

Mr. SPRINGER. I think we ought not to permit in every case an appeal to the Supreme Court——

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is not in order. The bill has been read through.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio. It was the understanding with the chairman of the committee [Mr. McCREARY] that I should have the opportunity to submit this amendment to the House.

Mr. SPRINGER. Of course I do not object to carrying out any understanding.

Mr. McCREARY. The gentleman from Ohio is mistaken about this matter. He came to me with the proposition and I told him the section had been passed, but so far as I was personally concerned——

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio. The gentleman stated that when the reading of the bill was completed no objection would be made to my presenting this amendment.

Mr. McCREARY. The gentleman will remember that he showed me only one amendment, the one already adopted. I can not agree to appeals being taken to the Supreme Court of the United States without regard to the amount involved. This would allow an appeal though the amount of the claim were only $100.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio. Then I would like to offer an amendment striking out "$5,000" and inserting "$2,000" as the amount necessary to entitle a party to an appeal.

Mr. SPRINGER. If the gentleman desires to offer that amendment I will not object.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. I shall have to object to that. Five thousand dollars is not an excessive limit upon the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. We should not undertake to encumber the docket of that court with small cases. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I now ask that my amendment, which has already been discussed, be reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the word "Arizona" wherever it occurs in the bill.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 22, noes 10.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. What is the amendment we are voting on? I did not understand it.

Mr. SPRINGER. It is an amendment exempting Arizona from the operations of the bill.

Mr. FELTON. It is to deny to a certain portion of citizens the justice guarantied to them under the Constitution and which is allowed to others.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is not in order.

The result of the vote as above stated—ayes 22, noes 10—was announced.

So the amendment of Mr. SMITH, of Arizona, was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I now desire to offer the other amendment, which it was agreed I might offer if the one just voted on should be adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to section 21 the words "except as to the Territory of Arizona."

The amendment of Mr. SMITH, of Arizona, was agreed to.

Mr. PAYSON. I desire to offer an amendment to come in as an additional section.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add the following as section 23:

"In all cases of written evidence of title duly certified copies thereof shall be filed with the clerk when the claim is filed and also recorded within one month thereafter on the real-estate records of each county in which the lands claimed shall lie, and no paper the execution of which is connected with the title shall be used as evidence unless so filed and recorded; and the provisions of section 14 shall apply to all such papers so filed or recorded."

Mr. McCREARY. I ask the Clerk to read that amendment again, as the disorder in the House prevented my hearing it.

The CHAIRMAN. There is a general conversation throughout the Hall, and it is difficult to hear what is going on. Complaint has been made by members on several occasions, and the Chair now requests gentlemen to abstain from conversation or to retire to the coat-room.

Mr. PAYSON. My reason for offering that amendment is this: The difficulty which grows out of the adjustment of claims is the fact, which is conceded by everybody who has had occasion to examine them, that in these great claims papers which are forged and fraudulent are used to a greater or less extent. Without regard to individual instances within my own knowledge, I simply appeal in a general way to members of the committee as to whether the general statement I make is not absolutely true?

Now, sir, when we afford a forum in which these claims may be examined on proper evidence of title more or less ancient, liable to be forged for reasons which are obvious to everybody, we impose no hardship whatever on the claimants to these great areas of land, under paper title, if we say to them, as a part of the investigation of their claims, when they file their claim before this tribunal, they shall also file there the original or a duly certified copy of the paper evidence of title upon which these great claims rest, so that they may be subject to inspection not only by the lawyers engaged for the Government, but also by citizens and individual claimants whose rights may clash and conflict with these great claims, and their attorneys also may have access to them. It is no hardship to them if all of their evidence of title shall be open to the inspection of all persons interested. And the only penalty imposed for the violation of that provision is that the paper evidence of title, unless so presented, and unless so recorded, shall not be used as evidence as against the Government of the United States. That is all there is of it.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. PAYSON. That is all I care to say.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FELTON. Is it in order to move a reconsideration of the vote by which Arizona was excluded from the provisions of this bill?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The motion to reconsider is not in order in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Is not a motion to reconsider in order at any time?

The CHAIRMAN. It is not in committee.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman can reach his object by asking a separate vote in the House on the amendment adopted in the committee providing for the exclusion of Arizona from the operation of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair can only answer for the present.

Mr. McCREARY. I move the bill with the amendment which has been agreed to be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. PAYSON. When this bill was under consideration on the 31st day of March last, if I remember correctly, I had the honor to submit some observations in opposition to its passage, and in support of a plan of adjustment of these claims which I have had in mind for a number of years, or since my connection with this subject. I have prepared in the line of my record a substitute for the pending bill, which, as amended by the committee, is now in a much better condition as to my own views than when I prepared the substitute for it.

Mr. McCREARY. Let the substitute be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. SENEY. No, let the substitute be read.

Mr. PAYSON. Very well, let the substitute be read and be considered as pending.

The Clerk read the substitute, as follows:

A bill to provide for the settlement of private land claims in the State of Colorado, and the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the Department of the Interior to ascertain and settle all private land claims in the State of Colorado, and the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico in the manner following: A full examination of all such claims shall be made by the surveyor-general of the respective the said State and Territories as is now provided by law, with the added action that in cases of the taking of oral testimony the proceeding shall be open and public.

The surveyor-general shall make report on the case, with all evidence taken to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, upon which, at a time to be fixed and due notice to parties interested, a trial and adjudication of the claim shall be made by the Commissioner, who shall, pending the hearing, have power to order further investigation by the surveyor-general. If deemed necessary to expedite examinations in the Territory of New Mexico, the Secretary of the Interior may appoint an assistant surveyor-general for that Territory, who shall be skilled in the Spanish language, and at a salary at the rate $2,000 per annum, to be paid monthly, and for the period he shall be actually employed, and to pay the same the sum of $2,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary and not otherwise appropriated, is hereby appropriated.

And in all hearings evidence already taken in pending cases may be used, giving the same such credit as it shall be entitled to.

SEC. 2. From the decision of the Commissioner an appeal may be taken to the Secretary of the Interior, and the record and all papers in the case shall be certified to that officer for hearing and determination, and he may order additional investigation to detect fraud or correct error in fact.

From the decision of the Secretary of the Interior an appeal shall be allowed to the Supreme Court of the United States upon appellant, if a claimant or party other than the United States, giving bond in such sum as shall be required by the Secretary, payable to the United States for the use of all interested, and conditioned for the prosecution of the appeal with effect and the payment of all costs in the Supreme Court on the dismissal of the appeal or the affirmance of the finding of the Secretary. The full record of the case shall be transmitted to the Supreme Court and errors assigned thereon as in cases of appeal from a circuit court: Provided, That the foregoing proceedings shall be limited to cases and claims involving 11 square leagues or less of land; in all cases involving a greater area than 11 square leagues, the proceedings shall remain as under existing law except as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 3. All persons of Spanish or Mexican descent in possession or occupancy of a tract of land of less area than 160 acres and who by themselves or ancestors have been in such occupancy for twenty years, shall have their holdings ascertained and surveyed under the direction of the surveyor-general, and patented to them without expense to them; as also all pueblo or village sites and locations. All applications to enter land in either of the said Territories or State of Colorado under any of the land laws of the United States shall show, and full proof be also made to the officers of the local land offices, that no part of the lands sought to be entered is in possession of any person of Spanish or Mexican descent.

SEC. 4. All claims under private grants from the Spanish or Mexican Governments, except as to tracts in occupancy of less than 160 acres, and pueblo or village sites or locations, shall be filed within two years from the passage of this act and not after, and in all cases all written evidence of title or duly certified copies thereof shall be filed with said claim and also duly recorded within one month thereafter on the real estate records of each county in which the lands claimed shall lie, and no paper, the execution of which is connected with the title, shall be used in evidence unless so filed and recorded.

There shall be no further withdrawals of land on preliminary survey, but the filing of paper evidences of title as above provided shall be notice.

The Secretary of the Interior shall have power to make all necessary rules and regulations to carry out the provisions hereof.

Mr. PAYSON. I simply wish to say, Mr. Chairman, that the bill just read, proposed as a substitute for the pending measure, is in harmony exactly with the recommendations made by Mr. Secretary Lamar in his last two annual reports to Congress. It contains the idea which I outlined in the observations made to the House on the 31st of March last, when this bill was under consideration, and I do not care to go into the subject further, as an argument now on this bill would be a mere repetition of what I said then. Some of the prominent features in the substitute have already been incorporated in the committee's bill, and so far as that has been done it removes some of the objections that I had to the bill in its original form.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the Chair understand the gentleman as proposing the substitute for action now?

Mr. PAYSON. Yes, I move the adoption of the substitute.

Mr. FELTON. I desire to ask the gentleman if Arizona is included in this substitute?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I am perfectly willing to have the substitute pass with Arizona in it, if that answers the gentleman's question.

Mr. FELTON. My reason for asking is that the present bill, for which this bill is a substitute, at the very last moment of its consideration in the committee was amended, an exception being made to the Territory of Arizona, and excluding it from the provisions of the bill. I am unable to see any good reason why that should have been done.

By reason of the laches of the Government of the United States and the violation for years and tens of years of our solemn treaty stipulations and obligations in regard to these lands, through and by reason of which we obtained them, that portion of the country has been in an almost chaotic condition, its development and prosperity greatly retarded, and its citizens demoralized. No right in real property has been recognized by anybody. As the gentleman from Arkansas has said, the "shotgun law" prevails and might makes right.

I am opposed, sir, to any bill by which a portion of the people of this country shall be denied their constitutional rights to appear before the tribunals of their country in order that they may present their cases for adjudication and obtain even-handed justice. This bill now discriminates against a section and denies the people thereof a hearing in court and consequently justice.

Now, in regard to the Arizona land claims, I know almost of my own knowledge that there are ten or fifteen as valid grants as were ever given, and to be fair I should add that I believe there are also twenty or more involving as rascally pieces of knavery and thievery in connection with land grants as can be found in the history of the country.

Admitting both of these facts to be true, and I know whereof I speak, and in some instances I know that some of the best talent of the United States has been employed and sent to Mexico to look over the old archives and carefully examine in regard to these grants, and purchases have been made under the circumstances and on reports so made; I say, admitting these facts to be true, and they are true, I see no reason, no justice, no question of right, fair dealing, or equity why the citizens of Arizona should not be entitled to their constitutional right of their day in court, as well as the people of any other portion of the country, and hence I am opposed to the passage of this bill in its present form. I see no reason why an honest man in Arizona, desiring to do and receive justice, could object to an adjudication of his rights before a tribunal appointed by the President, and thus removed even from the suspicion of any local knowledge or prejudice, with no incentive to do wrong.

I suspect there are those who do not desire an investigation into what they term their rights.

Mr. SENEY addressed the Chair.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask unanimous consent that the debate be considered as closed in fifteen minutes, ten minutes of which shall be allotted to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SENEY. I object to being limited in that way.

Mr. McCREARY. Well, then, to give the gentleman as much time as he desires.

Mr. SENEY. I understand I have the right to the floor in my own time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will be entitled to the floor under the rule for five minutes. Does the gentleman desire to be heard on the substitute?

Mr. SENEY. My understanding of the substitute may be stated in a very few words. It proposes that the surveyor-general in the first instance shall take jurisdiction of these land cases, and provides an appeal from his decision to the Secretary of the Interior, and a further appeal from the decision of the Secretary of the Interior to the Supreme Court of the United States. I do not know, Mr. Chairman, whether or not that provision of the substitute would be a constitutional enactment; but it is not my purpose to discuss at this time the constitutional features of the bill or to make an argument as to the constitutionality of that provision.

Mr. PAYSON. Will the gentleman permit an interruption just there? If it be regarded as essential, Mr. Chairman, I can produce in five minutes' time three different decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States affirming the power of Congress to clothe either an individual or commission with power to adjudicate questions of title coming down to us as a conquering nation from a foreign power and giving the force of legal sanction to decisions of such tribunal or commission as much as any court in the land.

Mr. SENEY. I do not question that. I do not question that it is within the power of Congress to make this feature of the substitute constitutional by clothing, if you please, the surveyor-general with judicial powers. That may be done, I know, by an act of Congress, and if done of course it would cure the objection.

But I think that this bill proposes bad legislation. I do not want to say that it proposes vicious legislation, but it is a sort of legislation which, in my judgment, the House ought not to sanction. The purpose of the bill—the original bill—is to create a court which shall be authorized to hear and determine land claims in the two Territories mentioned and in the State of Colorado. It seems to me, sir, that there is no necessity at all for creating a special court to hear and determine this class of cases. I do not think that the reasons which are urged for the creation of such a tribunal are sufficient to authorize the House to pass this bill.

I am unable to see why the Federal courts in the Territories, that is to say, the Territory of Arizona, the Territory of New Mexico, and the State of Colorado, can not be invested by this Congress with jurisdiction to hear and determine these cases; and in all of the discussion that has been had on this floor on this subject I have not heard any reason advanced or any suggestion made as to why the Federal courts in the States and in the Territories named should not hear and determine these claims.

Mr. DUNN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. McCREARY] showed that these courts were overloaded.

Mr. SENEY. I heard that stated, but think there is no force in the statement.

Mr. McCREARY. If it will not interrupt the gentleman, I wish to revert to my remarks on that point, and state that I endeavored to show the fact that the district courts of the Territories named, and of Colorado, were already overburdened with business, and that to refer the claims of this character to them meant practically no trial for a number of years; and in that I am supported by statements made by the several Secretaries of the Interior who have looked into the matter, and I think there is no question of doubt about it.

Mr. SENEY. Well, in answer to the gentleman from Kentucky, I will say that I notice in the reading of the bill that the existence of this court is provided for for a period of four years, and that at the expiration of four years the court is to terminate and cease.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. McCREARY. I move that the gentleman be allowed further time—ten minutes more if he desires it.

There was no objection.

Mr. SENEY. I was observing, Mr. Chairman, that the limitation upon the existence of this court is fixed by the bill at four years. That provision of the bill suggests to my mind that there is probably one year of business to be done, and it is proposed by the bill to extend that one year of business over a period of four.

Mr. McCREARY. If it will not interrupt the gentleman, in response to that statement I will say to him that there are now one hundred and seven cases that have been referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims, and that there has not been a single case passed that has been reported by the Committee on Private Land Claims in the last nine years by Congress.

Mr. SENEY. Well, certainly it will not take the time of three judges four years to dispose of one hundred and seven land cases.

Mr. McCREARY. But, Mr. Chairman, these are only the cases that are now before the Committee on Private Land Claims.

Mr. SPRINGER. There are many thousand others.

Mr. McCREARY. There are thousands of other cases that have not been sent to that committee.

Mr. SENEY. If there be many thousands of these cases it is not at all improbable that a decision in a single case will dispose of, it may be, a hundred other cases.

By the provisions of the bill it is contemplated to keep this court in existence four years, and I infer from that fact, drawing upon my experience and observation, that that means about twelve months of actual labor for these judges to do, and means nothing more. Now, sir, is it politic to create a court as is proposed in this bill for no other purpose than to determine cases which ought not to occupy the time of a court for a period longer than twelve months.

Why, Mr. Chairman, we ought not to multiply these tribunals. We passed a bill a few days ago creating a court for the purpose of settling what are called Indian depredation claims, and that court was, by the action of the House, constituted, if I remember aright, with three judges. We have on the Calendar of this House a bill to create a Federal court called a court of appeals in patent cases. We have also on the Calendar a bill proposing to establish an intermediate court between the circuit courts of the United States and the Supreme Court of the United States. We have, in addition to that, another bill on the Calendar which proposes to enlarge the jurisdiction of the district and circuit courts of the United States, and that bill proposes to increase the number of judges in both of those courts.

Here we are met with a proposition to organize another distinct and independent court for no other purpose than to try such cases as are tried in every court of common law jurisdiction, State or Federal, in this country; to organize a court for no other purpose than to determine land titles in the two Territories named in the bill and in the State of Colorado.

Mr. McCREARY. I want to remind the gentleman that under the act of 1854 these land claims can not be confirmed except by Congress.

Mr. SENEY. Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to hear from some gentleman advocating this bill, why it is that the district court or the Federal court in these two Territories and in the State of Colorado may not be vested with jurisdiction to hear and determine these land cases? Why constitute a special tribunal for that purpose, imposing an expenditure, according to figures which I have made, and which I do not doubt are very nearly accurate, of some $112,000, in the shape of salaries to be paid out to the gentlemen who would be selected to conduct the operations of this tribunal.

The attention of this House has been occupied for many months, discussing the tax burdens of the people, and in an attempt to give them relief; and now when we are through with that job we take up this bill, which proposes to increase the number of Federal office-holders and impose upon the tax-paying people of this country a tax burden which will not be far short of the sum of $200,000.

Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the bill. I do not think the bill ought to pass, and if we would act wisely and act well, we would simply give to the Federal courts of the two Territories and the State of Colorado full and complete jurisdiction to hear and determine these land claims, and protect the rights of claimants by providing for an appeal from these courts to the Supreme Court of the United States.

I desire to call the attention of the House to the fact that in the last Congress we gave to the Federal court in New Mexico an additional judge, and also to the fact that there is now a bill pending and being pressed before the House to give the Territory of Arizona an additional judge. I have also been informed, I do not know with what truth, that there is still another bill pending to give to the Territory of New Mexico an additional judge.

Mr. SPRINGER. That is a mistake.

Mr. SENEY. Well, there is no mistake about the fact that in the Territory of New Mexico they have four Federal judges, and in the Territory of Arizona they have three Federal judges; and there is no mistake about the further fact that in the State of Colorado they have one Federal judge. Now, I ask this House, I ask the gentlemen who are advocating this bill, what is it that these Federal judges in these Territories and in this new State are doing, if they have no time to hear and determine cases such as are provided for in this bill? Mr. Chairman, it can not be possible that the Federal courts in Colorado or in either of these Territories are so crowded with business that they are unable to hear and determine cases such as are covered by the provisions of this bill. It can not be true, sir, that their dockets are so crowded that they have no time to give attention to litigation as important in its character as this.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SENEY] overlooks one important fact in regard to the jurisdiction and duties of the judges in the Territories. He forgets that the business they have to transact is much larger in proportion than that which the Federal judges in the States have to transact. The judges appointed for any of the Territories have jurisdiction of all cases arising under the laws of the Territory, including appeals from justices of the peace, as well as jurisdiction of matters in which the United States is interested. They also constitute the supreme court of the Territory. The only persons who hold courts in the Territory of New Mexico or the other Territories are the judges appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

Take the Territory of Arizona, which is three times as large in area as the State of Ohio; it is a new country where there is very much more litigation in proportion to population than in the settled portions of the country. Mining titles are in dispute, everything is uncertain, and litigation is much greater in proportion to the number of inhabitants than in the States. The judges have to travel long distances, frequently by stage and on horseback, to hold their courts. I have been informed of one case in Dakota where a judge had to travel 8,000 miles in order to hold his courts one time in his judicial district.

Another point is that the courts in New Mexico are, to my own knowledge, overcrowded with business now. It is very difficult to hold court there. It takes twice as long to try a suit in New Mexico as it does in Ohio, from the fact that every case has to be translated either from the Spanish into English or from the English into the Spanish language, as the case may be. Every jury empaneled in New Mexico is composed in part of Spanish-speaking people who can not understand the English language. Interpreters have to be employed, and all the testimony given by witnesses has to be translated. That is a very slow process, and the business of the courts is very great, and I know personally that the judges are overworked.

Mr. FELTON. And the same applies to Arizona.

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes, the same applies to Arizona. Therefore, if you confer this jurisdiction upon those judges the matter might as well be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. FELTON. They have had jurisdiction for a quarter of a century, with no result.

Mr. SPRINGER. As is suggested by my friend from California [Mr. FELTON], they have had jurisdiction for a quarter of a century, and have been unable to dispose of these cases. And if there is one thing more than another which Congress owes to the people in Arizona, New Mexico, and Southern Colorado it is to give them a forum in which they can have the question of their land titles judicially and finally determined.

We owe it to them to do that. By the treaty of Gaudalupe Hidalgo and the subsequent Gadsden treaty it was stipulated that we should make good the titles as they existed before the cession of the Territory to the United States; but we have let them remain unsettled all these years, and in my judgment the prosperity of the Territory of New Mexico has been retarded more than can be estimated in dollars and cents by reason of the fact that perhaps one-third of the titles are in doubt, so that no substantial improvements can be made, no valuable houses can or will be built by parties who do not know whether their titles are good or not. I speak from personal knowledge, for I have visited New Mexico several times for my health, or rather that of my family. I am sorry to say I have not any other interests there, and I am convinced that it is of the utmost importance that something shall be done to quiet these titles. It is not so important who owns these lands as it is to determine that somebody shall own them, and to give the people security in their land titles.

Mr. SENEY. I take issue with the gentleman from Illinois as to the condition of legal business in those Territories. I will inquire of him what it is that makes business for the Federal courts there? I do not know whether in the Territories they have Territorial courts or not.

Mr. SPRINGER. They have none.

Mr. SENEY. Then I take it that all the business, criminal and civil, in the Territories is transacted in the Federal courts?

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Or by the Federal judges in the Territorial courts.

Mr. SENEY. Now, when we think of the population of one of those Territories and estimate upon the basis of that population the business that is probably being done there, how can it be said that out of that business much litigation can arise for the courts to hear and determine? The business is not there to make the litigation. From the manner in which the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] talks one would suppose that every citizen of the Territory had a silver mine and that his mine was in litigation in one of those courts; but of course that can not be possible. I have no doubt that there are a few such cases, but it does seem to me that with diligent and faithful judges, giving a proper portion of the year to their duties, there is no reason why all the business that can arise there should not be readily disposed of, and why the courts should not find time to deal with all controversies between citizens of those Territories fairly, fully, and promptly.

The gentleman talks as if there was more legal business in the Territory of New Mexico than there is in the State of Ohio. I undertake to say that more legal business is transacted in the courts of Ohio in a single day than is done in that Territory during the whole twelve months.

Mr. SPRINGER. I said more business per capita, more business according to the number of people.

Mr. SENEY. I did not so understand the gentleman.

Mr. SPRINGER. Of course I never claimed that the aggregate business in a Territory like New Mexico was greater than that in a State like Ohio.

Mr. SENEY. Well, the per capita furnishes no basis or criterion by which legal business is to be estimated, and I think the gentleman upon mature reflection will not insist upon any such criterion. It is not mere population that gives business to the Federal courts, for the greater part of the population may be engaged in agricultural pursuits, and, as we all know, the agriculturists of the country are rarely, if ever, found in the Federal courts, or, for that matter, in the State courts. It is the conflict between business interests—not particularly between the citizens of the Territory, but between citizens of a Territory, and citizens of a State—that makes business for the Federal courts. As to this Territory of New Mexico, I hardly know what its population is.

Mr. SPRINGER. One hundred and fifty thousand or one hundred and sixty thousand.

Mr. SENEY. Shall I be told that four Federal judges who, I understand, hold two terms in four different places in that Territory each year, besides coming together once a year to hold a court in banc; shall I be told, or is this House to be told, that that judicial force is inadequate to meet the demands of the legal business of the people of that Territory?

Why, sir, this, to my mind, is a mere proposition to create a half dozen or more places for some favorites to fill. It is, in my view, but a scheme to fasten upon this Government more salaried officers. We shall be called upon to respond to the provisions of this bill, if it is made a law, to the tune of about $30,000 or $40,000 a year. If there were necessity for it, if the interests of the people in the Territory reasonably and fairly demanded the establishment of this court, I would be the last man on this floor to oppose it. Satisfied as I am that this court is not demanded by the interests of that people, I shall vote against the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. One word in response to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SENEY]. I merely wanted the gentleman to understand that the business of the courts in the Territories is greater per capita than in the States. In the Territories everything is in an unsettled condition; there are more disputes and controversies.

Mr. SENEY. I understand that; and in reply I repeat that that circumstance in itself furnishes no evidence of legal business in the Territory.

Mr. SPRINGER. But against the gentleman's opinion I will present the official communication of the Department of Justice. If the gentleman from Ohio would do as I and many other gentlemen here have done—if he would occasionally visit these Territories and rusticate a little he would find out——

Mr. SENEY. I form my own opinions, and do not allow them to be made by anybody.

Mr. SPRINGER. Opinions are one thing and facts another.

Mr. SENEY. I have here the report of the committee, and upon that I base my opinion.

Mr. SPRINGER. I repeat that opinions are one thing and facts another. The Committee on the Territories reported a bill for the purpose of allowing an additional justice in Arizona, one in Wyoming, one in Idaho, one in Utah, two in Dakota, and one in Washington, and in order to obtain the opinion of the Department of Justice on this subject I sent that bill to the Attorney-General, asking whether the evidence in that Department was such as to justify and require this additional judicial force in those Territories. I have here the answer of the acting Attorney-General. My friend from Ohio will not dispute the facts which are officially furnished to the House on this subject.

Mr. SENEY. I take the liberty of determining facts for myself.

Mr. SPRINGER. Facts are facts, whether the gentleman likes them or not. The gentleman will not say that the Department of Justice would send in here a falsehood.

Mr. SENEY. My acceptance of any statement on this subject would depend upon whether the person making it had any better opportunity to ascertain the facts than you or I have.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will read this communication:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, Washington, June 26, 1888.

SIR: Your letter of the 12th instant has been received, with a copy of House bill 8948 and of House Report 1341, respecting additional justices of the supreme courts of Dakota, Washington, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, and Arizona Territories, and for other purposes.

Mark you, Arizona has already three judges. This proposition was to give that Territory a fourth judge.

Upon examination of the report of the committee, submitted on the 27th of March last, in connection with the unofficial information which the Department has received from civil officers of those Territories, it is forced to the conclusion that the proposed increase of the number of justices in the Territories mentioned is necessary and wise legislation concerning the interests of litigants, witnesses, and attorneys in the respective Territories.

Very respectfully,

G. A. JENKS,
Acting Attorney-General.

That is the statement of the Department.

A MEMBER. What is the date?

Mr. SPRINGER. June 26, 1888.

Just a few weeks ago the Department of Justice reported to the House through the Committee on the Territories that another justice was needed in Arizona; and we gave New Mexico another justice in the last Congress. To my own knowledge, and from information derived through letters received from persons in the Territories, I am satisfied that there is no judiciary in the United States which is so overworked as the judiciary in the Territories, and I appeal to the Delegates from the Territories of New Mexico, Arizona, and Washington, and on the other side of the Chamber to the gentlemen representing the Territories of Dakota, Wyoming, and Idaho, whether it is not true.

Mr. SENEY. And Alaska. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. No, not Alaska. There is no Delegate here from Alaska. But I appeal to them to state whether or not the business there demands what the Department says they are entitled to—an additional judge.

Why, the gentleman certainly can not contend that we would ask an increase and an unnecessary increase of the judiciary.

Mr. FELTON. I understood the gentleman from Ohio to state as his opinion that the object of passing this bill was to create another court for the purpose of creating its accompanying expenses, or something tantamount to that. The gentleman was never more mistaken in all his life. If he thinks that those who advocate this measure do it for such a purpose as that he pays a poor tribute to their repesentative capacity as well as to their intelligence. We advocate it because we represent constituencies in the Territories and in the States who are materially interested in the welfare of the Territories, and because, as shown by the Secretary of the Interior and the history of the Territories for the last thirty years, it is impossible for their citizens to obtain a hearing in the courts of their country.

The consequence of the present condition of things has been, as it were, to spread a pall over the industries of the entire country. We desire to have the land title settled, in order that the prosperity natural for the country shall not be further impeded, and for that reason and for no other do we desire the passage of this or some kindred measure.

Mr. SYMES. Mr. Chairman, I will only add a word to what has been already said.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask unanimous consent that the debate be closed. How much time does the gentleman from Colorado desire?

Mr. SYMES. Only a few minutes.

Mr. McCREARY. Then in two minutes after the gentleman closes.

Mr. SENEY. I object.

Mr. SYMES. The statement made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER], from my own personal observation and from an investigation of the subject, as being a member of the same committee, is entirely correct. Sir, these gentlemen who live in the East do not understand the large amount of litigation per capita that besets the new Territorial judiciary, many of them going out to a new country where they are not familiar with the subject-matter of litigation or the rules of practice in the courts of the Territories.

Then, again, mining camps spring up. There is a larger amount of litigation per capita in those than most people conceive. The judge is besieged with new questions, he works night and day, and the condition of the dockets amounts to an absolute denial of justice in a new mining country when the business of the court becomes clogged and no facilities are provided for disposing of the rapidly accumulating litigation.

A large amount of mining litigation and insufficient courts result in tying up the mines with injunctions waiting for pending suits in ejectment to be tried to determine the legal title, until the mines have caved in, or the rich litigant wore out the poor one because he could not have his case tried for years. I could go over this subject extending through a period of fifteen years of personal observations and show that the litigation arising in those regions does not bear any relation or comparison to the ordinary litigation in agricultural communities in the older States of the Union. But I will only repeat now what the gentleman from Illinois has said, that if the purpose of this bill is to undertake to have the Territorial courts in New Mexico dispose of at least 700 or 800 Mexican land grants it would amount to practically a denial of justice, and you might as well let the matter alone as to remit them to the Territorial courts.

So far as Colorado is concerned, we have a most excellent court there, and Federal judges. We have a large number of cases that will arise in the southern part of the State, and I should not urge a separate court expressly for Colorado. But I know it is absolutely necessary in New Mexico, and it is a mere temporary tribunal. So that, all things considered, I think the same court had also better dispose of the Colorado land grants, because the court can not be separated under the provisions of the bill.

Mr. SENEY. I understand the gentleman proposes to strike out of the bill the word "Colorado."

Mr. SYMES. No, sir; I made no such proposition. I said you can not well separate the cases and take the few cases that arise in Southern Colorado from it. The court is temporary, and when it gets through with the business it will pass away.

Mr. SENEY. I did understand the gentleman then probably to say to us that in his judgment there is no particular necessity for the bill as far as Colorado is concerned.

Mr. SYMES. On the contrary, I think there is necessity for it so far as Colorado is concerned.

Mr. McCREARY. The question, I presume, is on the substitute of the gentleman from Illinois. I hope we will now have a vote.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 9, noes 26.

So the substitute was rejected.

Mr. McCREARY. I move that the committee rise and report the bill favorably to the House as amended.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BLOUNT reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 7643, had instructed him to report the same favorably to the House with amendments.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments reported from the committee. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment?

Mr. FELTON. I demand a separate vote upon the last amendment, excepting Arizona from the provisions of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that there are several amendments relating to Arizona.

Mr. FELTON. I refer to the amendment by which this Territory was stricken from the bill.

Mr. McCREARY. The gentleman refers to the amendment striking out Arizona from the provision of the bill, and by which it is excepted from the operation of the tribunal proposed by the bill.

Mr. FELTON. On that I demand a separate vote.

Mr. FELTON. I desire a separate vote upon all amendments where the word "Arizona" occurs, and that Territory is exempted from the operation of this bill.

The SPEAKER. The vote will first be taken upon all the other amendments.

The other amendments of the Committee of the Whole were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from California desire a separate vote upon the amendment striking out the word "Arizona" in each case, or does he desire a vote upon them altogether?

Mr. FELTON. On them altogether.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. There were two amendments. The first was that wherever the word "Arizona" was in the bill that it be stricken out, and then the amendment exempting "Arizona" from the clause of the last section of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will take a vote on the several amendments to strike out the word "Arizona" from the bill.

The question was put; and there were—ayes 40, noes 29.

Mr. FELTON. I make the point that a quorum has not voted.

The SPEAKER. On this question the chair will appoint Mr. FELTON and Mr. McCREARY as tellers.

The tellers took their places.

Mr. FELTON. Mr. Speaker, there is evidently not a quorum present and I withdraw the point of no quorum, as I do not desire to deprive the citizens of Colorado and New Mexico of the provisions of the bill, though the House has to the citizens of Arizona.

The amendment striking out the word "Arizona" from the body of the bill was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the last amendment to the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "repeal" insert "except as to the Territory of Arizona."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McCREARY. I demand the previous question on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The previous question was ordered.

The question recurred on the passage of the bill; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 70, nays 24.

So the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCREARY. I move to amend the title, so as to read: "A bill to establish United States land courts and to provide for a judicial investigation and settlement of private land claims in the Territory of New Mexico and in the State of Colorado."

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, that will be the title of the bill.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. McCREARY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask unanimous consent to print with my remarks the letter of Secretary Vilas to which I referred when I addressed the House.

There was no objection.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move to dispense with the morning hour for the consideration of bills.

The SPEAKER. That can not be done except by unanimous consent. The business is, the morning hour for the call of committees.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call for the regular order, then.

The SPEAKER. The order was not dispensed with, but the order was made that gentlemen having reports to make should be allowed to present them. There was no necessity to dispense with the order, as under the order the gentleman from Kentucky had the hour for debate; but if there be no objection, the call of committees for reports will now be dispensed with.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The SPEAKER. The regular order of business is for the consideration of bills.

TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA

Mr. SPRINGER. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union; and I will announce that I make this motion for the purpose of taking up the Oklahoma bill and to complete its consideration.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, Mr. DOCKERY in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the consideration of bills on the Calendar.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. BAKER did not rise.

Mr. PAYSON. Mr. Chairman, if no gentleman desires to address the committee, would it be in order to move that the committee rise?

The CHAIRMAN. It would be in order.

Mr. PAYSON. I make that motion.

Mr. SPRINGER. I observe that the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SYMES] is in his seat. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] yielded that gentleman a portion of his time, and if the gentleman from Colorado desires to speak now upon the Oklahoma bill he can be recognized in his own right.

Mr. SYMES. I do not care to take the floor in my own right at this time. If I do so I shall simply take the floor and then ask that the committee rise.

Mr. SPRINGER. Then I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. MATSON having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. DOCKERY, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 10614) to provide for the organization of the Territory of Oklahoma, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

M. M. GIBSON.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 8012) for the relief of M. M. Gibson, and that the bill be now put upon its passage.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster-General is hereby authorized to adjust and settle the claim of M. M. Gibson, postmaster at Clio, Tex., for the sum of $53.75, on account of loss sustained in the destruction of postage stamps, etc., by fire on the 9th of November, 1884, and to pay to said Gibson said sum, or so much thereof as said Postmaster-General may find to be just and proper.

The committee recommended an amendment in line 7, striking out the words "so forth," and inserting in lieu thereof the words "stamped paper."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LANHAM moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA FALLS AND NORTHWESTERN RAILWAY.

Mr. GEAR. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 2862) granting the right of way to the Cedar Rapids, Iowa Falls and Northwestern Railway Company over and across the Pipe Stone reservation in the State of Minnesota.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. LIND. I object.

PUBLIC BUILDING, WINONA, MINN.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. I ask unanimous consent to take up bill H. R. 2475, to increase the appropriation for the erection of a public building at Winona, Minn.

The bill was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

A MEMBER. I object.

W. W. WEEDON.

Mr. THOMAS, of Kentucky. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of the bill H. R. 3686, and that it be put upon its passage.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to settle with the administrators de bonis non of W. W. Weedon, deceased, late of Maysville, Ky., and his sureties on his official bond for services performed in the mail-messenger transfer and station service at Cincinnati, Ohio, route No. 21703, since July 1, 1884, and to allow and pay them for said service the actual cost of performing said mail service to the close of the period for which said Weedon contracted to perform the same: Provided, That the Postmaster-General shall be satisfied that the service has been well and faithfully performed: And provided further, That he shall not allow or pay more than such service could have been rendered for by the exercise of reasonable skill and diligence.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. SPRINGER. I should like to have an explanation of the bill.

Mr. THOMAS, of Kentucky. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. TAULBEE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred House bill 3686, having considered the same, adopt the report made in the Forty-ninth Congress and recommend the passage of the bill.

[House Report No. 3790, Forty-ninth Congress, second session.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7044) for the relief of the administrator and sureties of W. W. Weedon, deceased, having considered the same, submit the following:

The Post-Office Department, on January 21, 1884, advertised, inviting proposals for mail-messenger, transfer, and mail-station service at Cincinnati and other cities, from July 1, 1884, to June 30, 1887. Proposals to be received until March 1, 1884. Decision to be announced March 8. Contract to be executed by April 8 of said year.

The Cincinnati mail-messenger and transfer service was advertised as Route No. 21703. In a foot-note to the schedule of service required in the printed advertisement by the Post-Office Department was the following: "Bond required with bid, $25,000; check, $1,250; present pay, $6,779." In each of the other eleven schedules for like service in other cities there was nothing said as to the present pay of the route. There were five bids on said Route No. 21703, as follows, namely:

R. G. Woodlief	$18,990
Cincinnati Railroad and Omnibus Company	17,995
Merchants' Drayage Company	17,475
H. C. Slavens	17,700
W. W. Weedon	8,997

Mr. Weedon being the lowest bidder, and the postmaster at Cincinnati having investigated and reported favorably as to the sufficiency of the sureties, his proposal was accepted according to law, and a contract ordered with him from the 1st day of July, 1884, which was duly executed by him and his sureties.

It is now claimed by the administrator and sureties of Weedon, the contractor, that he was induced to make his bid and enter into said contract by reason of the misrepresentation at the foot of the schedule, giving the pay of said route prior to his bid at $5,779, nothing being said as to the present pay of any of the other routes contained in the same advertisement. It is true that the amount stated was the amount of the former bid, but it is also true that the person who took the contract at said sum of $6,779 broke down and was unable to perform the service. The evidence shows that Mr. Weedon, deceased, was not a regular contractor, and was not informed as to the value of such services, and that in making his bid he relied largely upon the information contained in said foot-note and his correspondence with the Post-Office Department.

On February 7, 1884, Mr. Weedon wrote the following letter:

"MAYSVILLE, KY., February 7, 1884.

"DEAR SIR: I find from advertisement of January 21, 1884, inviting proposals for mail-messenger, transfer, and mail-station service on route 21703, at Cincinnati, Ohio, the present pay, as advertised, $6,779. Would thank you to inform me if there has been any increase pay, by appropriation or otherwise, since the last letting. If so, how much and from what time?

"Respectfully,

"WILLIAM W. WEEDON.

"SECOND ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL,
"Washington, D. C."

To this communication the following response was received, to wit:

"WASHINGTON, February 12, 1884.

"Respectfully returned to Mr. W. W. Weedon, Maysville, Mason County, Kentucky. The pay has not been increased.

"The advertisement will inform you that pay for such service will not be increased or decreased during the term of the contract, no matter what increase or decrease of service.

"H. D. LYMAN,
"Acting Second Assistant Postmaster-General."

It will be seen that Mr. Weedon's bid was more than $10,000 less than the highest, and nearly $8,000 less than the lowest bid. It also appears from the evidence before the committee that said service, by the exercise of skill and diligence, can not be well and faithfully performed at an actual cost of less than $14,000 per annum.

On the 4th day of July, 1884, the said contractor, W. W. Weedon, died; that since said time his securities have been performing the service under said contract; that the same has been performed faithfully and well and to the entire satisfaction of the Post-Office Department.

The committee are of the opinion that the contract was entered into under a mistake of fact, and that concealment of material facts by the Government influenced Mr. Weedon to enter into the same. The amount said service requires is taken from the estate of the deceased, and will impoverish the family. The committee think that such an enforcement of the terms of the contract would be inequitable and unjust under all the facts and circumstances of this case. The committee submit herewith letters from the Post-Office Department, Hon. W. H. Wadsworth, affidavits of Robert Anderson, S. A. Whitfield, S. G. Sullivan, John H. Wilson, and C. B. Pearce, to be printed with this report.

The committee return the bill, with the recommendation that the same do pass.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., June 7, 1886.

SIR: I have the honor to return herewith the bill (H. R. 7044) for the relief of the administrator and sureties of W. W. Weedon, deceased, late contractor for the mail-messenger and transfer service at Cincinnati, Ohio (route 21703), with copies of the papers in this Department relating to the subject, as requested in your letter of the 2d instant.

On the 21st of January, 1884, this Department advertised for proposals for the mail-messenger and transfer service at Cincinnati for the term beginning July 1, 1884, and ending June 30, 1887. The following bids were received therefor:

R. Y. Woodlief	$18,990
Cincinnati Railroad and Omnibus Company	17,995
Merchants' Drayage Company	17,475
H. C. Slavens	17,700
W. W. Weedon	8,997

Mr. Weedon being the lowest bidder, and the postmaster of Cincinnati having investigated and reported favorably as to the sufficiency of the sureties, his proposal was accepted according to law, and a contract ordered with him from the 1st day of July, 1884, which was duly executed by him and his sureties.

On the 7th of July, 1884, the postmaster of Maysville, Ky., reported by telegraph that Mr. Weedon, who resided there, had died on the 4th of July. On the following day the subjoined order was made, being the usual order in similar cases:

"JULY 8, 1884.—W. W. Weedon, contractor, having died July 4, 1884, it is hereby ordered that John H. Wilson and C. B. Pearce, jr., of Maysville, Mason County, Kentucky, his sureties, be held responsible for the continuance of the service from that date, and that they be required to perform the same, if it is not assumed and continued by the administrator, executor, or other person for the benefit of the estate of the deceased contractor."

The postmaster of Cincinnati reported to the Department on the 5th of July the decease of the contractor, and on the 8th he was notified that the sureties would be held to the performance of the service in accordance with the order of that date. On the 11th he reported that the service had been commenced on the 1st of July by C. W. Weedon, agent of the sureties, and that it had been satisfactorily performed since that date.

In September last application was made by the sureties to have the contract annulled and the service readvertised, for reasons set forth in the letter of their attorneys, of which a copy is herewith transmitted, together with the answer of the Department declining the application.

The compensation under this contract is believed to be inadequate, but the Department has no power to increase it.

Very respectfully,

WM. F. VILAS.
Postmaster-General.

Hon. WM. M. SPRINGER,
Chairman Committee on Claims, House of Representatives.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., January 17, 1887.

SIR: I am well acquainted with the widow and children of W. W. Weedon, deceased, and the extent of the estate left by the deceased.

The estate is small and embarrassed. To enforce the mail contract entered into by him with the Post-Office Department for the mail-transfer service at Cincinnati, Ohio, would utterly impoverish the family.

Very truly, yours,

W. H. WADSWORTH.

To the CHAIRMAN of the Committee on Claims.

Robert Anderson states that he is at present general manager of the mail-messenger and transfer service at Cincinnati, Ohio, route No. 21703, and has been so since the 1st day of October, 1884; that said service is being performed as economically as possible, and can not be conducted for any less amount than is now being expended in that way, and that he is economizing in every possible way in order to reduce expenses to the very lowest figures; that before and at the time the contractor Weedon (now dead) and his sureties put in the bid for the contract to perform said service, he was United States mail agent on the Kentucky Central Railroad, running from Maysville, Ky., to Paris, Ky., and Cincinnati, Ohio; that he had a great many conversations with said Weedon at or about the time he made his bid for said contract, and he knows positively from those conversations with said Weedon that he based the amount of his bid on the published statement by the Government in its advertisement as to what was then the contract price for performing said service, and that to his positive knowledge said Weedon made no independent investigation on which to base h's bid.

ROBERT ANDERSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me and in my presence by said Robert Anderson, personally known to me to be the same person he represents himself to be.

Given under my hand and official seal this 6th day of May, 1886.

[SEAL.] JOHN F. POGUE,
Notary Public within and for Hamilton County, Ohio.

—

The subscribers have personal knowledge of the performance of the work on mail-messenger service route No. 21703, now carried on by Messrs. John H. Wilson and C. B. Pearce, sureties for original contractor, deceased, soon after award of said contract, and state that said service is conducted in an exceptionally prompt, careful, and business-like manner, and to their entire satisfaction.

Having opportunities for comparison, they state that it is the best service ever given by any contractor in this city since the inauguration of the present system of transportation of mails to and from railroad stations.

They further state that they believe said service to be economically conducted in all respects and as cheaply as can be done consistent with the requirements of this office in the matter of a full complement of horses and wagons.

S. A. WHITFIELD,
Postmaster, Cincinnati, Ohio.
S. G. SULLIVAN,
Superintendent of Mails, Cincinnati, Ohio, Post-Office.

Sworn to by the said S. A. Whitfield and S. G. Sullivan, and subscribed by them in my presence this 12th day of March, 1886.

FRED. D. PEER,
Notary Public, Hamilton County, Ohio.

—

John H. Wilson and C. B. Pearce, jr., state that they are the sureties of W. W. Weedon, now deceased, in the contract for performing the mail-messenger and transfer service at Cincinnati, Ohio, route 21703, from July 1, 1884, to June 30, 1887, entered into under advertisement by Postmaster-General of January 21, 1884, and that said John H. Wilson is the administrator of said W. W. Weedon's estate, duly appointed and qualified. They state that said contractor and each of themselves at the time of entering into said contract were residents of Mason County, Kentucky, and had been so for a great number of years prior thereto; that neither said contractor nor either of themselves had, prior to entering into said contract, ever had any experience or knowledge of what was to be done, or what it would cost to perform the mail-messenger and transfer service at Cincinnati, Ohio, or any other point; that said contractor and these affiants in entering into said contract to perform said service at Cincinnati, Ohio, for the sum of $8,997 per year, were influenced solely and alone by the statement at the foot of the schedule of service required at said point, contained in said advertisement, that the then present pay for performing same was $6,779, and before doing so neither said contractor nor either of them made the slightest outside and independent investigation as to what it would cost to perform said service, but relied exclusively on this statement as a basis of determination, thinking that the purpose of the statement was that they should take it into consideration in determining the price per year they should agree to perform the service for, and that if the then present contractor was able to perform said service at the price of $6,779 per year, Weedon could certainly perform it at the price of $8,997 per year.

They state that said Weedon, before he put in his bid, consulted with these affiants as to the amount he should put it in at, and as a result of their consultations and deliberations it was determined that he should put it in for the sum of $8,997 per year; and the sole fact in their said consultations and deliberations which led them to come to this determination and conclusion was this statement at the foot of said schedule; and that in order that they might certainly rely on it as a basis the affiant, E. B. Pearce, jr., under the said Weedon's name and at his instance, wrote the letter marked A, hereto attached and made part hereof, to ascertain whether there had ever been any increase or decrease in the pay, to which they received the response contained in the letter B, hereto attached and made part hereof, and that after the receipt of said response this determination and conclusion was reached.

They state that the copy of said advertisement, accompanying this affidavit and made part hereof, marked C, is the one that said contractor and these affiants had at the time they reached said determination and conclusion, and that upon inspection of same the figures 8,997, the amount of said Weedon's bid, will be found just under the said statement as to their present pay, having been placed there by said Weedon at the time he concluded as to amount of his bid. They state that at said time neither said contractor nor either of these affiants knew anything as to how the former contractor was getting along under his contract; especially they did not know—which they have since learned to have been the case—that said contractor broke down under the contract, and could not perform the service required to be performed by it because of the lack of funds, the amount received from the Government not being near sufficient; that the contract was taken from him and given to others, and that afterwards its performance was intrusted to said contractor's sureties, who completed it; and further, that the service performed was an inferior one.

That since the commencement of said contract until the 1st day of May, 1886, they have sent to Cincinnati, to their general manager there, the sum of $23,952.63 (an itemized statement thereof is hereto attached and made part hereof), to be expended in the performance of said service; that same has been so expended by him, and they have vouchers and receipts in their possession showing the disbursement of all of same to that end. This covers a period of one year and ten months, and makes the performance of the service cost them at the rate of $13,065 per year, or $4,068 per year more than they are receiving. They state that they have conducted the matter as economically as possible consistent with the proper performance of their duties under the contract, and they do not believe that it could be run more so. They state that they have been informed by the Post-Office officials that same has been performed in a creditable manner, and they have every reason to believe such to be the case.

They state that this cost of $4,068 per year over the contract price, as shown above, is in addition to the loss of their time devoted to the affairs, interest on the excess of cost over receipts, which they have been compelled to borrow, and depreciation in value of the equipment necessary to perform the service, for almost the cost price of which said Weedon and said Weedon's estate is indebted to these affiants. They state that the said Weedon's estate left by him does not exceed in value the sum of $8,000, and that therefore the performance of this contract will consume this entirely and cause a loss to these affiants of a large sum outside of what loss there may be to them on account of the equipment and their time. They state that they do not want any compensation for their time, but do want, and think that it is nothing more than just and right, that they and said Weedon's estate should be made whole, and not suffered to lose anything in money or property by reason of this contract. They state that said Weedon's heirs are his brothers and sisters, and they are poor, and the loss to them will be very heavy.

Signed this 3d day of May, 1886.

JOHN H. WILSON.
CHARLES B. PEARCE, JR.

Subscribed and sworn to before me by John H. Wilson and Charles B. Pearce, jr., personally known to me to be the same persons they represent themselves to be.

Given under my hand and seal of office this 3d day of May, 1886.

[SEAL.] A. M. J. COCHRAN, Notary Public.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas (before the reading of the report was completed). Can not some gentleman state the substance of this report and save time?

Mr. THOMAS, of Kentucky. The report is not long. The bill makes no appropriation, but simply directs the Postmaster-General to settle and pay the actual cost of the service.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. How much?

Mr. THOMAS, of Kentucky. Whatever the actual cost may be.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think the report had better be read in full.

The Clerk completed the reading of the report.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, if this bill is to come before the House without objection I desire to make some remarks upon it. I think it ought to be fully understood before it is acted upon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized by the Chair, and he has an hour if he desires. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. Is objection made to the consideration of the bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection unless the gentleman from Illinois intends to object.

Mr. SPRINGER. No.

Several MEMBERS. Regular order.

Mr. SPRINGER. If this bill is before the House——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill is before the House without objection.

Mr. SPRINGER. The reading of this report called my attention to the provisions of this bill. The case was before the Committee on Claims in the Forty-ninth Congress, when I was a member of that committee. It seems that the beneficiary of this bill is dead and his securities were obliged to carry out a contract that he had improvidently entered into for carrying the mails from the depots in the city of Cincinnati to the city post-office. Advertisements were made in the usual form for bids for the service. Some of the bids were as high as $17,000, while this contractor bid only $8,000. He afterwards alleged that he was deceived in making his bid by the statement in the advertisement that the service was then being done for $6,000 or thereabouts. It turned out, however, that that statement was true and that the service was being performed for that amount, but the contractor who was doing it at that price was losing money, and this bidder was not advised on that point. He lived in the interior of Kentucky and had come to Cincinnati to get a contract, and he undertook to bid against those living in the city who knew much more about the service than he did. He made his bid, obtained the contract, gave security, and shortly thereafter died. His securities undertook to execute the contract, and they allege that in doing so they lost largely, not being able to perform the service for the amount of the bid. The question involved is simply this, whether Congress will release the securities of a mail contractor under such circumstances?

I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. COBB] for a question.

Mr. MILLIKEN. I would like the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] to state which side of this question he is on. We do not understand whether he is for or against this bill.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I rise to a point of order. There is so much disorder in this part of the Hall that we can not hear anything that is said.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] is well taken. Gentlemen will resume their seats and preserve order. The Chair will not recognize any request for unanimous consent if made by a gentleman who is out of his seat.

Several MEMBERS. That is right.

Mr. COBB. I wish to ask the gentleman from Illinois whether the committee to which he refers as having investigated this matter report to this House that this man entered into a contract of this magnitude without obtaining any other information in regard to it than that furnished by a foot-note to an advertisement made by the Department?

Mr. SPRINGER. That is the report of the committee, as I understand. I am not now a member of the Committee on Claims.

Mr. COBB. But this bill was reported in the last Congress.

Mr. SPRINGER. It was; but I can not undertake to recollect particulars in regard to all of the numerous bills which were before that committee. The report has been read in the presence of the House. I do not remember what it says on that point. I am inclined to think it so states.

Mr. COBB. I simply wanted to know what is the merit of this bill.

Mr. KERR. In addition to what has been said by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER], I will say that the object of this bill is to relieve the widow and children of this man Weedon from a very burdensome contract which, if enforced, would sweep away all their estate and still leave a burden upon the securities.

Mr. SPRINGER. The object is to relieve the sureties and the estate of this contractor from obligations which he entered into with the Government with full knowledge—at least he ought to have had full knowledge—of all the facts. I want to have the matter understood, because, otherwise, this might make a very bad precedent in the future.

Mr. THOMAS, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Claims in the Forty-ninth Congress, second session, made a report in favor of this bill. From said report it appears that the Post-Office Department on January 21, 1884, advertised inviting proposals for mail-messenger transfer and mail-station service at Cincinnati and other cities from July 1, 1884, to June 30, 1887. It was advertised as route No. 21703. In a foot-note to the schedule of service required in the printed advertisement by the Post-Office Department was the following: "Bond required with bid, $25,000; check, $1,250; present pay, $6,779." In each of the other eleven schedules for like service in other cities there was nothing said as to the present pay of the route. There were five bids on said route No. 21703, as follows, namely:

R. G. Woodlief	$18,990
Cincinnati Railroad and Omnibus Company	17,995
Merchants' Drayage Company	17,475
H. C. Slavens	17,700
W. W. Weedon	8,997

Mr. Weedon being the lowest bidder, and the postmaster at Cincinnati having investigated and reported favorably as to the sufficiency of the sureties, his proposal was accepted according to law, and a contract ordered with him from the 1st day of July, 1884, which was duly executed by him and his sureties.

It is now claimed by the administrator and sureties of Weedon, the contractor, that he was induced to make his bid and enter into said contract by reason of the misrepresentation at the foot of the schedule, giving the pay of said route prior to his bid at $6,779, nothing being said as to the present pay of any of the other routes contained in the same advertisemnnt. It is true that the amount stated was the amount of the former bid, but it is also true that the person who took the contract at said sum of $6,779 broke down and was unable to perform the service. The evidence shows that Mr. Weedon, deceased, was not a regular contractor, and was not informed as to the value of such services, and that in making his bid he relied largely upon the information contained in said foot-note and his correspondence with the Post-Office Department.

I will read a letter from Mr. Weedon and the answer of Mr. Lyman, the Second Assistant Postmaster-General, and statement of the committee, as follows:

MAYSVILLE, KY., February 7, 1884.

DEAR SIR: I find from advertisement of January 21, 1884, inviting proposals for mail-messenger, transfer, and mail-station service on route 21703, at Cincinnati, Ohio, the present pay, as advertised, $6,779. Would thank you to inform me if there has been any increase pay, by appropriation or otherwise, since the last letting. If so, how much and from what time?

Respectfully,

WILLIAM W. WEEDON.

SECOND ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL,
Washington, D. C.

To this communication the following response was received, to wit:

WASHINGTON, February 12, 1884.

Respectfully returned to Mr. W. W. Weedon, Maysville, Mason County, Kentucky. The pay has not been increased.

The advertisement will inform you that pay for such service will not be increased or decreased during the term of the contract, no matter what increase or decrease of service.

H. D. LYMAN,
Acting Second Assistant Postmaster-General.

It will be seen that Mr. Weedon's bid was more than $10,000 less than the highest, and nearly $8,000 less than the lowest bid. It also appears from the evidence before the committee that said service, by the exercise of skill and diligence, can not be well and faithfully performed at an actual cost of less than $14,000 per annum.

On the 4th day of July, 1884, the said contractor, W. W. Weedon, died; that since said time his securities have been performing the service under said contract; that the same has been performed faithfully and well and to the entire satisfaction of the Post-Office Department.

The committee are of the opinion that the contract was entered into under a mistake of fact, and that concealment of material facts by the Government influenced Mr. Weedon to enter into the same. The amount said service requires is taken from the estate of the deceased, and will impoverish the family. The committee think that such an enforcement of the terms of the contract would be inequitable and unjust under all the facts and circumstances of this case. The committee submit herewith letters from the Post-Office Department, Hon. W. H. Wadsworth, affidavits of Robert Anderson, S. A. Whitfield, S. G. Sullivan, John H. Wilson, and C. B. Pearce, to be printed with this report.

I will read a letter from Hon. W. H. Wadsworth, of Maysville, Ky., which shows that estate of said Weedon is small and embarrassed, and that to enforce the mail contract entered into by him with the Post-Office Department for the mail-transfer service at Cincinnati, Ohio, would utterly impoverish the family. I will also read statement of Robert Anderson, and also statement of S. A. Whitfield, postmaster, and the statement of John H. Wilson and C. B. Pearce, jr., sureties of W. W. Weedon.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., January 17, 1887.

SIR: I am well acquainted with the widow and children of W. W. Weedon, deceased, and the extent of the estate left by the deceased.

The estate is small and embarrassed. To enforce the mail contract entered into by him with the Post-Office Department for the mail-transfer service at Cincinnati, Ohio, would utterly impoverish the family.

Very truly, yours,

W. H. WADSWORTH.

To the CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON CLAIMS.

Robert Anderson states that he is at present general manager of the mail messenger and transfer service at Cincinnati, Ohio, route No. 21703, and has been so since the 1st day of October, 1884; that said service is being performed as economically as possible, and can not be conducted for any less amount than is now being expended in that way, and that he is economizing in every possible way in order to reduce expenses to the very lowest figures; that before and at the time the contractor Weedon (now dead) and his sureties put in the bid for the contract to perform said service, he was United States mail agent on the Kentucky Central Railroad, running from Maysville, Ky., to Paris, Ky., and Cincinnati, Ohio; that he had a great many conversations with said Weedon at or about the time he made his bid for said contract, and he knows positively from those conversations with said Weedon that he based the amount of his bid on the published statement by the Government in its advertisement as to what was then the contract price for performing said service, and that to his positive knowledge said Weedon made no independent investigation on which to base his bid.

ROBERT ANDERSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me and in my presence by said Robert Anderson, personally known to me to be the same person he represents himself to be.

Given under my hand and official seal this 6th day of May, 1886.

[SEAL.] JOHN F. POGUE,
Notary Public within and for Hamilton County, Ohio.

The subscribers have personal knowledge of the performance of the work on mail-messenger service, route No. 21703, now carried on by Messrs. John H. Wilson and C. B. Pearce, sureties for original contractor, deceased soon after award of said contract, and state that said service is conducted in an exceptionally prompt, careful, and business-like manner, and to their entire satisfaction.

Having opportunities for comparison, they state that it is the best service ever given by any contractor in this city since the inauguration of the present system of transportation of mails to and from railroad stations.

They further state that they believe said service to be economically conducted in all respects and as cheaply as can be done consistent with the requirements of this office in the matter of a full complement of horses and wagons.

S. A. WHITFIELD,
Postmaster, Cincinnati, Ohio.
S. G. SULLIVAN,
Superintendent of Mails, Cincinnati, Ohio, Post-Office.

Sworn to by the said S. A. Whitfield and S. G. Sullivan, and subscribed by them in my presence this 12th day of March, 1886.

FRED. D. PEER,
Notary Public, Hamilton County, Ohio.

John H. Wilson and C. B. Pearce, jr., state that they are the sureties of W. W. Weedon, now deceased, in the contract for performing the mail-messenger and transfer service at Cincinnati, Ohio, route 21703, from July 1, 1884, to June 30, 1887, entered into under advertisement by Postmaster-General of January 21, 1884, and that said John H. Wilson is the administrator of said W. W. Weedon's estate, duly appointed and qualified. They state that said contractor and each of themselves at the time of entering into said contract were residents of Mason County, Kentucky, and had been so for a great number of years prior thereto; that neither said contractor nor either of themselves had, prior to entering into said contract, ever had any experience or knowledge of what was to be done, or what it would cost to perform the mail-messenger and transfer service at Cincinnati, Ohio, or any other point; that said contractor and these affiants in entering into said contract to perform said service at Cincinnati, Ohio, for the sum of $8,997 per year, were influenced solely and alone by the statement at the foot of the schedule of service required at said point, contained in said advertisement, that the then present pay for performing same was $6,779, and before doing so neither said contractor nor either of them made the slightest outside and independent investigation as to what it would cost to perform said service, but relied exclusively on this statement as a basis of determination, thinking that the purpose of the statement was that they should take it into consideration in determining the price per year they should agree to perform the service for, and that if the then present contractor was able to perform said service at the price of $6,779 per year, Weedon could certainly perform it at the price of $8,997 per year.

They state that said Weedon, before he put in his bid, consulted with these affiants as to the amount he should put it in at, and as a result of their consultations and deliberations it was determined that he should put it in for the sum of $8,997 per year; and the sole fact in their said consultations and deliberations which led them to come to this determination and conclusion was this statement at the foot of said schedule; and that in order that they might certainly rely on it as a basis the affiant, E. B. Pearce, jr., under the said Weedon's name, and at his instance, wrote the letter marked A, hereto attached and made part hereof, to ascertain whether there had ever been any increase or decrease in the pay, to which they received the response contained in the letter B, hereto attached and made part hereof, and that after the receipt of said response this determination and conclusion was reached.

They state that the copy of said advertisement, accompanying this affidavit and made part hereof, marked C, is the one that said contractor and these affiants had at the time they reached said determination and conclusion, and that upon inspection of same the figures 8,997, the amount of said Weedon's bid, will be found just under the said statement as to their present pay, having been placed there by said Weedon at the time he concluded as to amount of his bid. They state that at said time neither said contractor nor either of these affiants knew anything as to how the former contractor was getting along under his contract; especially they did not know—which they have since learned to have been the case—that said contractor broke down under the contract, and could not perform the service required to be performed by it, because of the lack of funds, the amount received from the Government not being near sufficient; that the contract was taken from him and given to others, and that afterwards its performance was intrusted to said contractor's sureties, who completed it; and further, that the service performed was an inferior one.

That since the commencement of said contract until the 1st day of May, 1886, they have sent to Cincinnati, to their general manager there, the sum of $23,952.63 (an itemized statement thereof is hereto attached and made part hereof), to be expended in the performance of said service; that same has been so expended by him, and they have vouchers and receipts in their possession showing the disbursement of all of same to that end. This covers a period of one year and ten months, and makes the performance of the service cost them at the rate of $13,065 per year, or $4,068 per year more than they are receiving. They state that they have conducted the matter as economically as possible consistent with the proper performance of their duties under the contract, and they do not believe that it could be run more so. They state that they have been informed by the Post-Office officials that same has been performed in a creditable manner, and they have every reason to believe such to be the case.

They state that this cost of $4,068 per year over the contract price, as shown above, is in addition to the loss of their time devoted to the affairs, interest on the excess of cost over receipts, which they have been compelled to borrow, and depreciation in value of the equipment necessary to perform the service, for almost the cost price of which said Weedon and said Weedon's estate is indebted to these affiants. They state that the said Weedon's estate left by him does not exceed in value the sum of $8,000, and that therefore the performance of this contract will consume this entirely and cause a loss to these affiants of a large sum outside of what loss there may be to them on account of the equipment and their time. They state that they do not want any compensation for their time, but do want, and think that it is nothing more than just and right, that they and said Weedon's estate should be made whole and not suffered to lose anything in money or property by reason of this contract. They state that said Weedon's heirs are his brothers and sisters, and they are poor, and the loss to them will be very heavy.

Signed this 3d day of May, 1886.

JOHN H. WILSON.
CHARLES B. PEARCE, JR.

Subscribed and sworn to before me by John H. Wilson and Charles B. Pearce, jr., personally known to me to be the same persons they represent themselves to be.

Given under my hand and seal of office this 3d day of May, 1886.

[SEAL.] A. M. J. COCHRAN, Notary Public.

This bill provides that the Postmaster-General is directed to settle with the administrators of W. W. Weedon, deceased, and his sureties on his official bond, for services performed in the mail messenger transfer and station service at Cincinnati since July 1, 1884, and allow and pay them for said service the actual cost of performing the mail service to the close of the period for which Weedon contracted to perform the same, provided that the Postmaster-General shall be satisfied that the service has been well and faithfully performed, and provided that he shall not allow or pay more than such service could have been rendered by the exercise of reasonable skill and diligence.

The committee report that in their opinion the contract was entered into under a mistake of fact, and that the concealment of material facts by the Government influenced Mr. Weedon to enter into the same. The enforcement of the terms of the contract would be inequitable and unjust under all the facts, and I hope the bill will pass.

Mr. SPRINGER. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. COBB] the remainder of my time.

Mr. COBB. I think, Mr. Speaker, that before passing upon questions of this kind we ought to understand what we are doing. It has been almost impossible to understand anything during the last half hour of our proceedings. Yet we are disposing of a claim that involves, I suppose, a considerable amount of money.

Mr. HEARD. About $8,000.

Mr. COBB. About $8,000; and it involves besides a principle which is of more importance than the money itself.

Mr. KERR. The gentleman is mistaken about this involving any money. The bill is simply to relieve these parties from an improvident contract.

Mr. COBB. If the bill does not pass, will not money be collected by the Government? The gentleman says that it involves no money because it proposes to release a contractor with the Government. If the bill should not pass some $8,000 will be collected which by it the Government relinquishes. Is not that true? I so understand. If, therefore, this bill does not involve money, I do not understand how any bill can involve money.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Do I understand that the gentleman from Kentucky has an hour, and the gentleman from Alabama also has an hour?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois has the floor.

Mr. COBB. Do these interruptions come out of my time?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. If each one of these gentlemen has an hour, the hour for adjournment will arrive and we will be unable to pass any bill.

The CHAIRMAN. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. COBB. Mr. Chairman, there is something more involved than perhaps we are inclined to think, and while members are disposed to be a little humorous about this matter, we ought not to lose sight of the principle involved.

The case is simply this: A man enters into a contract with the Government and dies, and because of his death his personal representative is required to make good this contract; therefore, it is urged, we ought to relieve all parties concerned from any further obligation to the Government in the matter. Now, that is the whole of it.

Mr. Chairman, if this man had lived would a claim of this sort have been presented to Congress in his behalf? If he had lived and failed to carry out his contract, what obligation would there be on our part to relieve him of the consequences of his own misconduct, if there was misconduct, or to make good any loss which he might have incurred by reason of the failure to carry out his contract with the Government.

A MEMBER. To carry out an improvident contract.

Mr. COBB. Very well, an improvident contract, if you please. The object of giving a bond with surety is to secure the faithful performance of a contract entered into with the Government. If we do not propose to hold bondsmen to the terms of their contract, why require any bond to be given at all?

So that, Mr. Chairman, there is no ground whatever for the favorable consideration of this bill, unless we can find in the circumstances under which the contract was made something growing out of the conduct of the Government sufficient to induce us to relieve the contractor.

What are the circumstances now pressed upon the attention of the House in behalf of the pending bill? Nothing whatever, except that in a certain advertisement there was a foot-note which, it is alleged, misled the contractor in bidding for the contract. Can this be true? If it is true, as suggested by a gentleman behind me, it was the advertisement for bids which misled and not the terms of the contract. This is as favorable a view as we can take of the matter.

Mr. KERR. Would this man have undertaken to perform a contract where other men were losing money at the rate of $6,000 a year unless he had been misled by the advertisement?

Mr. COBB. This man was responsible for his belief. He is presumed to have been a man of business. If he was not a man of business he showed bad judgment in entering into the contract at all, and we can not properly be called on to relieve against errors of judgment.

Mr. HAUGEN. I understand the statement in the foot-note to which reference is made was absolutely true.

Mr. COBB. There seems to be no doubt of the fact. Now, the question presented to us as business men, to be considered and acted upon in the votes we shall give on this measure, is this: When a man enters into a contract of this magnitude, and fails to accomplish what he undertook, and what he believed he could accomplish when he entered into the contract, must we, because the contract was with the Government, step in and relieve him from the consequences of his failure? If he had made great profit out of the contract we would not have heard from him any further about the matter.

The question comes back at last to the inquiry whether, if the contractor was misled, the Government is responsible for it. If so, his estate and bondsmen ought to be relieved; but if the Government is not responsible for his having been misled, then they ought not to be relieved. If I understand the case, and I repeat it again, the only claim made in this respect is that in the advertisement there was a certain foot-note which misled him. He read the advertisement and proposed to bid upon it. The presumption is he made all proper inquiries. If he did not the fault was his. He could easily have ascertained that the man who preceded him in the service he was bidding for had failed to make any money out of it, and yet he did not take the precaution to go to this man and learn what amount of money would be required to carry the contract into execution. That is the whole state of the case. If this man stood here in propria persona asking for this relief we would not listen to him for one moment. Is it proper to relieve his bondsmen?

Mr. SPRINGER. If the gentleman will allow me a moment I will state the point in that respect. The point in the report to which I have referred is this——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. How much time does the gentleman from Alabama yield?

Mr. COBB. I will yield him two minutes. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. That is more than I want.

In the advertisement it was stated in the foot-note to which reference has been made:

Present pay, $6,779.

The administrator and the sureties claimed that the contractor was misled by this statement. It was true that that was the amount paid to the contractor at that time. But there was another fact still in existence which was not disclosed in the advertisement, and that was that the contractor who had undertaken the work at that rate was losing money on it.

Mr. COBB. I understand all that.

Mr. KERR. Was not the bill favorably reported before?

Mr. SPRINGER. It was.

Mr. COBB. Now I want to read this——

Mr. KERR. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. COBB. How much time?

Mr. KERR. About three or five minutes.

Mr. COBB. I will yield five minutes to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from Illinois says, this bill was favorably reported by the committee of the last House. My recollection is that these parties undertaking to perform the contract were induced to do so by a representation made in the advertisement, to the effect that the former contractor had done the work for something over $6,000. That is true, and the object of that publication was apparently to throw light upon the value of the contract. But in order to be entirely frank and fair the Government ought to have stated that the man who did the work at that rate was losing money, and a very considerable sum, on the contract. That the Government failed to do; and having failed to tell the whole truth about it, it misled this party——

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. How was the Government to find out that he was losing money, go and examine him on oath?

Mr. KERR. Well, I suppose so.

Now, the man who undertook the contract died, and I think a different rule should apply in a case of that kind than where you are dealing with the case of a defaulting living contractor, because we ought not strictly, in justice, to hold a dead man to the performance of the contract.

Mr. HOOKER. How could you?

Mr. KERR. You ought to take into consideration the circumstances in each case. It might be difficult in some instances to have a contract performed by another party by new advertisement; but a sense of justice ought to prevail in this House, just as between man and man; and if the holding of a dead man's estate to a contract would wipe out all the means of the widow and children, I do not think the Government of the United States ought to enforce the performance of such an improvident contract, especially when the terms of the advertisement may justly be claimed to be misleading.

It is a case in which I do not think the Government ought to enforce the terms of the contract, but should apply the same rule in a matter of that kind as would apply in conscience, judgment, and sound sense between man and man. No such considerations as that would hold a man to the performance of such a contract.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alabama has thirty-five minutes left. Does he desire to retain that time?

Mr. COBB. No; I desire to use it now.

I am willing for this contract to be considered as between individuals. There was no obligation on the part of the Government of the United States to inform this contractor whether he would make money or not. The only thing the Government did was to publish to the world what had been paid under the former contract, which statement was the truth. Now, if this man was a prudent man, he would have gone to the prior contractor and found out whether there was any money to be made on the contract at that rate or not. Now, then, here is an advertisement published by the Government to the world inviting competition for this service, in which advertisement it is simply stated that the former contractor was paid so many dollars for performing the work. No one questions the truth of that statement. What obligation was there on the part of the Government to advise anybody whether the former contractor had made or lost money? It was the duty of the man who proposed to enter into the contract to inquire into the fact whether such had been the case; and to obtain that information he should have gone to him to inquire.

It was his duty to look at all of the surrounding circumstances of the case to determine whether or not he could perform this contract for the amount of money the Government proposed to give. The Government did not offer a contract at so many dollars, but invited a bid; and he made his bid.

Mr. FINLEY. Inasmuch as the Government was not bound to tell whether parties were making money or not, they were not bound to make that suggestion either.

Mr. COBB. But it was no suggestion by the Government. It was simply the statement of a fact, not calculated in the slightest degree to mislead.

Mr. FINLEY. They would have left the man to make the examination for himself. But they published that the work was being done at such a price, and having failed to tell the balance, was not that provision misleading?

Mr. COBB. If that misled the man, why did he refuse to take the contract at the amount given to the former contractor; but increased it by several thousand dollars?

Mr. FINLEY. Every man believes when he takes a contract that the former contractor had taken it at a figure which he believed would be profitable.

I can explain that they advertise these lettings, and the man must exercise his judgment upon the advertisement. No man goes and hunts up paper or a small contract or any other contract from the Government with a view to ascertaining whether they may make money or not. If they get the contract on a bid for a larger amount they expect to make a profit. This man expected to make a profit.

Mr. COBB. Yes, but the point made is that this man was possibly misled by the former contract. Why is it that he demands a larger amount than was given to the former contractor? The very fact that he made a bid at a larger sum than the former contractor is evidence he had investigated the surrounding circumstances, the duties to be performed, and the amount of money that it would require to perform them. Now, this is what the Government of the United States does in all cases. It publishes to the world that "I propose to have certain work done; now, what will you do it for?" leaving it to the parties to make an investigation and ascertain what amount of money will be required in order to perform the terms of the contract to be entered into. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. COBB. Now, Mr. Speaker, if the course desired here is to be pursued it puts an end to control of all business such as is generally carried on by the Government in reference to these mail contracts. There is not a defaulting mail contractor in the United States who can not make as strong a case as this. There is no one who has made a contract improvidently but who can come to Congress and ask to be relieved from the consequences of his want of judgment upon as strong grounds as are presented here.

I reserve the balance of my time. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The question was taken on the passage of the bill; and there were—ayes 42, noes 37.

Mr. BLOUNT. I make the point of no quorum. This bill affects the whole mail service of the country

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS] and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT].

The tellers reported that there were yeas 30, nays 38.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The noes have it, and the bill is rejected.

Mr. KERR. I make the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of no quorum was not made until the vote was announced.

Mr. KERR. I made it before.

Several MEMBERS (to Mr. THOMAS). Withdraw the bill.

Mr. BLOUNT. I object to the withdrawal of the bill.

Mr. KERR. I insist upon the point of no quorum.

The tellers resumed their places.

Mr. LANHAM. I ask by unanimous consent, in view of the fact that the gentleman who reported this bill [Mr. TAULBEE] is absent, that the bill be now withdrawn from the consideration of the House. It was reported to the Forty-ninth Congress by Mr. WARNER, of Missouri, and the subcommittee which had it under consideration made a report which I ask by unanimous consent shall be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. BLOUNT. I object to the withdrawal of the bill.

Mr. LANHAM. I ask by unanimous consent that the report of the committee be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. BLOUNT. I object.

Mr. LANHAM. I desire to ask a parliamentary question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LANHAM. Was the report on the bill that we have just been considering read?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It was read.

Mr. LANHAM. Then will it not be printed in the RECORD?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It will be. The report of the last Congress will not be printed in the RECORD, because objection was made.

Mr. LANHAM. But I refer to the report of this Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That has been read, and will be printed in the RECORD. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4318) to provide for the erection of a public building at the city of New Berne, N. C.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase or otherwise provide a suitable site and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious building, with fire-proof vaults extending to each story, for the use and accommodation of the post-office, United States courts, custom-house, internal-revenue offices, and other Government offices, at the city of New Berne, in the State of North Carolina. The site, and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in cost the sum of $100,000; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site nor place for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, involving an expenditure exceeding the sum of $100,000 for site and building; and the site purchased shall leave the building independent and unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of North Carolina shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of process therein.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended an amendment striking out the words "one hundred" where they occurred in the bill and inserting "seventy-five;" so as to make the appropriation $75,000.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. PAYSON. I object.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask the gentleman to withhold his objection, and allow me to make an explanation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. No objection is heard. The gentleman may proceed, subject to the right to object.

Mr. SIMMONS. New Berne is the third largest city in the State of North Carolina. It is a port of entry. There is a custom-house there which now occupies a rented building. There is a Federal court there which is held in a rented building. The judge of the district resides there and the Government rents an office for him. There is also there a large post-office, serving as the distributing center for twenty-seven counties. The deputy collector of internal revenue also resides in the city. In all, there are six public buildings rented and paid for by the Government. This is the fourth time, I believe, that this bill has been favorably reported to the House, and if there are any meritorious bills of this kind upon the Calendar, this is one of them, and it would have been passed long ago but for certain peculiar circumstances which it is not necessary for me to explain at this time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina that this bill be now considered?

Mr. PAYSON. I object.

Mr. HOVEY was recognized, and sent a bill to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. CRISP. Objection was made on that side of the House to the consideration of the last bill, and I now rise to present a privileged report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The report will be read. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOVEY] later.

Mr. NUTTING. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. NUTTING. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOVEY] had the floor and had been recognized, and I wish to know whether he can be taken off the floor by a member rising to present a privileged report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is inclined to think that the recognition of the gentleman from Indiana was not such as the gentleman from New York intimates. There had been no consideration of the bill, and no request stated, and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] states that the report which he desires to present is a privileged matter.

Mr. NUTTING. But the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOVEY] addressed the Chair, and the Chair recognized him, and he sent his bill to the desk. I would like to know if that was not such a recognition as entitled him to the floor?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair believes that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP], desiring to present a privileged report, is entitled to the floor before the House has entered upon the consideration of another matter.

Mr. NUTTING. I concede that; but the Chair had already recognized the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOVEY].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair had recognized the gentleman from Indiana. That is true.

Mr. NUTTING. Very well. When the Chair had recognized the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOVEY], I contend that even a privileged report can not take the gentleman off the floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state to the gentleman from New York [Mr. NUTTING] that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOVEY] was recognized for the purpose of asking unanimous consent, but he had not obtained it; and pending that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] stated that he desired to present a privileged report.

Mr. CRISP. Even if the gentleman were on the floor, I submit that under the rules he would have to give way to a privileged report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That question need not be raised now. The Chair has decided the matter and the Clerk will proceed.

Mr. NUTTING. I ask the Chair to wait a moment. Let us have a ruling upon this.

Mr. CRISP. I will dispose of the question by objecting to the consideration of the bill of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOVEY].

Mr. NUTTING. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. NUTTING. Am I right in this, that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOVEY] rose to his feet and asked recognition for the purpose of asking the House for unanimous consent to call up a bill for consideration, and that the Chair recognized him for that purpose? [Cries of "Regular order!"] Is that correct, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is correct.

Mr. NUTTING. Now, has the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOVEY] asked the House for unanimous consent to consider the bill?

Mr. DOCKERY. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DOCKERY. Under the rule, does not a conference report take anybody off the floor?

Mr. HOVEY. I will yield to the gentleman from Georgia to present his conference report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has decided the matter. If the gentleman from New York [Mr. NUTTING] wishes to appeal from the decision of the Chair, he can do so.

Mr. NUTTING. I do not desire to appeal, but I desire to reply to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There is no matter before the House for discussion.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI RIVER.

The Clerk read the report submitted by Mr. CRISP, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10347) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near the city of Plattsmouth, Nebr., and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same.

CHARLES F. CRISP,
A. R. ANDERSON,
Managers on the part of the House.
P. SAWYER,
CHARLES F. MANDERSON,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The following statement of the House conferees, submitted in accordance with the rule, was read:

The conferees on the part of the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendments to H. R. 10347, in explanation of the report herewith submitted, say that the bill fully protects the interests of the navigation of the river, and all parties at interest are satisfied therewith.

CHARLES F. CRISP.
A. R. ANDERSON, of Iowa.

The report of the committee of conference was adopted.

Mr. CRISP moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CRISP. I demand the regular order.

Mr. HOVEY. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS].

Mr. SIMMONS. I call up for consideration the bill which has already been read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order has been demanded, and cuts off all requests for unanimous consent.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. What is the regular order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is the unfinished business. The Clerk will report the first bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. Is the regular order demanded?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is.

Mr. DOCKERY. Then I move that the House now take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening, for the consideration of business under the special order.

Mr. BLOUNT. What is the special order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The consideration of bills reported from the Committee on War Claims.

Mr. HEARD. Will the business of the evening session be limited absolutely to reports of the Committee on War Claims?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair so understands the order.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER AT SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

Pending the motion for a recess,

The SPEAKER pro tempore announced the appointment of Mr. CRISP, Mr. ANDERSON of Iowa, and Mr. PHELAN as conferees on the part of the House upon the bill (S. 1701) authorizing the construction of a high wagon-bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. DOCKERY for a recess, it was agreed to; and accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until 8 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House reassembled at 8 o'clock p. m., and was called to order by Mr. DOCKERY as Speaker pro tempore.

The Clerk read the following:

SPEAKER'S ROOM, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 25, 1888.

SIR: I hereby designate Hon. A. M. DOCKERY to preside as Speaker pro tempore at the session of the House this evening.

JOHN G. CARLISLE, Speaker.

Hon. JOHN B. CLARK,
Clerk House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the special order under which the session of this evening is held.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That on July 25 the House take a recess at 5 o'clock until 8 o'clock p. m., the session not to extend beyond 10 p. m., the session to be devoted to the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on War Claims to which there is no objection.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I ask unanimous consent that the bills called up to-night be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. COBB. Does that preclude debate on these bills?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It does not.

Mr. HOLMAN. Every bill will be subject to a single objection, at any rate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the proposition of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. MCKINNEY. I have no reason for wishing to object except one: when these bills are considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole it compels our good friend the Journal Clerk to stay here until 1 or 2 o'clock in the morning to make up the record, while if the bills be first considered in Committee of the Whole and afterward passed in the House the Journal can be made up in perhaps fifteen minutes.

Mr. HOLMAN. The matter which the gentleman suggests is really worthy of consideration. In Committee of the Whole nothing is journalized, while in the House a full journal must be kept, and it involves a large amount of labor for the Clerk.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. It is very hard for me to understand how measures can be considered and passed here without there being a record, and it would appear that if they are considered without going into Committee of the Whole it must necessarily save a great deal of work.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New Jersey calls for the regular order, which the Chair understands to be equivalent to an objection.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar for the consideration of business under the special order.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, Mr. CLARDY in the chair.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I wish to make a suggestion. In order that we may make proper dispatch of business to-night I ask unanimous consent that each member of the Committee on War Claims, the committee which has reported these bills to the House and done the work upon them, be allowed to call up a bill and have it considered, and that afterward the Calendar be called straight through in order that members here to-night who have bills in which they are specially interested may secure for them consideration. Bills as called up will be subject to objection, of course.

Mr. ADAMS. What is the request of the gentleman—that each member of the Committee on War Claims be allowed to call up a bill, and that then we go on with the Calendar in regular order?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. That, in the first place, each member of the Committee on War Claims be allowed to call up a bill, subject, of course, to objection, and that afterward the Calendar be called straight through, so that each member present may have an opportunity to get a bill before the House.

Mr. ADAMS. How would the gentleman think of a modification, to the effect that after the members of the committee present have each called up their bill, then that those of the faithful few here to-night, who are not members of the committee, may have that privilege!

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. That is exactly what I want to reach, and in making my request that was the object I had in view.

Mr. HOUK. To let the members of the committee each one call up a bill, and then everybody else present call up one?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Yes; that was my object.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky as modified by the request of the gentleman from Illinois, that the members of the Committee on War Claims be each allowed to call up a bill, after which that members present may each have the right to call up a bill?

The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. BOWDEN. Mr. Chairman, let us understand that.

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not think the order was distinctly understood.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman from Kentucky to request that each of the members of the Committee on War Claims present should be permitted to designate one bill, after which the Calendar was to be called. The gentleman from Illinois suggested as a modification that each member of this Committee of the Whole be permitted to name a bill after the members of the War Claims Committee had called up their bill. To that arrangement the Chair heard no objection.

Mr. HOLMAN. That was agreed to.

Mr. CATCHINGS. If that arrangement was adopted, who would be first recognized?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would endeavor to recognize gentlemen alternately on each side.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I am perfectly willing that each of the members of the Committee on War Claims present should be permitted to call up a bill; but then I should insist that we go to the Calendar and proceed in the regular order.

Mr. HOLMAN. It is too late now to object.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I did not hear any request for unanimous consent. We would have difficulty anyhow as to the order in which recognitions were to be made; and it strikes me as a more reasonable proposition to proceed directly with the Calendar after the committee have had the privilege asked by them. We would make far more progress.

Mr. HOLMAN. We would get through with more bills in the manner suggested, I think.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Let me say, Mr. Chairman——

Mr. CATCHINGS. If the understanding is that after the Committee on War Claims shall each have had the privilege of calling up a bill the Calendar is to be called and each gentleman present is to be permitted to call up a bill as it is reached on the Calendar, and if any bill so reached is not called up, that it retain its place on the Calendar, I shall not object. To that I think there will be no objection, and I hope it will be done.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. The objection of the gentleman from Mississippi evidently comes too late; but the trouble he suggests is plain to be seen by everybody. It seems to me that it would necessitate a struggle for recognition. But as the Calendar was called, then every member present would be permitted to call up a bill as it is reached. That would seem to be a proper method of proceeding.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will then submit the request of the gentleman from Kentucky as modified by the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let us have the regular order. We have already arrived at an agreement.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I am perfectly willing to concede the proposition that the members of the Committee on War Claims shall call up their bills. To that I make no objection. After that, however, I hope the Calendar will be called in its regular order, and that members present, if they desire to do so, may ask the consideration of bills as they are reached.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. DOCKERY. What is it?

Mr. CATCHINGS. Simply that when the members of the Committee on War Claims have finished calling up bills, that the Calendar shall be taken up and called in its order, and if no gentleman desires to ask the consideration of a claim as it is reached, that it be passed over, as a matter of course.

Mr. DOCKERY. That is all right.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think the order first made was a more reasonable one for the transaction of business.

Mr. LANHAM. As there seems to be misunderstanding here, I demand the regular order.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I desire to call up the bill H. R. 10481, which I send to the desk.

Mr. BOWDEN. Is it understood that the request of the chairman of the War Claims Committee was agreed to, that the four members of the committee present shall each have the privilege of calling up one bill?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks that that was agreed to. It was coupled, however, with another proposition, to which objection has since been made.

Mr. McCREARY. I do not think there was any objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. BOWDEN. I do not object to that, but to each member present calling up a claim I do object. It is quite evident now that each member could not have that privilege to-night; and there would be a struggle for recognition, which would result in doing nothing.

Mr. HOLMAN. But that was the agreement.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the members of the Committee on War-Claims would be entitled to recognition anyhow. But the Chair will again submit the request, in order that there may be no mistake. The request is that the members of the Committee on War Claims may be permitted each to call up a bill.

Mr. MORGAN. I suggest that the roll be then called, and each member of the House be permitted to call up a bill.

Mr. HOVEY. I object.

Mr. LANHAM. I demand the regular order.

Mr. McCREARY. I understand the chairman of the Committee on War Claims made a proposition. This is his night. The session is assigned to his committee, and I would like to hear that proposition.

Mr. HOLMAN. As agreed to.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Consent was asked heretofore that each member of the Committee on War Claims be permitted to call up one bill, after which, that the Calendar be called through and the members present then have the opportunity to ask the consideration of bills as they are reached.

Mr. LYMAN. And if no member asks the consideration of a bill, that it be passed over informally.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Although I believe the better proposition is to let the roll of members be called and each member present be permitted to call up a bill.

Mr. WASHINGTON, Mr. TRACEY, and Mr. BOWDEN objected.

Mr. LANHAM. Evidently we can not proceed, owing to the misunderstanding that prevails; therefore I demand the regular order.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Do I understand that the Committee on War Claims is to be recognized?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman coupled that request with two others, to which objection is made, as the Chair understands.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I ask that each member of the Committee on War Claims be recognized to call up a bill.

Mr. HOVEY and others. Regular order.

The Clerk read the title of the first bill, as follows:

A bill (H. R 28) for the relief of William J. Poitevent.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I ask unanimous consent that members of the War Claims Committee may be permitted to call up one bill each.

Mr. HOLMAN. My understanding of this matter was this: That the gentleman from Kentucky made the request that each member of the Committee on War Claims present might call up one bill. That was supplemented by the proposition of the gentleman from Illinois that after that each gentleman as recognized might call up a bill. That was agreed to, and that is the regular order of the House unless it is revoked.

Mr. BOWDEN. I did not understand that was agreed to. I expressly objected to that; but I have no opposition to the proposition of the gentleman from Kentucky that each member shall be permitted to call up a bill.

Mr. WHEELER. I really think we ought to permit the Committee on War Claims to have some privileges in this business.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair was of the opinion that the proposition had been assented to, but remembering that the regular order was demanded at the time, the Chair is satisfied——

Mr. HOLMAN. It was demanded later.

The CHAIRMAN. It was demanded, the Chair thinks, about that time; and the regular order being demanded, the Clerk will report the first bill.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I make the point of order that my request had been assented to, that each member should call up a bill.

The CHAIRMAN. That was supplemented by another proposition, and the Chair will submit the proposition that the members——

Mr. HOVEY. I object.

Mr. HOLMAN. I would like to have the proceedings read so as to determine what action was taken, and I rise to a point of order for that purpose. I think that the record will show that there was no objection made at the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that he has consulted the reporter's notes and they show that the request was submitted and not objected to at the time. Immediately afterward the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOWDEN] rose and said that he did not understand the proposition.

Mr. HOLMAN. I now suggest that in consequence of this misunderstanding that at least the members of the War Claims Committee present be each permitted to call up one bill, and the reading of the first bill will be the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the suggestion of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. HOVEY. I know of no right that the members of the committee have over other members of this House. They have monopolized the time, and the gentlemen over there have had many bills considered, and when I have offered anything those on the opposite side have voted it out of the House or beaten it down by some dilatory motion. And I call for the regular order.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I just want to answer the gentleman from Indiana in one word. I have worked harder than any other gentleman of this House for the accomplishment of the character of legislation connected with these war claims. I have never objected to a bill, but have given up to every member on this floor an opportunity to forward his bill, and I have always been disposed to do all in my power to show the greatest courtesy and favor to everybody having a bill to consider, and any gentleman who states to the contrary states what is not true.

Mr. HOVEY. I want to reply to the gentleman from Kentucky I introduced a bill in February and introduced four bills in January——

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. I demand the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is demanded.

The Clerk again reported the title of the bill.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I wish to say a word to that bill. It has been the invariable custom ever since I have been in Congress, when a session like this is assigned to a committee, for the chairman of a committee to call up a bill, and that he shall then yield to members of the committee alternately—Democrat and Republican—each to call up a bill; and I hope the gentleman will not be deprived of that privilege. I will say to my friend from Indiana that I have witnessed his troubles here in getting his bills considered and I fully sympathize with him. I have been in the same boat with him for six months, and he ought not, in justice to the gentleman from Kentucky, hold him responsible for the fault of others; and I hope he will let the gentleman proceed.

Mr. HOVEY. I have been a silent member of this House, a modest man, and I have pressed nothing forward here. In the month of January I introduced four bills in this House, and neither one of them has been reported. One of the bills went to the committee of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND], and it has never been heard from at all.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. What bill was that?

Mr. HOVEY. A bill to pay the soldiers during the late war the difference on their pay between greenbacks and gold. It was introduced early in the session and has never been reported at all.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. It had no relation to the business of my committee, and the bill has been referred back. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. HOUK. This debate is all out of order.

Mr. HOVEY. If any member is to speak, I have the floor.

Mr. DOCKERY. I demand the regular order, which takes everybody off the floor.

Mr. CUTCHEON. What is the regular order at this moment? The reading of the bill, is it not?

The CHAIRMAN. It is.

Mr. BROWER. I think the Clerk has read the title of the third bill on the Calendar. There are two other bills preceding it, which were reported from the Court of Claims. The Committee on War Claims had not reported on them.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a question of order.

Mr. BOWDEN. I ask the Chair to decide the point that I have made.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair supposes that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] rises to discuss the point of order made by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOWDEN].

Mr. CRISP. No, sir. The point I desire to make is that the Clerk has begun in the wrong place.

Mr. BOWDEN. That is my point.

Mr. CRISP. I beg the gentleman's pardon. The order for this evening session does not confine the House to bills of a private nature. It says "bills reported by the Committee on War Claims."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. What kind of bills?

Mr. CRISP. It does not say. That is my point. It is for the Chair to determine.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Does not the order say "bills to which there is no objection?"

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the order under which we are proceeding this evening be read.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I want to suggest to gentlemen that the Committee on War Claims do not consider any bills except war claims, and therefore would not be apt to report any other bills.

Mr. CRISP. While that is true, they have reported some bills of a public nature. The first bill on which my eye falls is a bill to reimburse the several States for interest on moneys expended by them on account of raising troops during the late war.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order made by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOWDEN], which is the same point raised by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP]. The Clerk will report the first bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 3344) for the relief of Perez Dickinson.

Mr. CRISP. Where does the Clerk begin now?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires the attention of members for a moment. The House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the Clerk informs the Chair that he has now read the title of the first bill.

Mr. McCREARY. What is the bill?

The CLERK. A bill for the relief of Perez Dickinson, the first bill on the Private Calendar, page 35.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of that bill?

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is made. The Clerk will read the next bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 3701) for the relief of John De Bree, executor of Margaret T. Higgins.

Mr. BOWDEN. I ask that that bill be considered.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I object.

Mr. COBB. I ask that the bill and report be read, subject to objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE] has already objected.

Mr. BOWDEN. I do not understand that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. COBB] objects to the consideration of this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. COBB] does not object, but the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE] does.

Mr. BOWDEN. I am perfectly willing that the bill and report shall be read, subject to objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is made. The Clerk will report the next bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 26) for the relief of William J. Poitevent.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. BOWDEN. I rise to a question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BOWDEN. I wish to know whether every bill that is objected to is to be passed over without consideration?

The CHAIRMAN. That is the order for this session.

Mr. BOWDEN. Very well. I understand that the bill for the relief of John De Bree has been objected to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE] to object.

Mr. BOWDEN. I know of no more meritorious bill upon the Calendar than that one, and if it is to be the rule here to-night that every bill that is objected to is to be passed over without consideration, and if that bill is objected to, then no more business will be done to-night.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I wish to say, Mr. Chairman, that my reason for objecting to that bill was simply that it was one of those Court of Claims bills over which there has been so much trouble in this House, and I do not think we ought to go into the consideration of those bills to-night. I believe that the work of the Committee on War Claims reported at the present session ought to have consideration this evening, and that we ought to dispose of bills in which there is not so much involved and which will not create so much discussion as bills of this class.

Mr. BOWDEN. In reply to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE], I want to say that that bill has been pending here from year to year; it has been adjudicated by the Court of Claims, the Attorney-

General having appeared before the court in defense of the United States; there is no more meritorious claim on the Calendar; and I repeat that if this is to be the rule there will be no more bills considered here to-night.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I withdraw the objection. It was in no captious spirit that I objected.

Mr. LANE. I renew the objection.

The CHAIRMAN The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LANE] objects, and the Clerk will report the next bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 26) for the relief of William J. Poitevent.

Mr. BOWDEN. I object.

HIRAM JOHNSON AND OTHERS.

The next business on the Private Calendar reported from the Committee on War Claims was the bill (H. R. 1028) for the relief of Hiram Johnson and others.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. BOWDEN. I object.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TRACEY. I move that the committee rise. As objections are made to the consideration of bills on the Private Calendar, I propose that the committee rise so that we may resolve ourselves into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union to consider public bills.

The motion of Mr. TRACEY that the committee rise was not agreed to.

Mr. FINLEY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have the privilege of making a statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to permitting the gentleman from Kentucky to make a statement? The Chair hears none.

Mr. FINLEY. I take it for granted that gentlemen on both sides of the House have bills to the passage of which no one will object.

Mr. MCKENNA. I have one right here.

Mr. WASHINGTON. I have one.

Mr. HOUK and others. So have I.

Mr. FINLEY. I think we ought to agree upon taking up some bills which do not involve any great amount of money and in which all members will acquiesce. I have such a bill——

Mr. HOUK. I have one.

Mr. FINLEY. It seems to me we ought not to kill time. Our constituents need some legislation, especially that poorer class whose claims against the Government are very small in amount. I do not know any reason why, as representatives of the people, we can not agree to pass these bills involving small sums of money, and thus confer a greater boon upon the parties interested than if we should pass measures involving five, ten, fifteen, or twenty thousand dollars each.

The CHAIRMAN. Has the gentleman any request to submit?

Mr. FINLEY. I submit the proposition that we consider cases in which no greater sum is involved than $1,000.

Mr. HOUK. I object to that; make it $2,000.

Mr. FINLEY. Very well; I will say $2,000. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. DOCKERY having resumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. CLARDY reported that the Committee of the Whole House, having had under consideration business on the Private Calendar reported from the Committee on War Claims, had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I want to make a statement of the present situation and what I hope may come out of it. This Committee on War Claims has labored harder than any committee, or at least as hard as any committee ever organized by the Congress of the United States. So far as I am individually concerned, I have had only a few small claims that were of interest to my own district. I have labored hard, as is known to members of the committee and the House, to get the business referred by members to our committee into such shape that it could be acted on by the House. When I asked for the fixing of to-night for the consideration of these bills, I did not do so for my own personal benefit in any way. I asked this session for the benefit of members who had bills pending here which they were anxious to have passed.

I came here and asked consent that those members of the Committee on War Claims who are present, being, perhaps, only half a dozen——

Mr. LAWLER. Four.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Possibly only four—should each have the privilege of calling up a claim and having it considered. That request was denied. Then I was willing that the Calendar should be called in regular order. Now, if the House can arrive at any determination so as to secure the consideration of these bills in the manner in which this House of Representatives ought to proceed with business, I am willing it shall go ahead; otherwise, I am in favor of the House now adjourning without longer wasting time; and I pledge the House that I will not further give my time to the preparation of business that will not be considered.

Mr. CAREY. Will the gentleman allow me a word before he presses his motion?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Yes, sir.

Mr. CAREY. The able Speaker of this House ruled during the last Congress that a Delegate from a Territory can not object. I ask now from this House an act of generosity to the Delegate from Washington Territory [Mr. VOORHEES] and the Delegate from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY]. I ask that each of these Delegates be permitted to call up a bill to which there can be no objection.

Mr. LAWLER. When?

Mr. CAREY. Now.

Mr. LAWLER. Oh, no; I object. We will let you have just as good a chance as ourselves.

Mr. CAREY. But we never get any chance.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state the request of the gentleman from Wyoming. The gentleman asks permission for himself and for the Delegate from Washington Territory [Mr. VOORHEES] that each be allowed to call up a bill to which there is no objection. Is there objection to this request?

Mr. BOWDEN. I object.

Mr. GROSVENOR. If no business can be done this evening, we might as well adjourn and go home. The Committee on War Claims asked for a session this evening for the purpose of considering certain bills on the Calendar reported from that committee. It seems, whatever the rules of the House may specifically indicate, that it has been customary ever since I had knowledge of the House when an order like this was made the committee which had obtained the night session for the consideration of its business was authorized—I do not say the chairman arbitrarily, but the committee—to call up such bills as came within the scope of the order of the House under which the House had assembled at the evening session.

Mr. WHEELER. That is the unwritten law.

Mr. GROSVENOR. It seems now under the rule of parliamentary procedure—it seems to me that it is apparent in this contention—I will not characterize it by any other name——

A MEMBER. We can not hear what is going on. We would all like to hear what is being said.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Gentlemen will resume their seats and preserve order.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Unless we arrive at some mode of procedure by common consent, it seems to me we will come out this evening just where we started in. [Laughter.] In the way in which we are now proceeding we get farther and farther from the transaction of any business. I disclaim having any particular interest in any bill. There is not one I would ask to have considered before another. But I want to see the business transacted for which we are assembled, and I now ask, by unanimous consent, that the Committee on War Claims, acting as a committee, may designate the bills upon the Calendar which shall be called up for consideration.

Mr. BOWDEN. I do not like to appear in the rôle of an obstructionist, but I must object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the proposition of the gentleman from Ohio, that the Committee on War Claims designate the bills in the order in which they shall be taken up for consideration?

Mr. BOWDEN. If the Chair will permit me for one moment I will make a brief statement. Now, I do not wish to appear in the rôle of an obstructionist, for I am rather a good-natured man and do not wish to assume that rôle. I have for ninety days danced attendance down in that bull-ring for the purpose of securing the passage of one or two little bills in which my constituents were interested. This is the only chance I have to have those bills considered.

I am willing each member of the Committee on War Claims shall designate a bill to be considered, but I do object to the whole time being taken up by the members of that committee to the exclusion of all others. I readily admit that the Committee on War Claims have rendered valuable service, and agree that each one of them shall have the privilege of calling up a bill for consideration; but while I consent to that, I also demand for myself the opportunity to call up from the Calendar for consideration the bills in which my own constituents are interested.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Virginia object to the proposition of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. BOWDEN. Yes, I do object to his proposition that the Committee on War Claims shall exclusively have the power to call up bills for consideration this evening, for that would exclude me from going to the Calendar for the consideration of the bills in which my constituents are interested, and to which I have already alluded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. HOVEY. I demand the regular order of business.

Mr. GROSVENOR. If we can do no business then I shall insist on my motion that the House adjourn so we may go home.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CUTCHEON. The special order provides that the session this evening shall be devoted to the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on War Claims to which there is no objection. It does not provide specifically for the consideration of the bills upon the Private Calendar at all, or upon the Union Calendar. Now, is it not in order to begin with the calendar of the committee, commencing with the first bill and proceeding in regular order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In reply to the question of the gentleman from Michigan the Chair will state that the answer to his question depends upon the motion made by the chairman of the committee or some other member of the House. If a motion is made and agreed to to go into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, then, of course, the calendar in that committee will be taken up and the bills considered in order. If the motion is made to go into the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar and it is agreed to, the bills on that Calendar will be taken up in their order.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I have moved that the House adjourn for the purpose of testing the sense of the House, and I ask for a decision on that motion.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I rise for the purpose of asking the gentleman from Indiana——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the motion to adjourn withdrawn?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes, I will withdraw it to hear what the chairman of the committee has to say.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I wish in the first place, Mr. Speaker, to ask the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOVEY] to state just in what order he desires the House shall proceed to the consideration of business this evening.

Mr. HOVEY. I will not dictate what order the business shall be conducted in. The gentleman knows what the parliamentary rules are. We have Calendars made here, and they are made for some purpose. Let us proceed in the regular parliamentary way.

Mr. WHEELER. That is, that the chairman of the committee shall control the business and designate the bills to be called up.

Mr. HOVEY. There is no such rule known to parliamentary law.

Mr. WHEELER. It has been the unwritten law and the custom for over thirty years.

Mr. HOVEY. Regular order.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 18, noes 46.

So the motion was rejected.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I ask unanimous consent of the House that bills called up from the Private Calendar to-night be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole, instead of in the committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to object to that, but there are public bills——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Now I ask unanimous consent that each of the members of the Committee on War Claims present be allowed to call up one bill.

Mr. HOVEY. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOVEY. Has not that same motion been repeated and voted down a dozen times?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct, but other business has intervened.

Is there objection to the request?

Mr. HOVEY. I object.

Mr. HOOKER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is that motion amendable?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That order could only be made by unanimous consent. Unanimous consent has been asked and refused.

Mr. WHEELER. I now ask unanimous consent that the courtesy always extended by this House to the chairmen of its committees be extended to the chairman of the Committee on War Claims, so that he can control the business this evening.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That request has just been asked in another form and refused.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I wish to ask if it is in order to move that that order be followed in the consideration of these bills to-night?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is not. It can only be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Then I demand the regular order.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. The resolution under which we are operating to-night reads, "that the session shall be devoted to the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on War Claims to which there is no objection."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is correct.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. My question is, whether these two cases on the Calendar, reported from the Committee on War Claims, come within the scope of that resolution?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. They do. The order means this—it has been construed frequently, when similar orders have been made by the House: Of course if the regular order is demanded the Calendar of business must be called in its order, and it is the duty of the Clerk to read the bill by its title, or if necessary to read the bill itself, when the Chair asks the question, "Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?" If objection is made, under the order the bill can not be considered.

Mr. CATCHINGS. It is quite evident that we can not transact any business as long as the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOWDEN] maintains the attitude he has assumed. I hope we will be able to make some progress to-night, and I ask therefore that we go back to the bill which he has designated and proceed to its consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. COBB. I object. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. BUCHANAN I rise to a question of order. The regular order goes to the beginning of the Calendar, I presume. We are now in the House, nothing being accomplished in Committee of the Whole on the Calendar. We must therefore commence at the head of the Calendar.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That point of order is well taken, and the Clerk will report the first bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 9872) for the relief of Perez Dickinson.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. CUTCHEON. I raise the question of order that the regular order in the House is the House Calendar, and the first bill is on page 24, we being now in the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Unanimous consent was asked and given to consider bills in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I was not aware of that.

Mr. TRACEY. I wish to protest against that order being made, Mr. Speaker. I objected, and the Chair declined to listen to my objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair did not understand the gentleman as objecting.

Mr. TRACEY. I objected with a view to making an explanation to the House. I did not want to interfere with the action of the chairman of the committee; but inasmuch as his request covered only the private bills, I thought public bills on the Calendar should also be embodied in the same order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair understood that unanimous consent was given. The Chair did not understand the gentleman to object to the request at all; but if the gentleman states that he objected the Chair will of course entertain the objection now.

Mr. TRACEY. I objected merely for the purpose of securing the consideration of bills on the Public Calendar as well as those on the Private Calendar. That was all. I would now ask unanimous consent that all bills, public as well as private, be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state to the gentleman from New York that in the event this order is not set aside the House will have to begin somewhere, and the Chair supposes, of course, that it will begin on the Private Calendar.

Mr. TRACEY. Not according to the understanding. The understanding was that we were to take up the Calendar. The first portion of the Calendar relates to the public bills.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would state as his recollection and understanding that the Private Calendar was first to be taken up. The gentleman from New York objected to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky, as he now states, and the Chair will entertain that objection.

Mr. TRACEY. I objected for the reason I have stated, in order that the public bills should not be excluded from consideration this evening.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair stated the request of the gentleman from Kentucky, which was to consider in the House as in Committee of the Whole the Private Calendar. The Chair now understands that the gentleman from New York [Mr. TRACEY] objected to it and still objects. The Chair will now entertain the objection of the gentleman, although the Chair did not understand the gentleman from New York did so object at the time.

Mr. TRACEY. I objected for the purpose of bringing up a public bill; but as I think it would be but courtesy, as that would interfere with the chairman of the committee, I withdraw my objection.

Mr. HOUK. I want to make a parliamentary inquiry. As I understand it, the regular order is called for.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is.

Mr. HOUK. That being true, I wish to know of the Chair if it does not involve commencing with the first bill on the Calendar and proceeding.

PEREZ DICKINSON.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk, by direction of the Chair, has just reported the first bill. The Clerk will again report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 9872) for the relief of Perez Dickinson.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. KILGORE rose.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think the bill ought to be read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The bill was read for information.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to consideration of this bill?

Mr. BURROWS. The report ought to be read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The report can only be read by unanimous consent, as it is in the nature of debate.

Mr. KILGORE. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas objects, and the Clerk will report the title of the next bill.

JOHN DE BREE.

The Clerk read the title, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 1798) for the relief of John De Bree, executor of Margaret T. Higgins.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the report be read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent that the report may be read, reserving the right of objection. Is there objection.

There was no objection.

The report was read for information.

Mr. TOWNSHEND (during the reading). Unless the committee agree to let this bill be considered, I do not see the necessity for reading the report. I object to the reading of the report.

Several MEMBERS. Too late.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. LANE. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the title of the next bill.

WILLIAM F. POITEVENT.

The Clerk read the title, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 26) for the relief of William F. Poitevent.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the bill, and then the Chair will ask for objection.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I would like to suggest, if there is any business to be done at all, that the title be read, and unless some one asks for the consideration of the bill it should be passed over.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent that the titles of the bills be read, and unless some one asks for the consideration of the bill that it be passed over. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

HIRAM JOHNSON AND OTHERS.

The next bill on the Private Calendar (consideration of which was asked by Mr. ENLOE) was the bill (H. R. 1028) for the relief of Hiram Johnson and others.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. I object.

WILLIAM D. WILSON.

The next bill on the Private Calendar (consideration of which was asked by Mr. CATCHINGS) was the bill (H. R. 828) for the relief of William D. Wilson.

Mr. BOWDEN. I object.

JOHN H. WEEKS.

The next bill on the Private Calendar (consideration of which was asked by Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky) was the bill (H. R. 5516) for the relief of John H. Weeks.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I ask consideration of that bill. I have been watching for it for six months, and I hope the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOWDEN] will not object to it.

Mr. BOWDEN. I suggest to the gentleman from Kentucky that he had better see the gentleman from Illinois. I will have to object.

Mr. KERR. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore put the question and announced that the "noes" seemed to have it.

Several MEMBERS. Division.

The House divided, and there were—ayes 19, noes 49; so the House refused to adjourn.

WIDOW OF LIEUT. JOHN F. STEWART.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next bill.

The next bill on the Private Calendar (consideration of which was asked by Mr. BROWER) was the bill (H. R. 456) for the relief of the widow of Lieut. John F. Stewart.

Mr. BROWER. I ask that that bill be considered.

Mr. ENLOE. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair thinks an objection was made on the right. [After a pause.] Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

A MEMBER. I think it should be read, subject to objection, and the report also.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill; but the report can not be read except by unanimous consent, as it is in the nature of debate.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was read, as follows:

For the relief of the widow of Lieut. John F. Stewart.

Whereas Lieut. John F. Stewart, late of Company A, Fourth Regiment, United States Infantry, in active line of service, was promoted and appointed, and did serve faithfully as a second lieutenant of said company from July 22, 1865, until June 19, 1866; and

Whereas the company having been so far from headquarters during its entire period of service in the northwestern Territories that he failed to receive his commission as second lieutenant, to which he was equitably entitled, and failed also to receive the pay and emoluments due him for his services as second lieutenant: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay the widow of Lieut. John F. Stewart, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sum or sums as the accounting officer of the Treasury shall find to be due Lieut. John F. Stewart as pay and emoluments for his services in the United States Army, prior to his death, in the late war; and that his widow is hereby entitled to, and shall receive, the same benefits as if said Stewart had received his commission at the time he was appointed a second lieutenant.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BROWER moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

NORFOLK COUNTY FERRY COMMITTEE.

The next bill on the Private Calendar (consideration of which was asked by Mr. BOWDEN) was the bill (H. R. 5517) for the relief of the Norfolk County ferry committee.

Mr. BOWDEN. I allowed the bill just passed to be considered without objection, and here is a bill that belongs to my district, and I now ask to call it up.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I object.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I want to get the attention of the gentleman from Mississippi. It does seem to me that we will have to meet this bill some time, and we may as well do so now. It is on the Calendar, and what I rose for was to suggest that we should go into the Committee of the Whole——

Mr. BOWDEN. The proceeds of that bill, if it become law, go to the free schools of Norfolk County, Virginia. The tolls of that ferry were taken by the United States when the Government had possession of the ferry from Norfolk to Portsmouth, and the Court of Claims has reported in favor of the bill.

Mr. JACKSON. The gentleman should remember that this House is opposed to the United States giving money in support of public schools.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. ENLOE. I object.

JOHN FARLEY.

The next business on the Private Calendar (consideration of which was asked by Mr. MCCREARY) was the bill (H. R. 341) for the relief of John Farley.

Mr. MCCREARY. John Farley is a very old man and a very clever Irishman, who has waited for twenty years for $118 the Government owes him. He furnished supplies to the Federal soldiers who were hungry and in need of groceries. I hope there will be no objection to the passage of this bill.

Mr. BOWDEN. I object.

Mr. WISE. I, too, object. I want to state that if members are going to object to my bills I am going to object to theirs.

Mr. MCCREARY. I have not objected to your bill.

Mr. WISE. The gentleman from Kentucky has——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOWDEN] has risen in his seat and objected to the consideration of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore rapped to order.

Mr. MCCREARY. I want to say, and to put it on record, that for the three years that I have been a member of this House I never objected to a gentleman's bill. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

LUCINDA M'GUIRE.

The next business on the Private Calendar (consideration of which was asked by Mr. PHELAN) was the bill (H. R. 871) for the relief of Lucinda McGuire.

Mr. WISE. I object.

Mr. PHELAN. I ask for consideration of that bill, for if any bill is right that bill is.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that objection has been made by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WISE].

Mr. McRAE. Does the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WISE] object to that bill?

Mr. WISE. I shall object to every bill to-night.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 20, noes 45.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I demand the yeas and nays.

The question on ordering the yeas and nays being put, the Speaker pro tempore announced that only eleven gentleman had voted, evidently not a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays were refused.

[Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the title of the next bill.

MARTHA L. RUSSELL AND OTHERS.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 565) for the relief of Martha L. Russell and others.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. WISE. I object.

ALFRED H. THOMAS, DECEASED.

The next business on the Private Calendar reported from the Committee on War Claims (called up for consideration by Mr. GLASS) was the bill (H. R. 1067) for the relief of Alfred H. Thomas, deceased.

Mr. GLASS. This bill is for the benefit of the family of a dead soldier.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. WISE. I object.

FANNIE B. RANDOLPH AND DORA L. STARK.

The next business on the Private Calendar reported from the Committee on War Claims (called up for consideration by Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin) was the resolution referring the claim of Fannie B. Randolph and Lora L. Stark to the Court of Claims.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. ENLOE. I object.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. LAWLER. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken on the motion to adjourn; and there were—ayes 21, noes 42.

Mr. CHEADLE. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The question was taken, and 16 members (more than one-fifth of the last vote) voted in favor thereof.

Several MEMBERS. Count the other side.

The question was again taken, and the Chair announced the vote as—ayes 16, noes 49.

Mr. ROGERS. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROGERS. Can we have tellers on this question of ordering the yeas and nays?

The CHAIRMAN. Tellers can be demanded.

Mr. ROGERS. I demand tellers.

The question was taken and tellers were refused; only 19 members voting in favor thereof.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On the question of ordering the yeas and nays the ayes are 16 and noes are 49. The ayes have it, being more than one-fifth of the last vote, and the yeas and nays are ordered.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Speaker, it will take from now until 10 o'clock to call the roll, and I therefore move to reconsider the vote by which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to—ayes 45, noes 17.

Mr. BURROWS. Now, Mr. Speaker, it is perfectly apparent that nothing will be done this evening, and I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. WISE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WISE. Seventeen members have a right to order the yeas and nays, and they have done it, and upon the motion to reconsider there still appears a sufficient vote in the negative to call the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On the motion to reconsider the vote by which the yeas and nays were ordered, a motion which requires only a majority vote, the yeas were 55 and the nays were 17.

Mr. WISE. It only makes it necessary for us to call the yeas and nays again. [Laughter.]

Mr. GROSVENOR. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. What is the pending question?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On the question of reconsidering the vote by which the yeas and nays were ordered the ayes are 45 and the noes are 17; the ayes have it, and the action by which the House ordered the yeas and nays is reconsidered. The question now recurs upon ordering the yeas and nays.

The question was taken, and the yeas and nays were refused, only 10 members voting in favor thereof.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, as one member of the Committee on War Claims has been permitted to have a bill passed to-night, I ask unanimous consent that the remaining three or four members of that committee who are present be each allowed to call up one bill for consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE], the chairman of the Committee on War Claims, asks unanimous consent that the three remaining members of that committee who are present be each allowed to call up a bill for consideration. Is there objection?

Mr. HOVEY. There is. [Laughter.]

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and the House accordingly (at 9 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.) adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills of the following titles were introduced and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. J. A. ANDERSON: A bill (H. R. 10987) to restore the name of Marshall Clark to the pension-roll—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HATCH: A bill (H. R. 10988) granting a pension to Thomas S. Richey, a private in the Black Hawk war—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HAYES: A bill (H. R. 10989) granting a pension to Patrick O'Keefe—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HERMANN: A bill (H. R. 10990) for the relief of A. R. Burbank—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HOWARD: A bill (H. R. 10991) granting a pension to David M. Dryden—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10992) for the relief of George M. Scifres, administrator of Joseph M. Scifres—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10993) for the relief of William L. Bayott—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LONG: A bill (H. R. 10994) for the erection of a monument to Miles Standish—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. RYAN: A bill (H. R. 10995) to grant a pension to John W. Sidwell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STONE, of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 10996) for the relief Luke Stinnitt—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Change in the reference of a bill improperly referred was made in the following case, namely:

A bill (H. R. 1167) for the relief of J. D. Ash—from the Committee on Invalid Pensions to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. J. M. ALLEN: Petition of Cynthia S. Robinson and of Mary K. McNairy, administratrix of B. Y. McNairy, of Mississippi, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. C. L. ANDERSON: Petition of sundry citizens of the Fifth district of Mississippi, for prohibition in the District of Columbia—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. BAYNE: Petition of R. P. Hunter, M. D., and other citizens of the Twenty-fifth district of Pennsylvania—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. BROWER: Petition of citizens of Caswell County, North Carolina, for certain amendments to the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. DALZELL: Petition of Smoky City, Americus, Hazel Glen, Iron City, and Bainbridge Councils, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, in favor of Senate bill 553, to regulate and restrict immigration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. DORSEY: Petition of citizens of Brown County, Nebraska, for relief from abuses under the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. FRENCH: Petition of Charles H. S. Davis and others, of New Haven County, Connecticut, to amend the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. GAY: Petition of citizens of St. Mary and Assumption, La., for amendments to the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. GEST: Petition of A. H. Clarke and 38 others, citizens of the Eleventh district of Illinois, for prohibition in the District of Columbia—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. D. B. HENDERSON: Petition of Thomas Simons and other citizens of the Third district of Iowa, for prohibition in the District of Columbia—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. HOLMAN: Petition of Hiram W. Williamson and 25 others, citizens of Indiana, for a soldiers' home near Indianapolis, Ind.—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HOVEY: Petition of John D. Kidd and 50 other veterans, for the establishment of a soldiers' home in the State of Indiana—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LAGAN: Petition of John W. Youman, for relief—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LATHAM: Petition of Elisha Colbert, for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LONG: Petition of the Standish Monument Association, of Duxbury, Mass., for aid in erecting a monument to Miles Standish—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. PHELAN: Petition of W. E. Hall, of Fayette County, Tennessee, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ROWLAND (by request): Petition of Martha M. Smith, of Ansonville, North Carolina, for relief—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. RYAN: Petition of citizens of Osage County, Kansas, for amendments to the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. SHIVELY: Petition of South Bend (Ind.) Typographical Union No. 128, in favor of the Chace copyright bill—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. STONE, of Missouri: Petition of citizens of Rockville, of Butler, of Ride Hill, and of Lamar, Mo., for repeal of duty on dentists' supplies—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TILLMAN (by request): Petition of Susan A. Bowers, for reference of her claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WASHINGTON: Petition of Patrick Dannaher, of Humphreys County, Tennessee, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, July 26, 1888.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

JOHN F. COOK.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the president of the board of commissioners of the District of Columbia, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 23d instant, certain information in relation to the balance alleged to be due to John F. Cook as collector of taxes for the District for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1888; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

PETITION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a petition of citizens of New York County, New York, praying for certain amendments to the interstate-commerce law; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. FRYE, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5067) establishing additional aids to navigation at the mouth of the Mississippi River, reported it with an amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3349) establishing additional aids to navigation at the mouth of the Mississippi River, reported it adversely, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment:

A bill (H. R. 5670) for the construction of a revenue-cutter for New Berne, N. C., to replace the revenue-cutter Stevens; and

A bill (H. R. 8783) to authorize the Kentucky Rock Gas Company to lay conduit pipes across the Ohio and Salt Rivers.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was recommitted the bill (H. R. 8074) to provide for allotments of land in severalty to United Peorias and Miamies in Indian Territory, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7547) granting the right of way to the Yankton and Missouri River Railway through the Yankton reservation in Dakota, reported it with amendments.

Mr. STEWART, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1508) for the relief of John Williams, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 649) for the relief of A. C. Bradford, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9298) releasing the estate of Asher R. Eddy, late lieutenant-colonel and quartermaster-general United States Army, deceased, and George W. Gibbs and R. L. Ogden, sureties on his official bond, reported it without amendment.

Mr. HOAR, from the Committee on the Library, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5700) to facilitate the transportation of life-saving and light-house supplies at Hog Island, Virginia, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. QUAY, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 109) to refund to Dr. F. O. Saint Clair $97.80, duties on a monument to the memory of Francis J. Townshend, late of the United States Navy, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3074) for the relief of Nicholas J. Bigley, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 3269) granting a pension to Theresia Fichter;

A bill (S. 3087) granting a pension to Mary A. Pfeiffer;

A bill (S. 3085) restoring to the pension-roll the name of James Monohan, minor child of Richard Monohan, deceased;

A bill (S. 3083) restoring to the pension-roll the name of Florian Lischewsky; and

A bill (S. 3086) granting a pension to Victor, Gertrude, Margaret, and Helen, minor children of Lieut. George R. McGuire.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3233) for the relief of James H. Hamilton, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs; which was agreed to.

Mr. WALTHALL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 5156) for the relief of Andrew R. G. Smith; and

A bill (H. R. 988) for the relief of Joseph R. White.

Mr. HAMPTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 100) providing for the adjustment of the amount due to the State of South Carolina for the rent of the Citadel Academy, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. HAWLEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8873) in relation to bonds of disbursing or other officers and to monthly payments of the Army, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3055) for the relief of A. F. St. Sure Lindefelt, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2710) for the relief of Mathew H. Fulton, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10604) to authorize the Winona and Southwestern Railway Company to build a bridge across the Mississippi River at Winona, Minn., reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE, from the Committee on Fisheries, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report back adversely the joint resolution (S. R. 92) authorizing and directing the Secretary of War to loan tents to the Northwest Soldiers and Sailors' Association of Iowa for reunion purposes. I desire to state, in reporting adversely the joint resolution, that the adverse report is based upon the statement of the War Department that there are no tents which can be issued for such purposes. I make the statement because of the numerous demands of this character.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the report will be agreed to, and the joint resolution postponed indefinitely.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8752) providing for the establishment of an additional life-saving station on Nantucket Island, Massachusetts, reported it with an amendment.

BILL INTRODUCED.

Mr. QUAY introduced a bill (S. 3382) for the removal of the charge of desertion from the military record of Henry H. Schrawder; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

EASTERN OREGON AND WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Mr. MITCHELL submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, directed to transmit to the Senate the reports that have been prepared under the direction of the Chief Signal Officer of the Army, upon the climate of Oregon, and upon the climatic and other conditions of the agricultural districts of Eastern Oregon and Washington Territory, together with such tables and other matters as relate thereto, with such additions, corrections, and alterations as may be deemed advisable by the Chief Signal Officer.

CONDITION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. HALE submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Select Committee to Investigate the Operations of the Civil Service be authorized to continue during the recess of Congress the investigations directed by the resolution of this body of March 13, 1888, with all the powers and privileges conferred by said resolution.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 5690) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell block of land 108 in the city of Houston, Tex.;

A bill (H. R. 6217) to relinquish the interest of the United States in certain lands in Kansas;

A bill (H. R. 7410) for the relief of settlers upon old Camp Sheridan military reservation;

A bill (H. R. 8310) to provide for the disposal of the Fort Wallace military reservation in Kansas;

A bill (H. R. 8368) to forfeit the lands granted to the Hastings and Dakota Railway Company, in the State of Minnesota, and for the relief of settlers upon the same and certain purchasers thereof;

A bill (H. R. 8740) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to sell to "The Methodist College Association of Southwestern Kansas" certain lands in Kansas;

A bill (H. R. 9040) to confirm the homestead entry of Hugh Foster;

A bill (H. R. 9056) to protect purchasers of lands lying in the vicinity of Denver, Colo., heretofore withdrawn by the executive department of the Government as lying within the limits of certain railroad grants, and afterward held to lie without such limits;

A bill (H. R. 9234) for the relief of William Gaffer and his legal representatives and assigns;

A bill (H. R. 9423) to restore to the public domain and to regulate the sale and disposition of certain lands east of the Mississippi River, in the State of Louisiana;

A bill (H. R. 10346) providing for the erection of fire-escapes in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 14) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to certify lands to the State of Kansas for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 190) for the relief of W. H. Tibbits;

A bill (S. 856) to provide for the holding of the district court of the United States at Salina, Kans.;

A bill (S. 2009) to restore the homestead right of M. F. Vance, of Akron, Colo.; and

A bill (S. 2316) restoring the right of pre-emption to Jesse A. Corn.

The message further announced that the House had receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10347) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near the city of Plattsmouth, Nebr., and for other purposes, and agreed to the same.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 3361) to provide for holding terms of the circuit and district courts of the United States for the district of Kentucky at Owensborough, in said district, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 6602) for the relief of James Obrion.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1612) to provide for holding terms of the United States district and circuit courts in the State of Nebraska, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the bill and amendment, and had appointed Mr. ROGERS, Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina, and Mr. FULLER, managers at the conference on its part.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 558) for the relief of certain settlers upon school lands of Washington Territory;

A bill (S. 734) granting a pension to James Hale;

A bill (S. 888) granting a pension to Mercy A. Cutts;

A bill (S. 1051) to amend the act giving the approval and sanction of Congress to the route and termini of the Anacostia and Potomac River Railroad in the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 1099) for the relief of the Church of the Ascension, in the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 1612) to provide for the closing of parts of two alleys in square 132, in the city of Washington, D. C., and for the relief of Charles Early and Corbin Warwick;

A bill (S. 1650) for the relief of Maj. Gen. W. W. Averell;

A bill (S. 1709) to provide for the issue of patents to certain persons for donation claims under the act approved September 27, 1850, commonly known as the donation law;

A bill (S. 1727) to grant to the trustees of the German Lutheran Trinity Congregation of Washington, D. C., the right to sell a portion of their cemetery lands;

A bill (S. 1870) granting the use of certain lands in Pierce County, Washington Territory, to the city of Tacoma for the purposes of a public park;

A bill (S. 2033) granting a pension to Joseph Wirth;

A bill (S. 2307) to correct the records of the District of Columbia relative to certain real estate therein;

A bill (S. 2493) to perfect the quarantine service of the United States;

A bill (S. 2845) granting to the corporate authorities of the city of Tuscaloosa, in the State of Alabama, all the right, title, and interest of the United States to fractional sections 22 and 15, lying south of the Black Warrior River, in township 21 and range 10 west;

A bill (S. 3303) amendatory of "An act relating to postal crimes, and amendatory of the statutes therein mentioned," approved June 18, 1888;

A bill (S. 3365) for the erection of a public building in the city of Chicago, Ill., to be used as an appraisers' warehouse and other public purposes;

A bill (H. R. 409) for the relief of Thomas W. Lord;

A bill (H. R. 3523) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, and to establish it as a post-road;

A bill (H. R. 5095) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Ocmulgee River, in the State of Georgia;

A bill (H. R. 7232) for the relief of C. L. Wilson;

A bill (H. R. 7452) for the relief of the Southern Illinois Normal University;

A bill (H. R. 7899) authorizing the construction of a bridge over the Tennessee River at or near Lamb's Ferry, Alabama;

A bill (H. R. 8353) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Hillsborough River at a point in the town of New Smyrna, in the county of Volusia and State of Florida;

A bill (H. R. 9079) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Tennessee River at or near Knoxville, Tenn.;

A bill (H. R. 9086) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Coosa River, or bridges across the Oostenaula and Etowah Rivers, at or near Rome, Ga.;

A bill (H. R. 9771) for the erection of a public building at Ottumwa, Iowa; and

A bill (H. R. 10053) making May 30 a holiday in the District of Columbia.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution offered by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM] yesterday was laid over under objection by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN]. It is properly in order, but as the Senator from Illinois is not present, the Chair will allow it to retain its place on the table for consideration to-morrow morning, if there be no objection.

Mr. CULLOM entered the Chamber.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Illinois is now here.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Illinois desire action on the resolution offered by him yesterday?

Mr. CULLOM. I prefer that it should lie over. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] expressed a desire to offer an amendment. Let the resolution lie on the table until to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the resolution will lie on the table, to be laid before the Senate to-morrow.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. ALLISON. I move to proceed to the consideration of the Army appropriation bill.

Mr. TELLER. I give notice that to-morrow morning I shall endeavor to call up the bill (S. 1030) for the relief of William McGarrahan immediately after the close of the routine business.

Mr. STEWART. I shall antagonize that with the Chinese bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10234) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for other purposes.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I know, of course, that the consideration of the appropriation bill is important, but I wanted to ask the Senator from Iowa if he would object to proceeding with the consideration of bills on the Calendar not objected to, under Rule VIII, until 2 o'clock.

Mr. ALLISON. I regret to say that I can not do that, for the reason that it is very important that the Army appropriation bill should be passed, if possible, to-day, and at the earliest moment in the day, in order that it may go back to the House of Representatives and be disposed of before the 30th of the month.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I hope——

Mr. HARRIS. I suggest to my friend from Arkansas, in view of the statement made by the Senator from Iowa, that he raise no question this morning about the Calendar, but that we go on with the consideration of the Army bill now and get through with that. I shall join very cheerfully with the Senator from Arkansas in scrambling for the Calendar morning after morning afterwards.

Mr. STEWART. When the Army bill is closed I want to follow it with the Chinese bill.

Mr. FRYE. I gave notice yesterday that immediately after the morning business to-day I should move to proceed to the consideration of executive business with open doors, of course meaning the fisheries treaty. I am compelled to yield to the Army appropriation bill, but I desire to renew the notice, and I shall antagonize everything else for the consideration of that treaty, regarding it as exceedingly important that it shall be pressed to final action.

Mr. CALL. I hope the Senator from Iowa will not press the motion to proceed to the consideration of the Army bill. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. WILSON] has given notice for a week or two weeks past of his desire to address the Senate in open executive session upon the proposed treaty between Great Britain and the United States. He is here ready with his speech, and has been for several days. I think that courtesy to him requires that he should be allowed to proceed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 24th instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 886) granting a pension to Sarah F. Jones;

An act (S. 111) granting a pension to Mary J. Davis;

An act (S. 1142) granting a pension to Keziah E. Strong;

An act (S. 1288) granting a pension to John Child;

An act (S. 1495) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary McGee;

An act (S. 2073) granting a pension to Margaret Blades;

An act (S. 2890) granting a pension to Fannie A. Kimball;

An act (S. 2089) for the relief of Mrs. Elizabeth White;

An act (S. 335) granting an increase of pension to C. R. Thomas;

An act (S. 2012) granting an increase of pension to Marcus D. Raymond;

An act (S. 1124) to increase the pension of John W. January;

An act (S. 1009) granting an increase of pension to Sallie R. Alexander, widow of Lieut. Col. Thomas L. Alexander, United States Army; and

An act (S. 3215) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Arkansas River at or near Cumming's Landing, Lincoln County, Arkansas.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10234) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs upon agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] to add additional sections, which has been read at length. Is the Senate ready for the question?

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. One amendment, the Chair is informed, was passed over in the consideration of the bill.

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, I desire to have that considered now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 21, after line 493, the Committee on Appropriations report to insert:

For the manufacture, or purchase, and test of cannon and carriages, including two 10-inch carriages maneuvered by power, one of which shall be a disappearing carriage, and also including those for the field and siege services; for the alteration of carriages on hand to adapt them to improved service guns; for projectiles, powders, fuzes, and implements, their trial and proof; for experiments in the means of protecting torpedo lines; for compensation of draughtsmen while employed in the Army Ordnance Bureau on ordnance construction, and for the necessary expenses of ordnance officers while temporarily employed at the proving ground and absent from their proper stations, at the rate of $2.50 per diem while so employed, $600,000: Provided, That all purchases of materials under this provision shall be of American manufacture.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. An amendment was offered to the amendment by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 499, after the word "projectiles," it is moved to insert:

And increased facilities for their manufacture.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

Mr. HAWLEY. I call the attention of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to another matter. I conferred with the chairman of the committee upon a certain amendment, and I propose it now. In line 507, after the words "six hundred thousand dollars," I move to strike out the remainder of the paragraph and insert:

Not more than $10,000 of which shall be expended for providing increased facilities for the manufacture of projectiles: Provided, That all material purchased under this section, excepting samples, shall be of American manufacture.

The committee proposed that all the material shall be of American manufacture, but the Department desire to purchase certain samples abroad representing different styles of shot and different styles of manufacture.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not object to either of those amendments, but they should be put in separately. The last amendment should come in in the first proviso, and then the first amendment suggested by the Senator from Connecticut should read: "Provided further, That of the above sum," etc.

Mr. HAWLEY. I will change it. I propose to leave the paragraph as it stands, and at the end of the proviso to insert, after the words "under this provision," the two words "excepting samples."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 509, after the word "provision," insert the words "excepting samples;" so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That all purchases of materials under this provision, excepting samples, shall be of American manufacture.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAWLEY. In accordance with the suggestion of the Senator from Iowa, I move the proviso, that not more than $10,000 of the aforesaid appropriation be expended for providing increased facilities for the manufacture of projectiles.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator send his amendment in writing to the desk?

Mr. ALLISON. I have an amendment covering the same point which I think will be satisfactory to the Senator from Connecticut.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa to the amendment of the committee will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add to the amendment the following additional proviso:

Provided further, That of the above sum $10,000 may be used for increasing facilities for the manufacture of projectiles.

Mr. HAWLEY. It is the same thing.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. All the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations have been acted upon, and the bill is still open to amendment as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BERRY. I wish to reserve the amendment adopted this morning, offered by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], proposing to appropriate $6,000,000 for ordnance.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerks will note the reservation.

Mr. CALL. After line 446, I move to add:

For repairs to the works on old Fort Barrancas, Pensacola Bay, Florida, $1,000, or so much thereof as shall be necessary.

I will state that I offered this amendment and had it referred to the Committee on Appropriations. It is founded upon a letter from the commanding officer at Fort Pickens, stating the fact that this was an old Spanish battery and fortification which is now used, but it is very desirable that it should be preserved from the encroachment of time as a memento of the past. It is a very old fortification in Pensacola Bay, which is now used in connection with the fort there. I offer the amendment in deference to the wishes of the commanding officer there, who I understand to be a man of merit and reliable in his statements. This old fortification is an interesting relic of the times when the Spanish fleet found refuge with their rich cargoes of silver, bound for old Spain, in this Bay of Pensacola and under the guns of this old Barrancas battery from the bold English buccaneers of the Gulf of Mexico and the Spanish Main. It was a main defense against the sea approach when the fort was surrendered to General Jackson on his first invasion of the Spanish provinces of the Floridas.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I desire to reserve for a separate vote the amendments of the committee on page 18, relating to the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerks will note the reservation.

Mr. GORMAN. I wish to reserve for a separate vote the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] proposing to add additional sections to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That has already been reserved. If there be no further amendments to the bill as in Committee of the Whole, it will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments, except the two reservations, will be considered as concurred in in gross, if there be no objection. The amendments are concurred in. The first reserved amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 18, after the word "diseases," in line 412, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, inserted the words:

And the supply of the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark.

And in line 416 increased the limit of the appropriations for payment of the civilian employés of the Medical Department from $38,000 to $43,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the amendment which has just been read.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. It seems to me that if the committee amendment should be adopted as reported very great injustice will be done to the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs. They have heretofore had for the expenses of that hospital about $10,000 a year. The effect of the two amendments proposed in this paragraph will be to reduce the aggregate appropriations for civil employés for hospitals of this class from $48,000 to $43,000. The appropriation as made by the House of Representatives was to give $38,000 to all the other hospitals, and $10,000, as I understand, to the hospital at Hot Springs.

The Senate Committee on Appropriations propose to strike out $38,000 as applicable to the other hospitals and insert $43,000, making an addition of $5,000 to the House appropriation, which is intended to cover the hospital at Hot Springs in connection with the other hospitals. If the same allowance that has been heretofore given to the other hospitals shall be continued under this bill, then the entire reduction of $5,000 in the aggregate appropriation will fall on the Hot Springs hospital, which will cut down the appropriations heretofore made and annually expended in the administration of that hospital one-half.

I hope that this will not be done, and I hope that the committee will agree to insert $48,000 instead of $43,000 in line 416.

Mr. ALLISON. I think the amendment inserted by the committee will be sufficient to provide for the proper civilian force at the Army and Naval Hospital at Hot Springs. Under the appropriation act last year the general appropriation was $36,000. That sum was increased in the House this year to $38,000, which was intended to include the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs. We increased the sum to $5,000, which would allow $7,000 for that purpose. I suggest to the Senator from Arkansas that he add $3,000 more to the appropriation, instead of the sum proposed by him, and if so I will accept it.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. Making it $46,000?

Mr. ALLISON. Making it $46,000.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I will agree to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 416, before the word "thousand," it is proposed to strike out "forty-three" and insert "forty-six;" so as to read:

And not over $46,000 of the money appropriated by this paragraph shall be applied to the payment of civilian employés of the Medical Department.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was concurred in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The second reserved amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, inserted as new sections to the bill:

SEC. 3. For the erection, purchase, or manufacture of the necessary buildings and other structures, machinery, tools, and fixtures for an army gun factory for finishing and assembling heavy ordnance, to be erected at the Watervliet arsenal, West Troy, N. Y., in accordance with the recommendation of the Gun Foundry Board of February 16, 1884, $750,000.

SEC. 4. For the purchase of rough-finished, oil-tempered, and annealed steel for high-power coast-defense guns of 8, 10, and 12 inch caliber, in quality and dimensions conforming to specifications, subject to inspection at each stage of the manufacture, and including all the parts of each caliber, $5,000,000: Provided, That no money shall be expended except for steel accepted and delivered.

SEC. 5. The material for the guns provided for in section 4 shall be purchased in accordance with section 3709, Revised Statutes, for which purpose the Secretary of War is authorized to make contracts with responsible steel manufacturers, after proper advertisement, continuing not less than thirty days in the newspapers most likely to reach the said manufacturers: Provided, That each bidder with whom such contracts shall be made shall agree to erect in the United States a suitable plant, including the best modern appliances, capable of making all the steel required, and of finishing it in accordance with the contracts, and shall further agree to deliver yearly a specified quantity of each caliber, the time of the delivery of the steel for the smaller calibers of heavy guns to commence at the expiration of not more than eighteen months, and that for the largest calibers specified in the advertisement, at the expiration of not more than three years from the date of the acceptance of the contracts; and that all the material for said guns shall be manufactured in the United States.

SEC. 6. For the purchase of submarine mines, for needful casemates, cable galleries, and appliances to operate submarine mines; for continuing torpedo experiments and for practical instruction of engineer troops in the details of torpedo service, $500,000.

SEC. 7. For the purchase of submarine controllable torpedoes or torpedoes and torpedo-boats controllable from shore and adapted to coast defense, $100,000.

SEC. 8. The appropriations provided for in sections 3, 4, 6, and 7 shall be available until expended.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, I was not present a few days ago when the discussion occurred between the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]. I do not fully understand what reason is given why this appropriation of $6,000,000, or something more, for heavy ordnance should be attached to this general appropriation bill.

It is admitted that the United States of America is at peace with all the world. It has been asserted again and again by Senators on the other side of the Chamber that there was no probability and no prospect of war with any nation whatever. If that be true, I can not understand why appropriation after appropriation for war material comes here from day to day, and why we are urged to place the provisions on appropriation bills and to pass them otherwise.

Here is $6,000,000 for ordnance to be attached to the Army appropriation bill. Several million dollars have been added to the naval appropriation bill for the purpose of building cruisers. A bill is pending proposing to appropriate $126,000,000 to build fortifications throughout the United States.

If there is any well-grounded apprehension of war with England or any other nation, then it is well that these preparations should be made; but I agree with the Senator from Missouri when he says that in time of profound peace the people of this nation are opposed to standing armies. They are opposed to heavy appropriations for war material or to making elaborate preparations unless there be some reason given to show that there is probability of war somewhere. If that be true, then I have nothing more to say.

The Senators on the other side who have discussed the treaty in regard to the fisheries question have said that notwithstanding the predetermination to reject it, notwithstanding the refusal upon their part to allow it to be amended, which is practically an instruction to the President and Secretary of State that no further negotiation will be allowed, notwithstanding all these facts, there is not a probability of this complication bringing on war with England. If there is none, then I should like to ask why all this preparation is made. If there is a probability let it be known so that Senators can vote intelligently upon the matter.

If danger is to come to this country, if there is to be a war with England or any other nation, I apprehend that the people of the United States in every section of the country will not only be willing to vote all the arms and money that may be necessary, but that the people from every section of the Union will rally to the support of the Government.

Mr. President, I say that in the section of country from which I come the people would be as quick to respond to the call for soldiers as they would in any part of the Union, notwithstanding the fact that it was asserted upon the floor of the Senate by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] that there is a conspiracy between the Democrats of the South and the manufacturers of England to strike down American wages and American labor. This charge is grossly unjust to the Democrats of the South.

The people of the South have no cause to love England. They do not, however, want any war. I apprehend that there are few men, if any, in the United States who actually participated in the last war who desire to see another war; yet if war be necessary they will be as true to their country and their flag under which they are now living as the people of any part of the nation.

As I said before, the people in the Southern part of this Government have no particular cause to sympathize with England, and the attempt for political purposes to make such an impression is an unjust charge against American citizens. If there was no other cause, her double-dealing during the war, holding out hopes of material aid, which hopes were never realized, the arrogant and dictatorial style always assumed in her conduct with the nations of the earth, her inhumanity to the people of the East, but above all her continued refusal to do justice to the people of Ireland by granting them home rule, her conduct in this respect bearing a striking resemblance to that of the Republican party in the reconstruction of the South, would have destroyed any sympathy that might be supposed to exist in the South for English methods.

While, as I said, we would deprecate war, while we do not want war, yet, Mr. President, if war should come, if it accomplished no other purpose, I believe that it might tend to more closely unite the different sections of this Union. I believe I know what would be the conduct of the Southern people in such a war. I have that confidence in their honor, in their patriotism, in their loyalty to duty, and in their courage to believe that when that war closed the Senator from Massachusetts would regret that he ever said upon this floor that there existed a conspiracy between the Democrats of the South and the people of any other nation.

I repeat, Mr. President, that if there is any well-grounded apprehension of such a war I am ready to vote for this bill; I am ready to vote for the $126,000,000; I am ready to vote all the money that may be demanded for the Navy of the United States. But if there is no danger, as it is asserted there is none, I am opposed to these heavy appropriations in time of peace when there is no probability that they will be needed, and when it is admitted that even the guns that are now proposed to be bought may be utterly useless within a few years.

But, Mr. President, I believe that there is no probability of war, and therefore no necessity for these large appropriations. I think that the object and purpose of these appropriations has a different meaning. I believe that upon the part of some, at least, the object and purpose is to get rid of the surplus now in the Treasury of the United States, almost regardless of what the appropriation may be asked for. I believe the constant effort to force these enormous appropriations, not only for naval vessels, ordnance, and fortifications, but for less worthy purposes, is to prevent a reduction of taxation. There has been reported from the Committee on Finance an amendment to another appropriation bill now pending, which proposes to dispose of $20,000,000 more of the surplus by refunding to the States the direct taxes. These things taken together, it seems to me, show that the object and purpose is to give an excuse for withholding a reduction of taxes, which the people are demanding throughout the United States.

While I regret to see the Secretary of the Treasury compelled to pay $127 for a $100 bond, yet this is not so objectionable as it is to waste the people's money in reckless, unconstitutional, and useless appropriations. The appropriations for ordnance and for fortifications proposed by these bills I believe to be extravagant and to a large extent useless. The proposed appropriation to refund to the States the direct taxes I believe to be unconstitutional and wholly unjustifiable, and unless I can be assured that there is some reason for it other than what has been stated in the RECORD I can not vote for the amendment.

I will not vote for any of these heavy appropriations not needed for the public service and which are continually pressed for the sole purpose of cutting down this surplus in order that the Republican party may have an excuse for not reducing the public taxes. Let us pass measures to stop this enormous flow of the people's money into the Treasury rather than to be continually seeking for objects upon which we can expend it.

For these reasons I asked to reserve the amendment, and for the same reason I shall ask for the yeas and nays on the adoption of the amendment, because I desire to record my vote against it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the Senate ready for the question on the amendment?

Mr. BERRY. I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understood the Senator to say on the passage of the bill.

Mr. BERRY. I did not so intend if I said so.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, when the amendment which is now under consideration was proposed I stated all that I desired to say upon the policy of making appropriations for the manufacture of large guns confined alone to the Government armories.

I discussed the matter very fully at the time, and so far as I was able to do showed that the interest of the Government was in this, as in the construction of a navy, to give out by private contract the greater portion of this work and to maintain at least one great ordnance foundry, so that the Government might not be imposed upon by contractors. I did not then nor do I now believe that the Army bill is the proper place for the consideration of this question.

But if it is to be considered, if large appropriations are to be made, then I submit that we ought to go into it thoroughly and appropriate a sufficient amount to enable the mechanics and the manufacturers outside of the Government shops to come forward and compete, test all the various inventions that have been made, and give every inventor an opportunity to present completed guns to be tested by the War Department.

I know it can not very well be considered now, but still, sir, if we are to go on with it, I shall propose as an amendment the measure I hold in my hand, which is practically, I may say, the bill that has been considered by members of the Congress, but not by any committee of this body. The amount appropriated by the amendment is large, but it is to be expended in the way I have indicated. The amount that is embraced in the amendment that I propose is $38,000,000, to be expended as follows:

1888–'89	$1,120,000
1889–'90	1,037,500
1890–'91	723,000
1891–'92	978,000
1892–'93	1,183,000
1893–'94	1,195,000
1894–'95	2,025,000
1895–96	3,618,500
1896–'97	4,691,500
1897–'98	4,889,000
1898–'99	5,129,500
1899–1900	5,546,500
1900–'01	4,054,000
1901–'02	2,146,000
Making an aggregate of	38,336,500

I will say that if the Book of Estimates is referred to it will show, I think, that $130,000,000 or $140,000,000 are estimated, so that I believe this comes within the rule. I therefore offer the following amendment to the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment will be read.

Mr. HAWLEY. May I ask the Senator if that amendment is printed in form?

Mr. GORMAN. The only printed copy is the one I have.

The CHIEF CLERK. The proposed amendment is to insert in lieu of the pending amendment the following new sections:

SEC. 1. That the sums of money herein provided for be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, namely:

For the protection, preservation, and repair of fortifications and other works of defense, for the construction of sea-walls, and for earth embankments, $217,000.

For torpedoes for harbor defense; the purchase of submarine mines and necessary appliances to operate them; for needful casemates, cable-galleries, and appliances to render it possible to operate submarine mines; for continuing torpedo experiments, and for practical instruction of engineer troops in detail of the service, $100,000.

SEC. 2. For the procurement of powders, projectiles, fuzes, implements, and materials for the service of heavy guns; for the alteration of sea-coast carriages, for the necessary expenses of ordnance officers while temporarily employed at the proving-ground, and absent from their proper stations, at the rate of $2.50 per day; for the compensation of draughtsmen on gun-construction while employed in the Ordnance Bureau; for the manufacture of breech-loading steel field guns; carriages, and equipments for the service of batteries of field artillery; and to procure and test two breech-loading field guns of three and two-tenths inch bore, of aluminum bronze, $300,000, from which the said aluminum bronze field guns shall be made and tested.

SEC. 3. To complete the guns now under fabrication by the Ordnance Department, and for testing the same, as follows; One 10-inch breech-loading steel gun, wire-wrapped, with longitudinal bars on Woodbridge plan, $20,000: for testing the same, $25,900; one 10-inch breech-loading, steel-hooped gun, $7,500; for testing the same, $25,000; one 10-inch breech-loading rifle, cast-iron, wire-wrapped, $1,500; for testing the same, $12,000; one 8-inch breech-loading steel-hooped gun, $5,000; for testing the same, $12,000; for testing one 12-inch breech-loading rifle, cast-iron, steel-tubed, $20,000; for testing one 12-inch breech-loading rifle, cast-iron, hooped and tubed with steel on the French system, $20,000; for testing one 10-inch breech-loading mortar, cast-iron, hooped with steel, $10,000; in all $158,000.

SEC. 4. For experiments in guns and projectiles for high explosives, including the purchase of guns, projectiles, and targets for such tests as the Board on Ordnance hereinafter authorized shall direct, $100,000.

SEC. 5. That the President of the United States shall appoint a Board on Ordnance, to consist of the Secretaries of War and Navy, the general commanding or the senior major-general of the Army, as he may determine, one officer of engineers from the Army, and three civilians, said engineer officer and the civilians to be appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, which board shall make, execute, and supervise contracts and authorize payments under this act, as follows: The said engineer officer shall be president, and one of the civilians secretary of the board. The three civilians shall all be engineers of experience and standing, and one of them at least shall be experienced in the quality and working of steel. The contracts made under the following sections of this act, except as herein otherwise directed, shall be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder, after proper advertisement, and under such conditions and specifications as the said board may determine; they shall be signed by the president of the board, or by such officer or officers as the majority of the board shall direct; and the board shall certify that prices under which contracts are awarded are reasonable and just. The board shall determine, except as otherwise directed, the order and time of delivery of the guns, mortars, and appliances, and all other purchases, under such checks and rules as it may determine, and have general supervision of all tests necessary to carry out the following provisions of this act. The board is further authorized to examine inventions and designs of heavy ordnance, carriages, projectiles, torpedoes, and other defensive appliances which may be submitted to it. No person shall be eligible as a member of this board who has any pecuniary interest, either directly or indirectly, in the material, manufacture, or inventions to be employed in the construction or operation of the defenses herein provided for.

That the compensation of the civilian members of the board shall be $7,000 each per annum and all necessary expenses. For the payment of such services, and the contingent and necessary expenses of the board, $40,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated.

SEC. 6. For the construction of fifty cast-iron 12-inch rifle service mortars, to weigh about 31,000 pounds each, of which at least one-half shall be breech-loaders, and of the other half such proportion shall be breech-loaders as the said Board on Ordnance shall determine, at a price to be fixed by the said board, and not exceeding $7,500 each if breech-loading, and not exceeding $6,000 each if they are muzzle-loading; and to obtain these mortars the said board shall make a contract with a suitable party or parties therefor. These mortars, except the breech apparatus, shall be of cast-iron of the same brand and similar to that used in the 12-inch mortar and 12-inch gun tested at Sandy Hook, but no more than one of each kind, either muzzle-loading or breech-loading, shall be procured until the mortar or mortars so procured has or have been tested by or under the direction of the said board, by firing from each two hundred rounds of projectiles of an average weight of about, and not less than, 610 pounds, with an average muzzle velocity of 1,000 feet per second; and the trial mortars, either breech or muzzle loading, shall be equal in accuracy of fire to the 12-inch mortars, either breech or muzzle loading, respectively, already tested at Sandy Hook.

That should either of these test mortars fail to reach this degree of endurance and accuracy, it shall not be paid for and no more shall be received; but should they, or either of them, reach the degree of endurance and accuracy specified, the contract shall be completed for the number specified in addition to the two trial mortars; and they shall be delivered at such average rate of delivery as will deliver them all within two years of the date or dates of the final contract therefor; and the said board shall contract for a suitable carriage for each of these mortars so to be delivered, and for not more than twenty projectiles for each. These projectiles shall be of cast-iron and of the standard kind of projectiles for such mortars, of a weight of about 610 pounds each, if solid shot, or such as will be about 610 pounds when loaded if they are shells. Such proportion of these projectiles shall have chilled fronts as the board shall determine, the price not to exceed 10 cents per pound. The model of these mortars may be such as is satisfactory to the board and the contrators; and the contract for the projectiles and the carriage for these mortars shall be made with the party who furnishes the mortars, if the board can make satisfactory contract therefor.

That none of the mortars herein provided for except those for trial shall be received until they have been fired not less than three nor more than five times with the standard test charge, as the proof of these mortars, which proof charges they must endure without injury. Any and all of these service mortars shall be paid for at the time of their delivery.

That the said board shall contract for the purchase of and make test of the trial mortars, and make proof tests of the service mortars if they shall be purchased, and may purchase carriages and projectiles therefor, and provide transportation for the said mortars, carriages, and projectiles, at a total cost of not exceeding $360,000.

SEC. 7. For the procurement of service and experimental seacoast carriages, and testing the same, at a cost not exceeding $150,000.

SEC. 8. For the manufacture of twenty 12-inch cast-iron breech-loading rifle-guns, about 33 calibers length of bore, and weight not less than 180,000 pounds each, all to be delivered at the rate of four per year from the date of the contract therefor, and at a price therefor not exceeding $27,000 each.

The said board may purchase carriages suitable for the foregoing cast-iron rifle-guns, and such projectiles as the said board may order for said guns, including the proving and transportation of the guns, at a total cost not exceeding $480,000.

That each of said cast-iron rifle-guns, before it is accepted, shall be tested with not less than five nor more than ten rounds with the service charge of powder and projectiles, which shall give 1,750 feet velocity per second to an 800-pound projectile; and such other test shall be applied as may be ordered by the said board, or thought necessary to enable it to determine that such guns are equal in all respects to the 12-inch cast-iron rifle made by the South Boston Iron Works and tested at Sandy Hook. They shall be made of similar iron and the same brand of iron as was used in that gun.

For the purpose of further testing the said 12-inch rifle, if the said Board on Ordnance think it desirable so to do, they may have the powder-chamber rebored to the extent necessary to remove the eroded metal as far as to the beginning of the lands in the bore of the gun, and have this rebored part lined with gun bronze or aluminum bronze about three-tenths of an inch thick, at a cost not exceeding $1,000, and may then continue the test of this gun with such charges as the board and the producer of the gun may agree upon, at a cost not exceeding $30,000.

The said board may authorize the lining of the powder-chambers of the above twenty 12-inch rifle-guns with bronze or aluminum bronze, if the said board think best, at an additional expense of not exceeding $1,000 each.

SEC. 9. That the said board may contract for 8-inch multicharge guns of such proportions and on such terms as it may consider for the interest of the Government, and to be tested in such manner and to such extent as the board may direct, at an expense not exceeding $100,000.

SEC. 10. That the standard weight for projectiles for testing 12-inch, 14-inch, 16-inch, and 20-inch rifle guns shall not be less than 800, 1,300, 1,900, and 3,700 pounds, respectively.

SEC. 11. That the standard weight of rifle guns to be tested for endurance, and of service guns to be contracted for as hereinafter provided, shall not be more than 108,000, 176,000, 257,600, and 516,000 pounds each, respectively, for 12-inch, 14-inch, 16-inch, and 20-inch rifles; and the length of any of these said guns, exclusive of the breech apparatus, shall not exceed 35 calibers.

SEC. 12. That the said Board on Ordnance shall contract, after due advertisement, for two 12-inch rifled guns with such party or parties as shall to them seem best, which said guns shall be built up according to the plans now prepared by the War and Navy Departments for 8, 10, and 12 inch rifles, the principal parts being of forged tempered steel. The drawings and specifications for one of said guns shall be furnished by the War Department and for the other by the Navy Department, within two months from the passage of this act, or as soon thereafter as may be, and the construction of said guns shall be superintended by officers of the War and Navy Departments, respectively, who shall report progress from time to time, and upon the completion thereof, to the said board. The weights and lengths of said guns shall not exceed that provided for 12-inch rifles in section 11 of this act, and the cost of said two guns, finished and delivered at the place of manufacture, shall not exceed $200,000.

That the said board shall also procure by purchase, or contract, carriages for use in testing said guns, either or both, unless the respective Departments which furnish specifications therefor shall have carriages suitable for such tests. Said two guns shall each be tested under the directions of said board for accuracy, range, and endurance in competition with, and for comparison with, those to be furnished by private parties as hereinafter provided in section 13. The powder and projectiles for testing each of said guns shall be furnished by the Department which furnishes the specifications respectively therefor, and shall be paid for by the board. The projectiles for said guns shall have the weight of 800 pounds each, and shall be fired with a charge of powder sufficient to give a muzzle velocity thereto of 2,000 feet per second.

The said weights and velocities may either vary by the amount of 1 per cent. of that specified, but the average shall not be less than 800 pounds and 2,000 feet, respectively.

The said guns may either or both be repaired to an extent not exceeding 10 per cent. of their respective costs, provided such repairs are necessary to secure the endurance of two hundred rounds or more from each; at least twenty rounds of the first two hundred fires from each gun shall have been fired in not more than two hours, and at one time. In estimating the cost of repairs the transportation of the guns shall not be included.

That the board may carry out the provisions of this section, at a total cost not exceeding $360,000.

SEC. 13. That whoever shall, within the limitations provided in sections 19 and 20 of this act, produce one or more 12-inch breech-loading single-charge rifle guns, of not more than 35 calibers in length, exclusive of breech apparatus, and not more than 108,000 pounds weight, which guns are to be made principally or wholly of steel, or principally or wholly of cast-iron, each supplied with projectiles, powder, implements, ordnance supplies, and including all incidental expenses of a test of two hundred rounds, to be fired as hereinafter provided for, shall, for each test gun so provided by him or them which withstands the test of two hundred rounds without more repairs than could usually be put upon it for 10 per cent. of the contract price hereinafter provided for similar service guns, and without such injury as would prevent if so repaired some continuation of the firing, beyond the said two hundred rounds, be paid for the same, by direction of the said Board on Ordnance, if such gun or guns be made principally of steel, at a price not exceeding $160,000 each, and if made of cast-iron principally, at a price not exceeding $80,000 each, which sums of money are to be accepted as the full prices of the guns and the cost of the tests, which sum shall be due and paid for each such gun and tests as soon as any such test gun has withstood the prescribed test of two hundred rounds, but not including the cost of the carriage therefor, which, if furnished by the party providing the gun, shall, if it be found suitable for use with such gun, be paid for at a price of not more than $25,000; but should the carriage for testing any such gun be provided by the Government, it shall be paid for by the party whose gun is tested thereon if the gun shall, by bursting, destroy the same before the gun has been fired two hundred rounds. But no such trial or test gun shall be paid for at the prices mentioned unless it endure the test of firing not less than two hundred rounds with a weight of projectile of not less than 800 pounds from the 12-inch rifle, with an average muzzle velocity for two hundred rounds of not less than 2,000 feet per second, and of these two hundred rounds not less than twenty shot of the prescribed weight shall be fired within two hours, and the firing of this two hundred rounds shall not disable the gun so much as to prevent some continuation of the firing without repairs exceeding 10 per cent. of the cost of the gun ordinarily; but should any such trial gun fail to reach the degree of endurance above specified, and fail also to reach a degree of endurance equal to the endurance of either of the 12-inch Army or Navy guns which are to be made and tested as provided in section 12, then in that case no payment whatever shall be made for such gun and tests, including the supplies therefor, but should it reach, either with or without the above specified amount of repairs, a degree of endurance equal to either of the said Army or Navy guns, then it shall be paid for at a price for such gun and tests equal to the cost of said gun and tests which it so excels, provided it can be paid for within the limitations provided in section 19 of this act.

That of the projectiles furnished for testing these guns at least twenty, and if the board shall so require, forty, shall be suitable for range and accuracy; and if the board shall require, five shall be projectiles suitable for penetration, and the rest of the projectiles for the firing of the said two hundred rounds for endurance may be such as are fit for this purpose alone.

That in testing the trial guns the Government shall furnish free of charge the use of proving grounds for range and accuracy, the necessary butts for durability, the targets for penetration, and bear all expense of handling and transporting the guns, and for this purpose, and for the purpose of firing any such guns, and either or both of the said Army and Navy 12-inch guns after they have any or all of them been fired more than the said two hundred rounds, not exceeding the sum of $500,000 may be expended.

That the plans of the guns of either kind, the breech-loading mechanism, the system of rifling, the projectiles adapted thereto, and the kind of powder or powder and cases therefor, and all cartridges used in these tests, may be of the kinds heretofore approved by the War and Navy Departments, or may be after original designs or plans and proportions satisfactory to the projector and producer; and any gun furnished by any party, and all the supplies therefor, shall be furnished without any cost to the Government until such gun has endured the above prescribed test. This firing shall proceed under the joint direction of the producer of the gun and the said board, and after one hundred rounds have been fired twenty rounds shall be fired with the prescribed standard weight and velocity of projectile within two hours of time during consecutive firing. This twenty rounds of continuous firing in two hours from these 12-inch guns may be made at any time after the gun has been fired one hundred rounds, but shall be done before the two hundred rounds are completed, and the firing of this two hundred rounds shall not disable the gun so much as to prevent some continuation of the firing without more repairs than may cost ordinarily 10 per cent. of the price of the gun.

That if any gun or guns made principally of steel or principally of cast-iron shall be provided which withstand the prescribed test of two hundred rounds with the prescribed weight and velocity of the projectile, at least twenty rounds of which were fired consecutively within two hours, all such guns shall, if the producer of the gun desires, be further tested at the expense of the Government, under the joint direction of the party producing such gun or guns and the said board, until it is fully determined which of the steel guns and which of the cast-iron guns are the most durable and serviceable, and that the steel gun so selected and the cast-iron gun so selected as the best of its kind shall be contracted for by the said board with the party or parties producing such steel gun and such cast-iron gun, the contracts to be for fifty of the steel guns and thirty of the cast-iron guns. And the test of the trial gun or guns so selected must be such as to make it reasonably certain that firing from service guns made on any such system twenty rounds in two hours, of the standard weight of projectiles, with a velocity of 2,000 feet per second, would not disable the service gun. In case of two guns of equal endurance, as shown by their tests, that one shall have preference for contract which has shown the best degree of accuracy as determined by the test for accuracy at different ranges, while being tested for accuracy, range, and endurance. The contract for the fifty steel guns to be made at a price not exceeding $75,000 each, with a carriage suitable for each gun, to be delivered therewith, the price of the carriage to be one-third that of the gun, the carriage to be bought of the party who produces the gun, provided he or they will furnish such carriages suitable in all respects for use therewith. The contracts to include some projectiles for each of these guns, to be of such kind and number as the board shall determine, and shall be furnished by the party who furnishes these service guns, on condition that the board can make satisfactory contract therefor.

That for proving these guns, transportation of the guns and carriages and projectiles therefor, and for such projectiles as the board may purchase for use therewith, not exceeding $500,000 may be expended.

That the contract for thirty cast-iron guns, to be made like that which shall in like manner have stood the prescribed tests, shall be for each gun at the price of not over 25 cents per pound, and for the thirty suitable carriages therefor, at a cost not exceeding $540,000 therefor; for lining the powder chamber of these guns with bronze or aluminum bronze, if the board shall deem best, at a cost not exceeding $1,000 each; and said board may expend for projectiles for said cast-iron guns, to be contracted for by the said board under such specifications as they may direct, and for proving said guns and carriages and transportation of the same, not exceeding $300,000.

That the carriages and projectiles for the above cast-iron guns shall be purchased of the party furnishing the said guns if the board can make suitable contract therefor. If more than one of either of each kind has been provided, which withstands the prescribed test, the board shall report with a recommendation what action ought to be taken with regard to the other gun or guns of either or both kinds which have withstood the prescribed test, but have excelled or been excelled in endurance under the continued firing.

SEC. 14. That whoever shall produce one or more 14-inch, 16-inch, or 20-inch single-charge breech-loading rifle guns, of weights and lengths conforming to section 11, within the time fixed in section 20 of this act, which guns are to be made wholly or principally of steel, and each supplied with a carriage, projectiles, powder, implements, ordnance supplies, and including all incidental expenses of a test of two hundred rounds for each test gun so provided, shall, for the best test gun of either of said classes as shown by its endurance so made and so provided which withstands the test of two hundred rounds of projectiles fired with a muzzle velocity of not less than 2,000 feet per second, on an average, and an average weight of projectiles of not less than that prescribed for the standard weight of projectiles for such guns, in section 10 of this act, without more repairs than can be put upon such guns ordinarily for 10 per cent. of their cost, exclusive of transportation, be paid for the same by the direction of the said board on ordnance at a price for such guns, and supplies and tests, not including the carriage, not exceeding double the price hereinafter fixed in this section, as the price for service guns of that caliber, which money shall be due and paid as soon as any such gun has withstood the prescribed test of two hundred rounds, and such further test as shows it to have better endurance than any other gun of its class so provided and tested, and which shall be in full payment for such gun and test, including the powder, projectiles, repairs of gun-carriage and gun, and all other expenses of the test not hereinafter specified, except the cost of the carriage therefor, which if found suitable for use therewith shall be paid for at the price hereinafter fixed for carriages for service guns of such caliber.

That the payment for any such carriage shall be made as soon as the test has shown it suitable for use with such gun or guns as it was made for, and without reference to whether the gun for which it was made endures its test or not.

That no such carriage shall be paid for at any price unless it is found suitable for use with the gun for which it was provided.

That for the next best gun of either class of the said 14, 16, or 20 inch guns, as shown by its test for endurance so made and so provided within the time fixed in section 20 of this act which withstands the test of two hundred rounds of projectiles fired with a muzzle velocity of not less than 2,000 feet per second, on an average and an average weight of projectiles of not less than that prescribed for the standard weight of projectiles for such guns in section 10 of this act, without more repairs than can be put upon such guns ordinarily for 10 per cent. of their cost, exclusive of transportation, be paid for the same by the direction of the said board on ordnance, at a price for such guns, and supplies and tests, not including the carriage, not exceeding 30 per cent. more than the price hereinafter fixed in this section, as the price for service-guns of that caliber, which money shall be due and paid as soon as any such gun has withstood the prescribed test of two hundred rounds, and such further tests as shows it to have better endurance than any other gun but one of its class so provided and tested, and which shall be in full payment for such gun and test, including the powder, projectiles, repairs of gun-carriage and gun, and all other expenses of the test not hereinafter specified, except the cost of the carriage therefor, which if found suitable for use therewith shall be paid for at the price hereinafter fixed for carriages for service-guns of such caliber.

That no such test gun, or supplies therefor, provided or furnished for test under the provisions of this section, shall be paid for at any price, unless it shall endure the specified test of firing two hundred rounds with an average weight and velocity of projectiles equal to that specified and without more than the specified amount of repairs: Provided, That no more than two test guns of either of said classes of 14, 16, or 20 inch guns to be furnished under the provisions of this section shall be paid for at any price.

That all test guns so provided or furnished shall be delivered at the place of manufacture, and the said board on ordnance shall be notified when such gun will be completed, such notification to be given in time to give the board ample time to prepare for the transportation of such gun or guns to the place of testing.

That all expenses for transportation of any such test gun which may be provided under this section shall be borne by the Government and paid for by the direction of the said board, but it is hereby provided that if any such test guns are provided of 16-inch or 20-inch calibers, the producers of such gun or guns shall refund to the Government one-half of the expense of all the shipments of such gun or guns from the place of manufacture to or from the nearest tide-water, on its route to the place of test.

That the Government, under direction of the board, shall furnish, free of charge, the use of a proving ground or grounds suitable for testing any or or all of these guns for range, accuracy, and penetration, and furnish, free of charge, the necessary targets for accuracy and penetration, the butts to be used in firing for durability, and bear all expenses of handling and transporting the guns, except for the transportation to be refunded to it to the extent above provided in the case of 16 and 20 inch guns.

That the plans of the guns of either kind, the breech-loading mechanism, the system of rifling, the projectiles adapted thereto, and the kind of powder or powders and cases therefor and all cartridges used in these tests may be of the kinds heretofore approved by the War and Navy Departments, or may be after original designs or plans and proportions satisfactory to the projector and producer; and any gun furnished by any party, and all the supplies therefor, shall be furnished without any cost to the Government until such gun has endured the above prescribed test of firing two hundred rounds of projectiles with the weights and velocities prescribed in this section.

That the firing of any such gun shall be under the joint direction of the parties furnishing the gun and the said board, but the party or parties furnishing any such gun may at any and all times increase the weights of projectiles or charge of powder above the standard prescribed to the extent he or they think best.

That should any gun or more than one gun of any of the calibers specified in this section be furnished which withstands the firing of the said two hundred rounds with the weights and velocities of projectiles specified, then the firing shall continue to determine the endurance of and which of such guns has the best endurance, such continuance of the firing to be at the expense of the Government, and if either of the said competing guns has, in firing its first two hundred rounds, done less work than the gun or guns it is competing with, by reason of its projectiles having been lighter, or the velocities thereof less than that of the projectiles of the said competing gun or guns, then such gun or guns shall first be fired to the extent necessary to make up double the amount of such deficiency of work performed, before it shall be considered in further competition with that test gun or guns of that caliber which have done the superior amount of work, and this rule shall also be applied to the test 12-inch rifle guns to be provided and tested as provided in section 13 of this act, and in making up this deficiency the gun or guns to be fired therefor shall be fired with such charges of powder and shot, to be proportioned by the producer of the gun, as shall give an amount of work to the projectiles for each discharge equal to the average work of the best or largest amount of work done in twenty fires by the competing gun which it is being equalized with, and this amount of work for each discharge thereafter for endurance shall be required of each competing gun, unless the parties furnishing the competing guns and the board shall all agree to have the amount thereof reduced. Should the owner or producer of any such deficient gun object to being obliged to make up this deficiency of work done by his or their gun during the first two hundred rounds of firing it, then such gun shall be considered as out of the competitive test, and the firing may go on with the other gun or guns as long as the producer of such gun or guns may desire.

That at any time after any of the test guns which may be provided under the provisions of this act has been fired two hundred rounds, and the above specified amount of firing necessary to make up the excess of work performed in the first two hundred rounds of firing by some competing gun of like caliber, such test gun shall appear clearly to be inferior in endurance to some of its competitors, the board may decline to fire it further, but this shall not prevent the producer of such gun from a further test thereof in the presence of the board at the expense of the producer, and such gun shall still be considered in competition with the other gun or guns of like caliber being fired for endurance by the board; and if it shall excel them in endurance such expense for additional firing shall be borne by the Government and paid by the order of said board.

That after any such test guns of 12-inch, 14-inch, 16-inch, or 20-inch caliber has been fired the first two hundred rounds, and such additional amount as is above specified in this section to give it a credit for endurance equal to any of its competitors for work done in its first two hundred rounds of firing, then all continuation of the firing for endurance for each successive fifty rounds shall be conducted on the same plan of equalization, and shall be with charges which shall increase the average work stored in each projectile of such fifty fires, by an amount of not less than 5 per cent. of the average work stored in each of the projectiles of the last fifty rounds previously fired from the best of such competing guns, and this amount of work required of each gun for these fires shall not be reduced except by consent of the board and the unanimous consent of all of the producers of the guns of the calibers then competing, but any one of the competitors may, if he or they desire, increase the charge of either powder or projectiles for their guns. That repairs may be made at the expense of the producer of any of these test guns, to cost not more, if made ordinarily, than 10 per cent. of the cost prescribed to be paid for like guns for service, during the first two hundred rounds of firing this test gun, and such additional firing as may be necessary to equalize for endurance the work of this gun, and bring it up to that of its best competing gun of that caliber as provided in this section; additional repairs may thereafter be put upon any of these test guns to the extent that these repairs, with all previous repairs made after it has been submitted for test, shall not exceed in cost or kind such as could be made ordinarily for 20 per cent. of the price fixed in this act for service guns of their kind and caliber, transportation not being included.

That the time occupied by all repairs made during the first two hundred rounds fired from any test gun shall not exceed four months, except by consent of said board, and all further repairs of said gun which may be made after the firing of the first two hundred rounds shall not exceed four months in all, without the consent of the board, such times for repairs to include the time used in transporting the guns therefor.

That of the projectiles furnished for the first two hundred rounds to be fired from any of these guns, at least twenty, and forty if the board shall require, shall be suitable for range and accuracy, and five of these projectiles for each gun shall, if the board require, be suitable for penetration, and the balance of the two hundred rounds need be suitable for endurance only.

That in testing the trial guns which may be provided under this section, the Government shall furnish, free of charge, the use of proving-grounds, for range and accuracy, the necessary butts for durability, and targets for penetration, and bear all expense for transporting and handling the guns, to the extent provided in this section, and for this purpose, and for the purpose of firing any such guns, after they have been fired the first two hundred rounds, the sum of not exceeding $800,000 may be expended.

That when the test for endurance of guns, which may be made for test under the provisions of this section, have been completed for the guns of any of the specified 14-inch, 16-inch, or 20-inch calibers, a contract shall be made by the said board with that party or parties who shall have made the best 14-inch, 16-inch, or 20-inch guns, respectively, which gun or guns has been fired at least two hundred rounds with the prescribed charges, and as shown, by all the tests thereof for endurance and accuracy, made as herein provided, that it is superior to all other competing guns of its class. The contract for these guns of either class to be for twenty, which shall be equal in all respects to the trial gun tested, on which test the contract is or may be based. And the said board shall also contract for a gun-carriage suitable for use for each such gun contracted for, and for a few projectiles for each of said guns. The carriages shall be furnished by the party or parties who furnish the guns for which they are made, provided such party or parties will furnish carriages suitable for use of their guns; and that party furnishing any such service gun shall furnish the projectiles therefor, provided the said board can make suitable contract with them therefor.

That the prices of said service guns shall be as follows: For 14-inch rifle guns, not to exceed $135,000 each; for 16-inch rifle guns, not to exceed $225,000 each; and for 20-inch rifle guns, not to exceed $510,000 each; and the prices of the carriages for each of these respective guns shall be one-third of the price of the gun for which it is or shall be furnished.

That for proof tests of said 14-inch guns, projectiles, and transportation of said guns, carriages, and projectiles therefor, the said board may expend not exceeding $350,000.

That for proof tests of said 16-inch guns, projectiles, and transportation of said guns, carriages, and projectiles therefor, the said board may expend not exceeding $560,000.

That for proof tests of said 20-inch guns, projectiles, and transportation of said guns, carriages, and projectiles therefor, the said board may expend not exceeding $1,300,000.

That all carriages furnished for service guns of 12-inch, 14-inch, 16-inch, and 20-inch guns, to be provided and furnished as prescribed in sections 13 and 14 of this act, shall have, and there shall be furnished therewith, and as constituting a part thereof, all engines, machinery, pumps, compressors, pipes and piping, valves, reservoirs, accumulators, and track and bed-plates necessary to operate them in the place they are intended to be used; and the said board shall give reasonable notice of the kind of place in which any such service gun is expected to work, so the contractor may be able to furnish a suitable carriage and appliances for the use of such gun in such place; but the contractor shall not be required to furnish with any such gun-carriage appliances complete for more than one kind of mounting, with the necessary apparatus therewith for operating the gun for which it is to be made. That is to say, some guns may be mounted on carriages suitable for use on ships or floating batteries, with the necessary loading and other operating appliances, while others may be mounted on carriages suitable for use in casemates, and others for use behind earth-works and masonry so arranged as to raise the gun at least 12 feet from the position of loading to that required when fired, if the said board shall so require; but the weights for accumulators for use on land need not be made of metal, nor if so made of either metal or masonry need such weights be furnished by the contractor at his expense, nor shall he or they be required to furnish with these gun-carriages any turret work or masonry foundations of any kind whatsoever, or metal work for foundations except the foundation track and bed-plate on which the gun-carriage rests and is traversed. When more than one gun is used in close proximity, the engines, pumps, accumulators, compressors, and such other machinery to be furnished with such gun-carriages need not be complete for each gun, but may be made to operate sets of two or more guns to the extent in number the board may think desirable instead of being complete for each separate gun.

SEC. 15. That it is hereby provided that all guns contracted for as provided in sections 13 and 14 to be delivered for service shall be tested at the place or places where built, by the party furnishing the same, or at such other suitable place or places as he or they may provide, with not less than five nor more than ten rounds from each gun, with that charge equal to the maximum charge endured for two hundred rounds in the trial gun on which the contract for the gun of such caliber was made, the Government to furnish an officer to witness such test at the time the party making the gun shall desire. The gun shall endure such tests without more injury than the ordinary wear and tear of such guns should be, or that the ordinary wear and tear of the trial gun of that kind was in firing a like number of rounds of equal energy. The Government shall not accept guns which are seriously injured by this test, or which are injured more than the ordinary wear and tear of such guns, unless the injured parts are replaced or made good, when the gun may be again tested, and must endure the test before it shall be accepted without more injury than ordinary wear and tear that such number of fires shall produce. The powder, cartridges, and projectiles for these tests shall be paid for by the Government at a reasonable price therefor.

SEC. 16. That should any of the test guns of the kind to be contracted for as above provided in sections 13 and 14 have endured a greater amount of work in firing any two hundred rounds therefrom than that prescribed, namely, two hundred rounds of projectiles of an average weight equal to that provided for such guns in section 10, with a muzzle velocity of 2,000 feet per second, the price of the service guns of that kind to be contracted for as per sections 13 and 14 shall be increased above the price therein provided to the extent of the average work done on the projectiles by any such said test gun on which the contract for service guns may be based exceeded in firing any two hundred rounds that prescribed, namely, two hundred rounds, of a velocity of 2,000 feet per second, and the weight of projectile equal to that fixed as a standard for such guns in section 10, and the price of the carriages for such service guns shall be increased in the same proportion, which increase of price of such guns and carriages shall be paid by the order of the board, by a draft drawn on the Treasury by the said board or its authorized agent.

That all service guns, gun-carriages, projectiles, and cartridges therefor may be delivered to the Government at the place or places of manufacture. But it is hereby provided that the contractor or contractors for all service guns, of either 16-inch or 20-inch caliber, to be made under the provisions of this act, shall refund to the Government one-half the cost of transporting said service guns from the place of manufacture, or from such place as he or they have taken them for proof test, to the nearest tide-water for shipment by the Government to the place of destination.

SEC. 17. That no service gun to be provided, as specified in sections 13 and 14, of any of the specified calibers shall be accepted unless it appears to be as good in all respects as was the trial gun furnished by the party with whom the contract for such service gun was made. And the party making contracts for any of these service guns shall contract and guaranty that all material used therein shall be equal in quality and workmanship to that provided in the trial gun or guns on which the contract for such service gun was based, and that he or they will institute a thorough system of tests by which they may know that all parts of the guns, as far as may be, are of good material and workmanship in all respects; the delivery of all of these service guns to begin two years from the dates of the respective contracts therefor, and continue at such average rate as would complete the delivery in eight years from the date of the respective contracts therefor.

That all service guns and carriages therefor furnished under the provisions of this act shall be paid for at time of delivery, and when delivered later than the date so fixed shall have the price of the same at which it would otherwise be paid for reduced by such reasonable amount as may be stipulated in the contract therefor for the time during which such delay of delivery takes place. But they may be delivered sooner than the time above fixed for their delivery.

SEC. 18. That it is hereby provided that at any time during the execution of any contract by any party or parties for 12-inch, 14-inch, 16-inch, or 20-inch rifle-guns to be made by them under the provisions of this act, such party or parties may furnish a gun of any such caliber as they may have such contract for, which gun may be made after the plans and specifications provided in the original contract for guns of that caliber, or after new plans and specifications to be provided by them, and such gun may be tested by them at their own expense in the presence of an officer who shall be detailed by said Board on Ordnance; and if such gun shows an endurance of being able to fire two hundred rounds with an average amount of work stored in its projectile when leaving the gun equal to 5 per cent. more than the average of the best two hundred fires selected from the firing of the test gun under which such contract was based, then in that case the Government shall pay for such gun and carriage therefor and the powder and projectiles used in such test, the price of the gun and carriage to be the regular price for such service guns of that caliber and the carriage therefor, as determined by sections 13, 14, 16, and 17 of this bill, and the contractor shall be at liberty to fill any part of the balance of his or their order for guns of that caliber with guns of this new pattern instead of guns made after the original test-gun specifications on which he or they obtained the contract for such guns, and the pay for such substitute guns and carriages therefor shall be modified to the extent the increase of work performed by such last test gun in the best two hundred rounds fired therefrom exceeds that prescribed as provided in section 16 of this act.

But not more than one such change shall be permitted with contracts for any such 14-inch, 16-inch, or 20-inch guns, respectively, nor more than two such changes shall be made in the case of the contract for the 12-inch rifles, and all such subsequent tests in which the new test gun or guns fail to excel the test gun on which the contracts were made, by not giving for the best two hundred rounds fired therefrom more than 5 per cent. more work stored in the projectiles when leaving the gun than was given in the best two hundred rounds of the best test gun of that caliber on which the contract for such guns was based, shall be at the expense of the contractor.

That all castings and forgings entering into the construction of the armaments herein provided for shall be of American manufacture.

That the board herein provided for shall annually report its operations to the Secretary of War, for submisson to Congress, at the beginning of each session, which report shall state in detail the amount expended under each section of this act and the progress made in carrying out its provisions, with such additional information as the board may deem advisable.

SEC. 19. That it is hereby provided that should more than five guns be offered for test under the provisions of sections 13 and 20 of this act, which are made principally or wholly of steel which withstand the prescribed test of two hundred fires under the conditions fixed in section 13, or which excel in endurance the said Army or the said Navy gun to be provided as per section 12 of this act, then in that case only the best five of said 12-inch guns provided under the terms of said section shall be paid for, with their carriages, powder, projectiles, and supplies as therein provided, even though they shall have reached the degree of endurance specified, and in selecting the five to be paid for, those shall be selected which have the greatest degree of endurance as shown when tested according to rules and provisions made in sections 13 and 14 of this act.

That should more than one 12-inch cast-iron rifle be offered for test under the provisions of section 13 of this act which endures the prescribed test of firing two hundred rounds under the conditions therein provided or which has a greater degree of endurance than either the said Army or the said Navy gun to be provided under the provisions of section 12 of this act, then, in that case, only the best cast-iron gun so provided, as shown by the degree of its endurance in its tests, shall be paid for, together with its carriages, powder, projectiles, and supplies for the test of two hundred rounds.

That the time of paying for any of these 12-inch guns to be furnished by private parties for the test under the provisions of sections 13, 14, 19, and 20 of this act, is hereby modified to the extent necessary to enable the said board to comply with the provisions of this section.

That it is hereby provided that all guns or gun-carriages and all supplies therefor furnished by any private party or parties, for test under the provisions of this act, may be withdrawn by the party furnishing the same at any time before or subsequent to the completion of the test thereof, whenever it is evident that such gun, gun-carriage, or supplies are not to be paid for under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 20. That it is hereby provided that all 12 and 14 inch rifle guns for competitive trial and tests to be made and tested as provided in this act shall be finished ready for test on or before January 1, 1892; and all 16 and 20 inch test guns on or before January 1, 1893: Provided, That if no 12-inch rifle gun made principally or wholly of steel has been completed and offered for test at that time, which shall withstand the prescribed test of two hundred rounds, then the time for accepting such guns for competitive test as herein provided shall be extended to January 1, 1893. And in case that no 14-inch gun has been furnished ready for competitive test under the provisions of this act by January 1, 1892, the time for accepting such guns for test shall be extended to January 1, 1893.

That it is hereby provided that if no 14-inch steel rifle gun has been offered for test on or before January 1, 1893, which withstands the test of firing two hundred rounds, with weights and velocities as prescribed, then the time for receiving such 14-inch test rifle guns shall be extended to January 1, 1894.

That if no such 16-inch rifle guns for competitive trial and test to be made and tested as provided in this act shall be finished or ready for test on or before January 1, 1893, then the time for accepting such gun for competitive test, as herein prescribed, shall be extended to January 1, 1894; and if no such 16-inch rifle has been offered for test before that time which withstands the prescribed test for firing two hundred rounds with weights and velocities of projectiles as prescribed, then the time for receiving for tests 16-inch rifle guns shall be extended to January 1, 1895.

That if no 20-inch rifle gun made under the provisions of this act and conforming thereto shall be offered for test on or before January 1, 1893, then the time for receiving such 20-inch rifle guns for test shall be extended to January 1, 1894, and if no such test gun of 20-inch caliber has been offered for test and tested in accordance with the provisions of this act which shall have withstood the prescribed test of firing two hundred rounds of projectiles with the weights and velocities specified, with an amount of repairs as prescribed, on or before January 1, 1895, then the time of receiving 20-inch rifle guns for test under the provisions of this act shall be extended until that date.

The board on ordnance shall make all reasonable efforts to make all the tests provided for as quickly as possible after any such gun is ready for tests; and all the test experiments of guns shall be open to the inspection and observation of all parties furnishing guns of like calibers for test as provided in this act.

That the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy shall each assist this board by detailing any and all officers and men for its use which it may need at any time and all times, and by furnishing it, without charge, any and all facilities for testing any and all of the guns and gun-carriages to be provided under this act, to the extent that they are able so to do, and in general to aid the board in any way they can in carrying out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 21. That section 2 of an act making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885, and for other purposes, approved July 5, 1884, is hereby repealed.

SEC. 22. That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of sections 6 to 20, inclusive, of this act, and for expenditures to be charged against the revenues of the Government for the fiscal years as follows, namely:

During the fiscal year 1889, $283,500.
During the fiscal year 1890, $1,249,500.
During the fiscal year 1891, $1,047,000.
During the fiscal year 1892, $1,202,400.
During the fiscal year 1893, $1,602,000.
During the fiscal year 1894, $2,641,000.
During the fiscal year 1895, $2,249,000.
During the fiscal year 1896, $3,842,500.
During the fiscal year 1897, $4,915,500.
During the fiscal year 1898, $4,889,000.
During the fiscal year 1899, $5,129,500.
During the fiscal year 1900, $5,546,500.
During the fiscal year 1901, $4,054,000.
During the fiscal year 1902, $2,146,000; in all, $40,890,000: Provided, That any unexpended balance remaining of the said appropriation for either of the fiscal years named shall continue available and be applied to and considered a part of the appropriation for the next succeeding fiscal year.

SEC. 23. To enable the board to pay any premium that may become due to parties who may furnish service-guns under the provisions of sections 13, 14, 16, and 18 of this act, the sum of $2,820,000, to be available on and after the fiscal year ending June, 1895, and to remain available until used for this purpose if necessary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is upon the amendment to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] which has just been read.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, in offering the amendment, I do so because, and only because, the Senate in committee has adopted the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut. I desire to say that it is a draught that has been prepared with a great deal of care by gentlemen whose duty it was to examine this question. There are some provisions in the amendment that if I had time to thoroughly consider I would probably modify; but I have had no such opportunity, and therefore, imperfect as it may be, it is presented for the purpose of bringing to the attention of the Senate and having the question decided now whether you intend, as the Senate has already voted, to expend $6,000,000 or $7,000,000 to establish a great Government foundry at Watervliet and to raise the question whether you intend in the manufacture of heavy ordnance to rely upon the Government shops alone and exclude the genius and enterprise of all the other people of this country.

I know the Senate is not disposed to listen to an argument on this subject. I have no disposition to go into it again to any extent, but I can not refrain from having read at the desk a letter sent since the amendment was offered and discussed by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] (one of many received by me), from a distinguished manufacturer in this country, who has reputation second to none, whose invention has been adopted by every civilized government in the world.

I ask that it be read. I do not give the writer's name for the reason that he has, as I understand, a large interest which must be determined by the Ordnance Department or the War Department; and from the statements made to me, without number almost, by many such letters, I doubt whether it would be just to him to permit his name to be used in this connection. But his statement in my judgment is incontrovertible and assures me that the position I have taken and the object I intend to accomplish by this amendment are absolutely necessary in the interest of the country. I ask that the Secretary may read the letter I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The letter will be read if there be no objection.

The Secretary read as follows:

HON. ARTHUR P. GORMAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: * * * Urgently as these appropriations are needed, I believe you are right in opposing large appropriations for built-up guns. Foreign experience shows that they are unreliable, and experience in this country is yet too meager to justify spending millions on them.

It is easy to explain the strenuous demands of some ordnance officers that only built-up guns should be purchased, by the desire of being consistent. Besides, the mathematical and mechanical problems involved in designing and manufacturing such a complex structure as a built-up gun can but have a sort of fascination for many influential ordnance officers, who are ready to affirm the impossibility of obtaining good guns in any other way and the uselessness of trying.

And so it has come about that in spite of the obvious weakness of a gun with a dozen or more large cracks or joints around it, and in spite of repeated protests from various quarters, the influence of the Departments and the appropriations of Congress have been almost wholly for the built-up guns.

I trust you may be able to secure such legislation as will enable and compel one or both of the Departments concerned to procure and test thoroughly a number of cast guns before any very large appropriations are made for other guns.

Built-up guns were a necessity at the time that system was commenced, because steel could not be produced in large quantities. The process invented by Bessemer and Siemans for making steel was at that time unknown, nor did steel-makers know at that period of the great discoveries that have recently been made in mixing aluminum and other ingredients with molten steel, which allows large castings now to be made of steel as perfeecly as they can be cast of iron or bronze.

Surely if guns can be cast of one piece of steel and without joints, such guns will be stronger, more durable, and a great deal cheaper than built-up guns.

Let Congress give inventors and private manufacturers of the country a fair chance. By having competition between built-up guns (made by ordnance officers) and steel cast guns (made by inventors and private manufacturers of steel), better and more effective guns will be produced. Cast guns can be made in about one-fourth the time it takes to make built-up guns, and for about half the cost.

The strength of built-up guns is not to be determined by the tensile strength of the different bands and hoops that compose these guns in part. The weakness of such guns is produced by the joints forming, as it were, cracks all around the gun, where the bands and hoops butt together. When large guns are fired the mass of material forming the gun undergoes a severe shock and there are wave motions, produced by the action of the powder gases and by the recoil, which are checked at the joints where the bands and hoops meet, that will sooner or later produce crystallization of the metal at those places, and thus the lifetime of the gun is greatly shortened.

Unfortunately, years ago, the ordnance officers placed themselves on record as being in favor of built-up guns, and they have not now the moral courage to say they were wrong.

All sample guns, made either by the Ordnance Department or by private makers, should be proved and tested by a committee of officers from both the Army and Navy, and who are not connected with the Ordnance Department.

If Congress will make appropriations for large guns, of certain calibers, capable of doing certain kinds of work, etc., and allow all the people in this country to compete in furnishing the same, in all probability private makers would be able to make and furnish guns that would carry off the palm of victory.

If the built-up gun system should be permanently adopted, to the exclusion of all other systems, no improvement will be made in the construction of guns under such monopoly for the next twenty years to come.

Mr. GORMAN. That is the statement of one of the most successful men in the world in the manufacture of guns.

Mr. HAWLEY. How large are his guns?

Mr. GORMAN. He has a most effective weapon.

Mr. HAWLEY. Carrying about half a pound. I know the man. There is the letter.

Mr. GORMAN. I have no doubt the Senator does. The point being, however, no matter how large the gun is, that here is a man who has attracted the attention of the world by his success, and he is only one of many; and he states—and that is the point of his communication—that if this appropriation is so made as to permit inventors to experiment without any cost to the Government, and they come up and produce a gun that will be equal to the most severe test the Government officers can require, then they shall be purchased and paid for.

All I desire to say is that until July, 1893, if this amendment were adopted, the whole expense under the provisions of the amendment would be a little over $5,000,000, whereas the amendment of my friend from Connecticut, if I remember the exact figures, involves $6,300,000 to be expended by the War Department at any time.

Mr. HAWLEY. May I ask if there would be a single gun delivered in that time? It is not certain there would be a single gun delivered in five years. It opens the field for delivery; they may be delivered before that, but I do not remember that it provides for their delivery.

Mr. GORMAN. I would say in answer to my friend from Connecticut that the War Department has produced twenty third-rate guns in twenty years.

Mr. HAWLEY. It has produced three hundred and eighteen in about fifteen years.

Mr. GORMAN. I mean steel built-up guns.

Mr. HAWLEY. We never gave them a dollar to do it with.

Mr. GORMAN. There never have been constructed by the War Department any of the heavier calibers; it is claimed that we have one or two 8 and 10 inch, but there are no guns in the country, notwithstanding about forty millions have been expended since 1866 by the Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, the War Department has never been authorized to make a modern steel gun. It never has had the money to do it with, and besides that there has not been an establishment in the United States until lately that could make one as large as 8 inches, and there is not a concern in the United States that can make the whole of a 10-inch gun, let alone a 14, 16, or 20 inch gun. You have never authorized the making of large steel guns. You have authorized them for the Navy. You ordered ships until the guns needed for them and the armor made an aggregate so large that the Secretary was able to take precisely the course laid down for the Army in my pending amendment. Only yesterday the Senate concurred with the House in an appropriation of two millions, which will go for armor and gun work precisely such as I propose.

The expenditures proposed by the Senator from Maryland have never been estimated for by any Department; they come from no committee, and they are a whole volume of legislation. I will soon present to the Chair three points of order against the amendment.

I venture to say that the amendment is not approved by more than one man in the world, and that is the man who wrote it, excepting it may be three or four men whose experimental pieces, rusting in some foundry or on the sands of Sandy Hook, it undertakes to revive, and the South Boston Iron Works, whose cast-iron guns it wants to make.

Here are some figures from the Bureau of Ordnance relating to the Senator's projects. I will give one specimen of the economy of the scheme:

The amount appropriated for twenty guns, each of 14, 16, and 20 inch caliber, sums up $17,400,000 for a total of sixty guns. This amounts to about two-thirds of the entire estimate of the Fortifications Board for five hundred and sixty-one guns, inclusive of all calibers from 6 to 16 inches, and seven hundred and twenty-four heavy mortars, making nearly thirteen hundred pieces; from which it would appear that the money has not been judiciously distributed in regard to caliber.

Mr. GORMAN. From what does the Senator read?

Mr. HAWLEY. From a criticism prepared by the Ordnance Department; a reply to certain questions, by Capt. Charles S. Smith, Ordnance Department, United States Army.

The plan in the amendment adopted by the Senate is not my plan at all. It comes from the Military Committee in the first place, but is also the substance of what is approved by the Committee on Coast Defenses; it is the plan of the Armament Board, of the Gun Foundry Board, of the great Fortifications Board, and of the Select Committee of the Senate on Ordnance and War Ships. It comes here urgently recommended by the Senator's own Secretary of War. It is in accordance with the experiments of England, France, Austria, Russia, Italy, Spain, and the whole of the civilized world.

The old shops and the waste-iron yards of the world are covered with just what the Senator's amendment proposes to build. There is a scheme in it that I do not think will be approved by a mechanic in the United States outside of an insane asylum. Such a bill was never spread upon the records yet. It is $41,000,000 to be expended in about fifteen years and in the mean time for the nourishment of every crank whoever filed his application to the Government. That is the proposition before the Senate. I have not had time to characterize it properly.

The Senator says we propose in our bill six or seven million dollars for a foundry at Watervliet. No, sir, it is only a finishing shop. It does not forge the parts of the gun, and the entire cost is $750,000. It will cost that to put up the necessary machinery and buildings. The Senator says he wants to give private inventors a chance, and he objects that the Government proposes to build up great shops under my amendment. Not at all. It is his bill that proposes to expend millions upon millions of dollars by the Government in putting up plants. We propose the most economical scheme that has been devised in the world for the manufacture of big guns.

The nations of Europe have made a series of experiments. They have undertaken to make a whole gun themselves. They have undertaken to have private builders build a whole gun. That works in some cases. They have undertaken a partnership between private parties and the Government. That has been a failure. The best wisdom of all Europe, France at the head of them and Great Britain among them, is that for certain great, rough, heavy parts of the gun it is best to ask a competition among private manufacturers, and they can then for about $800,000 or $1,000,000 put up the necessary plant for doing that; and the Government for $750,000 can put up all the other part of the plant, taking from the manufacturers the rough parts and finishing and assembling the gun.

If, on the other hand, you undertake to get it all from the private manufacturer; it requires of him an expenditure of from $1,600,000 to $1,800,000, and no man will think of devoting that much money without an enormous contract for guns in advance.

This is the economical and wise plan. What the Senate has adopted is in accordance with the wisdom of the world.

The extraordinary things in the Senator's amendment are beyond number. It provides for 20-inch steel guns, to say nothing of certain cast-iron abortions.

Nobody in the world has thought of building a 20-inch steel gun. The Senator has it down, I think, at a cost of $289,000—I am not sure but it is $500,000. I do not believe it can be built for half a million dollars. Nobody wants it; nobody can handle it. It might be fired once at a vessel, but before it could be got ready for a second shot, the ship would be well started in a journey around the world. There is no forge in the world that could make the central tube of it. You would have to double the size of the heaviest forges known. Nobody wants it. Nobody can build it. It is the wild dream of a respectable dreamer whom I know well and who has given me his dreams from year to year, and he has not been able to get a committee of Congress or any two men assembled who would agree to his scheme.

I raise the point of order that the matters therein provided for are not estimated for by any Department, that it is a volume of legislation, and that it comes from no committee.

Mr. GORMAN. I trust the Senator will withdraw his point of order for a moment.

Mr. HAWLEY. I will, certainly.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, the criticisms of the Senator from Connecticut upon the proposition which I have presented, and his statement that they are some of them such that nobody out of a lunatic asylum would attempt to carry out——

Mr. HAWLEY. I will specify when you get through.

Mr. GORMAN. I have no objection to the Senator going on with it now.

Mr. HAWLEY. Not now.

Mr. GORMAN. The criticism of the Senator is not an unusual statement. It occurs and has occurred a great many times in this country that men in high position, of great respectability, of immense research, have denounced inventors as lunatics. There is a marked case in my own State, which is a matter of record, and the man who made the prediction was as intelligent as my friend from Connecticut; he had seen as much of the affairs of the world as that Senator can possibly have seen; he was as careful a man as my friend from Connecticut ever can hope to be.

When Congress appropriated a small sum of money to enable Mr. Morse to establish a telegraph from here to Baltimore, he went to the president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company for permission to erect his poles along the line of that company's road. The company granted the privilege, and I have it on the authority of the venerable John H. B. Latrobe, who was a party to the transaction, himself a distinguished engineer and lawyer, that the president of the company entered upon the records of the company a solemn protest against granting the permission, on the ground that it was an outrage and a wrong for an intelligent set of men to permit a man to spend his money in an enterprise which no man outside of an insane asylum would consider useful or feasible. Morse's success has made his name a household word for all time, and his critics of that day are forgotten.

Mr. President, twenty-five years ago if any man had predicted with confidence and presented the fact to the Senate that you could construct a built-up steel gun of 10 or 12 inches bore that would throw a shot of 700 pounds' weight, I have no doubt if the Senator from Connecticut had been in his place the ordnance officers would have been around and convinced him that the man ought to be in an insane asylum.

What harm would it do the Government if this proposition were enacted into a law? What possible detriment can it be to the country or to the Treasury if you say to the inventive genius of this country, "Here is an opportunity to make guns from 8 to 20 inches; you make them at your own expense; you furnish the plant; you present the gun complete and submit it to our ordnance officers, and if it stands the test we will give you such an amount of money as will compensate you. If you fail"—well, most of them will probably go to the poorhouse instead of to the insane asylum, as my friend from Connecticut suggests. But I have no doubt of their success. The Senator thinks they are cranks. I have perfect faith in the ability of the American manufacturer and the American mechanic to make guns and other implements of war which are not only equal to but better than any in existence in the world, if they are given a fair opportunity and are not hampered by the ordnance officers. If they succeed their compensation should be liberal; if they fail, as I have stated before, the Government will not suffer.

The Government, if this amendment is adopted, can not lose; worthless guns can not be forced on us, for the acceptance of their work is in the hands of the very men who criticise and oppose this measure; and I do not hesitate to say that there has never been from the foundation of the Government to this hour such a pressure of Army officers upon the legislative body in this country as we have had since this proposition has been pending.

These ordnance officers claim that they have not had a fair opportunity to serve their country by making guns, and yet $20,000,000 have been appropriated from 1866 to now, besides the amount received from the sale of old ordnance stores, amounting, as near as I can get the figures from the Treasury Department, to about $20,000,000.

But they are here and have been here at this Congress, and at every session of Congress for the past four years trying to prevent all legislation which will permit the outside inventor to perfect his invention or have the Government receive it. They are here around the committee-rooms, and they stand at the halls of legislation when these matters are discussed and send in their suggestions, full of technical information as they are, to control legislation so as to make it impossible to have anything done unless the money is expended by them in a Government shop. The Secretary of War should not permit this interference. Any Army officer who attempts to control legislation, except when he is requested by the Senate, the House of Representatives, or by a committee of either body to give his views under the instructions of his superiors, should be ordered to some post distant from these halls. But, sir, here they stand at the very doors of the Senate Chamber to prevent legislation which will throw open the doors to all the skilled men of the country.

When this matter was under consideration before, not content with what they do privately, one of them attempted to answer in the newspapers what was said on this floor. An ordnance officer from my State originally, a Captain Birnie, whom I do not believe I have the pleasure of knowing—but it is a good name—goes into the newspapers to argue the question for the purpose of getting appropriations for the Ordnance Bureau. That gentleman says, among other things:

In the twenty years—

This is a letter printed in the Baltimore Sun, of Baltimore, Md., July 2, 1888, immediately after this debate. Captain Birnie says:

In the twenty years beginning July 1, 1866, and ended July 1, 1886, that department—

That is the Ordnance Department of the War Department—expended less than one and one-half million of dollars for the procurement of cannon of various calibers.

And yet I have a statement from the Treasury Department which shows that from 1866, for the ordnance service alone, down to 1888 inclusive, there were $2,740,000 made by direct appropriations. In addition to that all the money from the sale of ordnance stores, now $75,000 per annum, added to the other appropriations expended will swell the total amount from 1866 until now to about $10,000,000, and yet they have not, as I understand, more than one hundred guns that are serviceable. Here are the amounts appropriated direct, to which add fifteen to twenty millions received from sale of old property:

Amounts appropriated in general appropriation bills to be expended under the direction of Ordnance Bureau.

ORDNANCE SERVICE.

1868	$300,000.00
1869	200,000.00
1870	200,000.00
1871	150,000.00
1873	200,000.00
1874	200,000.00
1875	125,000.00
1876	125,000.00
1877	100,000.00
1878	100,000.00
1879	100,000.00
1880	110,000.00
1881	110,000.00
1882	110,000.00
1883	125,000.00
1884	115,000.00
1885	100,000.00
1886	100,000.00
1887	90,000.00
1888	80,000.00
Total	2,740,000.00

ORDNANCE, ORDNANCE-STORES AND SUPPLIES.

1873	383,000.00
1874	700,000.00
1875	370,000.00
1876	370,000.00
1877	330,000.00
1878	315,000.00
1879	315,000.00
1880	320,000.00
1881	310,000.00
1882	310,000.00
1883	305,000.00
1884	400,000.00
1885	400,000.00
1886	405,000.00
1887	255,000.00
1888	255,000.00
Total	5,833,000.00

MANUFACTURE OF ARMS AT NATIONAL ARMORIES.

1873	150,000.00
1874	100,000.00
1875	100,000.00
1876	150,000.00
1877	100,000.00
1878	100,000.00
1879	150,000.00
1880	250,000.00
1881	300,000.00
1882	300,000.00
1883	400,000.00
1884	401,000.00
1885	400,000.00
1886	400,000.00
1887	400,000.00
1888	400,000.00
Total	4,101,000.00

PURCHASE OF GUNPOWDER AND LEAD.

Nothing.

TESTS OF HEAVY RIFLED ORDNANCE.

1873	270,000.00
1874	53,000.00
Total	320,000.00

TESTS OF IRON AND STEEL.

1884	25,000.00

EXAMINATION OF HEAVY ORDNANCE AND PROJECTILES.

1882	25,000.00

MACHINE GUNS.

1884	20,000.00
1885	20,000.00
1886	50,000.00
1887	4,246.57
Total	94,246.57

ARMAMENT OF FORTIFICATIONS.

1877	165,000.00
1878	175,000.00
1879	187,500.00
1880	182,500.00
1881	400,000.00
1882	325,000.00
1883	100,000.00
1884	400,000.00
1885	406,000.00
1886	450,000.00
1887	38,219.17
Total	2,823,219.17

ARMING AND EQUIPPING THE MILITIA.

[Permanent appropriation.]

1866, to and including 1887, twenty-two years, at $200,000 per annum	4,400,000.00
1888	400,000.00
Total	4,800,000.00

SUMMARY OF APPROPRIATIONS 1856 TO 1888, BOTH INCLUSIVE.

Ordnance service	$2,740,000.66
Ordnance, ordnance stores, and supplies	5,833,000.00
Manufactures of arms at national armories	4,101,000.00
Purchase of gunpowder and lead
Tests of heavy rifled ordnance	320,000.00
Tests of iron and steel	25,000.00
Examination of heavy ordnance and projectiles	25,000.00
Machine guns	94,246.57
Armament of fortifications	2,823,219.17
Arming and equipping the militia (permanent appropriation)	4,800,000.00
Grand total	20,761,465.74

Mr. HAWLEY. They have got eighteen hundred.

Mr. GORMAN. Eighteen hundred of the old guns that were made during the war.

Mr. HAWLEY. No; three hundred of them made since the war, and they are serviceable guns, too, but they are weak compared with modern guns.

Mr. GORMAN. But they are of no earthly account, as has been stated on this floor again and again, and if they have three hundred guns they do not report them as such as they would rely upon for defense now.

Captain Birnie continues:

With this amount there were procured 318 serviceable cannon, beginning with 15 and 20 inch Rodman smooth-bores—

This is since the war—and closing with completed guns of the best modern type of breech-loading steel guns, namely, field guns, seige guns, 8-inch seacoast gun—

There is, as I understand, under the control of the War Department but one perfect built-up 8-inch steel gun.

During the same period—

Says this captain—

the Department has tested a greater number of guns (types) submitted by private inventors than of those designed in its own bureau. Of the private ones I will name the Sutcliff (two calibers, a field gun and a seacoast gun), the Moffatt, the Hitchcock, the Woodbridge, the Mann (twice), the Haskell Multicharge, the Thompson, and the Yates.

I will not detain the Senate to read what these inventors and others who are familiar with the subject have said about these tests. There is not a single inventor that is satisfied. It is a chapter of oppression and wrong. But let that all go. I do say that the money which has been spent by the Ordnance Bureau since 1866, greater in amount than that which has been proposed by my amendment, has produced no satisfactory results. It is time now to give the inventors and the manufacturers outside of the Government service, outside of the Army, an opportunity to compete with them.

I could, but I will not, detain the Senate by reading from the reports of the Chief of Ordnance the statements that he has made and reported through the Secretary of War to Congress, showing how this money in many instances has been expended. It is all a history of incapacity. They are full of theories. There is not, so far as I have been able to see and gather from those who do know, a practical man in the service who is in position to direct the policy of the bureau. I do not hesitate to say that there is not a gun made in the Navy or in the Army shops that can not be produced by private enterprise for one-half the amount which it costs the Government, built and made up by its officers.

I believe that it is absolutely necessary that the Government shall have two great shops, one for the Navy and one for the Army. I am not opposed to that, but I am opposed to permitting them to expend millions more without placing them in competition with the mechanics who have no connection with the Government, with men of enterprise and genius, with Gatling, who made his great gun which gave him a world-wide reputation, and with Hotchkiss and all the rest of them. I say that there is not a manufacturer who furnished the great guns that we had during the war, men who are interested in and who are desirous and anxious for success, who do not believe that we have reached a point in our manufactures when we can make guns to compete with any known in the world if the Government will give them an opportunity.

Now, sir, probably the Senator can have this amendment ruled out of order. Let it go out. As I said when I offered it, I came into the Senate this morning not knowing that the Army bill was under consideration. I have taken that proposition, the main point of which is to enable private competition with Government shops, knowing very well that it is not entirely perfect, but hoping that the Senate would consider the question, and, as is done in a hundred cases, modify it, if there be any imperfections in it, but adhere to the one idea I have suggested of letting our mechanics have an opportunity to compete. They are now in an anxious state of mind in regard to their future; they have been made to believe by the opposition to the Administration that the legislation of the Democratic party would bring disaster to the laboring men of the land. Let it go forth, if you will, Mr. President, that one of the great leaders on the other side of this body, in the consideration of this question and in the appropriation of millions of money, has deliberately, after having secured by a majority vote of the Senate, and he belonging to that majority, the consideration of an amendment which I did not, and do not now, think was germane to the Army appropriation bill. He had the power and he succeeded in the committee with his amendment placing over $6,000,000 in the hands of and to be expended by Army officers, and now, on a point of order, he will have ruled out a proposition which would be of immense value to the Government, and that which he and his party friends are proclaiming they are most anxious to do, that is, to start the furnaces of the country in full blast and thus give work to thousands of honest toilers. He will probably succeed in preventing our manufacturers and mechanics from competing successfully in the manufacture of heavy ordnance.

He may be content to leave this matter in the hands of Army officers, but when he goes to his own State, where some of these guns should be and probably would be made, when he discusses this proposition before the people, I would like to have him explain why he opposed with his great power a proposition such as I have offered, and why he refused to aid me to perfect a proposition which would open in full blast all the great furnaces and give opportunity to every mechanic and every inventor to serve his Government and participate in solving the great problem of protecting our immense coast.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I want to correct one or two mistakes and relieve the feelings of the Senator from Maryland about several things. He represents the gun-builders, the great manufacturers of the country, as saying that they can do the best work in the world; they can make the best guns if we will only give them an opportunity. The implication was that they wanted to build the whole gun, forge the parts and finish and build the gun. Now, sir, if he will do the Committee on Ordnance and War Ships the honor to read their report he will find that the ablest steel men in the United States heartily approve of the identical plan of this bill. It is based not upon the testimony of the ordnance officers alone, but on that of all the great steel manufacturers themselves. We went to them, shop after shop, in Philadelphia and elsewhere around Pennsylvania, to Pittsburgh and to Boston and wherever they made guns or forged large masses of steel, to see their shops and ask them about the best way of doing this work; and this is the way they say is best for the Government and best for them. They will forge the rough parts if we will take those parts and assemble them. In such a case they would have to expend on the plant about half as much as if they undertook the whole gun, and they ask that they shall not be paid a dollar except upon steel tested and approved.

Captain Birnie, of the Ordnance Bureau, one of the men best informed in the literature and practical business of ordnance there is in the United States or in the world, did make in the Baltimore Sun the correction of some of the errors of the Senator and others from which the Senator has quoted.

The Senator says the Bureau of Ordnance received about $20,000,000 in twenty years, and produced no gun. If the figure 20 be correct as to what they have had since 1866, it applies to all the current wants of the Government in the care of its guns, in the manufacture of its small-arms at the arsenals, and the distribution of $200,000 worth a year to the militia of the several States, in short, the whole work in general.

But for the building of cannon—and you know how specific the appropriation bills are—they had a million and a half in the whole time, and they went on for some years building the best guns known then, the old cast-iron gun, probably the best then of their kind in the world. It was thought best to cast some of calibers as large as 15 and 20-inches. They procured with that money three hundred and eighteen serviceable cannon. I say "serviceable." I mean they are of some use; they are in good order. I do not say that an old 10-inch columbiad is useless, or the 15-inch smooth-bore. They are serviceable against smaller unarmored ships. The 10-inch carries a 128-pound shot, which would easily penetrate a vessel with a skin of iron only three-eighths of an inch thick, or any wooden vessel. But we have no guns of the modern type, none that will penetrate even the middle-class iron ship of foreign nations.

The Ordnance Bureau quit making these old cast-iron guns, but they did make with that million and a half three hundred and eighteen of them, beginning with 15 and 20 inch Rodman smooth-bores, and closing with a few of the later steel guns. The Senator says we have no gun of the best modern type on hand. No, we have not, except as specimen guns, and about 30 elegant little $3\frac{2}{10}$-inch field pieces, excellent little steel rifles for the light batteries. We have, I think, one 10-inch steel gun. The Bureau of Ordnance has barely made a beginning.

Captain Birnie says that during the same period the Department has tested a greater number of the type guns submitted by private inventors than of those designed in its own bureau. And he names the "Sutcliff, the Moffatt, the Hitchcock, the Woodbridge, the Mann (twice), the Haskell multicharge, the Thompson, and the Yates."

Some of these guns had good ideas, but they are abandoned as hopeless by all except the inventors. The multicharge gun, for example, has been altogether superseded, as any mechanic will see in a moment. The multicharge gun is not needed now, because by means of a slow-burning powder and a longer gun we get the same result, that is, increased velocity and power, from a single cartridge in the ordinary gun.

The Ordnance Department has faithfully expended its money and conducted all the experiments it was required to do. It has no patents, no tricks, and no pet methods. It simply adopts the results attained in all the nations of Europe, and have already spent in experiments four times over the millions proposed in the Senator's amendment. The ground his amendment would cover is trodden smooth and worn, yes, worn into gullies, by the experiments made in the Old World. It is supreme folly to go all over that ground again. Go directly at the best thing known and the best known processes of making it.

The Senator objects to my making the point of order on the amendment, and says I would thus prevent the consideration of useful projects. I withdraw my objection. I will make no point of order against this monstrous scheme. The Senator dare not carry it through Congress. Its only result could be to delay for years the work that the honor of the country demands to-day.

Mr. STEWART. I offer as a substitute for the amendment of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] the fortifications bill, which answers all the purposes, which has been thoroughly prepared and reported by the Committee on Coast Defenses. I offer that as a substitute for the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair can not receive it now. An amendment in the second degree is already pending. The question recurs upon the amendment to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland. The Chair states to the Senator from Nevada that an amendment in the second degree is now pending; therefore his amendment can not be received.

Mr. STEWART. What was the first degree amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The proposition of the Senator from Connecticut is an amendment.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Chair be kind enough to have the amendments pending stated? I do not mean read through, but the substance stated, so that we may see exactly what they are.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question that is before the Senate is upon concurring in the Senate with the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole upon the motion of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], which was agreed to. In the Senate the Senator from Maryland moves to amend the amendment by substituting the proposition which has been read at the desk.

Mr. STEWART. I appeal to the Senator from Maryland to allow his amendment to be modified by what I propose to send to the desk. Then there will be no question about its having been recommended by a committee, and I think it will answer his purpose.

Mr. HAWLEY. I pray the Senator from Nevada not to ask us to hear the $126,000,000 bill again. It is pending in the Senate as a separate bill. It is laid aside temporarily. It has been discussed two or three times, and to read it alone would take some time, perhaps half an hour; I do not know the exact length of time.

Mr. GORMAN. I can not consent to the request of the Senator from Nevada. I wish to have a vote on my amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland to the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs now on concurring in the Senate with the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole, upon which the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] has asked for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL (when Mr. DOLPH'S name was called). My colleague [Mr. DOLPH] is detained from the Senate on account of sickness in his family. If he were here, he would vote "yea." He is paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. FAULKNER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. I do not see him in the Chamber, and therefore will not vote.

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. I do not know how he would vote on this amendment. If he were here, I should vote "nay."

Mr. PLATT (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MCPHERSON]. I do not know how he would vote. If he were present I should vote for the amendment.

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. MANDERSON. My colleague [Mr. PADDOCK] is paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. EUSTIS]. If he were present, my colleague would vote "yea."

Mr. SPOONER. I desire to announce that the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS] is paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE].

Mr. WALTHALL. My colleague [Mr. GEORGE] is unavoidably absent to-day, and I think is paired with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BLAIR].

Mr. HEARST (after having voted in the negative). I withdraw my vote. I am paired with my colleague [Mr. STANFORD] on political questions, and as this seems to take that course I withdraw my vote.

Mr. BLAIR (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. I supposed he was present and had voted, and I voted. As I find he is absent I withdraw my vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire withdraws his vote.

Mr. RANSOM. I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. CHACE.] If he were here, I should vote "nay."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] announced a pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY], who subsequently voted.

Mr. QUAY (after having voted in the affirmative). I understand that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER], announced a pair with me. I was not aware of that, and I therefore withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 24, nays 16; as follows:

YEAS—24.

Aldrich,	Frye,	Manderson,	Sawyer,
Allison,	Gibson,	Mitchell,	Spooner,
Chandler,	Hampton,	Morgan,	Stewart,
Cullom,	Hawley,	Palmer,	Stockbridge,
Dawes,	Hoar,	Reagan,	Teller,
Evarts,	Ingalls,	Sabin,	Wilson of Iowa.

NAYS—16.

Bate,	Cockrell,	Gray,	Saulsbury,
Berry,	Coke,	Jones of Arkansas,	Vance,
Blackburn,	Daniel,	Kenna,	Walthall,
Call,	Gorman,	Pasco,	Wilson of Md.

ABSENT—36.

Beck,	Davis,	Hearst,	Pugh,
Blair,	Dolph,	Hiscock,	Quay,
Blodgett,	Edmunds,	Jones of Nevada,	Ransom,
Bowen,	Eustis,	McPherson,	Riddleberger,
Brown,	Farwell,	Morrill,	Sherman,
Butler,	Faulkner,	Paddock,	Stanford,
Cameron,	George,	Payne,	Turpie,
Chace,	Hale,	Platt,	Vest,
Colquitt,	Harris,	Plumb,	Voorhees.

So the amendment was concurred in.

Mr. CALL. I offer the following amendment as an additional section:

Five hundred thousand dollars are hereby appropriated for the construction of the necessary plant and machinery at the navy-yard at Pensacola, Fla., or elsewhere in the Southern States, and at such other suitable Government workshops or arsenals as are without such plant; such plants to be located in each of the three sections of the United States, the place to be selected by the Secretaries of War and Navy—one in the Northern States, one in the Southern States, one in the Pacific States—and such plants to be leased under terms to be offered by the Secretary of War to such persons as shall make contracts for the building of such guns.

Mr. ALLISON. I dislike to make a point of order on that amendment, but I feel compelled to do so.

Mr. CALL. I ask the Senator to withdraw the point of order for a moment.

Mr. ALLISON. I will withdraw it for the moment if the Senator desires to be heard.

Mr. CALL. My object in offering the amendment is to enable the people in all parts of the United States to participate in the benefit of this disbursement of a large amount of the public money. I have no objection to voting any reasonable amount of money for the building of guns and providing the necessary artillery of the most improved character for the use of the United States, but in every large disbursement of the public money there is something else besides the direct object of expenditure. There is a great benefit to be derived to the locality where the money is expended, and this is an object frequently in obtaining these large appropriations.

It is not the public benefit in the execution of the work proposed to be paid for, but the private benefit to the locality in the employment of men and the profits derived from the work done by contractors and men of large means. This policy of expending these great sums of money for public objects without great care to prevent its going into the hands of a few persons becomes a great public evil in all governments and is becoming so with this Government.

There is this inseparable attendant of all disbursements of the public money, and the vast revenues of this Government, so expended, create great private interests and great advantages in localities which ought to be regarded in the legislation on the subject.

If you wish to make this expenditure of the money satisfactory to the people of the country, it should be in all respects for the public benefit and not for personal benefit or for the benefit of particular localities. Now, it is perfectly easy, there is no objection that can be urged against it, for the Government to establish the necessary plants in all portions of this country, not very numerously, but one at least in each of the grand subdivisions of the country, where the mechanics, where the inventors, where the enterprise and the business capacity of the people may have opportunity to exhibit itself, and make contracts for the performance of this public work.

Why should this $6,000,000 be disbursed in one workshop under the Government or in one or two places with a few great business men in control of the works where it is expended? Why should it not be distributed in all parts of the country?

Mr. President, I shall at all times endeavor to obtain such legislation as will promote the expenditure of the public money, not in one or two localities, but as broadly and generally as possible.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Iowa to press the point of order?

Mr. ALLISON. I do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the amendment reported from any committee?

Mr. CALL. It is not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is it estimated for by the head of a Department?

Mr. CALL. It is subject to the point of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of order is well taken.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolutions; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 456) for the relief of the widow of Lieut. John F. Stewart;

A bill (H. R. 3829) for the relief of Wesley Montgomery;

A bill (H. R. 8012) for the relief of M. M. Gibson;

A bill (H. R. 10082) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of the widow and orphan children of Col. William R. McKee, late of Lexington, Ky.;"

Joint resolution (H. Res. 205) to provide temporarily for the support of the Army; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 206) to continue the provisions of a joint resolution approved June 30, 1888, entitled a "Joint resolution to provide temporarily for the expenditures of the Government."

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2624) to provide for the enlargement of the dimensions of the wharf at Fortress Monroe.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 9859) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

SUNDRY CIVIL BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire now to give notice that to-morrow morning, after the routine business is concluded, I shall ask the Senate to take up the sundry civil appropriation bill.

THE FISHERIES TREATY.

Mr. FRYE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business with open doors.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine moves that the Senate do now proceed in open executive session to the consideration of the fisheries treaty.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate is now in executive session with open doors. If there be no objection the reading of the Journal of the last open executive session will be dispensed with. The Secretary will report the treaty by its title.

The SECRETARY. Treaty between the United States and Great Britain concerning the interpretation of the convention of October 20, 1818, signed at Washington, February 15, 1888.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the motion of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] to postpone the further consideration of this treaty until the first Wednesday after the first Monday in December next.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland. Mr. President, for seventy years the extent of the rights of American fishermen, under the treaty of 1818, to ply their vocation in waters claimed to be within British jurisdiction, has been in controversy. For seventy years the claim of the British authorities to place restrictions, more or less rigorous, upon the four privileges of wood, water, shelter, and repairs, under what they have all along asserted to be a reasonable, and in fact a literal, construction of that treaty, has been practically enforced except when, for a valuable consideration moving from us, it has been waived. During this long period much of the British contention on this subject has been conceded by some of our most illustrious statesmen and diplomatists, not only to be colorable, but to be founded upon the plain reading of the treaty. Daniel Webster, in comparison with whom no one of our leading public men has been possessed of a broader, more penetrating, or more honest intellect, and no one of our Secretaries of State has with more ringing words or more burning patriotism proclaimed and enforced the rights of American citizens, openly declared, with reference to the prolific source of all these contentions, that—

By a strict and rigid construction of the treaty of 1818, fishing vessels of the United States are precluded from entering into the bays and harbors of the British provinces—

Of course, meaning the bays and harbors yielded up by us to Great Britain in that treaty—except for the purposes of shelter, repairing damages, and obtaining wood and water.

And with reference to what is properly a bay, he gave the following definition, than which no other could more fully sustain the British claim:

A bay, as is usually understood, is an arm or recess of the sea, entering from the ocean between capes or headlands, and the term is applied equally to large and small tracts of water thus situated.

And with reference to the general effect of the treaty his conclusion was that—

It was undoubtedly an oversight in the convention of 1818 to make so large a concession to England.

Other and leading American statesmen have again and again conceded that the controversy as to the true construction of this treaty was a most difficult and delicate contention. And what is even more significant, the practical conduct of our Government during this long period has virtually admitted that our rights under this treaty are so ill-defined, uncertain, and liable to dispute that it has been safer and more honest to trust to diplomacy for relief than boldly and confidently to proclaim ourselves to be clearly in the right and then to adopt the policy of retaliation or to appeal to the arbitrament of arms. And it does seem to me very strange that Senators who so boldly and defiantly proclaim that the day for negotiation has passed do not see the dilemma into which they are plunging. If our rights under the treaty of 1818, or under any other conventions, are so clear and well founded that it is unworthy of a great and magnanimous nation to submit them to diplomatic ascertainment and regulation, then manifestly, those rights being the same now, both in their nature and extent, as they long have been, our continued tame submission to what we claim to have been a contemptuous and lawless disregard of those rights, as evidenced by what we term many oppressive and unjustifiable regulations and restrictions imposed by the British-American authorities upon our fishing vessels, and by the seizure and confiscation of those vessels for their breach, in defiance of what we declare to be plain treaty stipulations, has all along been and is now a standing humiliation, disgrace, and stigma upon our national character which nothing but the bloody hand of war can efface.

According to the dictates of true national honor we should have long ago sought redress, and by our lofty attitude now assumed we are doubly bound to seek redress by an appeal to arms, and not through that petty and contemptible species of retaliation which would delight the souls and fill the coffers of a few New England owners of fishing vessels by granting them what they value next to heavenly bliss—a monopoly of the American fish market. Mr. President, such is the limited and selfish use to which leading New England men already seem to wish that the law of the last year, commonly known as the "retaliation act," shall be applied by the President. To quote the language of the president of the American Fishery Union, in April, 1887, just after that act was passed, which language has been recently in substance re-echoed by distinguished New England representatives, all the use of that act they desire is "to prohibit Canadian-caught fish from entry into the ports of the United States."

Doubtless, sir, it would be a New England millennium to be allowed to go, with the full swing of her treaty rights, into Canadian waters and there catch fish ad libitum, and then to say to the Canadians, that "the fish caught by New England fishermen in Canadian waters shall entirely exclude Canadian-caught fish from the American markets." And that pleasure would be in no small degree heightened by the reflection that the whole American people would thus be rendered tributary, with respect to one of their most important articles of food, to a few owners of New England fishing smacks, largely manned by Canadian fishermen, working for wages less than Americans have been used or are willing to receive. It is to be hoped that the President will never allow great and delicate powers, intended to vindicate the national honor from what are claimed to be grave outrages upon national rights, to be used solely for such narrow and selfish ends.

Mr. President, the retaliation act of March 3, 1887, imposes no absolute and imperative duty upon the President, nor does it impose any duty the non-performance of which can in any proper sense be considered an act of official non-feasance or malfeasance. That act was passed immediately after a large number of the seizures and fines or confiscations were made or imposed upon American vessels in the waters of the Dominion. In spite of the pressure which a knowledge of these facts brought to bear upon Congress, we did not order the President to declare non-intercourse or to enter upon any species of retaliation. We only directed him, after being satisfied of certain facts, or rather of mixed propositions of law and fact, to exercise his discretion in the premises, and that was precisely the same discretion which it had been, was then, and ever since has been, with full knowledge of all the facts in our own power to exercise.

We only armed the President with the power in his discretion to manage the questions involved in a given way; but he was already possessed of a higher constitutional power to settle these questions by negotiating a treaty. It would seem simply absurd to say that the grant to him of a legislative power and discretion suspended or in any manner modified his constitutional power as an independent branch of the Government to deal with the subject. And still further, it not only seems absurd, but it looks like a species of self-stultification for us to charge it upon the President as an act of culpable remissness that he has not begun to enact this drama of retaliation when we refused, under circumstances equally as urgent and with just as full means of knowledge, to assume any such responsibility. The gravity of the matter does not consist in conferring the power and discretion, but in its exercise.

Retaliation, with a high-spirited nation like Great Britain, engaged in the enforcement of what she has for many long years claimed and enforced as rights under a treaty of ancient standing, and which she is committed before the world to maintain, or else ignominiously to back down, might well be only a little more circuitous road to war. Especially might this be the case if the aggressive and vindictive spirit which seems to animate the utterances of our New England friends upon this subject could be widely infused into the minds and hearts of our people. Doubtless, for different reasons, Great Britain and the United States are not desirous to enter upon a deadly grapple; but it might be as well, in addition to the unseemliness of such an exhibition, for neither side to indulge in a swashbuckler style of talking and acting, lest we should glide into the horrors of war, when by the exercise of a reasonable discretion it might be avoided with no dishonor to either side.

And now, Mr. President, when a President of the United States wisely, humanely, patriotically seeks to avoid this stormy and dangerous road of retaliation, and, as his predecessors have done, tries to effect a peaceable solution of all these difficulties by proposing a treaty which, if it be not everything that could be desired, might, if Senators would honestly and earnestly discharge their duties as his constitutional advisers, by amendments be made, both to Great Britain and the United States, a happy issue out of all their angry strifes, to meet such a proposed treaty with a torrent of special pleading, with a labored effort to exaggerate every concession to the other side, and to minimize every concession to our side, and by loud and embittered speeches to excite passion, to arouse prejudices, to assail motives, to cover with obloquy the President and his Secretary of State who are doing their best to discharge a patriotic and delicate duty, to repudiate our plain duties as his advisory council, to forsake the universal policy and practice of this Government for one hundred years, and to turn this Chamber into an arena, not for honest and wholesome counsel to the President, but for public and envenomed denunciation of his honest efforts to maintain peaceful relations with a neighboring power by the use of purely constitutional means, and finally, in rude and disrespectful terms, such as one department of this Government should not use in characterizing the acts of another, to denounce the outcome of all the President's toils and labors "as a dishonorable, humiliating, and cowardly surrender," is to present a spectacle such as this country has never before witnessed and such as it is to be hoped we will never see again, which is highly discreditable to our institutions, and which the impartial page of history will be sure to condemn.

And when to all this is added the unfair, ungenerous, and uncandid efforts to stifle all discussion upon this treaty by charging that every Senator who supports it, as well as the President and his advisers who proposed it, are siding with "our friends, the enemy," and are, in fact, traitors to our country and its cause, then the very acme of unreasoning partisanship and of local greed is reached, and the purpose which was entertained in abnegating our real functions as a part of the treaty-making power and in refusing honestly to act as counselors of the President in the discharge of his high functions is plainly manifested. At the risk of one of the most destructive wars of modern times, Senators are seeking to gain a few votes in a Presidential contest.

Mr. President, that man would be a moral coward of the rankest character who would be deterred by such narrow and unworthy flings from arguing this question on its real merits. To any fair and honest mind the true question in this case is not whether the British or American argument on the points at issue is the sounder; but it is simply this, whether the British contention has in it so much that is reasonable as to render the questions at issue honestly debatable ones, and such as honest and reasonable men, earnestly desiring to avoid embittering strife and possible war, can hope by mutual concessions to adjust. Of course, if the history of our treaties with Great Britain about these fisheries can not be truthfully unfolded; if the text of these treaties can not be fairly analyzed and construed; if the principles of law and the dictates of common sense can not be applied reasonably to expound them; if the opinions of our wise men in the past can not be invoked to guide us; if to do any or all of these things, however honestly, is to subject us to a charge of treason, then are we simply called upon to abdicate our functions as reasonable beings, and to follow some Boanerges wherever passion or prejudice may lead us, be it to costly retaliation or to ruinous war. But until the goal of war is reached, surely every just and sensible man must prefer to be guided by the lights of reason and experience. After that goal is passed, then it is time enough to taunt any man with being a traitor who does not act according to the maxim, "Our country, right or wrong."

Mr. President, I do not propose to enter minutely into the history of the negotiations with respect to our fishing treaties. I do not desire to appropriate the time such a course would require, and it would only serve to introduce side issues which would only becloud the real questions before us. What are they? First, that Great Britain construes the treaty of 1818 so as to exclude our fishermen from the right to fish in the great bays which indent the coasts of the Dominion, and that we propose by the treaty now under consideration weakly to surrender to her so large a portion of their area; secondly, that she refuses, under her construction of that treaty and of subsequent conventions with us, to grant to our fishing vessels such reciprocal commercial privileges as we grant to her vessels of like description; and thirdly, that Great Britain and her colonies have imposed upon our fishermen harsh and harassing regulations, unjustified by any provisions in the treaty of 1818, and that the proposed treaty does nothing that is appreciable towards removing these oppressive restrictions.

Now, Mr. President, the treaty of 1783 conceded to the people of the United States almost as full rights of fishery as the subjects of Great Britain enjoyed in all British American waters that were or were claimed to be within her dominion, and these rights were enjoyed by our people up to the war of 1812. In 1815 a peace was concluded, in which nothing was said about rights of fishery. But Great Britain then contended that these American rights of fishing in British American waters were but treaty privileges granted to our people by the treaty of 1873, which the war just ended had abrogated, under an asserted general principle of the law of nations. Our negotiators at Ghent contended that our fishery rights in such waters were as permanently ours as our territorial lines delimited by the treaty of 1783. It by no means concerns the present argument which position was the correct one. The difficulty was compromised by conceding to our people some of the rights we had enjoyed, and by a renunciation on our part of other rights theretofore enjoyed by us. The concessions to us are as follows:

> The inhabitants of the said United States shall have forever, in common with the subjects of His Britannic Majesty, the liberty to take fish of every kind on that part of the southern coast of Newfoundland which extends from Cape Ray to the Rameau Islands, on the western and northern coast of Newfoundland; from the said Cape Ray to the Quirpon Islands, on the shores of the Magdalen Islands, and also on the coasts, bays, harbors, and creeks, from Mount Joly, on the southern coast of Labrador, to and through the Straits of Belle Isle, and thence northwardly, indefinitely, along the coast, without prejudice, however, to any of the exclusive rights of the Hudson Bay Company. And that the American fishermen shall also have liberty forever to dry and cure fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbors, and creeks of the southern part of the coast of Newfoundland hereabove described, and of the coast of Labrador; but, so soon as the same or any portion thereof shall be settled, it shall not be lawful for the said fishermen to dry or cure fish at such portion so settled without previous agreement for such purpose with the inhabitants, proprietors, or possessors of the ground.

And our renunciation is in the following words:

> And the United States hereby renounce forever any liberty heretofore enjoyed or claimed by the inhabitants thereof to take, dry, or cure fish, on or within 3 marine miles of any of the coasts, bays, creeks, or harbors of His Britannic Majesty's dominions in America not included within the above-mentioned limits: Provided, however, That the American fishermen shall be admitted to enter such bays or harbors for the purpose of shelter and of repairing damages therein, of purchasing wood, and of obtaining water, and for no other purpose whatever. But they shall be under such restrictions as may be necessary to prevent their taking, drying, or curing fish therein, or in any other manner whatever abusing the privileges hereby reserved to them.

Mr. President, the controversies which have since arisen have not grown out of the concessions in the treaty to us, but out of our clause of renunciation. What did we mean, and what did Great Britain understand us to mean, and what is the natural import of the words, when we renounced the right "to take, dry, or cure fish on or within 3 miles of the coasts, bays, creeks, or harbors of His Britannic Majesty's dominions in America not within the above-mentioned limits," that is, the limits of the waters conceded to us? According to the plain grammatical construction, no one can doubt that the preposition "on" and the prepositional phrase "within 3 miles of" each relate to and qualify the word "bays" in precisely the same manner and to the same extent that they do the word "coasts," and that the language used in the treaty naturally and reasonably interdicts the taking, drying, or curing of fish by American fishermen on or within 3 miles of any bay as well as coast within the reserved British limits, the outside limit of such a bay being a line drawn from cape to cape, as is ever done by nations claiming sovereignty over such waters.

It therefore requires no great American statesman, like Webster, to inform us that such is the literal meaning of the language of the treaty. And that this is not only its literal meaning, but also the actual meaning of the parties thereto, is evidenced by the fact that the American fishermen are not even to be permitted, under the proviso immediately subjoined, to enter such bays for any other purpose than to procure wood, water, shelter, and repairs, and are even then to be under such restrictions as may be necessary to prevent their taking, drying, or curing fish in said bays. Whatever, then, is the true meaning of the word "bays" in this treaty, if human language can be made certain, we can not enter them to fish therein, if included in the limits renounced by us.

We are then brought, sir, fairly to the question, What is the meaning of the word "bays" in the treaty? What did the parties mean when they used this word? The patient and laborious researches of the able Senator from Mississippi, and his lucid statement of their result, do not leave the remotest ground for a doubt upon the meaning of the high contracting parties in the use of this word in the treaty of 1818. For almost two hundred years prior to that date the great fisheries on or abreast of the coasts of British America were the subject of negotiation between France and England, and between England and the United States. Those fisheries, extending for many leagues out into the ocean, and embracing a great sea like the Gulf of St. Lawrence, in all those treaties were expressly declared and held to be dependent on and appurtenant to these coasts, and to belong to the nation owning them, subject to such concession of right as that proprietary power might make to any other country. And as the major proposition must necessarily include the minor, this claim and concession all around must have been and in fact was that arms of the sea deeply indenting the coasts of Canada and the adjacent colonies and islands, and called bays, as Mr. Webster says, "large and small," must have been and were the subject of exclusive ownership by that nation owning those portions of North America.

Never, down to 1818, was this doctrine in all its latitude denied by England, France, or the United States. During the negotiations preceding the treaty of Ghent the English negotiator, Lord Bathurst, did exclude the open ocean and the seas away from the coasts as properly the subject of national ownership. With this liberalized view, Mr. Adams did not seem to agree. Certainly neither of them gave the slightest intimation of an intent to deny the claim and right of national sovereignty over the bays, great and small, belonging to British America. And upon every principle of rational construction we must hold that they meant bays, great and small, when they used this word in the treaty.

And, sir, it seems to me that the language used in the treaty will inevitably lead us to the same conclusion. The clause of concession to us gives to our fishermen the free right to fish on all bays, great or small, on all the coasts of Newfoundland or Labrador where we are allowed to fish at all. And with the same generality with which the conceded waters are described and granted, are the reserved and renounced waters described as "all the bays, harbors, and creeks not included" in the limits conceded to us, and we are forbidden to fish within 3 miles of any of them.

A glance at the map, sir, will show that the concessions to us nowhere reach the continent of North America till we get high up into the cold and inhospitable regions of Labrador, which were considered unlikely ever to become the seat of a numerous and busy population. Taking the language of the treaty and the character of the coasts reserved by Great Britain, together with the prior understanding as to the ownership of these fisheries, is there not a strong and reasonable ground for argument on her part that this treaty of 1818 was intended to be a partition of fishing rights in these northern seas, whereof the free and perpetual rights of fishery were given to us upon certain coasts and bays of Newfoundland and Labrador and of the Magdalen Islands, with rights of drying and curing fish on their shores; and we, in return, were to surrender all such rights of fishery on or within 3 miles of all the shores, bays, etc., of all the mainland south of Mount Jolly in Labrador and also of certain coasts of Newfoundland?

And in this point of view, which is not only reasonable but strictly in accordance with the whole history of fishery claims in these waters for centuries, it is by no means strange that Great Britain should construe the word "bays" not as sheets of water, such as are now usually claimed to lie within the territorial sovereignty of a nation, but as bodies of water geographically so called when the treaty of 1818 was made, and which the United States, in the partition made, undertook that her fishermen should not use. Certainly it was fully competent for the United States to enter into such a compact even with regard to the Bay of Fundy, which, it is understood, Great Britain has released from any treaty rights she may hold therein, whilst she still strenuously insists upon her exclusive rights over all other bays on the mainland south of Mount Joly and on her reserved coasts in Eastern Newfoundland.

But, sir, if this theory of partition, which is logically based upon the language of the treaty as well as upon the plain history of these fisheries, and which, if the tables were turned, we would vigorously contend for, be left out of view, it must be considered as highly reasonable that Great Britain should place another construction on the language of the treaty of 1818, which is not only sensible in itself but such as any other civilized nation, and no one more certainly than the United States, would contend for under similar circumstances. The continental shores of British North America, north of the Bay of Fundy and south of Mount Joly, in Labrador, is indented by numerous bays, some of them, and especially the Bay of Chaleur, penetrating deep into the bowels of the land, and making themselves, as it were, a part of the country itself.

Great Britain has always claimed these bays as being within the local jurisdiction of her dependencies, and has enforced her claims, though not perhaps with that continuousness and exclusiveness which she would have exercised had not their shores been comparatively unsettled. I do not believe there is a civilized nation on the globe, and least of all our own, situated as is Great Britain, that would not to the bitter end claim the exclusive sovereignty over the most and probably all of these bays, and particularly the noble Bay of Chaleur, as absolutely essential to their national honor, prosperity, and security. More particularly will this be the case when the shores of these bays become more extensively the seats of an industrious people and of the marts of a busy commerce.

Mr. President, in addition to the reasonableness of this construction of the treaty of 1818, it would have been marvelous, indeed, if an enlightened commercial nation like Great Britain had not insisted upon placing in that treaty just such a clause as she has always contended was there, as the whole previous history of these fisheries would have led us to expect to be there, as the plain and natural meaning of the words would indicate to be there, and as nothing but labored and artificial reasoning on our part can most doubtfully expunge from it. It requires no enlarged acquaintance with the principles of international law, nor with the usages of civilized nations, to understand what was Great Britain's object in engrafting such a provision upon that treaty. It was to reassert her exclusive territorial sovereignty, and especially her exclusive rights of fishery, in these land-locked waters, especially upon the coasts of her mainland, where her people were already beginning to settle, and where it might well be expected they would soon build up busy centers of commerce. It was with a view of applying to these bays and harbors the received principles of international law which, under the treaty of 1783, she was forced to ignore with reference to them that, "the maratime territory of every state extends to the ports, harbors, bays, mouths of rivers, and adjacent parts of the sea inclosed by headlands belonging to such state."

I know, sir, it is contended that Great Britain can consider no sheet of water a bay which is more than 6 miles wide at its mouth, upon the principle that no country could, in 1818, claim a sovereignty over any body of water over which she could not exercise a defensive power from her shores, and that such power was measured in 1818 by the extreme range of the old-fashioned cannon, which was only 3 miles, and the double of which was 6 miles. This rule is really not worthy of being called a principle of international law.

Nothing that is so variable as the range of a cannon can ever be properly or reasonably made a basis of property rights. That range is now 5 miles, and no one can tell what it will be ten years hence. As defensive power is its underlying principle, of course the rule must change with the projectile force of the explosive material that may be used. The latest writers on public law declare that the old 6-mile rule is obsolete, and that it is now, or ought to be, extended to 10 miles, and nations are by treaty adopting this new rule. It soon may be 15 miles. In other words, of all possible bases of rights of property it is the most unsatisfactory.

But there is another principle, sir, broader and more philosophical, which even falls far short of the doctrine advanced by Jefferson and others of our older statesmen, and which has been indorsed by Chancellor Kent and other leading publicists, and judicially applied by the highest courts of England and of this country, upon which the construction claimed by Great Britain for this treaty can be based. It is the one just now suggested, that when an arm of the sea, which is not, like the Bay of Fundy, so broad at its mouth as to be considered a part of the open sea, deeply penetrates the territory of any people, so as to become virtually a part of it, and as to render it necessary for the commercial, fiscal, and defensive purposes of that people to exercise exclusive control over its waters, then it becomes that people's right to do so, and no other nation is justified in attempting to gainsay the exercise of any such right.

Upon this principle, sir, were both the United States and England acting, and had long been acting, when they framed the treaty of 1818; and each then became and is now estopped from limiting the claim of the other over any such areas of water as those now in question by any such narrow rule as the 6-mile limit. Upon no other principle can the exclusive jurisdiction of Great Britain over the Bristol Channel be supported, which is 20 miles wide at its mouth, and is 12 miles wide after it has penetrated some 40 miles into the interior of British territory. Upon no other principle can we justify the full and exclusive jurisdiction claimed and exercised by us for centuries over the Chesapeake and Delaware Bays, the former of which is 12 and the latter is 14 miles wide at its mouth, whilst each widens to 20 miles above its capes. These and similar claims were asserted and practically enforced by the two countries when they were framing the treaty of 1818.

But, Mr. President, the majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations, in their report, have made the admission that their 3 miles limit from the shore is not absolute, nor is it applicable to large indenting bays, when they have been the subject of "the prescriptive exercise of dominion." This concession was wrung from them, no doubt, by the fact that our own country was then, and ever had been, widely departing from their narrow rule, in the case of the Chesapeake and other bays and sounds, of the possession of which all the powers on earth could not deprive us. But it did not occur to them that from 1713 down to 1818, first, France, then Great Britain, and then Great Britain and the United States as tenants in common, had claimed and exercised exclusive sovereignty over these very disputed bays as parts of that great fishery ground "on the open seas, and in all gulfs, bays, and along the coasts of Nova Scotia and Labrador," which were, as John Quincy Adams, during the negotiations on this subject in 1816, declared to the English diplomatist, "by the dispensation and laws of nature, in substance, only parts of one fishery," and were, after the expulsion of the French, "the exclusive possession of the British nation."

If now it be conceded, as Lord Bathurst justly contended in 1818, that the open seas, like the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the banks of Newfoundland, could not be subject to any national sovereignty, but were open to all nations, then, upon every principle of just reasoning, the large bays, which are not really parts of the open ocean, like the Bay of Fundy, but which, like the Bristol Channel in Great Britain and the Chesapeake and Delaware Bays in the United States, deeply penetrate the coasts of British America and in every reasonable point of view become parts of that territory, and in which Great Britain and the United States had jointly up to the war of 1812 exercised exclusive rights of fishery, and which neither party to the treaty of 1818 expressly or impliedly declared to be public waters, must have still remained the subject of what the committee term "the prescriptive exercise of dominion" theretofore extended over them; and in the partition then made Great Britain could and did rightfully concede to us the full and free rights of fishery in all the bays, large and small, within the areas delimited in our favor by that treaty, and the United States could and did renounce the right to fish in all bays, great and small, within the limits reserved by Great Britain. It seems to me there is no escape from this conclusion.

So far, then, sir, from being a proposition so sure that it should not be made the subject of any further negotiation, I hold it to be much more than doubtful whether the high contracting parties, in framing the treaty of 1818, ever intended, when they spoke of bays therein, to limit the word to small bays only 6 miles wide at their mouths. And whilst it may be true, as stated by the Senator from Maine, that the Bay of Chaleurs may again become the seat of such mackerel fisheries as would rejoice the souls of New England fishermen, and may be the theater where Senators may experience the bliss of capturing the king of fish with a fly and rod, I can not see that the richness or delights of these fisheries at all strengthen our treaty claims to their possession. If self-interest is to be made the ground of our action, I do assert most confidently that no power on earth is more interested to maintain the principle contended for by Great Britain as being imbedded in this treaty than the United States, both now and in the future, especially with reference to our great northwestern fisheries, whose importance time will develop into proportions such as will throw our northeastern interests into comparative insignificance.

It would be as well for us to remember that it might be highly inconvenient and prejudicial for us to have any narrow and selfish views, now insisted upon by us as to this side of the continent, hereafter thrust home upon us on the other; and even now on these eastern coasts who would not feel outraged if our Government could and should grant the rights of fishery in the Chesapeake Bay, for instance, to the people of Canada, whereby their fishermen should be induced to swarm down into our waters and give us a taste of the bitter experiences which those people have had for a century to endure? And I have not the least doubt if a bay just like the Bay of Chaleurs deeply penetrated the territory of New England, so as virtually to become a part thereof, with its shores dotted with cities and towns, and with a great local commerce from shore to shore, and Great Britain should claim the right to fish in its waters up to a line within 3 miles of its coasts, or otherwise to interfere with their dominion over it, the old Bay State would be the first, with holy horror and martial fervor, to summon her sister States to the rescue, and doubtless hundreds of thousands of men would spring to the front to rescue her from the voracity of the British lion.

Sir, I fear, with nations as with farmers, it makes a world of difference whose ox is being gored. And I further fear that to contend that there is no substantial basis to the claim of Great Britain to exclusive sovereignty over the bays on the coasts renounced by us is to ask the enlightened sentiment of the world to shut its eyes to facts and arguments. To proclaim that our case is so clear with respect to our right to fish in those bays as to be no fit subject of negotiation is rather to stultify ourselves than to make a candid and sober appeal to the enlightened sentiment of mankind. And if this be treason, I am afraid that as for myself, and I speak for no one else, our New England friends will have to make the most of it.

Mr. President, if there is any subject which has been made the occasion of louder complaint and deeper stress than another in the course of this debate, it is this, that Great Britain has denied to our fishing vessels all those commercial rights which we have granted to her vessels of the same kind. As a protest against her failure to observe the rules of international comity, our complaints may be, and doubtles are to a large extent, just. But we are not now discussing rules of comity or of voluntary reciprocity, but what is the true construction of our treaties and conventions with that power. From 1783 down to 1830, though we had free commercial intercourse with Great Britain herself, we held no such relations with her North American dependencies. The treaty of 1783 conceded to American fishermen extensive rights of fishery in their waters, but conferred no commercial rights.

The treaty of 1818 abridged the extent of our fishing rights, but gave our fishing vessels the right to enter their reserved harbors and bays for wood, water, shelter and repairs, "and for no other purposes whatever." And then the treaty proceeds to ordain that "they shall be under such restrictions as may be necessary to prevent their taking, drying, or curing fish therein, or in any manner whatever abusing the privileges hereby reserved to them." Here is no grant of commercial rights, but only certain restricted concessions of rights of hospitality, intended in a very guarded way to be solely auxiliary to the exercise of the rights of fishery in the waters conceded to us.

It will thus be seen, sir, that Great Britain specially reserved to herself and her provincial authorities, within the harbors and bays into which our fishermen were to be permitted to enter for the four enumerated purposes, the power to place such restrictions upon the exercise of those privileges as we would naturally reserve the power to impose upon strangers admitted to such privileges in the waters of the Chesapeake or Delaware Bays, which are admitted to be fully within our territorial jurisdiction. It is easy to see how difficult it is to draw the line where a sovereign power shall stay its hand under the reservation, within its undoubted jurisdiction of the right to place such restrictions as may be necessary to prevent the abuse of privileges granted. We have never been able firmly to say to the British authorities, "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther." And the consequence has been that our fishermen have been subjected for seventy years to many losses and annoyances, and all we have attempted to do has been to complain, and at times to grant important concessions to Great Britain in order to purchase for them temporary relief from these oppressive regulations.

And, Mr. President, is it strange that Great Britain and her dependencies should guard what they conceive to be their rights in the premises in the most jealous manner? It seems necessary, in order to fully understand this question, that we should take a view of it generally overlooked. Under the treaty of 1783, Great Britain made concessions to our fishermen of an extraordinary character. She constituted her own subjects and the citizens of the United States tenants in common of all rights of fishery on her coasts and bays. Such rights of fishery are generally considered, and are held by our laws to be, valuable rights of property. Such extraordinary concessions by one people to another may well be attended with startling consequences. The people to whose territories these fisheries naturally and legally belong outside of treaty stipulations, may, by the superior enterprise, skill, and capital of the favored foreigners, be supplanted in the appropriation of the wealth-producing resources, which nature bestowed upon their localities. In this way bitter rivalry and jealousy may be aroused amongst the people thus outrun in the race.

Such was notably the result in these far northeastern waters. Under the potent influences of fishing bounties on the one hand and of protective duties on the other, New England fleets swarmed into these waters and outstripped the people living on their shores in the prosecution of this lucrative business right in sight of their own homes. These people hailed the war of 1812 as the set time for banishing American fishermen from their fishing grounds. But Monroe, Adams, Rush, and Gallatin, whose able guardianship of our interests at that juncture was, in spite of all latter-day criticism, a guaranty that everything was done that could be done for our interests, retained for us immense areas of British waters which might otherwise have become exclusive British property for the uses of our fishermen, held on to our shore privileges of curing and drying fish, and, even as to the waters renounced by us, procured for our fishermen the right to enter for the purposes of wood, water, shelter, and repairs.

When we remember that the shores of the bays, harbors, and other waters renounced by us were and are generally the seats of the largest settlements and of the most growing commercial populations in those northern regions, and that these are the waters in which vessels entering under the cover of these treaty privileges would be most likely to abuse them in the interests of poaching and smuggling, and when we remember the extreme jealousy of the people in those regions over the use by the American fishermen of the reserved ports and harbors as their bases of supplies in the prosecution of their common business in waters which were and are naturally the exclusive property of these Canadian people, it will not seem so strange that the right of entry by our vessels into these renounced bays and harbors should be confined to what seems the insignificant privileges just named, and that even their enjoyment should be hedged around by the right to enact and by the actual enactment of such strict and embarrassing regulations.

The British and Canadians well knew, too, what is well known to every State in America that has to deal with such subjects, that when fishermen once get the right to enter fishing grounds which are to them forbidden in the prosecution of their business, the very nature of the element on which they roam encourages the poaching propensities which seem to them natural and almost irresistible, and that of all marauders they are the most daring and irrepressible. The tendency of fishermen to engage in smuggling in the older times was well known, and is illustrated by the saying of the elder Adams, that if forced off from the land 3 leagues, rather than 3 miles, the American fisherman "would smuggle eternally." Hence when fishing vessels were permitted to enter such renounced waters, not for commercial purposes, but still with opportunities thereby given to trample upon commercial regulations, and not for fishing purposes, but with the chance and the ever-present temptation to spurn the inhibition to ply their trade in forbidden and on account of their vast extent largely unprotected waters, it would be strange indeed if the territorial sovereignty did not watch them closely and tie them up by the strictest provisions of a police nature.

Thus, sir, under the treaty of 1818 American fishing vessels held in British-American waters a position that was utterly unique. They could fish on vast stretches of waters within British sovereignty, they could land on long lines of unoccupied British shores to dry and cure fish, and they could enter British bays and harbors for wood, water, shelter, and repairs, and for no other purposes. Thus it will be seen that the rights of our fishermen in those waters solely grew out of and were circumscribed by their character as fishermen, and the restrictions and disabilities under which they labored sprang entirely out of that character and the danger there was of its abuse, and out of the unwillingness of the Canadians to grant the free use of Canadian harbors and ports in order to aid rivals to outstrip them in Canadian waters in a common business.

In the progress of events, Mr. President, a more liberal commercial policy sprang up in the world, and nations began to pass what were called reciprocity laws, the object of which was to remove by one country commercial restrictions in favor of another which would return such act of liberality. In 1830 the United States and Great Britain made such an arrangement, which embraced for the first time the North American dependencies of the latter country. The President's proclamation and the British order in council show the nature and extent of this arrangement. The former, or rather the circular of the Secretary of the Treasury under it, directed—the entry of British vessels laden with the productions of Great Britain and her colonies.

And the order in council directed that—the ships of the United States may import from the United States into the British possessions abroad the produce of those States.

It would seem clear to any fair and impartial mind that these orders referred solely to strictly commercial intercourse, and then, too, to American vessels importing into the British possessions "the produce of the States." On its face it has no reference to fishing vessels, which were then and always had been understood to be a distinct and separate class of vessels, and whose cargoes of fish caught in British-American waters certainly were not "the produce of the States."

Mr. President, one of the best proofs of the true construction of an agreement is the contemporaneous and long-continued sense in which its provisions were understood and acted on by those who made it and whose interests it alone affects. After 1830 the proviso of the treaty of 1818 was understood by England and her colonies to be in full force, and that proviso and all statutes passed to carry out its restrictive features were as rigidly enforced as they had been before, up to the treaty of 1854, without a single claim preferred by our Government that the arrangement of 1830 had any such meaning as that now contended for by the majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations. If any construction of that agreement was ever suggested in any negotiation or communication with Great Britain, or in any document put forth by any branch of our Government, up to a very recent date, Senators are invited to produce it. Without any further argument, this continued practical agreement ought to settle the question of construction.

Mr. President, the American claim as to the true construction of the arrangement of 1830 simply amounts to this, that the executive acts done under that arrangement, without any exercise of the treaty-making power, and without the remotest reference to the question of the fisheries, annul the treaty of 1818, and the whole system of British and Canadian laws which had been passed in pursuance to that treaty to regulate the rights of American fishermen in British waters, and wipe out all the grave distinctions, up to that time insisted upon by the British authorities, between fishing and commercial vessels. This British order in council, the majority report asserts, repeals the proviso of the treaty of 1818, without any allusion to it or the rights regulated by it, and reverses a policy which England and her colonies had up to that moment held to be vital to their interests.

Before that time American fishermen could only enter Canadian reserved bays and harbors for wood, water, shelter, and repairs under close surveillance and the strictest police regulations. After that date it is claimed that our fishermen could enter those bays, ports, and harbors for any and al lcommercial purposes, and could freely buy every kind of supplies and outfits. They could make these bays, harbors, and ports full bases of supplies for all these voyages into the Canadian fishing grounds open to them, and could make use of all these privileges to aid them either in smuggling or in poaching upon reserved waters. Thus, without any commercial object at all in view, but under cover of a distinctly commercial arrangement, they can, under this view, use commercial rights, privileges, and exemptions in British American ports, bays, and harbors to further their distinctive fishing rights in British American waters, and to evade local commercial regulations and plain provisions of the treaty of 1818. Who can believe that Great Britain ever intended such results to flow from their order in council? Who does not know that if we had openly claimed such results to be intended by that order it would have never been issued? Is there, then, no force in the British contention, that the construction of that order, which works out such results, is highly unreasonable?

Moreover, sir, is there not much force in the British position that this so-called reciprocity, so far as fishing vessels are concerned, is all on one side. The fishing vessels of the British provinces have no fishing rights whatever in American waters. Although we choose to construe the arrangement of 1830 so as to give their fishing vessels a free right to buy supplies in our ports, yet such supplies will not avail them to enter into competition with American fishermen in American waters, and can scarcely have any other effect than to swell the sales and gains of New England merchants who vend them. But give to our fishermen in British waters the right to buy bait, supplies, and outfits of all kinds in their ports and harbors, with the further right also otherwise claimed of transshipping their cargoes, so that our fishermen can use every facility of land as well as sea which the provinces afford for their fishing expeditions and for the transportation of their fish to their home markets as fully as if those provinces belonged to them, and so that they can thus make two or three fishing voyages where they could before make one, and then superadd in their favor our protective duties on fish; and then the British-American fishermen might as well quit the business, except for home consumption. We can shut them out of our own markets, and by the use of their own territory successfully compete with them in the markets of the world. Who can wonder that the fishermen of British North America refuse such a one-sided reciprocity, and call upon their Government to protect them from it?

If the sides were reversed, what a howl our fishermen would raise. Sir, it is a shrewd game, worthy of New England ingenuity, to construe an arrangement with Great Britain of a general commercial character, so as to cover the fishery question and to obliterate the whole British contention upon one branch of it, to which subjects that power and our own Government up to recent date never considered them to relate, and thus to acquire all we want to promote our fishery interests, both on British land and sea, without giving any equivalent whatever for the advantages gained. If there be anything but rhetoric in the idea of vassalage suggested by the majority report on this subject it would rather seem to be the aim and effect of the construction contended for by the majority report to impose that degrading condition upon the people of the Dominion than to uplift it from our own shoulders.

But, sir, in aid of the American claim to the rightful exercise by our fishing vessels of full commercial privileges in the harbors and bays of the Dominion, even to the transshipment of their cargoes of fish across its territory, it has been and is confidently asserted that we possess this latter right under Article XXIX of the treaty of 1871. And the majority report of the Committee on Foreign Relations goes to the extent of averring that "the proceedings before the Halifax Commission distintly demonstrated that under Article XXIX the right to transship fish was understood by the British to be included, and without any conditions depending upon the force of any other articles in the treaty." How that majority could have ever arrived at this conclusion, it is dfficult to understand, whon one of the distinct statements in the British case presented before that tribunal most explicitly declares—

That freedom to transfer cargoes, to outfit vessels, to buy supplies, to procure bait, and engage sailors, are secondary and incidental privileges which materially enhance the principal concessions to the United States.

So far from considering this right of transshipment a primary right under Article XXIX, they take it for granted that article has nothing whatever to do with the subject, and they present it as a secondary and incidental privilege growing out of the fishery articles of that treaty, which range from the eighteenth to the twenty-fifth inclusive. And every one who has read the treaty knows that under its Article XXII no claim could be presented before the Halifax Commission for any compensation to Great Britain which did not spring out of Article XVIII, which gave us all our enlarged privileges of fishing and curing and drying fish. Thus, the mere presentation of a claim for compensation for transshipment under Article XVIII is a full affirmation on the part of the British that the right to transship does not arise under Article XXIX. The proceedings before that commission, then, instead of "distinctly demonstrating" that the British understood the right to transfer fish to arise out of this Article XXIX, clearly prove the exact contrary.

Still further, Mr. President, Mr. Foster, the American agent and counsel before that commission, no where, so far as I have been able to discover, has given the slightest hint that he claimed the right of transshipment to spring out of Article XXIX of the treaty of 1871. Near the close of his answer to the British case he answers the argument of the British counsel as to the various incidental and reciprocal advantages arising out of the fishery articles of the treaty by denying that such advantages are the subject of compensation at all—

Because the treaty of 1871 confers no such rights on the inhabitants of the United States, who now enjoy them merely by sufferance, and who can at any time be deprived of them by the enforcement of existing laws or the re-enactment of former oppressive statutes.

And still further, on page 1541 of the proceedings of that commission, he reiterates the same argument, and adds that he plants himself—upon the plain language of the treaty, in which not one word can be found relating to the right to buy or sell, to traffic or transfer cargoes.

Meaning, of course, cargoes of fish.

And Mr. Dana, another of the American counsel, in his argument before the Halifax commission in 1877, asked the question:

Does the treaty of 1871 give the United States the right to buy bait, ice, provisions, supplies for vessels, and to tranship cargoes within the British Dominion?

He himself answered:

I say the treaty of Washington has not given us these rights.

Thus Mr. Foster and Mr. Dana, our able representatives at Halifax, evidently thought, as did the British counsel, that our privilege of transferring fish across Canada arose out of our enlarged rights to fish and to land at pleasure on Canadian shores in connection with our fishing pursuits, joined to that other important provision which allowed fish to go free into either country if caught in American or Canadian waters.

The treaty of 1854, granting similar enlarged fishing and shore rights, as well as free fish, was followed by just as free transit of fish across Canada and New Brunswick to our markets, although there was not a syllable in it relating to bonded transit of any kind. And we would have had it, too, under the treaty of 1871, even if Article XXIX had never been inserted in it. I think, then, it will be found that the whole proceedings before that commission, instead of demonstrating that Article XXIX was understood to confer upon our fishermen this right of transshipment, ought to make us very cautious how we venture the broad assertion that our position is too clear in this regard to submit our rights to further negotiation.

Mr. President, I have never read nor heard a word from any English or Canadian source, either of a cotemporary or of a recent date, expressive of the slightest suggestion that the arrangements of 1830 or Article XXIX of the treaty of 1871 have the remotest reference to fishing vessels or their rights, and it would be a matter of curious research to ascertain when such an idea was first expressed by any American public man. The difference is so broad and distinct between vessels manned by our fishermen, who enter British waters, not to add a penny to the wealth or welfare of that people, but to compete with Canadian fishermen living on their shores, and commercial vessels which go there for the legitimate purposes of trade, whereby the blessings of commerce are equally diffused between those who sell and those who buy, that no negotiator the interests of whose people were involved in the distinction could or would fail to observe it.

The treaty of 1818 recognized such fishing vessels as international nondescripts, and imposed upon them stern restrictions, which were not meant to be expressive of a barbarous inhospitality, as is so often for effect's sake intimated, but were deemed by Great Britain, and submitted to by us with our eyes wide open, as necessary to restrain a peculiar class of people with peculiar temptations and facilities for becoming predatory in the wild stretches of the ocean and seas over which they roamed. There has never been an hour since when British statesmen have not been prompt to observe and enforce this wide distinction, except those periods when, for valuable considerations, it was suspended. They never could, in any treaty or commercial arrangement with us, have simply surrendered it without giving up one of their principal contentions on the subject of these fisheries, and it is very unreasonable to suppose that they could have ever intended to renounce rights all along tenaciously claimed by them through an order in council or an article of a treaty, in neither of which was the subject so much as referred to.

I have not the slightest doubt but that the British negotiators supposed, in framing this treaty of 1871, that its fishing articles fully expressed all that the contracting parties intended on that subject, and that they never dreamed when such fishing articles should be separately annulled, as the right was reserved to do, and all fishery rights thereby granted to them which could be of any practicable benefit should be withdrawn from them, that then a most important right to our fishermen would be found slumbering in Article XXIX, for which the unconscious grantor could never receive anything more than a nominal equivalent. To extract a valuable fishery right out of an article which does not touch on the subject, but is preceded by other articles specially devoted to it, is very near akin to the proverbially difficult process of extracting blood from a stone.

But, Mr. President, if neither the proclamation of the President nor this Article XXIX imparts to our vessels the general commercial rights claimed for them, then those vessels are utterly dependent upon the proviso of the treaty of 1818 for all privileges to which they are entitled. And the only question is, what does that proviso mean? At that time not a single United States vessel had the right to enter the territorial waters of British North America for a single commercial purpose, except on sufferance. And when the proviso to the treaty of 1818 admitted our fishing vessels to enter for the limited purposes of wood, water, shelter, and repairs, such privileges, being an exception to the rule, were to be strictly construed. But the negotiators would not leave the question open to any rule of construction.

In that cast-iron proviso we subject ourselves to such regulations as the sovereign owner of these bays and harbors shall deem necessary to prevent the abuse of the narrow privileges granted to our fishermen. It may be a rude exercise of treaty rights for Great Britain, in view of the immense progress in the removal of commercial restraints and in the interchange of the comities of international intercourse, to stand upon the letter of her bond, but if she, rejecting our construction of the order in council and Article XXIX of the treaty of 1871 upon reasonable grounds which a proper regard for our national character requires should be submitted either to further negotiation or to arbitration, clings to the plain interpretation and enforcement of her treaty rights, what right have we to subordinate the express terms of a treaty upon which she claims to stand to the simple demands of comity and good neighborhood? More particularly is this question pertinent when Great Britain replies that the abandonment of her rights under the proviso of the treaty of 1818 and the grant of the full commercial privileges demanded by us for our own fishermen without any equivalent would work untold injury to her own people.

Mr. President, the meaning of the proviso to the treaty of 1818 is so absolutely plain that an attempt to illumine it by construction only serves to confound what is perfectly clear. The meager measurement of rights thereby accorded to our fishermen in reserved British waters has taxed the ingenuity of American diplomatists to find means for their enlargement. Hence the effort to impress the British order in council and Article XXIX of the treaty of 1871 into our service. If the facts and averments advanced in this debate in the able speeches of the Senators from Alabama, Delaware, and Mississippi, have not shown the fallacy of this claim on our part, they must have at least disclosed their grave doubtfulness. If they have not, then would we be perfectly safe to trust our whole case to arbitration?

But I have no doubt that a proposition looking to such a solution of the question would be scouted by our New England friends. If they are not willing to adopt this mode of settlement, which is most in accordance with the enlightened spirit of modern times, then it may be safely assumed that doubt, doubt, is written all over our pretensions. Such being the case, as to my mind it absolutely is, is it fair or honest or logical when a treaty is presented which removes many grounds upon which American fishing vessels, to use the phrase of the day, "have been unjustly vexed and harassed in the enjoyment of their rights," to claim as an insuperable objection to that treaty that we are already clearly entitled to all the advantages which it offers to us under our highly doubtful construction of the documents so often referred to?

If there is a reasonable doubt about this construction of ours, as it seems to me every fair mind must concede, then it is a fraud upon the American people to claim that construction to be so absolutely certain as to call for the rejection of this treaty, upon the ground that we already clearly have without the treaty all we could gain under it. And still further, I claim that it is a crime against the American people and their good name to plead that pretended certainty as a ground of rejecting all further negotiation upon this vexed subject of the fisheries, and thereby to launch our people upon the stormy sea of retaliation, which, in view of the fierce invocations to passion and hate in this debate, it is vain to say may not lead to war. Why, sir, the mere fact that our northern neighbors have constructed great canals and railroads, as they have a perfect right and it is a credit to them to do, has been used as a text to arouse national jealousy, and to preach a warlike crusade against Great Britain. If we go on in this course of exasperation, it is easy to see where it must end.

Believing, as I honestly do, that there is not only doubt, but still more than doubt, whether our fishing vessels possess the commercial privileges claimed for them under any prior arrangements with Great Britain, and believing still further that any outside and impartial arbitration would tie us down to the treaty of 1818 for all our rights in the reserved Canadian bays and harbors, I should be derelict to my conception of duty if I did not vote for this treaty; and whilst I would have much preferred, as one of his advisory council, in the presence of Senators, to avow such a conviction to the President alone, yet, being forced by the action of the majority to express my views to "the enemy," it would indeed be but "cowardly" to suppress them.

I am for the treaty, because I believe that if all the privileges and exemptions specified therein are granted to our fishing vessels, then the fertile sources of the embarrassments to our fishermen, of which so much complaint has been made, and which up to this moment are claimed by the British authorities as the simple exercise of their treaty rights, will be to a large extent removed. There is scarcely one of the privileges secured by this treaty the denial of which has not been made the occasion for the seizure and fine, detention or confiscation of our vessels. If we had all along and without dispute possessed them our list of complaints would have been vastly reduced.

Let us now look for a few moments at the concessions in our favor under the proposed treaty. Under the treaty of 1818 our fishing vessels could be subjected to such harbor regulations as the British authorities should deem reasonable and proper to prevent the abuse of their privilege of entry therein. The proposed treaty exempts them from any such regulations as are not common to them and Canadian fishing vessels. Most assuredly we can ask for nothing more liberal in this regard. And it can not be but that in this way many occasions of annoyance will be removed.

Again, our vessels, under the new arrangements, need no longer report, enter, or clear when putting into such bays and harbors for shelter, repairs, wood, or water, unless they remain more than twenty-four hours. We enforce the same provision in our own harbors toward all foreign vessels. This is certainly no slight relaxation of the treaty of 1818, which held our fishing vessels to be under surveillance from the moment of such entry; and the law and practice of the local authorities have, from the beginning, been to board them promptly, and if the circumstances were such as to warrant a suspicion of an intent to abuse their treaty rights, to warn them off or to arrest them. It is vain to deny that this provision will remove numerous occasions for grievous annoyance.

Again, our vessels are to be exempted from compulsory pilotage, harbor dues, buoy dues, light and other similar dues. This not only frees them from burdens which the local laws impose upon other foreign vessels and removes the source of vexatious disputes leading to possible arrest and fines, but confers exemptions which become important to our vessels, in view of the fact that their business so frequently calls them into Canadian harbors.

Still further, upon the entry of our vessels into Canadian ports or harbors under stress of weather or other casualty, they are given the right to unload, reload, sell, or transship their cargoes of fish subject to customs laws, if made necessary for repairing. While all these provisions free from challenge acts, which might otherwise be considered of doubtful admissibility under the treaty of 1818, the transshipment or sale of cargoes, qualified as they are, certainly are new and valuable rights. And these vessels are to have the additional right of replenishing outfits, provisions, and supplies damaged or lost by disaster, and in case of sickness or death they are to be allowed all needful facilities, even to the shipping of crews. Here, in addition to wood and water, in the case of disaster, are conceded the most valuable and necessary supplies, the effort to obtain which, in contravention of the treaty of 1818, has again and again brought our vessels into trouble.

Moreover, sir, our vessels are to be allowed, free of charge, licenses to purchase for their homeward voyages such provisions and supplies as are ordinarily sold to trading vessels. It is impossible to deny, without shutting one's eyes to the truth, the great importance of this concession to vessels which are out of provisions and on the eve of a long voyage homeward. The advantage goes further, as it enables a vessel to continue her fishing cruise till her provisions are exhausted, with a certainty ahead of obtaining supplies to last her till she reaches home. This also cuts off numerous grounds of complaint.

But, sir, Article XI of the proposed treaty goes still further. It also declares that our vessels, having obtained such licenses, "shall also be accorded upon all occasions such facilities for the purchase of casual or needful provisions and supplies as are ordinarily granted to trading vessels." Now, if these words just quoted do not mean that our vessels shall have the power to purchase provisions and supplies for the prosecution of their fishing voyages, they either mean nothing or, what is virtually the same thing, they must be made to have identically the same meaning as the words immediately preceding. But the words just quoted do have as distinct and intelligible a meaning as any human words can have. Nor are they identical in meaning with the words in the previous part of the paragraph.

No power of construction can make the words "on all occasions" convey the same ideas as the words "for the homeward voyage." Nor do the words "such provisions and supplies as are ordinarily sold to trading vessels," used in connection with the homeward voyage, have the same meaning with the words "casual or needful provisions and supplies such as are ordinarily sold to trading vessels." The former expression refers solely to the character of the provisions and supplies to be furnished for the homeward voyage. The latter expression refers as well to the quantity as to the character of such provisions and supplies. It is presumed a homeward-bound vessel will not have any reason to buy of such things more than will last her home, though she can do so if she chooses.

But a vessel starting out on a fishing voyage is to be restricted to "casual and needful" provisions and supplies which she could not afford to sell to other vessels who fail to obtain the required licenses by failing to have an official number. Thus, the two clauses into which the second paragraph of Article XI is divided are different in their phrases, these phrases are naturally different in their meaning, and the objects to be accomplished by them are different. Upon every reasonable principle of construction they must have been intended for different purposes. This view is corroborated by the use in the second clause of the word "also." "And such vessels, having obtained licenses, shall also be accorded upon all occasions such facilities, etc.," showing that the last permission to buy provisions is to be something in addition to purchasing for the homeward voyage.

Nor, sir, does the provisional offer in Article XV to grant to our fishermen the right "to purchase provisions, bait, ice, seines, lines, and all other supplies and outfits, in return for free fish and fish products, at all militate against this view. The grant, in the first paragraph of Article XI, of the right "to replenish outfits, provisions, and supplies" is not general, but confined to replacing those lost by disaster. Under the last paragraph of that article the right "to purchase provisions and supplies" is not general in either of its clauses. In the first it is confined to homeward-bound vessels, and even then "to such supplies as are ordinarily sold to fishing vessels." In the second clause, where it is given "on all occasions," it is confined "to casual and needful supplies," being also "such as are ordinarily sold to trading vessels."

But the right to purchase provisions and supplies under Article XV is as general and unrestrained in quantity, kind, and intended use as human language can make it. And so, by no reasonable construction, can Article XV be made to restrain or qualify Article XI. And thus, beyond question, our fishermen would also enjoy under this treaty the important privilege, which they have never before had, of purchasing on all occasions "such casual or needful provisions and supplies as are ordinarily granted to trading vessels." If, therefore, our fishermen are in future denied the most important exemptions and advantages which this treaty would afford them; if they shall be subjected to harassments and vexations, of which, to an immense extent, these privileges and exemptions would relieve them, it will only be because the majority of this body, in their desire to gain a partisan advantage, in a hectoring style demand still larger concessions upon Canadian land and sea, for which they can not show a single line of treaty or convention which gives any other than a most doubtful support to their demands.

Mr. President, Article XII of the proposed treaty has been made use of by Senators and some public journals to frighten our people, especially those of Maryland, Virginia, and Delaware, lest the fishermen of Canada, being granted new rights under this treaty, should, like the ancient Northmen, swarm into the waters of the Chesapeake and Delaware Bays and rob us of our birthright, thereby giving us a taste of what they have had for one hundred years to endure. Under this treaty Canadian fishing vessels are to have, on our Atlantic coast, "all the privileges reserved and secured by this treaty" to our vessels in British-American waters. Now, I aver that there is not a single right of fishery secured to our people by this treaty in those waters, but that we get such rights, one and all, under the treaty of 1818. Under this treaty of 1818 our fishermen claimed the right to fish in all Canadian bays over 6 miles wide at their mouth.

The British claimed that we had no right to fish in any bays, large or small, within the limits renounced by us. The controversy has been as to the extent of the waters renounced by us, the right itself, whether more or less circumscribed, resting upon the treaty of 1818. If the proposed treaty had conceded that our construction of that treaty was correct, and that our claim to fish in the large British bays up to a line within 3 miles of their shores was well founded, neither side could have said that we had a single right which the treaty of 1818 did not give us. And if the tables had been reversed, and this proposed treaty had, as the true construction of the treaty of 1818, shut us out of all the bays, small and great, indenting the British coasts renounced by us, neither side could have claimed that any fishing right had been taken away from us, but only that its extent had been defined. So, when the high contracting powers in any manner delimit "the British waters, bays, creeks, and harbors as to which the United States under the convention of 1818 renounced forever the liberty to take, dry, or cure fish," beyond question that delimitation confers upon us no new right to take fish, but only defines the limits within which such rights, already conceded to exist, shall be exercised. Of this there can be no earthly doubt, and the only wonder is how Senators can bring themselves to hold up the contrary view as a scarecrow to any one.

Besides, Mr. President, it is well known to every American lawyer, and a debate which I have read in the Canadian Parliament shows it is well known there, that under our system of Government the treaty-making power, or, in fact, any other agency short of a constitutional amendment, could not if it would confer the right upon any foreign government or its citizens to exercise fishery rights in our great bays. The Supreme Court has again and again decided that the Chesapeake Bay, for instance, so far as it lies within the limits of either Maryland or Virginia, belongs to that State, subject only to the commercial and admiralty jurisdiction of the United States. The land beneath the waters and all rights of fishery in those waters are the property of the people of those States, respectively, which the United States can neither give nor barter away to the people of any other State or of any foreign country. The fact that such an argument is used with respect to this Article XII is only another evidence of the desperation with which its opponents are fighting this treaty.

It is unnecessary, sir, for me to recapitulate the many valuable commercial privileges conceded by Articles X and XI of the proposed treaty, which Article XII will reciprocally extend to Canadian fishing vessels. And it is to those alone that Article XII does or can refer.

Mr. President, in view of all the facts, considerations, and arguments which have been urged in the course of this debate, it passes my comprehension how this treaty can be denounced by the Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE] as "a dishonorable, humiliating, and cowardly surrender," or how the majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations can so emphatically assert that the time for negotiation has passed. The concession of privileges in the proposed treaty is so great that I boldly aver if they had been inserted in the convention of 1818 a very large proportion of the seizures, fines, and confiscations which have since harassed and crippled our fishing interests would never have occurred; and what is more, in all human probability, the treaties of 1854 and 1871 would never have been made, as no sufficient necessity for them would have ever existed.

If to the privileges now offered to us by Articles X and XI of the treaty under discussion there should be added those provisionally granted under Article XV, of the unlimited purchase of supplies, transshipment of fish, and shipping of crews, the most of which are already qualifiedly granted, there is scarcely a conceivable privilege required by our fishing vessels which they would not possess unless they are to have the free run of land and sea on the renounced coasts of British America without any price whatever paid therefor. And to that extent it really seems that our demands have come.

Mr. President, the exigencies of this debate have provoked the attempt to overthrow much that has been considered sacred or settled in the history of our country. Ignatius Donnelly has been considered almost insanely bold in his attempt to go back two hundred and fifty years and shatter our belief in Shakespeare as the author of the immortal works which bear his name. But a greater than Donnelly is here, who wishes us to believe that Daniel Webster is not the author of a paper most damaging to the ultra fishery claims of our New England fishermen, although that paper was published in his lifetime and in the lifetime of hundreds of thousands now living as coming from him when Secretary of State, and although, if he was not the author, he would have assuredly made haste but still took no step to disavow. "Credat Judæus Apella, non ego." And the iconoclasts are abroad here, too, shattering the reputations of men who have been the political idols of millions of their fellow-countrymen. Gallatin and Rush, who have been revered as great luminaries for their learning, sagacity, and statesmanship, were after all but rush-lights, incompetent and nerveless, who either did not understand, or understanding, did not dare maintain, our rights. And Monroe and John Quincy Adams, that pair of noble patriots from noble States, who, if they had not been preceded by two other peerless men from the same States, might have been placed almost upon the topmost pinnacles of fame, have been trodden under foot by Senators who worship at the shrine of the cod and mackerel fisheries; for if Gallatin and Rush, for want of "sagacity and courage," made a "deliberate surrender of our fishery rights," what must be the measure of indignant and scorching reprobation due to Monroe and the younger Adams, who gave weak and pusillanimous instructions to their negotiators to go still further, if needful, in this ignoble surrender of New England fishermen's rights?

And then, sir, what must we say about those who foisted upon us the disgraceful surrender made in the treaty of 1854? If to make a treaty in 1888, surrendering nothing but a right to fish where no right of fishery probably ever existed since 1818, and which if it were an actual existence our Committee on Foreign Affairs have pronounced worthless, and on the other hand acquiring without money and without price many valuable concessions always before denied to us, and for which we could present nothing but the most shadowy claims, such as the arrangement of 1830, which for forty years we ourselves never conceived to have any such meaning, if now to present such a treaty be a "humiliating, disgraceful, and cowardly surrender," what must be the deep condemnation due to the authors of the treaty of 1854, who, to use the language of the Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE]—

> Because Great Britain sent a fleet into these waters to overawe the United States—
>
> Tamely submitted to—
>
> the treaty of 1854, known as the reciprocity treaty, under which we were permitted to fish in her waters, her fishermen in our waters, and free entry into our markets for their fish—all they wanted—was granted.

Alas for poor Franklin Pierce, whom the Senator concedes to have been "as good a lawyer as ever sat in the Presidential chair, and who came from New England, where they know something about these matters," nothing can save you and your Secretary of State, William L. Marcy, whom millions of our people have considered a great, wise, and patriotic man, from the unspeakable ignominy of having been overawed by the British lion into surrendering that pearl of priceless value, free fish, to Canadian fishermen.

And, Mr. President, if this proposed treaty, which obtains for us many valuable privileges, all along sought for by us, without a single substantial concession therefor, deserves the rude epithets applied to it, what must we say about the treaty of 1871, which was negotiated by the robust statesmen of the Grant régime, whose unequaled diplomacy we are told brought "the haughty power" of Great Britain to terms, but which is still denounced by the Senator from Maine as that "iniquitous treaty."

He tells us that as a coercive step towards forcing the shameful provisions of the treaty of 1871 upon us, Great Britain sent an armed fleet into those northern waters, and again "let loose the dogs of war" upon us, and that in a cowardly and truckling fashion, for the purpose of getting rid of the arrests, fines, and confiscations of our fishing vessels made by the British authorities under the terms of the convention of 1818, those stalwart diplomatists, Grant, Fish, Schenck, Nelson, and Hoar, again made the waters of Canada and much of those of America common fishing-grounds, and again surrendered that summum bonum of Canadian fishermen and bête noir of New Englanders, free fish; and whilst denying that there was any balance of advantages conceded to us under that treaty, were still unwarily entrapped into an arbitration thereon, whereby we were awarded to pay and did pay $5,500,000 for nothing. In denouncing this treaty of 1871 the vocabulary of the Senator from Maine seems to have been exhausted upon other treaties, not near so bad, and he simply sums up its demerits in the one sweeping word of "iniquitous."

Sir, the juggernaut of our New England cod and mackerel fisheries rolls its deadly wheels over and alike seeks to pulverize the reputations for sagacity, courage, and patriotism of Massachusetts men and Virginians, Democrats and Republicans, friends and foes, ancients and moderns. I suppose it is natural, though not very generous, for our Republican friends more unmercifully to berate their political opponents, Cleveland and Bayard, not for giving, nor for even offering to give, but simply for stating the price which the Canadians are willing to pay for free fish, than they have done their own statesmen for granting not only free fish but millions besides.

Mr. President, our Republican friends are embarked in what they fully know is a desperate enterprise, the attempt to elect a President. They fear, as multitudes of observant men in the country believe, that upon the issue of the present contest hangs the life of their party, whose hold upon the people of the country is so weak that another national defeat may be its final doom. How unlike the majestic career of the Democratic party, which, being the party of the Constitution as against Congressional usurpation, of the people as against favored classes, of home rule as against centralization, of economy as against profligate expenditure, of labor as against monopoly, of revenue for legitimate purposes of government as against surpluses and subsidies, and of the reign of law and justice as against that of a corrupt plutocracy, has deserved to live and has lived a perennial life, whilst all the other old parties have stranded on the shores of time.

No wonder, then, that in a debate, the only issue of which is the true construction of certain treaties and commercial arrangements, instead of performing their constitutional functions of advising the President, the Republican party is enacting the inflammatory rôle of striving to arouse a war spirit among our people, and thereby to gain the votes of restless and uneasy spirits throughout the land, and especially by pursuing the un-American policy of appealing to the Old World passions of some of our foreign-born fellow-citizens. Sir, they forget the time when they used to deride the Democratic party, especially in the North, as composed of wild Irishmen and of ignorant natives. They forget that many of those who are now patting the Irish on the back are the very men who in secresy and in darkness were formerly planning their social, political, and religious ostracism, whilst the Democracy of the country were successfully engaged in one of the most tremendous political struggles which ever convulsed our land in order to prevent their now pretended friends from placing the yoke of inferiority and proscription around their necks.

But few, sir, are so simple as not to see through their game. They think they can storm and rave against Great Britain to such a degree as to convince some of our Irish friends that they are about to twist the lion's tail, and thereby to get some of their votes; whilst all the time, to the business interests of the country, they laugh at the idea of their furious tirades being anything more than gasconade, without a pinch of warlike powder in it; and whilst in real truth, and in true New England style, they are keeping their sharp eyes fixed upon the main chance in the shape of a monopoly of the great American fish market. Thus they hope to delude the Irish voters, and to make them pay for the pleasure of their delusion by doubling the cost of their fish, the price of which, under the kind of retaliation for which our New England friends are scheming, it will be in the power of a few hundred New England fishing-vessel owners to fix at their own limits.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I desire to occupy the floor to-morrow morning on this question. It is so late that I do not wish to proceed to-day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Delaware will be recognized when the consideration of the treaty is resumed.

Mr. FRYE. I desire to ask the Senator from Delaware whether he can not proceed this afternoon.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I suppose that I shall occupy an hour and a half at least, and it is rather late to go on now.

Mr. FRYE. Notice has been given that the sundry civil appropriation bill will be taken up for consideration to-morrow morning. I suppose that will occupy the entire day. This treaty has been hanging along in the Senate an unreasonable length of time, beyond any question, and it ought to be disposed of, and a vote ought to be had before a great while. I simply desire to give notice that after the sundry civil appropriation bill is disposed of I shall endeavor to have the consideration of the treaty continued until a vote is reached.

Mr. VANCE. I desire to give notice that I wish to make a few remarks upon this subject myself in due time. I do not wish, however, to interfere with the sundry civil appropriation bill, if that is to be taken up to morrow. If convenient to the Senate, I should like to make some remarks upon the treaty on Saturday.

Mr. EVARTS. I wish merely to ask the Senator from Maine whether he meant to announce that we shall sit speech after speech, no matter what the hours are, until the treaty shall be disposed of.

Mr. FRYE. I mean that I shall ask the Senate to meet as early as 11 o'clock on Saturday morning, on Monday morning, and on Tuesday morning, until a vote is reached on the treaty.

Mr. PLATT. And to continue with it through the day?

Mr. FRYE. To continue with it, of course, so long as any Senator desires to speak. I do not wish to be understood as desiring to prevent in any way a Senator from addressing the Senate at any length he wishes. I simply propose that we shall continue the discussion, because very shortly there will be a tariff bill in here, which will occupy all the time.

Mr. HARRIS. Has any time been fixed for taking a vote on the treaty?

Mr. FRYE. No time has been fixed. It was impossible to ask that any time should be fixed, because it was impossible to find out what Senators desired to address the Senate.

Mr. EVARTS. For one I am not willing to be put under any other restraint in regard to the debate on this subject than the other Senators who have preceded me have been put under. I do not wish to be told at 4 o'clock in the afternoon that I have got to speak four hours in answer or have a vote taken without my speech being heard.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I do not desire to detain the Senate in the discussion of this question, but the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WILSON] made some very remarkable statements which I do not intend shall pass without at least calling the attention of the Senate to them.

In the first place, the Senator says that the 3-mile limit has long since ceased to be the international rule. On that I take issue, and I challenge the Senator now to produce any reputable authorities which are admitted to be international in character on that subject and have received the general approval of the world. But, if that were so, it has nothing to do with this question, because we stipulated for 3 miles, which settles that question.

Secondly, the Senator says that it is a crime on the part of those who oppose the treaty to assert that our fishing vessels have commercial privileges at all. It is not only, he says, unsupported by anything in the treaty, and it is far-fetched, but it is a crime. Does the Senator not know that the Secretary of State time and again, over his own signature, declared that we had those rights? Does he not know that when citizens of New England appealed to him to know what their rights were he informed them that they had commercial rights, and that he intended to see that their rights were respected? Does he not know that the minister to Great Britain, under the direction of the Secretary of State, repeated that over and over again, and that the Secretary of State was careful to say, "I approve of what you have said on this point?"

Is it a crime, Mr. President, for us to claim those rights? When was it made so? When the edict went out from the White House that this treaty was to be supported. It was not a crime eighteen months ago, when the Secretary of State was luring New England fishermen into the Canadian and British trap by telling them that they had the rights which he now stands here as the exponent of that Secretary and declares they never had, and as the Secretary himself in his letter to the Board of Trade at Boston declared we never had.

The Senator from Maryland tells you that this is a question which has always been surrounded with doubt. The Senator has not read the history of this case, or else he has not dealt fairly with the Senate. It never was a subject of doubt for many years. In 1839 the Secretary of State of the United States declared that there never had been a controversy upon the treaty with Great Britain, that its meaning had never been a matter of discussion, and yet the Senator tells us that it has always been a matter of doubt, and of so great doubt that we ought to surrender every doubtful point to the British Government.

I do not propose to leave that upon a mere statement. The Acting Secretary of State, in a letter to the President of the United States, written on the 14th of August, 1839, said:

> It does not appear that the stipulations in the article above quoted have, since the date of the convention, been the subject of conflicting questions of right between the two Governments. The rights of the respective parties are so clearly defined by the letter of the treaty as scarcely to leave room for such questions of an abstract or general character.

February 20, 1841, Mr. Forsyth said in a letter to Mr. Stevenson, our then minister to Great Britain:

> The first article of the convention of 1818 between the United States and Great Britain, which contains the treaty stipulations relating to the subject, is so explicit in its terms that there would seem to be little room for misapprehending them; and indeed it does not appear that any conflicting questions of right between the two Governments have arisen out of differences of opinion between them regarding the intent and meaning of this article.

Afterwards he said:

> Our fishermen believe, and they are obviously right in their opinion, if uniform practice is any evidence of correct construction, that they can with propriety take fish anywhere on the coasts of the British provinces, if not nearer than 3 miles to land.

Up to that time the British Government had never by word or act suggested that there was any misconstruction on our part. I do not propose it shall be thrown up to us hereafter without a dissent that there has always been a question of dispute on this subject, for there never was until 1843. The contemporaneous construction was the American construction we are giving it, and not the British construction which has been given by the Senator from Maryland, who has gone several degrees beyond what any British or Canadian official has ever gone in his anxiety to defend the pending treaty. I challenge him and I challenge the party who are supporting the treaty to find that any British or Canadian authority has taken a position so high and extreme as he has taken here to-day.

It is quite enough for the other side of the Senate to discuss the Canadian view from the Canadian standpoint, but it is a little too much for them to proceed to make arguments and insist that the Canadian and British Governments made them years before when the record will not support a word of that statement. I repeat, there was no controversy about this matter until 1843, and the British Government has never yet taken the position that is taken now by the advocates of the pending treaty. When Canada proposed to take this position the British Government said to them, "You can not do it."

Mr. SPOONER. They take it now.

Mr. TELLER. They take it now under this treaty; and they have declared by the seizure of the Adams that we had surrendered forever the commercial rights of our fishermen. That is the result of this treaty.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland. Will the Senator from Colorado allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr WILSON, of Maryland. The Senator from Colorado has said that I have stated the British contentions more strongly than they have stated them themselves. I should like to ask him to particularize a single instance in which I have done any such thing.

Mr. TELLER. I have listened with some care to the speech of the Senator from Maryland. It will probably appear in the RECORD, to-morrow, and I shall leave that question to the Senate. I do not know what the Senator calls the British side of this case.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland. Will the Senator from Colorado again allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. TELLER. I do not hear all that the Senator says.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland. He has made a very broad statement, a statement which I deny to be correct, although I do not pretend to intimate that he intends to state anything but what he thinks to be true. He has made a statement. I deny it to be correct. I ask him now to name one single instance in which I have stated the British claim more strongly than they have always stated it themselves.

Mr. TELLER. In a speech of three or four hours' length, I can not be expected to go over it item by item.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland. The Senator ought not to make the charge unless he is prepared to maintain it.

Mr. TELLER. But the Senator has stated the Canadian side, and the extreme Canadian side, as everybody knows.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland. I have stated the side which my judgment told me was correct.

Mr. TELLER. Oh, Mr. President, I do not raise any question about that.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland. I speak what is the truth when I say that when I commenced a few weeks ago the examination of this question my prejudices were all against the treaty, and I doubted whether I could vote for it. The conclusions to which I have come have been the conclusions of my own judgment upon the facts and the law of the case. If I am wrong, I alone am responsible. But there is one thing certain, that no charge, no fling against me as having assumed the side of the enemy, which I believe was the object of having this debate in open Senate, shall ever suppress the honest sentiments of my mind and the dictates of my heart.

Mr. TELLER. I have not suggested that the Senator from Maryland was not actuated by proper motives. I have not suggested that he has not worked himself into a belief that the extreme demand of the Canadian authorities is the true interpretation of the existing treaty. I know the pressure under which he has labored. I know the pressure under which the Democratic minority of this body have labored. When the Secretary of State regarded it as his right and his duty to write letters and have interviews upon this subject to induce popular favor to come to the treaty, and when the President of the United States sent a message here approving the treaty, I know what that means to the men who attempt to support the Administration. I know that they may possibly see clearly their right. I know further, that on that side of the Chamber there are men who said, exactly as was said by Mr. Forsyth, that there had been no contention over the matter, and that none could be had, because it was too plain, who are bound now under Administration influences to speak lightly of it, supporting the treaty.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. SAULSBURY. The Senator says that he knows the influences which have operated upon this side of the Chamber because the Administration, the Secretary of State, desired to have the treaty supported, and that the pressure has been great upon this side, and it yields to it. I desire to ask the Senator whether he from personal experience as a member of the Republican party and as a member of a Republican Cabinet speaks in reference to this subject in attributing influences under which he has acted to this side of the Chamber?

Mr. TELLER. I have no recollection in the course of my political life, I have no recollection in the course of my public reading of having seen such an exhibition as I have seen with reference to this treaty, outside of the Senate. I never saw a Secretary of State before make himself the active propagandist of a treaty.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator from Colorado a question?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. Does the Senator from Colorado, who was long a member of a Republican Cabinet, know of any instance in which there has been a party vote on the Republican side of the Chamber on any treaty negotiated by a Republican administration?

Mr. TELLER. I never did; and when this question was first presented to the Senate I believed in the Democratic declaration that the treaty would not be supported by the other side when it came up.

Mr. MORGAN. Will the Senator from Colorado indulge me to ask him a question?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. MORGAN. Has not this treaty been carried into Republican caucuses here and voted upon, and has it not been determined that it should be opposed by the whole body of the Republican party, and that no amendment should be allowed to it?

Mr. TELLER. I will answer the Senator from Alabama by saying that no Republican caucus ever passed upon the question whether Republicans would vote for the treaty or not. I repeat what I said here the other day, that there never was a Republican in the Senate who intended to vote for it, and there never would have been a Democrat on the other side of the Chamber who would have voted for it if it had not come from a Democratic Administration, and as it was there was a respectable number who did not intend in the beginning to vote for it, and who so expressed themselves. It is true that when they examined it they may have worked themselves into a belief, as the Senator from Maryland did, that it was a proper treaty; but until they can show us something better than the Canadian argument which had been upset and refuted again and again, they ought not to charge us with doing what they were inclined in the beginning themselves to do.

Mr. MORGAN. Does the Senator consider that he has answered my question in regard to the action of the Republican caucus upon the treaty?

Mr. TELLER. I do.

Mr. MORGAN. The second branch of my question was whether it had not been determined in that caucus that no amendment should be allowed to the treaty?

Mr. TELLER. It was not. It was determined by those who discussed it, I think, that no amendment could be made to the treaty. Does the Senator think there could be an amendment made to the treaty that this Administration would accept? He does not believe it, for he knows that it could not be done. He knows that our opposition is not to the details of the treaty, but it is because it is a surrender of that which we insist is the American case. It is a surrender to a threat that the Senator himself has not been entirely clear from making on this floor, a threat that we should have free fish whether we wanted it or not, because the people would think long before they would go to war, when it was a question of war or free fish, and that we might get beyond a commercial war and get into a real war. Threats of that kind are made, and it is proposed that this treaty must be forced upon the American people for fear of disaster and bloodshed.

Mr. MORGAN. That matter has been stated here three or four times. What I have said on this treaty is in print. The very remarks to which the Senator refers as a threat coming from me or from the Administration were delivered in writing and are in print. There is no intimation of a threat of any kind at all. Nothing but the most prejudiced and unfair construction, not only of language, but sentiment and opinion, could torture anything that I have ever said into a threat. I have admonished the Senate——

Mr. TELLER. Ah!

Mr. MORGAN. That there was a possibility that our action might lead to hostilities; and if there is a man in this Senate so utterly purblind that he can not see that there is such a possibility, I must express my opinion about him. But as to threatening anything or anybody, whom do I threaten? I am an American Senator on this floor with American Senators, consulting with them not as a political party, but as the advisers of the Administration and the Government, as negotiators—for that is the position we occupy now—in respect to what is best to be done in order to avoid difficulty and trouble. And when I choose to express myself in the freedom of my intercourse with my brother Senators upon what I conceive to be the possibilities that may result from our conduct, it is heralded to the world time and again by Senators here that I have made a threat.

Mr. FRYE. Does the Senator recall the speech that was unwritten that he made, which lasted a day?

Mr. MORGAN. That was a written speech that I made which lasted a day. There were some interpolations brought in occasionally by remarks of Senators. The whole speech was printed precisely as I read it.

Mr. FRYE. I call the attention of the Senator to his first speech, the speech in executive session.

Mr. MORGAN. That is what I mean. I read it in executive session.

Mr. FRYE. But is the Senator not aware that he spoke longer without notes than he was engaged in reading his notes?

Mr. MORGAN. Only in answering questions put to me on the floor, and there was not one utterance that I made on the floor in executive session which in the slightest degree conflicts with what was written at the time and has since been printed—not one. I was careful about it.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I have not misstated what the Senator said, and he does not claim that I did. He says it is not a threat; it is an admonition, a warning that he gave. Why, does the Senator suppose that we thought he was going to make war, that he was to make a declaration and "let slip the dogs of war?" Nothing of the kind. He spoke for the administration; he spoke as the representative of the Democratic party upon the Committee on Foreign Relations, which had this matter in charge, and he is not in the habit of speaking loosely and carelessly. The Senator measures his words, and he said with great deliberation what I have repeated—not quoting the exact words, but the sentiment—that the people would consider long between free fish and war, intimating that there would be free fish but not war; that the American people would take free fish.

Now, the Senator may say that that is not a threat. It is in keeping with the whole proceeding of the Administration on this question; it is in keeping with the proceedings of the Democratic side of the Senate, that was almost universally in favor of retaliatory measures. When the bill on that subject was before the Senate the distinguished Senator from Maryland who has not addressed the Senate on this subject [Mr. GORMAN] insisted upon a bill of greater severity, and when the bill went to the Democratic House of Representatives from the Senate the principal lights there discussed it for a day and favored a more severe bill, by which retaliation would be more complete. On what ground were they going to make this retaliation if we were in the wrong, if we were putting a construction on the treaty of 1818 that ought not to be put upon it, that makes every man who so construes it a criminal? What were they proposing retaliation for? What were they proposing? What the Senator said was a commercial war, which was near to a real war. It was because they were then on the American side of this case, because they were taking the side the Government of the United States has always taken; they were pleading as Americans and not as Canadians; and why are they not thus speaking to-day? Have they any new light? Have they discovered anything that they had not met in their researches before?

Mr. President, everybody knows that adhesion to this Administration is necessary to secure its good will. Men desire the patronage. I do not mean to say that they are really and entirely supporting this Administration for patronage, but it has seemed essential to success in the coming campaign that this treaty should be maintained, if possible, and that is why there is a change of base; that is why the Senator talked about war, who when this retaliatory question was before the Senate, or the Frye resolution—I do not remember which—when asked what he would do if Great Britain did not take our construction, said, "I would not back down; I would stand up to the demand that I made." That was spoken like an American and like a patriot.

But why to-day is he here admonishing us to put it mildly, using his term, that we in demanding that which we believe to be right and which he declared to be right, and so right and so plain that he said himself if given the opportunity he could not make it clearer that our rights were not questionable but certain and positive—why is it now that he is on the other side of the question?

Mr. President, I would submit with some little degree of good temper to see Senators on the other side go a great way in their anxiety to support this Administration if they did not throw imputations at us, and if they did not charge us with being criminally wicked in supporting that very idea and that very view of the treaty which they were supporting two years ago. And less than two years ago the Senate, without Democratic dissent, declared, as strongly as it was possible for language to make it, that the American idea and the American construction of the treaty of 1818 was the proper construction, and the other House, with only one dissenting vote, declared the same thing.

Now, Mr. President, we are told because we do not fall in with the admonitions of the Senator from Alabama and we do not become a tail to the Democratic party, that we are unpatriotic and that we are committing crime. The Secretary of State and the minister to Great Britain have put our case stronger than any man has put it on this floor, and that ought to be enough, it seems to me, to keep closed the mouths of Senators who have changed their position within six months on this question.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WIL-

SON] has alluded to the history of the treaty of 1818. I will not offend the sensibilities of that Senator, whom I so sincerely respect, by imputing to him a repetition of the British argument; but there is one testimony, the testimony of a statesman to whom he himself referred, which perhaps may not be generally accessible to Senators, and which I think should be put upon the RECORD where it can be read. That is the testimony of Mr. Richard Rush, the eminent negotiator of the treaty of 1818. Mr. Rush, as is well known, was an eminent Democrat of his time. He was the personal friend and great admirer of John C. Calhoun, and among the papers contributed by him in his lifetime to the public press is a most admirable sketch full of admiration and high appreciation and affection for the character of John C. Calhoun, in which he quotes from Mr. Calhoun's colleague, Mr. Butler, of South Carolina, that most exquisite sentence in which he described Mr. Calhoun sitting in his last days in the Senate of the United States in his sickness and weakness like the dying eagle gazing into the empyrean into which he would never soar again.

Mr. Rush was infinitely disturbed and distressed toward the close of his life by the British suggestion that the treaty of 1818 had excluded our fishermen from the short line which he suggested began and ended with the year 1843, that the treaty of 1818 excluded our fishermen from the limit to be measured by drawing a line 3 miles from the mouths of bays more than 6 miles wide, and he wrote a letter which he left to his executors to be published after his death, a letter written originally at the application of Secretary Marcy, in which he declared that that construction never occurred to any of the negotiators of the treaty, that neither he nor Mr. Gallatin would have signed it if such an idea had entered their heads, and that the language on which it is sought to found that argument was his own language, inserted by him in the treaty, without the desire of the British negotiators, in order that our whole right after the treaty as before might continue to be based on the original right belonging to the colonies before 1783, and conferred upon Massachusetts expressly by her charter and retained unimpaired in the partition of 1783.

Mr. Rush left this letter, which originally he addressed to Mr. William L. Marcy, and further declaring, as I ought to state, that after the treaty of 1818 our fishermen had entered into all the bays, windings, and sinuosities of that coast within 3 miles of the land without a British question, and that nobody had ever dreamed either in Great Britain or America (I do not speak now of Canada) of questioning the right of the United States as he then claimed it and as we now claim it. That letter he requested his executors to publish after his death, and it is found in a little, and now rather rare, volume entitled "Rush's Occasional Productions." The whole letter to the executors and the letter which they publish, addressed to Mr. Marcy, occupy twenty-six pages of this volume. I suppose it will be agreeable to Senators to have it printed in the RECORD, where they can all read it in the morning, without my detaining them to have it read now from the desk. If there be no objection I will ask that this may be put in the RECORD without reading it. Of course if any Senator insists that it shall now be read I shall have it read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The papers will be incorporated in the RECORD as a part of the Senator's remarks if there is no objection.

Mr. DAWES. Would it not be convenient to have that matter printed in document form also?

Mr. COCKRELL. It would be more convenient that way than in the RECORD.

Mr. HARRIS. Does the Senator mean printed in that form and also in the RECORD?

Mr. DAWES. Yes.

Mr. HARRIS. Let it be first printed in the RECORD, and we can then consider the question of printing it in the other form.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection to the papers being printed in the RECORD.

The letters are as follows:

Correspondence with the Secretary of State, Mr. Marcy (under an official call), setting forth the construction placed upon the article in relation to the Newfoundland fisheries in the convention at London of 1818 by the negotiators of that treaty, with an explanatory letter from the author to his executors:

EXPLANATORY LETTER.

To my executors:

Having requested you in my will to publish a letter I wrote in July, 1853, to the Secretary of State, then Mr. Marcy, in answer to an official application from him for my views on the construction of the fishery article in the convention with Great Britain of 1818, it seems proper I should give the reasons for this request.

I was the surviving negotiator of that convention, all others officially sharing in it, directly or otherwise, namely, President Adams (the younger), Mr. Gallatin, President Monroe, and President Madison, having passed away. Hence the call upon me. It was made while negotiations were going on between the United States and Great Britain to arrange this and other matters of international concern. Great Britain, it may be inferred, expected equivalents if yielding anything to us on this fishery question. It was the most important and pressing of any then pending. How it ever became a question, and when, I have endeavored to show; but once raised by Great Britain she adhered to it to the extent of instructing her ships of war to order our fishing vessels away if found on what she claimed as exclusively her fishing grounds. Lord Elgin, then governor-general of the British provinces north of us, was the British negotiator, and the Secretary of State ours. The negotiations dragged heavily for some time, and out of doors were thought to have been on the brink of a fruitless termination. Finally the "reciprocity treaty," for regulating our trade and fishing concerns with the Canadas and other British provinces north of us, was concluded and signed at Washington on the 5th of June, 1854.

If asked, did not this treaty put the question at rest? I answer that it did, for the time being. But the subject is open to other views. A future day may witness the revival of the question. We thought it at rest under the old Revolutionary treaty of 1783; but it returned upon us after the war of 1812. That war over, we again thought it at rest forever, under the convention of 1818, but again it came back upon us. It would be unwise to consider the reciprocity treaty perpetual, whatever its presumed or real merits. When it does come to an end, this question may be upon our hands once more. The power of England is not on the decline by any evidences yet before us, but on the contrary increases, and her adherence in the future, as in the past, to the policy which tends to foster her commercial interests and maritime strength may naturally be inferred. It would hence seem no more than prudent that both countries, ours especially, should be in possession of all the lights still attainable on the true nature of this fishery question, which altogether is a remarkable one in our diplomatic history.

For more than twenty years the convention of 1818 was in full operation in the sense in which our Government understood the article relating to the fisheries. After this long acquiescence, Great Britain applied a new and different rule to the operation of the article. Whether she had good grounds for this change in its construction is the essential inquiry. High names, in the Senate and elsewhere, have so well defended our construction that it might seem unnecessary for me to bring before the public the views presented in this letter to the Secretary of State, were they not derived from facts intrinsic to the negotiation itself. In directing its publication by my executors, I aim at rendering justice to revered names in our history, and whose humble associate I was in this portion of our public affairs. I aim at showing that this solemn international compact, made under their instructions, and receiving their sanction, did not give up American fishing rights of long existence and great magnitude, but, on the contrary, secured them with the greatest care. In here vindicating their memories against imputed errors or oversights in a matter so grave, and in desiring that the vindication should become known to their country, I trench upon no sense of propriety.

As an official document, upon an international subject, no secrecy belonged to this letter, written on a public call upon me by the Government, other than exemption from premature publicity. Whilst the reciprocity treaty was under discussion it was withheld from print by the eminent functionary to whom it was addressed, for reasons deemed sufficient, no doubt, at the time. A voluntary publication of it by me at that time would have been out of place. But the treaty having been perfected, its execution in good faith by both countries, as long as it lasts, can not be affected by historical facts or any opinions I may have left for posthumous publication.

RICHARD RUSH.

SYDENHAM, December, 1854.

LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, July 6, 1853.

SIR: You are probably aware that within a few years past a question has arisen between the United States and Great Britain as to the construction to be given to the first article of the convention of 1818, relative to the fisheries on the coast of the British North American provinces. For more than twenty years after the conclusion of that convention there was no serious attempt to exclude our fishermen from the large bays on that coast, but about ten years ago at the instance of the provincial authorities, the Home Government gave a construction to the first article, which closes all bays, whatever be their extent, against our citizens for fishing purposes. It is true they have been permitted to fish in the Bay of Fundy. This permission is conceded to them by the British Government as a matter of favor, but denied as a right. That Government excludes them from all the other large bays.

Our construction of the convention is that American fishermen have a right to resort to any bay and take fish in it, provided they are not within a marine league of the shore. As you negotiated the convention referred to, I should be pleased to be favored with your views on the subject.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

W. L. MARCY.

Hon. RICHARD RUSH,
Sydenham, near Philadelphia.

MR. RUSH'S REPLY TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

SYDENHAM, NEAR PHILADELPHIA, July 18, 1853.

SIR: I had the honor to receive your letter of the 6th of this month, relating to the question which has arisen within a few years past between the United States and Great Britain as to the construction to be given to the first article of the convention of 1818, concerning the fisheries on the coast of the British North American provinces; and I beg leave to express my regret that unavoidable interruptions have prevented an earlier reply.

Your letter gives me to understand that for more than twenty years after the conclusion of this convention there was no serious attempt to exclude our fishermen from the large bays on that coast; but that about ten years ago, at the instance of the provincial authorities, the home government in England gave a construction to the first article which closes all bays, whatever be their extent, against our citizens for fishing purposes; and that, although they have been permitted to fish in the Bay of Fundy as matter of favor, the home government denies their right to fish there, or in any of the other large bays.

On the other hand, you inform me that our construction of the convention is that American fishermen have a right to resort to any bay and take fish in it, provided they are not within a marine league of the shore.

Under these conflicting constructions, you are pleased to invite my views on the subject, as I was one of the negotiators of the convention.

Honored by such a call upon me, I feel that the national rights and interests at stake in the just construction of this convention are of a description so high as necessarily to command my obedience to the call.

At the same time, with the public duty which your letter devolves upon me, I can not be insensible to the peculiarity of its nature, coming, as the call does, more than thirty years after the negotiation was held. I might well be distrustful of my personal recollections, and would hardly dare to draw upon them on an occasion so solemn, after this long interval, unless under the corroboration of documentary and other evidence. Treaties and conventions, as other written instruments, are to be interpreted by their own words in conjunction with the antecedent and collateral facts necessary to the elucidation of their words.

Premising thus much, I may be allowed to say, and here at least I am able to speak with confidence, that the convention of 1818 was entered into with great circumspection on our side. Mr. Monroe was then President and Mr. Adams Secretary of State. Looking to their qualities with reference to this particular question, the former was calm-minded and wise; while the latter, besides all his other high qualities of mind, had little disposition to yield opinions carefully formed on the basis of his country's rights. From Mr. Adams my colleague (Mr. Gallatin) and myself received in due form our instructions, accompanied by full information, the better to guide us in understanding and applying to them. I need only recall the name of Mr. Gallatin for all to remember how experienced, sagacious, and highly gifted he was. To allude once more to Mr. Adams, it may be safely affirmed that no one of our public men ever understood the fishery question better in all its extent, or examined it more sedulously in detail. It might almost be said that, in instructing us, he went to the work with something of filial reverence, which might have exalted, if possible, his sense of public duty.

He remembered the share which his great Revolutionary sire, the elder Adams, had in concluding the treaty with Great Britain in 1783, and knew that he would have preferred surrendering his commission to surrendering our rights to the fisheries in any of the seas, bays, or gulfs off the colonial coast of British America. The negotiators of the convention had before them, therefore, supposing they could have been negligent themselves, the prospect of rebuke from their Government if, by the use of incautious words, or omission of apt ones, they became the means of depriving American fishermen of the right to resort to any bay off that coast and to take fish at pleasure. There was, in fact, but the single exception you mention: They were not to go within 3 miles of the shore. You will gather from this remark that, as the surviving negotiator of the convention, I coincide in the construction of its first article which our Government puts upon it; and I proceed to state the considerations which impress upon me the soundness of this construction.

Among the documents forwarded to us from Washington, as in part our guide in framing this article, were divers letters and representations obtained from proper sources in New England, particularly in Massachusetts, containing information on the whole subject of the fisheries. It was obtained at the instance of Mr. Adams, under queries which he probably propounded on every branch of the subject. Familiar more or less with it all his life, his attention had been specially drawn, while minister in England, to the state into which it had fallen after the treaty of Ghent, and to the state also in which he found it on his arrival in Washington in 1817, when recalled from London to be the incumbent of your Department. Some steps for its settlement in Washington, which proved unavailing, were taken by Mr. Bagot, who first came over as British minister to the United States after the treaty of Ghent.

The queries propounded, as I suppose, by Mr. Adams, sought very pointedly, amongst other things, information as to the extent of the fishing grounds necessary to us. When I first received your letter I was not sure that I had in my possession any of this documentary information as then furnished to us, but on since looking carefully into places where I had deposited ancient papers, I have discovered a portion of it, the remainder having been probably taken away by Mr. Gallatin. Or it may be that the whole is still to be found among your files. The fragments in my possession have afforded me much satisfaction, as they go to strengthen the views which I have so uniformly entertained of the meaning of the first article before knowing that I had them.

From one of the documents, namely, a letter of some length from Daniel Rose, dated Boothbay, January 22, 1818, I make the following extract:

"A great disadvantage of having a particular limited extent of coast is that our vessels must then go to that only; and this would render the prospect of making the fare expeditiously very uncertain. It is well known that in some years fish are plenty on grounds where in other years few or no fish are to be found. It is the practice of our fishermen to try the different grounds as they proceed eastward, and where they find fish plenty they stop. Thus they sometimes get their cargo on this side of the Straits of Belleisle; at other times they pass through the straits and proceed far north before they find plenty of fish."

In the same letter it is said: "If any privilege is to be given up, that of curing fish is of the least importance, because that inconvenience may be obviated in a great measure by the fishermen making different arrangements."

And again he says:

"The Cape Sable shores are most used and of the most importance for us in the district of Maine, comprehending the Bay of Fundy and the coast as far east as Whitehead at least."

A letter from J. F. Parrott, dated from the House of Representatives of the United States, February 6, 1818, states that the fishermen of New Hampshire "would view with extreme apprehension and concern the adoption of any stipulations having a tendency to deprive them of the privilege which they have heretofore enjoyed of frequenting the coasts of the Bay of Fundy and Nova Scotia and entering the coves for the purpose of procuring bait."

Other documents agree to the importance of our holding this fishing-ground, as may be inferred from the above extract. All likewise concur in the great importance to us of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Bay of Chaleur. The latter is represented as having been "famous fishing ground" before the Revolution, and still productive. Heavy injury is anticipated should we not secure it. There is a long letter from Israel Trask to Mr. Silsbee, member of Congress, dated Gloucester, January 20, 1818, giving valuable information; and a general concurrence is seen as to the importance of our securing ample fishing-ground, even if we did not get shore privilege, though the latter also was desirable. If my memory does not fail me, there were strong representations from Hon. James Lloyd, then an eminent Senator from Massachusetts, on this head, and especially as to our not losing the Bay of Chaleur, though I did not find them among my papers.

Forewarned by information of this nature, and much more not now in my possession, it ought not to be lightly supposed that the negotiators of the convention would sign away the right of entering the fishing-grounds in any of the large outer bays or gulfs. It would have been a severe blow upon all the fishermen of New England. It would have been to forget the whole spirit and object of our instructions, to disregard the information which in part dictated them, and to yield up or endanger great public interest, naval and national. The Senate of the United States never could have ratified such a convention. We had come out of the war of 1812 under too high a tone of national feeling, most especially as regarded our rising naval capabilities and all the sources for sustaining them.

The idea of fencing us out by a line drawn from "headland to headland" of any of those large outer bays is perfectly new. It has burst upon us as altogether an ex post facto affair. No such words are in the convention. I was amazed when I first heard such a rumor. Since receiving your letter I have searched through all my papers, including the memorandums and informal notes which passed from time to time between the negotiators on both sides whilst the negotiation was in progress. I find no trace or shadow of any such words, on any protocol or elsewhere, from the beginning to the end of the whole negotiation. Yet the presence of such words in the convention is assumed in an opinion, as published in the newspapers, which the attorney-general and advocate-general of England have given against our construction of the instrument; and this assumption would seem to be an essential prop of their opinion. It was drawn forth, as is stated, under the requisition of Lord Palmerston, at the instance of the public authorities of Nova Scotia in 1841, who were certainly no parties to this international compact. The period of invoking such an opinion against us was, it will be perceived, somewhat remote. It came twenty-two years after the date of the convention.

It is indispensable to the just construction of this high international compact, to which the attention of both nations is now directed, to recall the state of things existing when it was formed; and although this has been a well-understood branch of the question hitherto, its summary but distinct recapitulation in outline will be appropriate at the present juncture to your call upon me.

By the old treaty of peace of 1783 we separated the two countries, we secured these valuable fishing rights. Britain said we lost them by the war of 1812. We denied it. Her doctrine was that war abrogated all pre-existing treaties. We admitted this to be the general rule, but insisted that there were exceptions to it, and denied altogether its application to the treaty of 1783. That was not a treaty to be judged by common rules. It split an empire in twain. Britain did not grant us independence by that treaty, but acknowledged it. She did not grant us our boundaries. She agreed to them. She did not grant us our fishing rights. She agreed to them. All these we won in arms. We treated with our great adversary for peace, and desired it; but we treated as a coequal sovereign nation. Had not the fishing rights we insisted upon been agreed to the treaty of peace would not have been concluded.

It may be here incidentally mentioned, as both curious and illustrative, that the elder Adams took as a motto for his seal "Piscemur, venemur, ut olim," the latter then having reference to the Mississippi as our western boundary. We did not, after the separation, claim the right to cure and dry fish upon her shores. That would have been to trench upon her territory; but we did insist upon our full right to fish in the sea and in all the open bays and gulfs where we had been accustomed to fish before. We considered these rights as fixed and irrevocable—like our boundaries, or our independence.

They were founded in beneficence, as producing human food and subsistence—a reason why they should be the more liberally interpreted and extended. They had also a paramount foundation in equity for us from the historical fact that in past time before the Revolution, when we were all British subjects together, the people of New England had done more by far to discover and use all these very fishing grounds than any other people of the British Empire. Mr. Monroe, while Secretary of State under President Madison, and therefore imparting the views of the latter, while giving instructions to our ministers at Ghent in 1814, in regard to the fisheries, used the following emphatic language in case any attempt should be made by Britain to demand their surrender, namely: "They [with other rights mentioned] must not be brought into question; and if insisted on, your negotiation will cease."

Our whole doctrine was powerfully argued and illustrated by Mr. Adams when minister in London after the treaty of Ghent, in two diplomatic notes, one to Lord Bathurst in September, 1815, the other to Lord Castlereagh in January, 1816. Lord Bathurst replied in an elaborate note to Mr. Adams, of October, 1815. In this note he fully made known that England was not less unequivocal in the opposite doctrine to that which we had taken. The two countries being decidedly at issue, and according to the ground England took, no treaty regulation of the subject being in existence after the war of 1812, her cruisers began to capture our fishing vessels in the waters where we thought our right to go was as good as hers. The danger was imminent. Collisions might take place at any moment. Then it was that further captures were forborne until the two Governments could calmly and deliberately interpose in the hope of some satisfactory adjustment. This summary presents the precise attitude of the two nations when the negotiation of 1818 opened.

After protracted difficulties, anxieties, and hesitations on this momentous topic, momentous because we on our side thought a rupture between the two countries would ultimately follow the failure to arrange it, the negotiation, which commenced in August, 1818, happily terminated in the signature of the convention on the 20th of October of that year.

In signing it, we believed that we retained the right of fishing in the sea, whether called a bay, gulf, or by whatever other term designated, that washed any part of the coast of the British North American provinces, with the simple exception that we did not come within a marine league of the shore. We had this right by the law of nations.

Its confirmation was in the treaty of 1783. We retained it undiminished, unless we gave it up by the first article of the convention of 1818. This we did not do. The article warrants no such construction. Mr. Everett, when minister in London, writing to Lord Aberdeen, August 10, 1843, under instructions from the Secretary of State, remarks that "the right of fishing on any part of the coast of Nova Scotia (consequently in the Bay of Fundy) at a greater distance than 3 miles, is so plain, that it would be difficult to conceive on what ground it could be drawn in question, had not attempts been made by the provincial authorities of Her Majesty's Government to interfere with its exercise;" and Mr. Stevenson, minister in London before Mr. Everett, while writing to Lord Palmerston, March 27, 1841, in reference to our right to fish in the large outer bays, says "the stipulations of the treaty (convention) of 1818 are believed to be too plain and explicit to leave room for doubt or misapprehension."

As to the Bay of Fundy, part of its coast belongs to one of the States of the Union, namely, Maine. Hence Britain can not claim it as her exclusive dominion. Had Mr. Gallatin been told by the British plenipotentiaries that the first article of the convention would close the extensive waters of that bay against our fishermen, I do not believe he would have signed it. I am sure I would not have signed it. The spirit, context, all the concomitants of the article, pointed to a different meaning. I need not cite all its words. You are familiar with them. It will be enough to bring into view the proviso which follows the clause of renunciation. That part runs thus:

"And the United States hereby renounce forever any liberty heretofore enjoyed or claimed by the inhabitants therof, to take, dry, or cure fish on or within 3 marine miles of any of the coasts, bays, creeks, or harbors of His Britannic Majesty's dominions in America not included within the above-mentioned limits (those set out for us in the beginning of the article): Provided, however, That the American fishermen shall be permitted to enter such bays or harbors for the purpose of shelter and of repairing damages therein, of purchasing wood, and of obtaining water, and for no other purpose whatever."

These are the decisive words in our favor. They meant no more than that our fishermen, whilst fishing in the waters of the Bay of Fundy, should not go nearer than 3 miles to any of those small inner bays, creeks, or harbors which are known to indent the coast of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

To suppose they were bound to keep 3 miles off from a line drawn from headland to headland on the extreme outside limits of that bay, a line which might measure 50 miles or more, according to the manner of drawing or imagining it, would be a most unnatural supposition. I can not think that it entered the minds of the British plenipotentiaries any more than ours. For would it not be useless to tell fishermen, when half wrecked, that they might cross such a line for the purpose of seeking shelter in bays, creeks, and harbors, lying at an immense distance inside of it? Tempest-tossed outside of a great sea-line like that, damaged in sails and rigging, how were they to reach the sheltering havens they desired? To suppose it is a mockery; and similar reasoning applies to all the other large bays and gulfs.

We inserted the clause of renunciation. The British plenipotentiaries did not desire it. Without it room might have been left for the inference that what we got under the convention was a grant from Britain; whereas our ground of argument being that, with the exception of share privilege, our fishing rights remained as under the treaty of 1783, we could receive nothing which had been agreed upon by the first article in the light of a concession or favor from her. We took it only as part of a coequal agreement and in the sense of a compromise.

In conformity with our construction was the practice of Britain herself after the convention was ratified. Our fishermen were waiting for the word not of exclusion, but admission, to those large outer bays. They had been shut out from them, some captured, and all warned away after the treaty of Ghent.

The interval was an anxious one to them. Accordingly, as soon as the convention went into operation, they eagerly hastened to their ancient resorts; reinstated by the provident care of their Government. Hence the significant motto of our Revolutionary patriot and sage, that we would both fish and hunt over the same grounds as heretofore. No complaint was made or whispered by any member of the British Government of that day of which I ever heard.

I remained minister at the court nearly seven years after the signature and ratification of this convention. Opportunities of complaint were therefore never wanting. If intimated to me, it would have been my duty to transmit at once any such intimation to our Government. Nor did I ever hear of complaints through their legation in Washington. It would have been natural to make objection when our misconstruction of the instrument was fresh, if we did misconstrue it. The occasion would have been especially opportune when I was subsequently engaged in extensive negotiations with England in 1823-'24, which brought under consideration the whole relations, commercial and territorial, between the two countries, including our entire intercourse by sea and land with her North American colonies. Still, silence was never broken in the metropolitan atmosphere of London whilst I remained there.

Your letter informs me that for more than twenty years after the convention there was no serious attempt to exclude us from those large bays; and Mr. Everett, writing as Secretary of State only on the 4th of December last, to Mr. Ingersoll, then our minister in London, renders more definite the time you would indicate, by saying that "it was just a quarter of a century after the date of the convention before the first American fisherman was captured for fishing at large in Bay of Fundy." I find it extremely difficult, under any lights at present before me, to explain the extraordinary circumstances which environ this international question consistently with the respect due to the high party on the other side; feelings the most friendly being ever due to her from the magnitude of the interests bound up in the subsistence of harmonious relations between the two countries.

It is impossible for me to doubt that the convention as we now construe it, and have always construed it, was entirely acceptable to the British Government at the time of its adoption. But I remember also that other feelings were afloat at that epoch, beyond the pale of the home Government in England. The fishery article was sharply assailed out of doors. Journals of prominence in London represented it as sacrificing high maritime interests of England, following up like sacrifices which, they said, she had made to France and other powers in the treaties of Vienna. The legislative assembly and council of Nova Scotia, sent forward murmurs, deep and loud, from that quarter. They alleged that the prospects of British colonial industry and advantage in North America were exposed to a shock in the competition which this fishery article opened anew to the Americans.

The commingling tides of complaint from the London press and from the colonies served to swell, for a time, popular clamor in England against us, a feeling not without example in that country, as those know who may have had opportunities of close observation when her Government has kept aloof and been friendly to us. The clamor has had its run and died away. The British statesmen wielding her power—Lord Liverpool was premier, and Lord Castlereagh foreign secretary—had probably not been unaware that there would be to some extent an outside feeling of dissatisfaction under that fishery article. They knew their position, and were prepared for its responsibilities. Paying respect to the convictions prevailing in the United States, that our fishing rights were not lost by the war of 1812, though so contrary to the British opinions, they determined upon the compromise which the convention effected.

It was in this spirit of amity that a formidable source of dissension was removed without implicating the honor of either nation, whilst the ultimate interests of both were thought by the wisest in both to have been best advanced by the compromise.

I render with satisfaction this passing tribute to the Liverpool ministry, and especially to Lord Castlereagh due the more, as it was not the only occasion during my long mission when its amicable counsels in regard to the United States interposed to ward off trouble to the two nations when there was no adequate cause for it on our side, but much outdoor English clamor against us. It may be added as not an irrelevant fact, but pertinent to the matter I have in hand, that it was the same ministry, Tory as it was, with which we negotiated in London the convention of July, 1815. This international compact secured for us, as far as it went, the fairest measure of reciprocity in our commerce, and especially our navigation, with Britain, which up to that period we had ever been able to obtain from any British ministry, Whig or Tory, since the day of our separation.

Another auspicious circumstance may be said to have gone hand in hand with the labors of Mr. Gallatin and myself. It was a ministry the most strongly seated perhaps in influence and power of any that had preceded it for a century, because governing England at the epoch of Napoleon's downfall. Such a ministry had no fears in being just to us on the fishery question. It was not to be shaken by outdoor clamor, and disregarded it.

Nothing but the great importance of the subject and the peculiar dilemma in which this disputed question has come to be placed could justify me in making this letter so long. I must venture to hope that this will be my shield in your eyes.

A brief, a reluctant reflection must close it. It relates to the letter from Mr. Webster, written in July, 1852, when he was Secretary of State. I desire to speak with nothing but reverence of an American statesman whom death has canonized. To his great abilities, exalted patriotism, and inappreciable services all do homage; none more fully than I do. An inadvertence found its way into that letter, which under the public obligation cast upon me by your call I am not at liberty to pass over. It is the passage in which he states that it was "an oversight in the convention of 1818 to make a concession to England, since the United States had usually considered that these vast inlets or recesses of the ocean ought to be open to American fishermen as freely as the sea itself, to within 3 marine miles of the shore."

The letter was written when he was away from his Department. Full of diversified public occupation, and with his mind under corresponding solicitudes he may well have been momentarily at fault; at a season, too, when his health was perhaps feeling the approaches of that fatal malady which was so soon afterwards to deprive his country of his valuable life, and take from the world one of its towering names. This inference is the more strongly forced upon me, as in the same letter he refers to the opinion of the English crown lawyers, without noticing the grave error stamped upon its face, that they assumed the existence of words not in the convention. I should reproach myself for this allusion but for the influence which the great name of Mr. Webster might otherwise lend in directions unfavorable to the just rights of the country he so dearly loved. Happy am I to think that his letter nevertheless closes with a dissent from the construction given by the crown lawyers of England to that solemn convention which it is the aim of this letter to show is chargeable with no such oversight as he supposed.

I have the honor to remain, with great respect, your obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

Hon. W. L. MARCY,
Secretary of State, Washington.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, in discussing a question of the magnitude of this in connection with a great country like Great Britain, it would be altogether agreeable to me that personal and political views should be omitted from the debate. In fact I have seen no occasion for having any matter of that kind dragged in at all, but it seems to me that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] is held in reserve to "whoop up" the Republican end of this question whenever a debate occurs on this floor. After a speech is made, particularly in opposition to him, he is here for the purpose of characterizing us as a set of men who are acting contrary to our convictions and our judgment and in obedience to the behests of the President of the United States and of the Secretary of State.

I dare say, Mr. President, that there are as many independent thinkers on this side of the Chamber as there are on that, and that we are able to match the honorable Senator from Colorado in his independence with quite a number of gentlemen on this side who have some respect for themselves, for their position, for the country, and for the great questions that are presented here for our consideration.

The Senator insists all the time that we have no views of this question on this side except political views; that we are entirely insincere in our expressions because we have been whipped in by the Administration; that we have lost our manhood; that we have reversed our positions; that we have taken back what we have said heretofore; and that we are acting here as a lot of galley slaves, not merely to do the bidding of our masters, but to do it under the lash.

That is the idea with which the Senator would impress the people of the United States in regard to the attitude of Democratic Senators on this side of the Chamber.

I do not know what have been the relations of that Senator to his party. I have sometimes seen him exhibit some little evidences of independence of thought and action, but I do not think that he is occupying such an elevated moral tone in this body or elsewhere as that he has a right to question the motives of gentlemen as to what they do under their oaths on this floor in respect of a great question like this.

The Senator has taken occasion to charge me with having reversed my position. If I were bound by statements which he puts upon the record with his loose expressions, that might be so; but when his statements come to be compared with the truth as disclosed by the record it is not so.

I have changed no position, no attitude, on this treaty. When it came to us I investigated it for myself, examined it as thoroughly as I was able to do. I came to my conclusions upon it, as a matter of relief to this country, and as a matter of adjustment of the future relations between this country and Great Britain. I consulted nobody, President or Secretary of State; I had no conferences, no communication. I made up my opinions on my own judgment, and solely on my own judgment, and so I have no doubt has been done by every Senator on this side of the Chamber; for there has been very little conference between Senators on this side in respect to the merits of this treaty. Each Senator takes up this subject and deals with it as he thinks right for the interests of the country, and does what those interests bear him out in doing in this transaction.

It seems to be a settled purpose of that Senator and others to undertake to impress the country with the idea that this treaty is an improper one to be made, and that the issues which are presented before the country now are unimportant—by heaping abuse and epithet upon the treaty and upon the men who are engaged in its advocacy and exposition. It is called a pusillanimous, cowardly surrender. That style of language is very common in this debate—that a treaty made by the Secretary of State of the United States and by two or three able assistants, men of honor and of character in this country, is a pusillanimous, cowardly surrender! It is frequently imputed to us that we are advocating the British side of this question. It has been said here this evening in the remarks of the Senator from Colorado that we are espousing the Canadian side of this question.

Now, let me ask the Senate and the country what motives have we for espousing the British or the Canadian side of this question? Why are we not just as much the friends of this country and of its honor as you are, and as willing to defend them?

Some intimations have been made about other matters of division that have existed between us in times past, and a cloud is sought to be drawn from a period twenty-five years back over this question here now, and an attempt is made to cast discredit on this treaty because it is advocated by men with whom you have disagreed in times past. That is not a fair way of treating a question like this. No administration can conduct diplomacy if the friends of that administration are to be scouted or thrown out of consideration because they dare to advocate a measure or because that measure is supported by gentlemen who have happened to differ with you in opinion about matters heretofore.

If there is merit or demerit in this treaty, there is ability on that side of the Chamber to present it without epithet and without abuse. There is no occasion for the employment of those thrusts at us of an unbecoming, unpleasant, and irritating character—that we are deserting the flag of our country or its interests in order to maintain a settlement between this country and Great Britain which we consider to be, under all the circumstances of this great case, a fair settlement. There is no occasion for that. Senators miscalculate the temper of the American people if they believe that they will respond to any such trash and stuff as this. The American people in the consideration of those matters which must become, or are, a part of the supreme law of the United States under our Constitution, are not going to listen to mere political slang-whang and vituperation and censoriousness. They will treat this question on a higher plane. I regret that the first exhibition that the Senate of the United States makes before the American people for a hundred years in the discussion of a great treaty is attended with such remarks as have fallen from the lips of Senators on this floor. I regret it, and I think the country will regret it.

If I were President of the United States I would withdraw this treaty from your consideration until you got your minds cool enough to consider it on its merits; and I believe the honorable and venerable statesman in front of me would do it, with his full knowledge of diplomacy. I would withdraw it from this Senate and would send it in after this political campaign had ended and after there should be a cessation of those methods of political strife which so excite the people of the United States—frequently as we know almost beyond control. I would carry this into an atmosphere where reason might prevail.

If there were no Presidential election pending to-day the discussion of this treaty would be in different terms and in a different spirit. But the object, it seems to me, is simply to make political capital out of it. I have despaired really of getting any cool and deliberate and just consideration of the matters of great interest and importance involved in this treaty, because a man can say nothing about it without being accused of being a partisan of the British Government. He can make no defense of the Administration without being charged with being a Canadian in his sentiments. He can make no explanation of anything that has occurred heretofore in connection with this treaty without being charged with having, under the party whip, changed his relations to the question.

Before this debate shall have proceeded very much farther I propose to bring before the Senate expressions of various Senators upon the resolutions that have been offered here, about which a great deal has been said, and also about what is called the retaliatory law. I will bring the opinions of Senators on both sides of this body, and I think I shall be able to show a degree of conservatism of opinion in statement, a degree of regard for the honor, the interests, the welfare, and the integrity of this country exhibited in the debate of last year and the year before last, which has failed entirely to characterize the debate on this treaty in the Senate now. Then we were speaking in anticipation of the settlement in some form or other, or by some means or other, of grievances and troubles and distresses that had existed in this country for the better part of seventy years.

We were looking to the future and trying to devise the best means of bringing our view of this question into realization, of establishing in behalf of our own country and our own people those interpretations of the treaty of 1818 upon which we had been insisting, and in good faith; and more than that, of bringing a certain degree of pressure to bear upon the British Government to induce them to better terms, not in the treaty merely, but in the general commercial relations between us and the Canadian people than had existed before that time.

Was it not right to do it? Was it not proper to do it? If any American Senator on either of those occasions had arisen and had been compelled, as we are now compelled, not to state the merits of it, but the nature and character of the British contention, it would have been received by the people of the United States with regret and shame that any American Senator should have arisen in his place and should have placed the rights of his countrymen upon ground that would perhaps have encouraged the British contention.

It is quite a different matter to speak upon a treaty that has been negotiated and to speak, in advance of that, upon a policy which was indefinite, as to whether the evils that we labored under should be corrected by treaty or should be corrected by the application and force of a statute.

We had around us two years ago a series of difficulties not new. They were old; they were the mere repetitions of what had occurred many and many a time before. We found ourselves two years ago at the close of two periods of treaty reciprocity with Great Britain under which all these vexatious questions had been put entirely at rest. But immediately upon our being relegated to the influence and force and effect of the treaty of 1818 we found that those difficulties which had arisen in every interval of reciprocal arrangement renewed themselves and in somewhat violent form, but not more violent than before. For instance, before the negotiation of the treaty of 1854, we found it necessary to marshal our fleets in those waters in order to preserve the peace between our fishermen and the Canadian fishermen and in order to prevent the British fleets from dealing with our fishermen in some rude and unjustifiable way.

When the present Administration came in it was not necessary to introduce those fleets (or if it had been, we did not have them; but it was really not necessary to introduce those fleets) for the purpose of presenting armed resistance immediately upon the ground to any aggression that might be made by those people. The Congress of the United States took up the subject and commenced by passing a resolution and afterwards by passing a law, and the Congress of the United States knew from the reports of its own committees—the Senate knew from the reports of its own Committee on Foreign Relations, the House knew from the reports of its own Committee on Foreign Affairs, and every member of both Houses understood perfectly well that the aggressions which had been committed by the British Government upon the American fishermen were of a very severe character, and we believed on both sides of this Capitol that they were not justifiable under the treaty of 1818, or under the laws of nations either. We knew all that. The declaration of the violation of that treaty in specific acts was pointed out by the Committee on Foreign Relations of this Senate, and there the declaration stands to-day.

Now, knowing this and having the legislative power in your hands, and the right to decide what should be the attitude of the Government, the Congress of the United States, instead of coming up to that question as it should have come, and deciding it and providing the men and the means to carry its decision into effect, fell behind the cover of the executive office and invited the President to step out and settle the question, putting in his hands not a new power, for the power was there in 1850, but putting in his hands a larger, a more comprehensive power, by which he might rectify through the means of retaliation the wrongs which everybody said we had sustained. You did not tell him not to negotiate; you did not advise him not to resort to that high constitutional power of his by which peace can and may be made, and by which the orderly conduct of diplomatic affairs was intended to be regulated by the framers of our Government.

You did not advise him to do that or not to do it. You left him in the free and full exercise of all his powers as the Chief Magistrate of this Government. He stepped forward and made a negotiation. In doing that he employed men to assist his Secretary of State—who, by the way, is a very able man, the peer of any man in the United States—he employed in the assistance of this able statesman two very distinguished men, one of whom had had quite an extensive experience in diplomacy. Carefully the ground was all surveyed. An agreement was reached, and it was satisfactory to the President. Then, under his constitutional authority, he brought it to the attention—of whom? Of the second series of negotiators, the men placed by the Constitution of the United States next to the President to advise and to consent to what he may have done in any negotiation; and we are negotiators here now, with the power to modify by amendment, with the power to confirm, with the power to reject.

We have the power to compel the President of the United States to submit to the British Government in reply to this negotiation any frame of treaty agreement that we see proper to suggest. The whole field is open to us. We are not compelled to accept or reject just what he has done, but the whole field of negotiation is open to this Senate; and every Senator here, to the extent of his influence in this body, is to-day, and in the attitude that this question occupies now, simply a negotiator.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question? He asserts that we may amend this treaty and compel the President to submit the amendment to the British Government. Do I understand the Senator to say that that is the right of the Senate?

Mr. MORGAN. When I say "compelled" I mean a moral compulsion.

Mr. TELLER. Does not the Senator understand the rule to be that if we amend this treaty, and the Executive agrees with our view of it, then he would submit it, and not otherwise?

Mr. MORGAN. The practice is perhaps an unsettled one about that, but I have never yet heard of a President refusing to submit an amendment that was agreed to by the Senate. I never heard of such a thing as that. We amended the Chinese treaty——

Mr. EVARTS. Will the Senator from Alabama allow me a word?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. EVARTS. The Executive has full possession of the question of this treaty before the ratification takes place. Nothing that we can do can influence the President in regard to an inchoate treaty.

Mr. MORGAN. I do not speak of compulsion in the sense of forcing him to do the thing.

Mr. EVARTS. There is no power except in so far as his concurrence in our amendments may enter into the question. They fall short of entering into the negotiation until the President puts our amendments in relation to the foreign power.

Mr. MORGAN. The President of the United States is an American citizen, and I think he is quite responsive to that magnificent sense in this country which has for a long time now sustained him in his official course, and which, under the voice of 5,000,000 voters represented in the St. Louis convention, recently gave him a unanimous renomination. I think that the President of the United States would not hesitate to respond very cheerfully to any recommendation that the Senate might see proper to make as his advisers in regard to what should be the treaty relations between the Government of the United States and that of Great Britain. Nothing in his conduct heretofore has indicated that he is unwilling to accept any amendment that the Senate might put upon the treaty. We amended the Venezuelan treaty. He submitted that amendment. We amended the Chinese treaty, and he submitted that amendment, and got it ratified.

Mr. HARRIS. Has any President ever refused to submit an amendment that the Senate adopted?

Mr. MORGAN. I never heard of such a thing. I am not very old in statecraft or in political lore, but I dare say no precedent can be cited on this floor where the President of the United States has ever declined to present to the consideration of the other treaty power any amendment that the Senate saw proper to make to a treaty.

Now, here we are with the ability in our hands this day to submit to Great Britain amendments to this treaty of such a character as that they will be a full protection of all the rights of every citizen of the United States. If we believe that the President has in any respect fallen short of his duties, or has been wanting in wisdom or wanting in courage, is it not very much better that we should frame something, and send it to him, which expresses our views, unless indeed we have reached the period announced in the majority report in this case where it says that the time for negotiations with Great Britain on this subject has passed?

We are negotiators, and we can not lay our character as such down at our will and pleasure. The resolution for the ratification of this treaty is not before this Senate. We are not debating it. We have not reached that stage of the question where that matter is up for our consideration at all. We are now in the negotiating stage of the treaty; we are now asking the Senate of the United States to consider each article of it separately; and if those Senators choose to say to the American people, "we will not consent to discuss the subject of a treaty," then I think they place us in the category in which there does arise the question whether war might occur, as we refuse to treat on the subject at all.

You declare in your majority report in opposition to the treaty, and as a reason why you ought to destroy it that the time for negotiation with Great Britain is passed. That is the declaration that I want the Senate of the United States to reverse. If this treaty is rejected, as of course we know it will be, I object most seriously that it should go out of this Senate rejected with a majority report standing on record affirming as the leading reason for its rejection that the time for negotiation with Great Britian has passed.

I was exceedingly gratified in the debate as it proceeded to hear the honorable Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], the honorable Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES], and other honorable Senators refer to the fact that the negotiation was not broad enough, that it did not include enough, that there were other subjects that had not been brought within the range of the negotiation, subjects that are open and are likely to breed difficulty between the United States and Great Britain; because I had a hope from those declarations that those Senators would not concur in the idea that we intended to place our relations with Great Britain in that singular and dangerous category where we should shut the door of negotiation with Great Britain, and say, "The door is forever closed; we shall not negotiate with you any more."

Mr. TELLER. I should like to ask the Senator from Alabama a question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to ask the Senator from Alabama if he thinks there is any necessity for a further treaty to construe the treaty of 1818?

Mr. MORGAN. I do.

Mr. TELLER. Then I should like to call the attention of the Senator to what he said on this subject in 1886. He said a great deal on the subject then, as I suggested. He said:

> I do not wish to volunteer any opinions about this subject before a question gets before the Senate and I am compelled to act upon it; but my convictions are very strong; they are fixed; indeed I may say that we can get along with the people of Great Britain on this subject without any further treaty at all—

I find that in the RECORD, and I have a distinct recollection of having heard it.

Mr. MORGAN. I said then that there was no question before the Senate and I hesitated to express any opinion.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator will allow me, I will read further what he said.

Mr. MORGAN. I said I was not here for the purpose of advising the Governmant of Great Britain in my place as a Senator; that I thought we could not get along upon our interpretation without a new treaty.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator allow me to read further? I did not give the context. I should have read further. Commencing where I left off, the Senator from Alabama said:

> and without any further legislation. If any one were to ask me what provision of a treaty I would frame to compose and settle any question of fundamental law between us and Great Britain in respect of the fisheries, I could not suggest it, or if I were asked to propose an amendment to the statutes of the United States so as to put the control of this intricate subject more completely in the hands of our own Government I could not frame the amendment in the statutes. I would not know how to do it. I believe that both the treaty stipulations and the situation under the statutes are about as complete as we are ever able to make them. There may be other interests, and there are other interests lying between the people of the British possessions and the United States that I would like very much indeed to see promoted by further negotiation, but I can not call to mind, there is no suggestion to my mind of, any improvement that we could make under existing conditions of our rights in the fisheries of that Northeastern coast.

Mr. MORGAN. The Senator from Colorado attaches great importance to my opinions, but he does not give me credit for the circumstances under which they were expressed on that occasion. If he had that keen and delicate sense of patriotic honor which a Senator ought to have in considering questions with a foreign government he would not rise in the Senate to-day and speak of our treaty relations with Mexico in such a way as to put his country in difficulty and in trouble.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator allow me?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. MORGAN. Yes.

Mr. TELLER. I may not have the high sense of patriotic honor of which the Senator speaks, but I have too much, when I have been in accord with the entire body of my associates and change my opinion, to charge that those who have pursued the even tenor of their course were instigated by improper motives.

Mr. MORGAN. At the moment when that subject was under consideration what was the question before the American people? It was as to the best way to arrive at a solution of all the difficulties with Great Britain which were then harassing the country. It might be that in the secret councils of the nation there was an opinion that a resort to negotiation would be the best. It might be that an opinion existed that a resort to legislation would be the best. That was a year before the passage of the act of 1887. That was under the act of 1850. I declared then, as it was my duty to declare, that the American people had provided themselves even at that hour with all the necessary instrumentalities for enforcing their rights against Canada or Great Britain; that they had a treaty of 1818, the interpretation of which they themselves had settled upon; that there was no disposition on our part to yield to the Canadian interpretation, notwithstanding the expressions of great men like Mr. Everett and Mr. Webster and the honorable Senator who sits before me now [Mr. EVARTS] that the treaty was loose in its structure and was difficult of construction.

It was not for me, as an American Senator, on that occasion, in anticipation of the action of my Government, to proclaim to the British Government that I thought there was something to be done in improving the treaty, otherwise American rights were lost. That never seems to have occurred to the Senator from Colorado. He takes me at a place and in an attitude where I am trammeled and have no right to speak.

But if that Senator heard me in years that are past—I do not know whether he ever paid the slightest attention to it—he has always heard me say that I regarded the treaty of 1818, with which the honorable Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] is so much in love, as a surrender of the fruits of the Revolutionary war. One of the Senators from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] agrees with me, the other [Mr. HOAR] disagrees with me, upon that proposition. I have been willing at all times and have at all times insisted that whenever this subject came under negotiation we should go back to the date of the Revolutionary war and the treaty of peace, and we should predicate our new treaty relations entirely upon that foundation. I would wipe the treaty of 1818 from the book. But no Senator in this body and no member of the House of Representatives has ever had the courage to bring a bill in to abrogate that treaty or to declare that it had been so violated that we were no longer bound by it.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator be kind enough to tell me why it is that he thinks the treaty of 1818 ought to be abrogated and feels himself at liberty to say that no other Senator has the courage to bring in a bill to abrogate it? Why is he not the person whose courage should seem to be employed?

Mr. MORGAN. I did not say that no other Senator had the courage.

Mr. HOAR. I understood the Senator to say it.

Mr. MORGAN. I said that no Senator had the courage.

Mr. HOAR. That no Senator——

Mr. MORGAN. Yes, including myself.

Mr. HOAR. And no member of the House of Representatives——

Mr. MORGAN. Including myself.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator said that although he thought, differing from many other Senators, the treaty of 1818 ought to be abrogated, yet that no Senator and no Representative had the courage to bring in a bill to that effect.

What reason has the Senator for thinking that if other Senators agreed with him that it ought to be abrogated they would not have the courage to do what he does not do, bring in a bill?

Mr. MORGAN. I say, and I repeat it, that none of us has had the courage to do so. I include myself in the category. I did not do it because it would result in a disturbance of the relations between this country and Great Britain, and would precipitate a war for which we are not prepared. We do not want it. We think that we can better it. We think that we can relieve against it.

Nevertheless, there is a surrender of territorial fishing rights in the treaty of 1818 that is not creditable to the history of this country. That is a very narrow, ill-constructed, unhappy treaty. Cast your eyes over the list of treaties made about the fishery questions between modern European nations, and you will see there examples of what a fishery treaty is and ought to be.

You will find there a definition of the rights of everybody concerned in joint fisheries. You will find tribunals erected for the purpose of trying those questions. You will find it declared whether a violation of fishery laws or regulations which would make one of our ships amenable to capture and condemnation is to be tried at the home port of the vessel or whether it is to be tried at the port of the ship that makes the capture. But the treaty of 1818 is absolutely dumb on all these questions.

When we wish to ascertain the court in which a prize is to be condemned after it has been seized, where the question of condemnation is to be tried, we look in vain into the treaty of 1818 to find any intimation on the subject. We have to go to the laws of nations to find out whether our ship is to be tried in a Canadian port, or whether it is to be taken to Great Britain and tried before one of the imperial courts, or whether it is to be brought home and tried here.

All the other treaties on the subject of fisheries now subsisting between the nations of the earth who enjoy the joint right of fishing upon the different coasts of the seas contain the most ample and particular provisions for matters of this kind; and it is from the very absence of a provision of this kind in the treaty of 1818 that more than one-half of our difficulties have come. Mr. Bayard puts into this treaty a provision which recognizes the tribunals which are to try these alleged offenses and the manner of trial.

Mr. HOAR. What tribunal? The local courts?

Mr. MORGAN. Yes; why not, putting limits upon them? Does the Senator want the cases tried in Boston?

Mr. HOAR. The Senator asks me that question?

Mr. MORGAN. Yes.

Mr. HOAR. I will say to him that in my judgment, if it be true that the treaty of 1783 was a partition between these two powers, the claim of one of them to take the vessels of another into its own ports and try the parties for offenses created by its own statutes, putting upon the person seized the burden of proof of innocence, allowing no costs and no damages when the local court shall certify that the seizure was for probable cause, bribing the sailors on board the seizing vessels as witnesses by a gift of three-quarters of the value of the whole prize, and further providing that there shall be no suit at all unless it is brought within three months from the time of the seizure, and unless it is brought after one month of notice at the dwelling-place of the officer who made the seizure, which may be in England, so that at any rate there can be but one month's time in which a suit can be brought, is an atrocity.

Mr. MORGAN. Yes; that is the Senator's opinion about it; he calls it an atrocity.

Mr. HOAR. I ask the Senator from Alabama, is not that his opinion?

Mr. MORGAN. Wait a moment.

Mr. HOAR. Is not that his opinion?

Mr. MORGAN. It is not.

Mr. HOAR. I am glad to get the information.

Mr. MORGAN. It is not, because it has been the practice of nations always that where a wrong is done within the jurisdiction of a country, that country in making a capture has a right to try the man who commits the wrong.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator will pardon me, it is a question whether a wrong was done within the jurisdiction of the country. It is not a question for the local courts.

Mr. MORGAN. Let me ask the honorable Senator how he can excuse himself to the American people, if this is an atrocity, for not bringing forward an amendment to this treaty and suggesting to Great Britain that we would rather try our people over here?

Mr. HOAR. Because I do not think this treaty is the place for such an amendment with its other surrenders of equal grossness.

Mr. MORGAN. We can get a good many of the surrenders out of it. We can take the grossness out of it. There is no trouble about that.

Mr. VANCE. Will the Senator from Alabama allow me to ask the Senator from Massachusetts if the conduct of which he complains has not been perpetrated and acquiesced in since 1819, when the first restrictive statute was passed by the Canadian Government?

Mr. HOAR. No, sir; it is new, within the past three years, substantially.

Mr. VANCE. Have we ever denied the right of Canada to make those restrictions?

Mr. HOAR. We have; always.

Mr. VANCE. Have we ever claimed that we ought to have a say in what those restrictions should be?

Mr. HOAR. The Senator puts the question to me.

Mr. VANCE. I ask for information.

Mr. HOAR. When Canada undertook at the time of the Fortune Bay arrangement to say that her local laws were binding on our fishermen—that was in Fortune Bay, within a headland—the American Secretary of State demanded redress. Thereupon Great Britain answered that the jurisdiction was entitled to fix the law under which those fisheries should be prosecuted. The Secretary of State replied that it was a very strange argument that Great Britain having undertaken to convey to us a fishery right should have the right to modify it by her legislation.

Then the English Government answered, "Well, that might not be true of later legislation, but it was at least true of legislation existing at the time of the treaty;" to which our Secretary of State answered that it was a very strange transaction that Great Britain had undertaken to convey to us a fishery right, subject to a mortgage or an incumbrance which she had not disclosed. Thereupon Great Britain said she did not want to talk any more about that subject. Then the President of the United States under the advice of the Department of State sent a message to Congress proposing to declare the existing treaty with Great Britain abrogated. Thereupon Great Britain hurried to reopen the question, and paid the damages.

Mr. VANCE. That is the point I was coming to. How was the dissent of this Government ever manifested? Was it ever manifested by act of Congress or official proclamation?

Mr. HOAR. I think when the State Department collected the damages that was an emphatic way of manifesting our dissent from the British claim.

Mr. MORGAN. That matter has been thrashed over several times here. The Senator from Massachusetts has gone into that.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator from Alabama will pardon me, I will state that he paused in his speech to permit the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE] to put a question to me.

Mr. MORGAN. I am not complaining at all.

Mr. HOAR. I do not wish to invade the Senator's province.

Mr. MORGAN. Not at all. I was about to say that it was not a new topic in this debate. The treaty of 1871 gave us the right to go right up to the shore of Fortune Bay to fish for herring, or mackerel, or for anything we could find there. We had the right, and paid for it pretty heavily, too. No ship was seized of the fleet of twenty-one vessels that went into Fortune Bay. No question ever went into a Canadian court.

Whether the country can see it or not, the lawyers will be very apt to see that the Senator from Massachusetts is trying a case that is not involved in the issues here at all. No seizure was made, and therefore the power and jurisdiction of the local courts were not brought in question. The local courts of Newfoundland were not in the slightest degree brought into question in the Fortune Bay affair.

In Fortune Bay our fishermen went in with twenty-one sail of vessels of a Saturday night, expecting, I suppose, the influx of a school of mackerel or herring. On Sunday they found the bay full of fish, and these delightful Sabbatarians, these beautiful Puritans, these sweet-scented Christians, who absolutely odorized the whole universe with their piety, got out of their ships and threw their nets around the fish in that bay enough to load twenty-one sail on that Sunday morning.

Mr. DAWES. Mr. President——

Mr. MORGAN. No, stop; the picture is too good. Do not interfere with me.

Mr. HOAR. It is a Sunday-school debate. [Laughter.]

Mr. MORGAN. Yes; and those Canadians, under the restrictions of the local laws of Newfoundland, could have been and would have been severely punished if they had ventured out into that bay on Sunday to catch herring, although it does not often happen that herring or mackerel either visit those bays. When they come they come like a harvest of wheat to the planter in the West; and with the grasshoppers eating up the crops they can not raise anything there. They can not raise corn; they can scarcely raise a grain of barley. I presume they can not raise rye or wheat. They can raise a few potatoes, and that, with the fish they catch out of those bays, is their whole subsistence.

There they are bound by their own laws against fishing on Sunday, and here were the pious Yankees in there with their nets. They surrounded an immense shoal of herring, enough to load twenty-one ships. If the Canadians were not at church—I suppose they were a little too mad to go to church—when they saw the Yankees there scooping up their fish, although held back by their local laws, what did they do? Some of the Yankee fishermen ventured ashore. They had not any right to be ashore beyond low-water mark. Our rights did not go any further than that. When they got ashore for the purpose of drying their seines, drawing them up on the banks, a mob arose, and they drove the Yankee men back to their fleet, and they tore up their seines and inflicted upon the Yankees all of that severe cruelty of which we have been speaking.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator if he is not now at least arguing the British side of the question?

Mr. MORGAN. I expect I am.

Mr. HOAR. Yes, I think you are.

Mr. MORGAN. I expect I am arguing the British side of the question, because those are the facts.

Mr. DAWES. I wish to ask a question.

Mr. MORGAN. If the Senator thinks the facts of the case carry me to the British side of the question, that is all well enough. Those are the simple facts. The Senator does not deny the facts. He can take his choice whether the facts are on the British or American side.

Mr. DAWES. Will the Senator from Alabama allow me to interrupt him?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. MORGAN. Not just now. The Canadians drove the Yankees back into their ships. Most of them went away the next morning. A few of them remained and cruised about there several days, but not being able to catch any more herring or mackerel they put back home and made complaint to the honorable Secretary of State.

The Secretary of State was deeply wounded at this offense. The British Government thought the matter all over, talked it over, argued it with him. He claimed $103,000. They debated the question. I have always felt that the Secretary of State perhaps was a little bit ashamed in pushing that claim upon the Government of Great Britain, although he is applauded very highly for his heroic diplomacy on that occasion, because that did look very badly in us. It did indeed look very badly that we should swoop down upon a bay like that of a Sunday and take advantage of the fact that the Canadians were shut out by their Sunday laws from fishing, and that we should go there and take all their fish. It looked pretty hard. I do not wonder a bit that there was a mob raised. I can not blame those poor creatures there very much for trying to save to themselves the bread of life, for about all the chance they had to live was to get the herring which came into that bay on that Sunday.

The Secretary of State, however, presented the claim, and presented it very ably to the British Government. The British Government said: "We think, notwithstanding the treaty of 1871 admits you to come to the shore, that when you get here you are bound by our Sunday laws." I do not think if a man was a British citizen he would have a right to go to the State of Kansas and cart a barrel of whisky in there and retail it. He would be bound by the local laws perhaps. Nevertheless our Secretary of State argued them down.

Mr. BLACKBURN. He out-talked them. [Laughter.]

Mr. MORGAN. Yes, he out-talked them, and they gave it up; but after all he left a legacy to Mr. Blaine, who settled that claim and another one not in dispute at all, not discussed much about, for $75,000.

Mr. EVARTS. The whole settlement was made, excepting a reservation was made by Lord Granville that he wanted to include in the release the subjects that I had discussed with him. I declined to do that, and that was abandoned by Lord Granville.

Mr. MORGAN. It resulted in a settlement of another difficulty for $75,000 for which our Secretary of State claimed $103,000 and proved it. He proved that we were entitled to $103,000, but he compromised on the damages.

Mr. EVARTS. I put in the affidavits.

Mr. MORGAN. Yes, you put in the affidavits. The British Government in making that settlement said that the Canadians had a right to enforce their Sunday laws in that bay, but they did not have any right to do it by a mob; they ought to have gone into court; they ought to have arrested our people when they came there ashore violating their Sunday laws and carried them before the courts and tried them, just as you do in Boston Harbor now, just as you do here at Washington City, or as you would do at Norfolk or anywhere else, it makes no difference who comes within your jurisdiction. If after a foreign subject is there he violates your municipal law you have a perfect right to punish him for it if you go at it regularly, if you do it according to law. But in this case, instead of its having been done by the lawful authorities of Newfoundland, it was done by a mob. The British representative said, "We can not justify the mob."

We have run upon that same doctrine very recently with the Chinese. Out in Wyoming, I believe it was, there was a massacre of Chinese. We said to those people out there, "We are going to pay the damages. We are not bound to do it, but a mob has risen upon you and we feel as if it is our duty to protect you against the power of the mob." So when the British Government came to pay these damages they put in a caveat, they put in an express reservation that they did not pay because they were bound to do so or because they did not have a right to enforce their municipal laws, but they paid the money because their people had risen upon ours and a mob had taken possession of their seines and torn them up.

That is a plain case. That will have to be explained away before we hear any more laudations of the heroism of this diplomacy about Fortune Bay. Oh, no, Mr. President, that has not anything to do with this case.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, neither by me nor in my name has any heroism been claimed for me.

Mr. MORGAN. The Senator himself has not said anything about it.

Mr. EVARTS. Nobody has claimed it for me.

Mr. MORGAN. I will point it out to the Senator in the RECORD.

Mr. EVARTS. I dealt with that question with Great Britain precisely as every officer of the Government charged with foreign affairs should do. I laid down conditions of public law which I believed in, and I received assent from Lord Salisbury in respect to any right to make regulations after the treaty of 1871, he claiming, however, that those older regulations were still in force and we must submit to them. I rejected that, and stated distinctly if that was the English construction of the treaty of 1871 I would consider it an abrogation of the treaty. He went out of power, and then the next administration closed up the transaction.

Mr. MORGAN. I have no doubt that is a correct statement.

Mr. EVARTS. I shall have abundant opportunity before this discussion is closed to put forward the proper case in behalf of the fishermen, in behalf of this Government, in every part of that transaction, and I will not anticipate it, and the Senator will find there is not one shred of public law or of common logic that can draw the distinction that Lord Salisbury undertook to draw between provincial laws made before and those made after the treaty.

Mr. MORGAN. What has that to do with the treaty of 1818, I should like to know?

Mr. EVARTS. I will show the Senator.

Mr. MORGAN. That was under the treaty of 1871.

Mr. EVARTS. Yes; and I will show the Senator that.

Mr. MORGAN. If that connection shall be made, I shall be very much astonished, or any connection at all between the doctrines laid down in that diplomatic correspondence and the proper construction of the treaty of 1818. The Senator says he gave notice to Lord Salisbury that his position was not tenable, and if insisted upon the treaty of 1871 would be considered as abrogated.

Here your Committee on Foreign Relations reported two years ago, after full and explicit and careful inquiry, that the treaty of 1818 had been on several occasions, specifying them, violated by the Canadian authorities, and that the British Government had acquiesced in the violation. Now, is the Senate prepared to declare that the treaty of 1818 is abrogated?

It seems to me to be rather a serious question. We may still have something under that treaty that we would prefer to a war; we may have a chance to improve it in such a way that a war would be an inconvenient way to settle it in comparison; but here your committee distinctly announce the open and flagrant violation of the treaty of 1818 in many cases, and name the cases, and yet the Senate sits here and conducts a political wrangle and quarrel and denounces treaties as pusillanimous cowardice and the like of that, and nobody gets up for the purpose of offering a resolution to declare that the treaty of 1818 is abrogated. You say that the time for negotiation has passed; but what do you say of what has already taken place?

Mr. President, I have been unwarily drawn into this debate this evening. I did not anticipate it at all and had not the papers before me, and I yield the floor and move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of legislative business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama moves that the Senate do now proceed to the consideration of legislative business.

The motion was agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills and joint resolutions, received from the House of Representatives, were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands:

A bill (H. R. 5690) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell block of land 108 in the city of Houston, Tex.;

A bill (H. R. 6217) to relinquish the interest of the United States in certain lands in Kansas;

A bill (H. R. 7410) for the relief of settlers upon old Camp Sheridan military reservation;

A bill (H. R. 8310) to provide for the disposal of the Fort Wallace military reservation in Kansas;

A bill (H. R. 8368) to forfeit the lands granted to the Hastings and Dakota Railway Company in the State of Minnesota, and for the relief of settlers upon the same and certain purchasers thereof;

A bill (H. R. 8740) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to sell to "The Methodist College Association of Southwestern Kansas" certain lands in Kansas;

A bill (H. R. 9040) to confirm the homestead entry of Hugh Foster;

A bill (H. R. 9056) to protect purchasers of land lying in the vicinity of Denver, Colo., heretofore withdrawn by the executive department of the Government as lying within the limits of certain railroad grants and afterward held to lie without such limits;

A bill (H. R. 9234) for the relief of William Gaffer and his legal representatives and assigns;

A bill (H. R. 9423) to restore to the public domain and to regulate the sale and disposition of certain lands east of the Mississippi River, in the State of Louisiana;

A bill (H. R. 3829) for the relief of Wesley Montgomery;

A bill (H. R. 10082) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of the widow and orphan children of Col. William R. McKee, late of Lexington, Ky.;" and Joint resolution (H. Res. 14) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to certify lands to the State of Kansas for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts.

The bill (H. R. 10346) providing for the erection of fire-escapes in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The bill (H. R. 8012) for the relief of M. M. Gibson was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

The bill (H. R. 456) for the relief of the widow of Lieut. John F. Stewart was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 206) to continue the provisions of a joint resolution approved June 30, 1888, entitled "A joint resolution to provide temporarily for the expenditures of the Government," was read twice by its title.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that that joint resolution be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The motion was agreed to.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 205) to provide temporarily for the support of the Army was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

BOUNDARIES BETWEEN BRITISH GUIANA AND VENEZUELA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read:

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit herewith, in response to a resolution of the Senate of 11th April last, a report of the Secretary of State, with accompanying correspondence, relating to the pending dispute between the Government of Venezuela and the Government of Great Britain concerning the boundaries between British Guiana and Venezuela.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, July 26, 1888.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The exhibits accompanying this message are very voluminous and perhaps had better be referred to the Committee on Printing before the formal order to print is made.

Mr. PLATT. The message should be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations in the first instance.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I make that motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair did not understand the motion.

Mr. PLATT. I was suggesting whether the message had not better first be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so referred.

BRIDGET FOLEY—VETO MESSAGE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read:

To the Senate:

I return without approval Senate bill No. 1447, entitled "An act granting a pension to Bridget Foley."

Joseph F. Foley, the husband of the beneficiary named in this bill, enlisted on the 22d day of August, 1862, and was discharged February 13, 1863, for disability which was certified to arise from chronic rheumatism contracted prior to enlistment.

He appears to have been sick with rheumatism a large part of the time he was in the service, and because of that fact never reached a point nearer the front than the city of Washington.

He died May 13, 1873, of consumption.

His widow filed in 1884 a declaration executed by the deceased shortly before his death, in which he alleged that he was first attacked with rheumatism at Capitol Hill, in the District of Columbia, in October, 1862. The soldier never applied for a pension.

It is strenuously disputed that he had this complaint before enlistment. However this may be, it is certain that he died of consumption, and I can find no proof that this disease was contracted in the service, or had any relation thereto.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 26, 1888.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question being, shall this bill pass notwithstanding the objections of the President of the United States, it will be referred with the message, if there be no objection, to the Committee on Pensions.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH INDIAN TERRITORY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read:

To the Senate:

I return without approval Senate bill No. 2644, entitled "An act granting the right of way to the Fort Smith, Paris and Dardanelle Railway Company to construct and operate a railroad, telegraph, and telephone line from Fort Smith, Ark., through the Indian Territory, to or near Baxter Springs, in the State of Kansas."

This bill grants a right of way 100 feet in width, with the use of adjoining lands for stations and other purposes, through the eastern part of that portion of the Indian Territory occupied by the Cherokee Indians under a treaty with the United States.

By the terms of the treaty concluded between the Government and the Cherokee Nation in 1866 these Indians expressly granted a right of way through their lands "to any company or corporation which shall be duly authorized by Congress to construct a railroad from any point north to any point south, and from any point east to any point west of, and which may pass through, the Cherokee Nation."

There are excellent reasons why this clause in the treaty should be construed as limiting the railroads which should run through these lands, at least without further permission of the Indians, to only one from north to south and one other from east to west.

It is evident, however, that the Congress has either not so interpreted this provision of the treaty or has determined that it should be disregarded; for there have been six or seven railroads constructed or authorized through these lands by the permission of the Government.

It has become very much the custom to grant these rights of way through Indian lands and reservations merely for the asking. They have been duplicated to such an extent that rival roads are found struggling for the advantage of a prior Congressional grant or for the possession of a contested route through these reservations.

I believe these indiscriminate grants to railroads, permitting them to cross the lands occupied by the Indians, if not in absolute violation of their treaty rights, are dangerous to the success of our Indian management.

While maintaining their tribal condition they should not be easily subjected to the disturbance and the irritation of such encroachments. When they have advanced sufficiently for the allotment of their lands in severalty they should be permitted, as a general rule, to enjoy and cultivate all the land set apart to them, and not discouraged by the forced surrender of a part of it for railroad purposes. In the solution of the problem of their civilization by allotments of land they need the land itself and not compensation for its appropriation by others. They can not be expected to understand this process in any other way than an indication that their tenure is uncertain and the assurance that they shall hold their allotted land for cultivation a delusion.

It is not necessary in the treatment of this subject to insist that in no case should a railroad be permitted to cross Indian reservations. There may be valid public reasons why in some cases this should be allowed. Important lines of through travel should not be always obstructed or defeated by a refusal of such permission. But I think there should be shown in every case a justification in the public interest or in furtherance of general growth and progress, or at least in a plain local necessity or convenience, before such grants are made.

It seems to me also that the consent of the Indians for the passage of railroads through their land should as a general rule be required; that the means of determining the compensation to be made for land taken should be just and definite and easy of application; that the route of the proposed road should be as particularly described as is possible; that a reasonable time should be fixed for the construction of the road, and in default of such construction that the grant should be declared null and void without legislation or judicial action, and that in all cases the rights and interests of the Indian should be carefully considered.

The bill under consideration grants to the railroad company therein named the right to construct its road over substantially the same route described in a law already passed permitting the Kansas City, Fort Scott and Gulf Railway Company to build its road through this reservation. No necessity or good reason is apparent why these two roads should be built upon the same line.

The bill makes no provision for gaining the consent of the Indians occupying these lands. The Cherokee Nation of Indians have their local laws and legislation, and are quite competent to pass upon this question. They have heretofore shown their interest in such subjects, I am informed, by protesting against some of the grants which have been made for the construction of railroads through their lands.

The bill provides for the taking of lands held by individual occupants and the manner of fixing the compensation therefor; but it is declared that when any portion of the land taken by the company shall cease to be used for the purposes for which it is taken the same shall revert to the nation or tribe from which the same shall have been taken. There is no provision that in any case land taken from individual occupants shall revert to them.

In the fifth section of the bill it is provided that the railroad company shall pay to the Secretary of the Interior, for the benefit of the particular nation or tribe through whose lands its line may be located, in addition to other compensation, the sum of $50.

It was of course intended to declare that this sum should be paid for every mile of road built through Indian lands; but it is not so expressed. I am by no means certain that the context will aid this omission, which is quite palpable, when that part of the bill is compared with others of the same character. In any event this is a provision which should be free from all doubt.

There is no time limited in the bill within which the proposed road through the reservation shall be completed, and consequently no forfeiture fixed for non-completion. The nearest approach to it is found in a clause providing that the company shall build at least 50 miles of its road in the Indian Territory within three years from the passage of the act or the rights granted shall be forfeited as to that portion not built.

The length of the proposed route through the Cherokee lands appears to be considerably over 100 miles; and it is plain that there is no sufficient guaranty in the bill that the entire road will be built within any particular time. There is no forfeiture and no limitation for the completion of the road if 50 miles is built within three years, and there may be some doubt how far the forfeiture would extend in case of a failure to finish the 50 miles within the time specified.

I believe these grants to railroads should be sparingly made; that when made they should present better reasons for their necessity and usefulness than are apparent in this case, and that they should be guarded and limited by provisions which are not found in the bill herewith returned.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 26, 1888.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Shall this bill pass, the objections of the President of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding?

Mr. PLATT. I move that the bill, with the message, be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

ADMISSION OF WASHINGTON.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumes the consideration of the unfinished business, being the bill (S. 12) to provide for the formation and admission into the Union of the State of Washington, and for other purposes.

Mr. STEWART. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 19 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, July 27, 1888, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, July 26, 1888.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House was requested, the bill (H. R. 10556) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the bill (H. R. 1705) to provide for the erection of a public building at Statesville, N. C.

The message also announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1082) to authorize the issuance of patent to certain land in Arkansas; asked a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed as conferees on the part of the Senate Mr. TELLER, Mr. PADDOCK, and Mr. BERRY.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House to bills of the following titles:

A bill (S. 196) to cancel certain reservations of lands on account of live-oak in the Southwestern land district of the State of Louisiana; and

A bill (S. 1782) to authorize the leasing of the school and university lands in the Territory of Wyoming, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 2197) empowering and directing the Commissioner of Navigation to register and enroll as American vessels certain sailing vessels of foreign construction repaired in the port of Cleveland, Ohio, and named the Josephine and M. C. Upper, respectively; and

A bill (S. 3381) for the erection of a public building at Allentown, Pa.

DISTRICT FIRE-ALARM AND POLICE TELEGRAPH.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the commissioners of the District of Columbia for an appropriation for the reconstruction and repair of the fire-alarm and police-telegraph lines in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

DEFICIENCY ESTIMATES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting estimates of deficiency appropriations for the service of the Treasury Department; also, to pay two judgments against the commissioners of the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

PAYMENT OF BAILIFFS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Attorney-General, asking that an appropriation be made in the general deficiency bill for payment of bailiffs for the fiscal year 1888; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 10556) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for other purposes.

Mr. HERBERT. I ask unanimous consent that the House non-concur in the amendments of the Senate and ask for a conference.

Mr. ADAMS. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection being made, the bill with the amendments of the Senate will be printed and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted, as follows:

To Mr. RUSK, for this day, on account of important business.

To Mr. STEELE, indefinitely, on account of important business.

To Mr. BLAND, indefinitely, on account of a death in his family.

To Mr. GLASS, for one week, on account of indisposition.

To Mr. CLARK, indefinitely, on account of very important business.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found duly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 409) for the relief of Thomas W. Lord;

A bill (H. R. 7232) for the relief of C. L. Wilson;

A bill (H. R. 7452) for the relief of the Southern Illinois Normal University; and

A bill (H. R. 7079) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Tennessee River at or near Knoxville, Tenn.

WHARF AT FORTRESS MONROE.

Mr. BOWDEN. I ask unanimous consent to take up for present consideration a Senate bill now on the Calendar—the bill (S. 2624) to provide for the enlargement of the dimensions of the wharf at Fortress Monroe.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause the plans and specifications under which contract has been entered into by the United States for the construction of an iron wharf at Fortress Monroe, Va, to be amended and changed so as to require all bearing piles and floor beams of said wharf to be of iron or steel instead of wood, and to enlarge the dimensions of the said wharf as designed, and make such other modifications in the plans and specifications as may be required to meet the necessities of commerce, for which purpose the sum of $75,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be immediately available, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. Let us have an explanation, subject to the right of objection.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Let the report be read; that will be more satisfactory.

Mr. BOWDEN. I send a copy of the report to the desk, and ask to have it read.

The report (by Mr. THOMAS H. B. BROWNE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred House bill 9441, for the enlargement of the wharf at Fortress Monroe, Va., have had same under consideration and beg leave to report it back with a recommendation that it do pass.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887, an appropriation was made in the sundry civil bill for the construction and completion of a new wharf, and improvements to the roadway leading thereto, on the Government reservation at Fortress Monroe, Va., of $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose. After the building of the road there remained for the construction of the wharf the sum of $80,000.

This sum is inadequate to complete the wharf according to the plans of the Engineer Corps, and as it is deemed desirable that the wharf be of the dimensions proposed, and be built of iron instead of wood, which would have to be used under the present appropriation, your committee recommend that an additional appropriation of $75,000 be made, as it was clearly demonstrated to them that it was to the interest of the Government to have a conveniently large and permanent structure at that point.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. I would like to ask the gentleman from Virginia if the wharf in question is limited to the uses of the Government? I notice in the bill or in the report a reference is made to "commerce." Is it proposed that we are to build a wharf for commercial purposes, or simply for the military purposes of the Government?

Mr. BOWDEN. The fact is that this wharf is used mostly for Government purposes, but a large number of steam-ship lines that ply the waters there touch at and land and receive freight from this wharf. This bill has been recommended by the Secretary of the Interior, by the Engineer Corps, and it has been unanimously reported by both the Military and Commerce Committees of the House, and for the reason that the appropriation already made will not build a structure that will stand for any length of time in those waters.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. I understand that; but allow me to ask one or two other questions.

Mr. BOWDEN. Certainly.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. Is it entirely constructed upon Government property?

Mr. BOWDEN. It is.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. And it is exactly what the Government considers necessary for its own use?

Mr. BOWDEN. That is the report of the engineers.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. I have no objection.

There being no further objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, and being read the third time, was passed.

Mr. BOWDEN moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection the bill H. R. 9441, of the same title, will be laid upon the table.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

PUBLIC BUILDING, CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Mr. ROWLAND. I ask unanimous consent to take up for present consideration the bill (S. 907) to provide for the erection of a public building at Charlotte, N. C.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to objection.

The Senate bill and the amendment proposed by the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds were read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HOVEY. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The demand for the regular order cuts off all requests for unanimous consent.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

COMPETENCY OF CERTAIN WITNESSES, UNITE STATES COURTS.

Mr. ROGERS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 10182) to amend an act entitled "An act to make persons charged with crimes and offenses competent witnesses in the United States and Territorial courts," approved March 16, 1878; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

YELLOWSTONE PARK.

Mr. WHEELER, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back with amendments the bill (S. 283) to amend sections 2474 and 2475 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, setting apart a certain tract of land lying near the headwaters of the Yellowstone River as a public park; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SARAH L. LARIMER.

Mr. WILLIAMS, from the Select Committee on Indian Depredation Claims, reported back favorably the bill (S. 2563) to compensate Mrs. Sarah L. Larimer for important services rendered the military authorities in 1864 at Deer Creek Station, Wyoming; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

DESERT LANDS.

Mr. COLLINS, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 10997) for the relief of persons who have settled upon or improved public lands belonging to the United States, known as desert lands; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

WAGON-ROAD BETWEEN NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN IDAHO.

Mr. DORSEY, from the Committee on the Territories, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 9683) to authorize the Territory of Idaho to aid in the construction of a wagon-road between Northern and Southern Idaho; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

TEMPORARY APPROPRIATIONS—SUPPORT OF THE ARMY.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Mr. Speaker, I am not quite sure whether the matter I desire to present to the House is privileged or not, but I wish to make a brief statement. It is a fact that on the 1st day of next month the War Department will be without money. There is no money appropriated to pay the soldiers and the various incidental expenses of the Army. The Army appropriation bill is pending in the Senate and can not be acted upon in time to become a law by the 1st of the coming month. The joint resolution extending the appropriation bills will expire with the end of this month. The War Department notify me that in order to have funds available on the 1st of August it is necessary to have a joint resolution extending the appropriation for the Army adopted now. I send it to the desk and ask to have it read.

The SPEAKER. The joint resolution will be read.

Mr. DINGLEY. How long does it extend the appropriations?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. One month.

The Clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution to provide for the support of the Army.

Be it resolved, etc., That the provisions of the joint resolution to provide temporarily for the expenditures of the Government, approved June 30, 1888, so far as the same shall apply to the appropriations for the support of the Army, be, and they are hereby, continued under the same limitations for the further period of one month from and after July 31, 1888.

Mr. ADAMS. I desire to ask my colleague what is the propriety or necessity of a joint resolution covering the expenses for the support of the Army alone?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I have just this moment given an explanation. In June last we extended the appropriation for the Army for the month of July.

Mr. ADAMS. And all other branches of the Government.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The Army appropriation bill is pending in the Senate and can not pass in time to become available for August. The War Department says it is necessary in order to have money provided for the payment of the Army, to extend by a joint resolution the appropriations for another month. I have a letter here bearing upon the question——

Mr. ROGERS. Another matter, if the gentleman will permit me, is this: It occurs to me that the resolution does not embrace the provision of the original resolution extending the time for thirty days, which directed the Department to deduct such sums as may be expended under this resolution from the appropriation bills for the current year. If it does not so provide, I think the resolution should be amended in that respect.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. This resolution was prepared at the War Department, and, as I have said, I have a letter accompanying it, which I shall ask to have read.

Mr. ROGERS. I would like to have the joint resolution again reported.

The joint resolution was again read.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois a question. When did the Army appropriation bill reach the Senate; what day?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. It was several weeks ago, I do not remember the exact date; but three or four weeks ago.

Mr. BUCHANAN. How long after the organization of the House was it before that bill reached the Senate?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The gentleman should know that as well as any one. The House, I believe, met on the first Monday in December last. The gentleman can figure it out. I think he was present when the House was organized.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 205) was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. TOWNSHEND moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The hour for the consideration of bills begins at twenty minutes before 12 o'clock.

POST-OFFICE BUILDINGS.

Mr. BLOUNT. When the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads was called some weeks or months ago it was my misfortune to be absent, and the House agreed that it might be passed without losing its place on the Calendar. I now desire to claim the privilege of calling up the business of that committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] some months ago, when the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads was called, asked unanimous consent to pass it over without losing its place, and the Chair will now call the Committee on the Post Office and Post-Roads.

Mr. BLOUNT. I desire to call up House bill 3319. It is on the Calendar of the state of the Union, and I ask that it may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the bill, after which the Chair will ask for objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there shall be in the Post-Office Department one architect and superintendent of construction at a salary of $4,000 a year; one skilled draughtsman at a salary of $2,000 a year, and two skilled draughtsmen at a salary of $1,800 a year each, to be appointed by the Postmaster-General.

SEC. 2. That the Postmaster-General shall cause to be prepared by the architect of the Post-Office Department, with the assistance of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, who is directed to furnish his counsel and aid thereto, a design for post-office buildings, which, before being adopted, shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Postmaster-General, and the Secretary of the Interior; that such design and plans shall be so devised as to enable the construction of post-offices of such variable size as may be required at the Presidential offices, so that additions or extensions to their capacity may be constructed from time to time in the future without injury to the harmony of the design or the usefulness of the constructed portion; that such design and plans shall be of uniform general character and exterior appearance, and, so far as may be most expedient for the service to be performed in them, of interior arrangement; and that all such buildings shall be constructed with a view to being fire-proof.

SEC. 3. That the Postmaster-General is authorized from time to time to construct, in his discretion, post-office buildings in accordance with the general design and plans so to be provided as aforesaid, at any place at which the gross receipts of the post-office for two years or more preceding shall have exceeded the sum of $3,000 in each year, but not in excess of the amounts which may be from time to time appropriated for such purpose by Congress; and for that purpose the Postmaster-General shall cause the proper working drawings for any such buildings as he shall so determine to construct to be prepared in accordance with the general design and plans aforesaid, and shall determine of what materials any particular building shall be built: Provided, That the cost of no such building shall exceed to the United States $25,000, and that the cost of no such building at any place where the post-office receipts for each of the two preceding years shall have been no more than $25,000 shall exceed to the United States $20,000, and that the cost of no such building at any place where the receipts for each of the two preceding years shall have been no more than $20,000 shall exceed to the United States $15,000. That all contracts for the construction of such buildings and for materials, fixtures, or apparatus to be used in such construction shall be let to the lowest bidder after such advertisement for proposals, as the Postmaster-General shall direct, shall have been made for not less than three weeks, at least one of which such advertisements shall be printed in a newspaper published at the place where such building is intended to be constructed, if any such there be.

SEC. 4. That prior to the construction of any such building there shall be conveyed to the United States with perfect title, approved by the Attorney-General, a lot or piece of ground of such size as shall afford a clear space not less than 50 feet in extent on each side of and beyond the limits of such proposed building, and so much as in any particular case the Postmaster-General shall deem expedient; and that jurisdiction over such ground shall be first ceded by the State in which it is situated to the United States in accordance with the laws thereof. That for the purpose of procuring such ground the Postmaster-General in his discretion is authorized to accept donations or grants thereof by the municipality in which such post-office is situated or by private owners; and to accept contributions to the purchase of ground or in aid of construction; and the Postmaster-General is also authorized in his discretion, when necessary, to purchase any such lot or piece of ground at a price not to exceed in any one case $5,000; and, when necessary, to cause the same to be condemned under the laws of the State where such ground may be.

SEC. 5. That the Postmaster-General shall annually report to Congress a statement of all post-office buildings constructed, together with all contracts therefor or relating thereto, and a particular statement of the cost of each during the preceding fiscal year, and also of all contracts for buildings which may be unfinished, with an estimate of the cost of each.

SEC. 6. That there is hereby appropriated out of the postal revenues, to be available during the current year and until exhausted, and to be expended for the purposes of this act, the sum of $2,000,000, to be drawn from the Treasury and expended, and the accounts therefor to be audited in the same manner as other expenditures for the postal service.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] asks unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union from the further consideration of this bill and to consider the same in the House. Is there objection?

Mr. ROGERS. I object.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move that the House do now resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. MCCREARY in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is now in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the Clerk will report the bill by its title.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 3319) to provide for post-office buildings.

Mr. BLOUNT. I now ask that by unanimous consent the first reading of the bill be dispensed with, as it has just been read.

There was no objection, and it was agreed to.

Mr. BLOUNT. I yield the floor to my colleague, Mr. ERMENTROUT.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. No more important proposition than that contained in this bill, with perhaps one exception, has been submitted to the House this session. It is the first time during my connection with this House at least that an effort has been made under the recommendation of any Department of this Government to establish a system for erection of public buildings by some general legislation. The bill we have under consideration this morning has been draughted comformable to the suggestions of the Post-Office Department as contained in the Postmaster-General's last annual report.

It results from a conviction that the time has come when the public convenience demands that there should be erected and maintained by the Government, upon some regular system, buildings exclusively for use as post office buildings, supplied with the modern conveniences and facilities necessary to as perfect and thorough an administration of Government post-offices as human wisdom can devise for the security of mailable matter and its certain and speedy transmission and delivery, a system not depending in each particular case upon the approval of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds and on the subsequent action of Congress, nor upon special legislation, but upon a fixed, regular system created by a general law, based on sound business principles; not limited in its operations to special localities, but whose methods should embrace the whole country, and afford to the public everywhere equal advantages, equal facilities, and equal benefits in the disposition of matters requiring the agency of the post-office, wherever the volume of business justifies it in the judgment of those in whose hands the people shall from time to time lodge the administration of that Department.

Why should not the citizen, the business man of the thriving town where the revenues of the post-office amount to $3,000 and upwards annually, feel that the money he is transmitting, the correspondence his trade requires him to carry on, the messages he is sending to home and family and friends, or which they, on the other hand expect to receive, enjoy the same sense of security, the same feeling of certainty, the same advantages of speedy transmission and delivery as those who happen to be dwelling in the larger and overgrown places, where the revenues swell into the fifty, sixty, or hundreds of thousands? The blessings of good government should be as equally diffused as possible.

When a man is too poor to buy or build for himself, he must rent. When the business man starts his enterprise, before he is sure of results or before he is sure of a permanent location, he usually rents. But when he is sure of the latter, and has sufficient money to do the former, he discards throwing his money into a rat-hole by paying rent. He lives and does business in his own house, because he knows it is better for him to pay interest rather than rent; because he does not desire to become the victim of the exactions of the landlord; because he knows that by becoming owner he is master and can not be driven away and shifted at his landlord's caprice, and because he knows that locating with ordinary prudence as years roll on, in a growing, thriving, prosperous country like ours, he may reasonably expect the further advantage of increasing value in his property.

Just so with our Government. When the problem of its success was uncertain, when it was pinched by insufficient resources, it was compelled to resort to the makeshift of rent, and was subject to all the inconveniences of a lessee. But now, since its success has become the wonder of the world, and how to deal with its steadily increasing revenues and immense surplus has engaged and is now engaging the best thought of the best intellect of the country, the time is at hand when it should live in its own house and administer its functions there unimpeded and unembarrassed by any master. Thus we have seen that, as soon as expedient, the Government has for years, by authority of Congress, erected public buildings and maintained them for public uses. So that, in the language of the last Postmaster-General's report, the proposition—

That whenever an independent office is fairly required, it should be the property of the Government, upon land ceded to its jurisdiction by the State and subject to its proper regulations for the best administration, has received such repeated legislative recognition in numerous legislative enactments for the erection of public buildings that it may be regarded as a settled principle in general.

The practice has met the approval of the people, for they, through their representatives in Congress have filled your Calendars with bills demanding the erection of such buildings in various localities. The most significant and unanswerable proof of this, however, is to be found in the presentation in this Congress of bills demanding the establishment of some general system or plan for their erection. Special bills have been introduced because communities similarly situated with those which had already obtained appropriations for such purposes felt they were likewise entitled. General bills have been introduced because it having been made manifest that it had become the settled policy of the country to erect public buildings, the conviction came with it that it should proceed upon some well-considered plan, embracing the whole country in its operations, whereby economy would be promoted and equal justice accorded.

Up to this time post-office accommodations in public buildings have been in such as were either also used for custom-houses or United States courts, or both. Neither has the experience of the General Government nor the experience of the Post-Office Department been of such a nature as to commend the continuance of this union. It has been seized upon as an excuse or reason for larger appropriations than were necessary—the larger portions lavished on elaborately ornamental exteriors, involving subsequently large appropriations for additional grounds, extensions, and repairs, rendered necessary by increase of business in departments other than the post-office, and in some instances pressing upon and narrowing the limits for the constantly increasing necessities of the post-office. I will ask the Clerk to read from the Postmaster-General's annual report for 1887, pages 20 and 21, and also report of commissioner of inspection, page 184, where marked, for light on the subject.

The Clerk read as follows:

This proposition has already received such repeated legislative recognition in numerous enactments for the construction of public buildings, that it may be regarded as a settled principle, in general; the reservation being that its particular application shall be made by special acts of Congress. Yet, whatever the theoretical value of that reservation, it can hardly be gainsaid that, in practice, public buildings have been often unnecessarily expensive; and, in many instances, the expenditure has been extravagant and needless, by no means even productive of the best results. They have proven especially unsatisfactory in their accommodations for the postal service.

In the buildings hitherto constructed the wants of the post-office have been generally subordinated, in the original design and in the completed structure, to the architectural show of the exterior and the claims of other kinds of Government occupation, which, though often of much less relative value and usefulness to the public, were given an exaggerated importance to furnish reasons for obtaining the appropriations originally, and so secured a disproportionate share of the subsequent use. Thus, many post-offices in expensive buildings are poorly lighted, badly arranged, and illy adapted to the proper requirements of the service.

In some cases the growing needs of other departments have pressed upon and narrowed the provision originally made for the postal service, whose own necessities have meantime also continually increased, until many Government buildings furnish at this time entirely inadequate and unsuitable quarters for the work of the post-offices; notwithstanding, often, the portion designed for such uses occasioned an expenditure in original construction much beyond what would now provide independently a satisfactory establishment. This fact is occasionally brought prominently to notice by the demands upon Congress for appropriations to alter, sometimes to rebuild, existing structures—alterations difficult to adjust to inexorable present conditions. So it chances that in many such buildings the clerks of the post-offices are found in basements, in lofts, or huddled in some portion of an apartment so darkened by indispensable furniture necessarily crowded in arrangement that the labors of the day must be performed under artificial light—a condition not only unfair and harmful to public servants by no means overpaid, but seriously obnoxious to the proper performance of duties, which, because of the rapidity, accuracy, and infinite details involved require the most favorable provision of light.

As a rule the Government buildings furnish apartments less than satisfactory for post-offices; and many much superior are to be found in buildings rented by the Department and equipped, sometimes built, by owners under the care of its inspectors. Upon this subject I wish to urge a reading of the facts presented by the commission for the examination of post-office organization in their report hereto appended, but which is more particularly mentioned in discussing the next following topic.

"A large majority of the post-offices in the United States are so wretchedly lighted and ventilated, so hampered by scant or ill-shaped area, by the isolation of divisions or sections in different and widely separated rooms upon the same or upon different floors, by rickety and antediluvian furniture, screens, and other equipments, and by badly located and insufficient lobby space, that the expense of operation is frequently more than 25 per cent. higher than it would be were all these facilities up to a maximum standard. Several years ago an inspector of this Department superintended the remodeling of the interior of the post-office at Pittsburgh, Pa., through which a saving was effected in the item of gas alone of $3,000 per annum. The same can be said of several other offices, changes in whose interior construction were made under Department supervision. From time to time it has been the urgent desire of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury that some experienced officer of this Department be detailed to co-operate with this bureau in an effort to improve the interior construction, arrangement, and equipment of post-offices. We believe that an expert, detailed for this service, would save to the Government many times the cost of his salary and expenses.

"We believe it possible, by a system of personal inspection and statistical returns from postmasters, to arrive, with an approximation to definiteness, at the average area or floor space required per 1,000,000 pieces handled per annum, or per 1,000,000 transactions of other kinds, by second, third, fourth, and fifth divisions, and at the average area per employé required for the staff division. The divisions upon the floor of each large office should be separated from each other by wire screens. In future the leasing of post-offices should be based upon plans and specifications conforming the floor space and its divisions and lobbies to the requirements above suggested.

"Were it possible to secure Congressional enactment which would enable the Postmaster-General, or the Secretary of the Treasury, to purchase a lot and erect upon it a suitable fire-proof building for every first and second class office in the United States specially adapted to the necessities of the respective localities, a much better as well as more economical service could be secured than in the rented premises now occupied, which in a majority of cases are not such as the Department needs, while the high rents and additional expenses required to keep up the grade of efficiency are a heavy tax on its revenues.

"We respectfully suggest the propriety of adding post-office architecture as a branch of the bureau of organization, if one shall hereafter be established.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. I have now made, in my judgment, a fair statement of the case in general. Is the plan proposed by this bill calculated to meet the requirements of the situation? Is it feasible, and as a business proposition is it prudent to adopt it? Its details, we think, answer these questions in the affirmative.

Its provisions operate only in places where the gross receipts amount to $3,000 annually for two successive years. The extreme limit of cost to the United States for any building shall not in any case exceed $25,000. Subject to these limitations it provides for three classes of buildings, varying in cost, according to the amount of gross receipts, as follows:

1. Where the gross post-office receipts for each of the two preceding years exceed $25,000, the cost of such building to the United States may be a sum not exceeding $25,000.

2. Where such gross receipts for each of two preceding years exceed $20,000, and shall have been no more than $25,000, the cost of such building shall not exceed to the United States $20,000.

3. Where such gross receipts for each of two preceding years shall be $3,000, and not more than $20,000, the cost of such building shall not exceed to the United States $15,000.

The following table shows number, classification, and cost of buildings and saving to the Government:

Class.	Number buildings.	Cost.	Total cost.	Interest at 3 per cent.	Rent.
First	45	$25,000	$1,125,000	$33,750	*$61,229.00
Second	34	20,000	680,000	20,400	*37,655.00
Third	238	15,000	3,570,000	107,100	*124,492.00
Third	244	15,000	3,660,000	109,980	†99,633.20
Third	872	10,000	8,720,000	261,600	†261,600.00
Total	1,433	‡17,000	17,755,000	532,830	584,609.20

*Now paid. †Estimated. ‡Average cost.

The above are outside figures.

The following table shows number of post-office buildings which, under the bill, may be built in each State and Territory:

States and Territories.	Number of buildings.	States and Territories.	Number of buildings.
Alabama	12	Montana	10
Arizona	4	Nebraska	34
Arkansas	9	Nevada	4
California	47	New Hampshire	20
Colorado	22	New Jersey	50
Connecticut	35	New Mexico	6
Dakota	26	New York	149
Delaware	3	North Carolina	15
Florida	11	Ohio	96
Georgia	19	Oregon	9
Idaho	2	Pennsylvania	110
Illinois	107	Rhode Island	8
Indiana	60	South Carolina	8
Iowa	83	Tennessee	13
Kansas	77	Texas	47
Kentucky	21	Utah	3
Louisiana	4	Vermont	18
Maine	19	Virginia	21
Maryland	10	Washington	16
Massachusetts	98	West Virginia	7
Michigan	73	Wisconsin	49
Minnesota	27	Wyoming	4
Mississippi	50

Mr. STRUBLE. I desire to ask the gentleman a question for information. What is the largest limit of appropriation allowed by this bill?

Mr. ERMENTROUT. I give the outside figures. The largest limit for a building alone is $25,000, the largest limit for a site is $5,000, making together $30,000.

Mr. STRUBLE. Then I take it that the bill does not deal with the question of United States courts at all?

Mr. ERMENTROUT. They are not included.

Mr. STRUBLE. And this bill is not intended to apply to any city in which United States courts are held, unless it is desired to have a separate post-office building and the Government sees proper to supply both.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. That is correct. I wish to say that I have looked into this matter carefully, and in making my calculation and estimates have used outside figures. I find that the number of post-offices covered by this bill, 1,434, taking the outside figures, allowing $5,000 for each of the lots and the outside figures for the buildings, the total would amount to $25,000,000; and an annual appropriation of $2,000,000 a year would provide for all the buildings that come at this time within the purview of this bill in about fifteen years or less.

Mr. CHEADLE. Do you make any provision for cities where the receipts are in excess of $25,000?

Mr. ERMENTROUT. Yes, in this way; where the receipts are in excess of $25,000 they may have the full amount allowed by the bill, namely, $5,000 for a site and $25,000 for a building; but common sense must be employed in all the operations of life and ought to be employed in all the affairs of the Government, and if upon examination the Department find that the outside figures allowed by this bill will not enable them to give sufficient accommodation for the business of the place, then the matter is relegated to Congress.

In this way this measure will save a great deal of the trouble and annoyance experienced by members in obtaining appropriations for public buildings, because they will come here with the aid of the investigation of the Post-Office Department, which will assist Congress in determining the propriety of making appropriations for buildings in places where it is found impossible to erect them under its provisions.

It will be observed that the present bill asks for an appropriation of $2,000,000. The appropriations for building purposes would at all times be under the control of Congress. The committee have caused to be prepared plans for substantial buildings of graceful exterior, suitable for post-office purposes, the estimated cost of which are $6,000, $8,000, $10,000, $15,000, $20,000, $25,000 respectively. They are here for the inspection of members.

These plans combine the great essentials of architecture—stability, utility, beauty.

Stability, because they are fire-proof and built of brick, iron, and stone.

Utility, because they will accommodate the poor man's postal, the impatient man's special, and the rich man's money order.

Beauty, because they appeal to the eye. To this must be added economy, because for $2,000,000 per year you can build one hundred of them.

Patriotic, because when decorated with the stars and stripes, as they often must be, they will cause the American heart to respond to the sentiment of American union and nationality with a throb so great, so all-conquering, as to annihilate foes within and foes without.

I well know that there are still men who look upon the conveniences of life and the beauties of architecture as tending to extravagance, luxury, and effeminacy, and for this reason set their faces against anything that appeals to the esthetic. To such I say, if your reasoning were followed to its logical conclusions, it would lead you back to the cave, the hut, and the tent for dwellings, and the skins of birds and beasts for clothing, and this most glorious of all cities, Washington, could not in its splendid public buildings, and especially in this noblest of all edifices in the world built for legislative purposes, symbolize the might, the majesty, the grandeur of a free people. To such I further say, take to heart the examples set by the highest form of civilization known to history. For when Christianity, after emerging from the catacombs and crypts of Rome, to which pagan persecution had driven it, shed its light upon the world that light fell upon beautiful structures, the flower and fruit of the highest development of heathen civilization. Did Christianity raze them to the ground? No. She sanctified them, planted upon their highest pinnacles the cross—the symbol of its faith—and dedicated them to the living God.

The adoption of the system provided for in this bill will be of great benefit. The Government will be relieved from the trouble and expense of the renting system; the payment of rent will ultimately become obsolete. It will be economy for the Government to buy land for buildings in thriving and growing towns. It will usually increase in value. In case of change of location being necessary land will be no loss to the Government, indeed almost certain of being enhanced in value.

A great benefit to be expected from this measure is the relief it will bring to members of Congress.

Ah, what a boon we bring to you. Yes, to you I speak who have been commissioned by your constituents to get an appropriation for a public building. Do you remember how, after presenting your bill, you began a system of button-holing the members of the committee. Perhaps you have asked the new Speaker to put you on the committee; perhaps you have succeeded in getting on. But whether on or not, you still, after much importunity, succeed in getting out your bill with a favorable recommendation. Then begins the button-holing of your colleagues to support your bill. Then you lay in wait for the Speaker, implore, beg, beseech, pray for recognition, day after day, and till you secure it your bill hangs over you night after night like a nightmare. You wake in the morning to find it bearing you down like the Old Man of the Sea, and during the day an incubus upon your usefulness. Well, at last you get recognition, ask for unanimous consent, and as you are about to put the cup to your lips and are already reveling in the joy of success, and already the far-off hosannahs of your constituents are ringing in your ears upon your achievement—yes, you see the bonfires lighted and hear the band playing—when some member from Wayback shouts from his seat, "I object." You are flat. Have you ever been there? Then you quiet him. But another member not yet smoothed down objects when you next apply, and another and another. Oh, the wearisome labor of seeing them through their friends and by yourself and quieting them! That is the purgatory you pass through.

However you succeed in passing your bill through the House, you are not done yet. You hurry up your bill through the Senate and then you go to the White House. After long delay, say about the tenth day, while sitting in your seat deeply interested in the tariff discussion which is usually going on, your ears are suddenly greeted with the announcement, "The committee will rise informally." Then, "Mr. Speaker, a message from the President." You eagerly rush to the desk, tear open the envelope, and read "Veto!" The man who discovered he had lost all the sand out of his cart going up the hill is no circumstance to you. I forbear. It is too painful.

But suppose it be approved. You are joyful. It is joy of short duration. Property has become very valuable at home in the proper location. It is discovered that your appropriation is not large enough. Then you go through the same devitalizing process the next session of Congress. But supposing the bill approved and the appropriation sufficient. Immediately when the time comes for selecting a site civil war is declared at home. The north fights the south; the east growls at the west; the center of the town stretches out its tentacles like an octopus to grab the prize. And the Congressman, where is he in all this hurly-burly? Like some unfortunate stranger in a hostile crowd, with his hat crushed over his eyes, buffeted all around, or like a prisoner captive among the Indians, running the gauntlet of uplifted clubs! Every man whose wish is not gratified has a criticism for him.

Are there any present who recognize the truth of the picture in any or all of its various phases? If so, I confidently declare that unless they cherish feelings of the most dreadful animosity against those who are opposed to the bill they will immediately plead with them to give it support.

I have drawn no fancy picture. By civil-service rules and regulations many of the bonds that have manacled Congressmen and impeded their usefulness have been broken. Make a beginning of relieving them in this matter of public buildings, the seeking for which under the present system is an incubus upon them and an injury to public business.

In addition let me quote from the conclusion of the report, most truthful words:

The passage of this bill will largely relieve the pressure brought to bear on Congress for the erection of public buildings. Their erection and size depending upon the business transacted, must be regarded as a just criterion for expenditure. The establishment of some system is far preferable to the almost arbitrary methods which have sometimes characterized the passage of public building bills. This measure will also repress extravagant appropriations. The post-office, like the Government, is here to stay, and for this reason, if for none other, it should be kept in some suitable building owned by the Government and at some permanent place whenever the volume of business justifies it.

An annual appropriation of $2,000,000 would be amply sufficient to purchase sites, erect buildings, pay the additional expense caused by the creation of the department of architecture as provided for in the first section of the bill, and be amply sufficient to maintain the system for all time to come. This expenditure annually would be trifling compared with the ultimate saving in rent to the Government and the advantages thereby gained to the public. We do not believe any annual appropriation of a similar amount could be better or more usefully expended.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT, Washington, D. C., April 30, 1888.

SIR: I have the honor to comply with the resolve of the Senate, adopted April 24, 1888, which is as follows:

"That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the Senate, at the earliest practicable date, a list of Presidential post-offices in the United States and in the Territories whose annual receipts for the three last preceding years have exceeded $3,000 per annum; and also a statement of the amount of rent paid by the Government for the accommodation of each such post-office."

I herewith transmit a tabulated statement of the Presidential post-offices, showing gross receipts for the fiscal years ended June 30, 1885, June 30, 1886, and June 30, 1887, together with the annual allowances for rent for such offices. I have construed the request of the Senate as calling for every office the gross receipts of which reached $3,000 in any one of the said years, so that the accompanying table shows all Presidential offices whereat gross receipts for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, exceeded $3,000 per annum, although it will be observed that in some cases the receipts which accrued at some of the offices in 1885 and 1886 were less than $3,000.

Where offices are located in Government buildings they are noted by the initials "G. B." in the last column of the table, and all offices whereat the gross receipts, as per adjustment of March 31, 1887, were less than $8,000 per annum, are indicated as "third class" in the same column, to which class no allowance for rent can be made under existing law.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

DON M. DICKINSON,
Postmaster-General.

HON. JOHN J. INGALLS,
President pro tempore United States Senate.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE FIRST ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL,
SALARY AND ALLOWANCE DIVISION, April 15, 1888.

Statement showing the gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices for each of the fiscal years ended June 30, 1885, June 30, 1886, and June 30, 1887. Offices named by States in alphabetical order, with statement of annual allowance for rent where made, or office in Government building, or in third class, where under existing law no allowance for rent is authorized.

[NOTE.—Where initials "G. B." are inserted in the column for "rent" it indicates the office is located in a Government building. No allowance for rent can be made under existing law for third-class offices.]

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30—			Annual allowance for rent.
		1885.	1886.	1887.
ALABAMA.
Anniston	3d class	$3,513	$3,503	$5,412
Birmingham		18,271	15,951	42,978	$1,800.00
Eufaula	3d class	5,347	5,174	5,349
Florence	do	2,330	2,312	3,002
Gadsden	do	2,509	2,648	3,295
Greenville	do	2,902	3,110	3,262
Huntsville	do	6,101	5,954	6,653
Marion	do	3,231	3,188	3,093
Mobile		39,450	38,847	39,758	G. B.
Montgomery		26,428	27,885	31,215	G. B.
Opelika	3d class	3,009	3,564	4,128
Selma		15,525	14,931	15,235	900.00
Talladega	3d class	3,314	3,303	3,679
Tuscaloosa	do	4,972	5,057	5,274
ARIZONA.
Phœnix	3d class	4,282	4,634	5,461
Prescott	do	6,221	4,719	5,155
Tombstone	do	5,949	5,922	4,795
Tucson	do	9,132	7,744	8,729	400.00
ARKANSAS.
Eureka Springs	3d class	4,434	4,466	5,207
Fayetteville	do	3,462	3,789	4,425
Fort Smith		8,874	9,704	13,164	550.00
Helena	3d class	5,524	5,179	5,186
Hot Springs		12,962	12,817	13,646	1,020.00
Little Rock		35,446	34,274	36,606	G. B.
Newport	3d class	2,620	2,752	3,014
Pine Bluff		6,813	7,567	9,062	700.00
Texarkana	3d class	7,334	7,510	6,764
Van Buren	do	2,755	2,877	3,126
CALIFORNIA.
Alameda	3d class	3,320	3,757	4,701
Auburn	do	3,298	3,241	3,717
Bakersfield	do	2,250	2,203	3,150
Berkeley	do	2,909	3,805	4,889
Chico	do	5,475	5,300	5,410
Colusa	do	2,992	2,933	3,275
Eureka	do	5,989	5,519	6,171
Fresno City	do	7,896	9,105	5,773
Gilroy	do	2,779	2,870	3,217
Grass Valley	do	4,642	4,849	4,922
Healdsburgh	do	3,931	3,842	3,974
Hollister	do	3,241	3,464	3,609
Los Angeles		44,446	51,868	74,547	1.00
Marysville		8,783	9,011	8,496	300.00
Merced	3d class	3,752	4,021	4,055
Modesto	do	5,267	4,376	5,429
Napa City		7,563	8,287	8,923	250.00
Nevada City	3d class	4,551	4,593	4,875
Oakland		50,090	49,933	57,691	1,200.00
Oroville	3d class	3,095	3,736	3,820
Pasadena			3,945	10,137
Petaluma	3d class	7,002	6,420	6,433
Pomona	do	2,695	2,963	4,833
Red Bluff		5,726	5,974	9,611	360.00
Redding	3d class	2,418	2,610	3,152
Riverside	do	4,981	6,356	*8,301
Sacramento		41,182	40,708	47,030	2,000.00
St. Helena	3d class	4,201	4,374	4,351
Salinas	do	3,952	3,617	4,775
San Bernardino		6,272	6,917	8,968	350.00
San Buenaventura	3d class	2,808	2,829	3,500
San Diego		7,115	10,916	22,868	300.00
San Francisco		502,303	509,098	547,334	G. B.
San José		25,850	26,263	28,654	1.00
San Luis Obispo	3d class	5,020	5,017	6,024
San Rafael	do	4,166	3,657	4,608
Santa Ana	do	2,780	3,105	4,774
Santa Barbara		8,288	8,289	10,134	300.00
Santa Clara	3d class	3,325	3,486	3,604
Santa Cruz		7,572	8,077	8,706	240.00
Santa Rosa		7,803	8,220	8,844	300.00
Stockton		19,424	19,313	19,935	1.00
Tulare	3d class	2,962	3,680	4,746
Vallejo	do	5,786	5,513	5,718
Visalia	do	4,234	4,606	5,434
Watsonville	do	3,481	3,498	3,556
Woodland	do	5,200	5,682	5,723
Yreka	do	2,593	2,700	3,068
COLORADO.
Aspen	3d class	5,452	8,670	7,791
Boulder	do	6,242	6,180	6,198

*Receipts, four quarters ended March 31, 1887, amounted to only $6,126.

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30— 1885.	1886.	1887.	Annual allowance for rent.
COLORADO—cont'd.
Buena Vista	3d class	$3,147	$3,122	$3,988
Cañon City	do	4,629	4,600	4,990
Central City	do	4,636	4,104	4,271
Colorado Springs		12,577	13,955	17,292	$1.00
Denver		126,775	126,840	145,972	601.00
Durango	3d class	5,050	5,217	6,151
Fort Collins	do	4,932	5,029	5,779
Georgetown	do	4,404	4,292	4,322
Golden	do	3,324	3,244	3,226
Greeley	do	6,659	7,087	7,433
Gunnison	do	4,920	3,823	5,777
Idaho Springs	do	3,303	3,732	3,940
Leadville		22,543	22,353	20,344	1.00
Longmont	3d class	3,539	3,921	4,171
Montrose	do		3,291	3,632
Ouray	do	3,139	3,221	3,630
Pueblo		11,651	12,519	10,819	1.00
Salida	3d class	4,538	4,739	4,702
Silverton	do	4,386	4,274	4,043
Trinidad	do	5,540	5,657	6,145
CONNECTICUT.
Ansonia		9,457	10,248	11,982	900.00
Birmingham		9,930	11,202	12,676	1,000.00
Bridgeport		48,468	50,785	54,466	3,087.50
Bristol	3d class	6,165	6,483	7,491
Danbury		13,877	15,249	16,679	300.00
Danielsonville	3d class	4,208	4,314	4,722
Greenwich	do	3,524	3,860	4,222
Hartford		120,412	126,747	136,091	G. B.
Litchfield	3d class	3,553	3,685	3,883
Meriden		26,160	27,398	30,676	1,292.00
Middletown		18,471	18,635	19,641	G. B.
Milford	3d class	3,130	3,107	3,435
Moodus	do		2,864	3,260
Naugatuck	do	4,827	4,749	5,079
New Britain		19,157	19,838	20,554	1,045.00
New Haven		109,149	112,855	123,198	G. B.
New London		19,427	19,882	21,501	1,500.00
New Milford	3d class	4,017	4,495	6,071
Northford		7,827	8,268	9,783
Norwalk		8,775	8,837	8,986	300.00
Norwich		24,958	25,396	26,814	1,800.00
Portland	3d class	3,436	3,480	3,375
Putnam	do	4,734	5,352	5,842
Rockville	do	5,932	6,636	7,085
Southington	do	3,990	4,104	4,247
South Manchester	do	3,479	3,997	3,594
South Norwalk		8,457	9,264	9,701	300.00
Stafford Springs	3d class	2,860	3,492	3,564
Stamford		14,954	16,278	17,513	1,100.00
Stonington	3d class	3,049	3,096	3,130
Thomaston	do	3,327	3,243	3,899
Thompsonville	do	2,856	3,160	3,463
Torrington	do	5,251	5,216	5,139
Wallingford	2d class	5,302	7,794	7,995	*650.00
Waterbury		28,463	30,222	32,567	1,850.00
West Winsted	3d class	4,176	4,259	4,449
Willimantic		8,501	8,242	9,165
Winsted	3d class	4,097	4,537	5,180
DAKOTA.
Aberdeen		6,452	7,219	9,719	600.00
Bismarck	3d class	8,558	7,766	7,491
Canton	do	2,632	2,793	3,292
Casselton	do	3,220	2,992	3,261
Deadwood	do	5,227	5,467	6,414
Devil's Lake	do	3,242	3,852	4,369
Ellendale	do		3,292	3,249
Fargo		21,694	21,774	20,179	900.00
Grafton	3d class	3,510	3,483	3,543
Grand Forks		9,163	9,341	9,759	450.00
Huron		9,532	10,949	12,094	250.00
Ipswich	3d class		3,118	3,058
Jamestown	do	6,516	6,371	6,108
Lisbon	do	3,274	3,206	3,365
Madison	do	2,366	2,890	3,178
Millbank	do	3,198	3,149	3,365
Mitchell		6,400	8,575	7,921	†900.00
Pierre	3d class	4,491	3,127	3,650
Plankinton	do	2,937	3,456	4,223
Rapid City	do	2,872	5,098	7,769
Redfield	do	2,863	3,082	3,403
Sioux Falls		11,791	12,863	15,819	1,000.00
Valley City	3d class	2,871	2,853	3,065
Wahpeton	do	4,029	4,522	5,017
Watertown	do	4,825	5,920	7,351
Yankton		6,996	8,076	8,149	160.00
DELAWARE.
Dover	3d class	5,883	5,665	6,125
Milford	do	3,122	2,767	3,058
Smyrna	do	3,210	3,383	3,320
Wilmington		45,452	47,049	51,000	G. B.

*Receipts March 31, 1887, $9,237.
†Second class July 1, 1887. Receipts March 31, 1887, $8,018.

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30— 1885.	1886.	1887.	Annual allowance for rent.
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.
Washington		$296,365	$310,510	$331,955	$6,393.00
FLORIDA.
De Land	3d class	3,426	3,960	3,549
Fernandina	do	4,049	3,805	3,566
Gainesville	do	5,311	5,683	5,858
Jacksonville		37,356	42,978	47,200	2,000.00
Key West	*3d class	5,047	6,049	8,439
Ocala	do	4,353	5,374	5,625
Orlando		6,097	8,980	9,184	240.00
Palatka		7,052	8,683	9,086	350.00
Pensacola		10,278	10,537	11,234	G. B.
St. Augustine		6,544	7,366	8,353	G. B.
Sanford	3d class	5,289	6,865	6,873
Tallahassee	do	5,200	4,764	4,804
Tampa	do	4,065	5,646	6,839
GEORGIA.
Albany	3d class	4,461	4,634	5,630
Americus	do	4,708	4,467	4,946
Athens	do	7,443	7,423	†8,328
Atlanta		99,737	98,247	112,329	G. B.
Augusta		31,768	34,185	36,295	1,600.00
Bainbridge	3d class	2,477	2,662	3,276
Barnesville	do	1,989	2,148	3,123
Brunswick	do	5,397	5,894	7,092
Columbus		15,670	15,486	16,709	900.00
Dalton	3d class	3,101	3,074	3,249
Gainesville	do	3,529	3,546	3,842
Griffin	do	4,011	3,941	4,474
La Grange	do	2,708	2,780	3,005
Macon		28,283	29,694	32,245	900.00
Marietta	3d class	3,791	4,543	4,903
Milledgeville	do	2,811	2,971	3,271
Newnan	do	2,869	3,074	3,210
Rome		9,481	9,230	10,329	500.00
Savannah		59,640	63,441	66,508	1,850.00
Thomasville	3d class	5,049	5,588	5,911
IDAHO.
Boisé City	3d class	5,483	5,501	5,764
Hailey	do	3,549	3,206	4,071
ILLINOIS.
Alton		9,631	8,910	9,536	500.00
Amboy	3d class	3,691	3,187	3,309
Anna	do	2,741	2,935	3,143
Aurora		20,590	19,451	17,899	1,000.00
Batavia	3d class	7,223	7,284	7,443
Beardstown	do	3,334	3,125	3,258
Belleville		8,798	8,488	9,311	450.00
Belvidere	3d class	4,579	4,722	5,239
Bloomington		35,170	36,744	38,351	1,200.00
Bushnell	3d class	4,493	4,116	3,996
Cairo		14,355	14,408	15,397	G. B.
Canton	3d class	6,529	6,966	7,856
Carbondale	do	3,164	3,213	3,556
Carlinville	do	3,889	4,090	4,967
Carmi	do	3,033	3,379	3,667
Carrollton	do	4,090	3,790	4,032
Carthage	do	3,065	3,655	3,164
Centralia	do	5,952	5,242	5,270
Champaign		10,710	10,613	11,002	600.00
Charleston	3d class	4,297	4,434	4,784
Chicago		1,891,377	2,030,783	2,226,825	G. B.
Clinton	3d class	3,697	3,658	3,917
Danville		14,585	14,084	15,294	600.00
Decatur		25,243	27,101	27,459	800.00
De Kalb	3d class	6,304	5,886	5,562
Dixon		7,925	8,175	8,670	475.00
Duquoin	3d class	3,239	3,216	3,363
Dwight	do	6,960	6,101	4,919
East St. Louis	do	4,581	4,814	5,177
Edwardsville	do	3,127	2,852	3,698
Effingham	do	3,054	3,205	3,341
Elgin		45,609	31,952	53,271	1,500.00
Englewood		10,559	11,193	15,650	500.00
Evanston		12,040	11,669	11,456	850.00
Fairbury	3d class	3,256	3,473	3,618
Fairfield	do	2,467	2,565	2,695
Freeport		19,844	19,872	21,088	600.00
Galena	3d class	7,052	7,209	7,472
Galesburgh		22,526	23,392	24,294	900.00
Galva	3d class	3,727	3,758	4,491
Geneseo	do	6,076	6,003	5,958
Grand Crossing	do	2,125	2,614	4,641
Greenville	do	3,162	3,084	3,305
Havana	do	3,009	2,970	3,154
Henry	do	3,269	3,326	3,423
Hyde Park	do	4,436	4,478	5,155
Jacksonville		16,300	15,972	17,821	600.00
Jerseyville	3d class	4,810	4,689	4,989
Joliet		17,965	20,446	19,947	850.00
Kankakee		7,967	8,611	9,988	180.00

*Receipts, adjustment March 31, 1887, amounted to only $6,203.
†Receipts, adjustment to March 31, 1887, amounted to only $7,718.

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30—			Annual allowance for rent.
		1885.	1886.	1887.
ILLINOIS—cont'd.
Kewanee	3d class	$7,505	$7,275	$6,422
Lanark	do	2,484	3,340	3,411
La Salle	do	6,053	6,645	6,976
Lincoln		8,275	8,090	8,271
Litchfield	3d class	4,671	5,133	5,207
Macomb	do	4,350	4,796	5,018
Marseilles	do	3,211	3,224	3,247
Marshall	do	3,031	2,844	3,012
Mattoon		8,243	7,595	8,328	$400.00
Maywood	3d class	2,138	2,148	3,043
Mendota	do	5,416	5,687	6,166
Moline		17,880	17,297	17,057	925.00
Monmouth		9,331	9,745	9,425	400.00
Morris	3d class	5,281	5,942	5,337
Morrison	do	4,054	4,029	4,147
Mount Carmel	do	2,759	3,101	3,506
Mount Carroll	do	3,656	3,978	3,846
Mount Vernon	do	3,546	3,753	3,994
Naperville	do	3,181	3,112	3,111
Nashville	do	3,035	3,078	3,526
National Stock-Yards.		11,040	9,739	10,078
Normal	3d class	4,448	4,299	4,229
Oak Park		4,255	7,788	10,091	400.00
Olney	3d class	4,550	4,555	4,945
Oregon	do	2,820	3,378	3,278
Ottawa		12,863	13,531	13,489	1.00
Pana	3d class	4,037	4,373	4,718
Paris	do	7,514	7,126	7,533
Paxton	do	3,421	3,593	3,597
Pekin		6,687	6,675	11,085	200.00
Peoria		68,170	70,371	70,521	2,500.00
Peru	3d class	3,948	4,106	3,494
Petersburgh	do	3,316	3,325	3,338
Pittsfield	do	3,699	3,443	3,505
Polo	do	3,550	4,034	3,702
Pontiac	do	4,922	4,815	5,417
Princeton	do	7,568	7,499	7,700
Pullman	do	6,624	6,574	7,411
Quincy		37,843	40,821	40,978	G. B.
Rochelle	3d class	3,667	3,692	3,853
Rock Falls	do	3,775	3,637	3,332
Rockford		37,795	38,596	39,400	1,200.00
Rock Island		15,418	20,594	20,032	1,400.00
Rushville	3d class	2,906	3,089	3,400
Sandwich	do	4,778	5,286	5,871
Shelbyville	do	4,216	4,313	4,962
South Chicago	do	4,219	5,516	7,939	(*)
South Evanston	do	4,462	4,705	4,538
Springfield		34,003	32,437	35,618	G. B.
Sterling		10,358	10,286	11,536	600.00
Streator		9,032	9,821	10,531	900.00
Sycamore	3d class	5,057	5,100	5,275
Taylorville	do	3,633	3,513	3,408
Tuscola	do	3,054	3,000	3,275
Urbana	do	3,775	3,965	3,902
Vandalia	do	2,965	2,866	3,155
Washington	do	2,387	2,413	3,142
Watseka	do	2,998	2,920	3,257
Waukegan	do	5,582	5,795	6,292
Woodstock	do	3,263	3,150	3,224
Wright's Grove	do	3,719	4,440	3,913
INDIANA.
Anderson	3d class	5,414	5,310	5,762
Attica	do	3,027	3,709	3,722
Auburn	do	3,059	2,767	3,228
Aurora	do	4,227	4,894	4,204
Bloomington	do	4,373	4,885	5,087
Bluffton	do	3,354	3,454	3,760
Brazil	do	4,046	4,214	4,911
Columbia City	do	3,544	3,697	3,902
Columbus		7,408	8,551	8,859	150.00
Connersville	3d class	6,609	6,517	6,966
Crawfordsville		8,933	9,066	10,017	450.00
Danville	3d class	3,975	3,450	3,913
Decatur	do	2,616	2,471	3,085
Delphi	do	3,120	3,344	3,285
Elkhart		15,137	14,768	15,731	1.00
Evansville		35,794	36,345	40,074	G. B.
Fort Wayne		33,368	35,210	38,197	1,000.00
Frankfort	3d class	5,300	5,754	6,687
Franklin	do	3,551	3,608	3,969
Goshen		9,137	9,480	10,629	12.60
Greencastle	3d class	7,023	7,154	7,353
Greensburgh	do	4,859	4,780	4,877
Huntington	do	6,234	6,240	6,570
Indianapolis		165,069	167,531	182,500	G. B.
Jeffersonville	3d class	5,525	5,462	6,010
Kendallville	do	3,855	3,994	4,735
Kokomo	do	6,527	6,536	6,670
La Fayette		22,210	23,821	25,936	1,100.00
La Porte		9,894	9,862	10,107	700.00
Lawrenceburgh	3d class	3,467	3,336	3,687
Lebanon	do	3,116	3,080	3,429
Ligonier	do	3,108	3,044	3,111
Logansport		12,172	14,714	14,609	1,200.00
Madison		8,283	8,139	8,650	400.00
Marion	3d class	5,676	5,889	6,308
Michigan City	do	7,017	7,156	7,968

* Lease October, 1885–'86.

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30—			Annual allowance for rent.
		1885.	1886.	1887.
INDIANA—cont'd.
Mishawaka	3d class	$3,151	$3,603	$5,382
Mount Vernon	do	3,340	3,470	4,081
Muncie		6,621	7,529	8,707	$300.00
New Albany		11,769	11,799	12,363	800.00
New Castle	3d class	4,118	3,868	4,270
Noblesville	do	3,837	2,981	3,281
Notre Dame	do	4,328	4,121	4,368
Peru		8,344	8,097	8,192	500.00
Plymouth	3d class	4,125	4,293	4,513
Portland	do	3,445	3,648	4,040
Princeton	do	3,178	3,086	3,282
Richmond		23,070	25,309	26,326	1,200.00
Rochester	3d class	3,180	3,222	3,390
Rushville	do	5,462	4,965	5,438
Seymour	do	4,948	5,174	5,399
Shelbyville	do	5,644	5,540	6,830
South Bend		22,555	21,913	26,278	1,200.00
Sullivan	3d class	2,605	2,753	3,130
Terre Haute		31,990	33,058	36,455	900.00
Union City	3d class	4,431	4,452	4,581
Valparaiso		9,184	8,844	9,154	350.00
Vincennes		10,345	10,443	10,700	500.00
Wabash	3d class	6,315	7,032	7,354
Warsaw	do	4,668	4,907	5,313
Washington	do	4,091	4,108	4,493
Winchester	do	3,420	3,383	3,585
IOWA.
Albia	3d class	3,816	3,789	3,875
Algona	do	3,786	3,937	4,160
Ames	do	3,462	3,374	3,419
Anamosa	do	3,941	3,773	3,646
Atlantic		7,796	7,985	8,088	200.00
Audubon	3d class	3,091	3,396	3,404
Bedford	do	3,184	3,180	3,305
Bloomfield	do	2,865	2,775	3,053
Boone	do	6,392	6,631	6,854
Burlington		40,779	40,504	39,822	2,500.00
Carroll City	3d class	4,383	4,707	4,840
Cedar Falls	do	6,758	6,756	7,246
Cedar Rapids		37,550	36,229	36,469	1,200.00
Centreville	3d class	4,286	3,919	4,174
Chariton	do	5,241	5,209	5,319
Charles City	do	5,812	5,273	5,056
Cherokee	do	4,286	4,645	5,107
Clarinda	do	5,743	5,687	5,339
Clinton		15,190	16,721	17,395	1,000.00
Corning	3d class	4,208	4,193	5,426
Council Bluffs		34,497	32,614	38,601	1,000.00
Cresco	3d class	3,159	3,440	3,469
Creston		11,551	9,516	9,543	600.00
Davenport		37,094	37,764	39,961	1,600.00
Decorah	3d class	5,350	7,660	*8,407
Denison	do	3,953	3,999	4,344
Des Moines		93,309	105,603	102,532	2,100.00
Dubuque		39,359	40,927	43,674	G. B.
Eldora	3d class	3,311	3,529	3,090
Emmetsburgh	do	3,399	4,059	4,722
Fairfield	do	6,355	6,669	6,427
Fort Dodge		8,935	7,939	8,216	225.00
Fort Madison	3d class	5,422	5,918	6,217
Glenwood	do	3,519	3,337	3,245
Grinnell	do	7,402	7,166	7,262
Hampton	do	3,061	3,214	3,244
Harlan	do	4,428	3,721	3,799
Ida Grove	do	3,813	3,544	3,466
Independence	do	6,795	6,966	6,811
Indianola	do	3,877	3,910	4,019
Iowa City		13,511	13,139	13,757	1,200.00
Iowa Falls	3d class	3,693	3,800	3,852
Jefferson	do	3,241	3,409	3,454
Keokuk		21,481	21,767	22,837	1,000.00
Knoxville	3d class	3,549	3,630	3,729
Le Mars		8,758	8,484	8,476	125.00
Lyons	3d class	4,816	4,538	5,148
McGregor	do	5,477	5,817	5,856
Manchester	do	5,296	5,496	5,574
Maquoketa	do	4,864	4,847	4,986
Marengo	do	3,187	3,244	3,130
Marion	do	3,932	5,143	5,135
Marshalltown		18,438	19,592	19,274	800.00
Mason City	3d class	6,453	6,608	6,840
Missouri Valley	do	3,527	3,870	4,150
Monticello	do	2,859	3,059	3,105
Mount Pleasant		7,510	8,620	8,002	260.00
Muscatine		13,796	14,794	14,949	1,000.00
Nevada	3d class	3,059	3,038	3,036
Newton	do	5,264	5,635	5,411
Osage	do	4,093	4,522	4,509
Osceola	do	3,810	3,579	3,538
Oskaloosa		11,568	11,605	11,571	400.00
Ottumwa		18,983	20,929	22,591	500.00
Perry	3d class	4,124	4,150	4,113
Red Oak	do	7,731	7,286	7,264
Sheldon	do	2,976	3,120	3,103
Shenandoah		4,841	5,013	5,217
Sigourney	3d class	2,959	3,039	3,163
Sioux City		28,636	33,296	39,685	2,200.00
Spencer	3d class	3,441	3,389	3,677
Storm Lake	do	4,124	4,420	4,672

* Receipts, adjustment March 31, 1887, amounted to only $7,221.

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30— 1885.	1886.	1887.	Annual allowance for rent.
IOWA—cont'd.
Stuart	3d class	$3,248	$3,140	$3,376
Tipton	do	3,041	3,201	3,161
Toledo	do	3,631	3,809	4,303
Villisca	do	3,159	3,200	3,412
Vinton	do	4,849	4,989	5,102	*$1.00
Washington	do	5,041	5,098	5,237
Waterloo		12,937	13,360	13,375	250.00
Waverly	3d class	4,508	4,391	4,772
Webster City	do	4,590	4,791	4,691
West Union	do	3,400	3,229	3,449
What Cheer	do	3,613	4,187	4,429
Winterset	do	4,147	4,050	4,407
KANSAS.
Abilene		8,437	9,229	10,242	1.00
Anthony	3d class	3,299	4,913	5,654
Arkansas City	do	6,507	5,949	†8,671
Atchison		26,417	27,345	31,521	940.00
Belleville	3d class		2,503	3,225
Beloit	do	5,262	5,839	6,631
Burlington	do	5,343	5,289	5,312
Caldwell	do	3,956	3,991	4,294
Cawker City	do	2,983	3,347	3,960
Chanute	do	3,804	4,166	4,410
Cherry Vale	do	5,302	5,051	4,612
Chetopa	do	3,428	3,337	3,663
Clay Centre		6,668	7,276	8,064	300.00
Clyde	3d class	2,512	3,337	3,298
Coffeyville	do	3,610	3,497	3,236
Columbus	do	5,955	5,315	5,385
Concordia	do	5,414	5,624	5,966
Council Grove	do	3,520	3,690	4,350
Dodge City		6,389	7,751	8,225
El Dorado	3d class	5,977	6,486	6,775
Ellsworth	do	3,521	4,216	4,665
Emporia		19,443	19,253	20,351	500.00
Eureka	3d class	4,599	4,989	5,232
Fort Scott		16,910	16,488	18,304	1,000.00
Fredonia	3d class	3,087	3,333	3,840
Garden City				11,193	400.00
Garnett	3d class	4,556	4,787	4,888
Girard	do	4,668	4,352	4,484
Great Bend	do	4,109	4,945	6,472
Harper	do	5,726	5,472	4,813
Hays City	do	2,390	2,885	3,603
Hiawatha	do	6,140	6,380	6,604
Holton	do	3,712	3,860	4,379
Humboldt	do	3,470	3,313	3,154
Hutchinson		6,885	8,085	11,539	1.00
Independence	3d class	7,056	6,626	6,529
Iola	do	3,388	3,063	3,223
Junction City	do	7,048	6,622	6,093
Kingman	do	4,927	6,608	‡8,112
Kinsley	do		4,027	4,113
Larned	do	5,485	7,307	7,742
Lawrence		23,030	22,676	24,944	1,200.00
Leavenworth		28,413	29,019	29,436	600.00
Lincoln	3d class			3,701
Lyons	do	3,251	3,414	4,334
McPherson	do	6,647	6,531	§8,253
Manhattan	do	6,708	6,752	7,311
Marion	do	3,069	3,403	4,284
Marysville	do	3,563	3,677	4,567
Medicine Lodge	do	2,921	3,803	4,144
Minneapolis	do	4,154	4,749	5,543
Newton		9,508	9,916	10,722	300.00
Oberlin	3d class		2,213	4,912
Olathe	do	5,282	5,430	5,471
Osage City	do	4,358	4,429	4,899
Osborne	do	2,445	2,886	3,592
Oswego	do	5,047	5,148	5,337
Ottawa		10,602	10,997	11,944	300.00
Paola	3d class	5,658	5,562	5,521
Parsons		9,921	9,388	10,292	400.00
Peabody	3d class	3,600	3,804	4,397
Pittsburgh	do	3,795	3,810	4,076
Pratt	do			3,078
Russell	do	2,603	2,981	4,060
Sabetha	do	2,924	2,863	3,125
Salina		8,775	9,879	13,532	250.00
Seneca	3d class	3,943	4,045	3,649
Sterling	do	4,494	4,400	4,944
Stockton	do			3,015
Topeka		60,858	60,910	68,489	G. B.
Wa Keeney	3d class	2,010	3,702	4,587
Wamego	do	3,081	2,899	3,052
Washington	do	4,165	4,124	4,288
Wellington		10,743	10,559	10,843	180.00
Wichita		21,214	27,021	41,272	1.00
Winfield		10,337	10,925	12,269
Wyandotte‖		11,901	15,200	16,878	600.00
KENTUCKY.
Ashland	3d class	3,447	3,396	4,081
Bowling Green		6,938	7,945	8,382	500.00

* Lease, act 1885–'86.
† Receipts, adjustment March 31, 1887, amounted to only $6,113.
‡ Receipts adjustment March 31, 1887, amounted to only $5,940.
§ Receipts adjustment March 31, 1887, amounted to only $6,565.
‖ Name changed to Kansas City, Kans.

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30— 1885.	1886.	1887.	Annual allowance for rent.
KENTUCKY—cont'd.
Catlettsburgh	3d class	$2,908	$2,809	$3,311
Covington		21,909	21,251	22,902	G. B.
Cynthiana	3d class	3,629	3,733	4,050
Danville	do	6,031	5,993	6,181
Frankfort	do	10,695	13,668	12,232	G. B.
Georgetown	do	4,205	4,424	4,289
Harrodsburgh	do	3,675	3,730	3,826
Henderson	do	6,638	6,922	7,855
Hopkinsville	do	5,737	5,861	6,344
Lebanon		4,209	4,520	4,694
Lexington		25,392	25,276	27,691	$1,000.00
Louisville		235,167	226,793	238,203	G. B.
Maysville		7,916	8,027	8,383	350.00
Mount Sterling	3d class	5,298	5,470	5,539
Newport		9,285	13,097	10,601	1,000.00
Owensborough		8,966	9,572	10,019	500.00
Paducah		11,007	10,115	12,163	G. B.
Paris	3d class	6,359	6,272	6,513
Richmond	do	4,212	4,438	4,553
Russellville	do	3,038	3,185	3,518
Shelbyville	do	4,082	4,255	4,644
Versailles	do	2,839	2,908	3,021
Winchester	do	3,428	3,735	3,996
LOUISIANA.
Baton Rouge	3d class	6,018	6,571	6,916
Lake Charles	do	2,923	2,710	4,711
Monroe	do	3,415	3,413	3,501
New Iberia	do	3,253	3,384	3,650
New Orleans		279,135	262,934	277,106	G. B.
Shreveport		9,699	9,807	11,502	G. B.
MAINE.
Auburn		10,041	10,578	12,176	700.00
Augusta		57,996	53,863	51,486	2,000.00
Bangor		29,177	36,021	43,499	G. B.
Bar Harbor	3d class			4,708
Bath		9,548	10,307	10,194	G. B.
Belfast	3d class	5,590	5,635	6,056
Biddeford		9,142	9,224	10,013	750.00
Brunswick	3d class	5,555	5,629	6,159
Calais	do	4,464	4,589	5,275
Dexter	do	3,103	3,319	3,363
Eastport	do	3,441	3,259	3,454
Ellsworth	do	3,656	3,617	4,081
Gardiner	do	6,515	6,869	7,664
Hallowell	do	3,456	3,350	3,651
Houlton	do	3,969	4,283	4,358
Lewiston		18,272	17,678	18,218	1,250.00
Norway	3d class	2,749	3,232	3,383
Portland		87,939	88,390	93,766	G. B.
Richmond	3d class	2,793	2,742	3,438
Rockland		8,302	8,432	9,220	G. B.
Saco	3d class	4,616	4,743	4,899
Skowhegan	do	5,092	5,278	5,398
Waterville		8,029	8,117	8,182	600.00
MARYLAND.
Annapolis	3d class	7,721	11,398	7,473	*500.00
Baltimore		516,858	501,001	533,792	G. B.
Cambridge	3d class	2,955	3,058	3,733
Centreville	do	2,631	2,680	3,005
Cumberland		12,005	11,565	12,278	600.00
Easton	3d class	4,789	5,080	5,005
Elkton	do	3,460	3,385	3,477
Frederick		10,152	10,581	11,034	1,000.00
Hagerstown		10,153	10,799	11,652	500.00
Salisbury	3d class	3,231	3,254	3,614
Westminster	do	3,869	4,003	4,335
MASSACHUSETTS.
Adams	3d class	4,962	5,497	6,086
Amesbury		7,138	7,583	8,599	300.00
Amherst		8,180	9,506	9,466	350.00
Andover	3d class	6,323	6,141	6,572
Arlington	do	3,447	3,858	4,178
Athol	do	4,652	5,096	5,509
Attleborough	do	5,920	6,296	7,516
Auburndale	do	3,248	3,281	3,654
Ayer	do	2,902	2,983	3,162
Beverly		8,137	8,940	10,120	600.00
Boston		1,471,333	1,555,451	1,651,709	G. B.
Bridgewater	3d class	3,329	3,369	3,501
Brockton		21,638	24,185	25,676	1,400.00
Campello	3d class	3,615	3,928	4,370
Canton	do	2,917	2,905	3,369
Chicopee	do	5,414	5,145	6,140
Chicopee Falls	do	3,364	4,001	3,902
Clinton		7,690	7,888	9,024	200.00
Concord	3d class	3,610	3,842	4,286
Cottage City	do	3,717	3,669	3,834
Danvers	do	3,272	3,390	4,297
Dedham	do	3,954	3,256	4,343
Easthampton	do	4,870	5,229	5,493
East Weymouth	do	2,682	2,784	3,246
Everett	do	2,580	3,003	3,789
Fall River		27,633	29,300	33,376	G. B.

* Lease, act 1885–'86.

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30— 1885.	1886.	1887.	Annual allowance for rent.
MASSACHUSETTS—continued.
Fitchburg		$20,470	$21,376	$23,978	$1,700.00
Florence	3d class	2,849	4,256	3,067
Franklin	do	3,678	3,897	5,716
Gardner	do	4,253	4,424	4,733
Gloucester		16,107	17,799	18,523	G.B.
Great Barrington	3d class	4,993	5,342	5,733
Greenfield		14,451	13,276	13,465	560.00
Haverhill		23,497	26,353	27,097	1,200.00
Holyoke		28,363	29,883	32,503	1,000.00
Hudson	3d class	3,265	3,684	4,036
Hyde Park	do	6,419	7,018	9,649
Ipswich	do	3,443	3,594	3,925
Lawrence		26,964	27,019	29,941	1,550.00
Lee	3d class	3,576	4,049	4,280
Lenox	do		2,992	4,034
Leominster	do	5,762	6,076	6,932
Lowell		75,661	72,829	78,049	3,000.00
Lynn		41,288	47,427	50,495	1,800.00
Malden		10,576	10,567	12,099	800.00
Marblehead	3d class	5,430	6,627	6,646
Marlborough		9,442	9,698	10,761	200.00
Medford	3d class	4,785	4,898	5,687
Melrose		3,956	5,205	9,962	350.00
Middleborough	3d class	7,432	6,849	7,893
Milford		7,226	7,327	8,603	400.00
Millbury	3d class	2,780	3,145	3,610
Milton	do	4,180	4,214	4,084
Monson	do	2,578	2,749	3,241
Nantucket	do	5,289	5,403	5,334
Natick	do	5,877	7,189	4,122
New Bedford		42,401	39,392	41,578	G.B.
Newburyport		14,454	15,004	16,325	900.00
Newton		8,955	8,882	9,401	300.00
Newton Centre	3d class	3,237	3,568	3,659
Newtonville	do	4,424	3,428	7,118
North Adams		15,456	16,043	18,026	1,000.00
Northampton		16,095	15,579	18,161	675.00
North Attleborough	3d class	6,733	6,754	7,406
North Brookfield	do	3,014	3,481	4,282
Orange	do	4,803	4,673	4,938
Palmer	do	4,613	4,298	4,673
Peabody	do	5,807	5,893	6,179
Pittsfield		26,212	19,809	21,036	1,000.00
Plymouth		7,551	8,440	9,345	200.00
Provincetown	3d class	3,456	3,526	3,705
Quincy	do	6,782	7,927	7,010
Reading	do	2,842	3,009	3,347
Rockland	do	3,461	3,882	4,106
Salem		24,818	25,879	28,175	2,100.00
Shelburne Falls	3d class	3,360	3,204	3,701
Southbridge	do	3,267	3,376	3,798
South Framingham		6,322	6,840	8,180
Spencer	3d class	5,192	5,554	6,064
Springfield		73,770	75,174	85,689	2,500.00
Stockbridge	3d class	2,604	2,803	3,055
Stoneham	do	4,897	5,468	5,404
Stoughton	do	2,709	2,745	3,089
Taunton		21,540	22,147	22,330	1,250.00
Turner's Falls	3d class	3,448	3,754	4,083
Wakefield	do	6,899	6,459	6,373
Waltham		14,232	14,564	16,625	1,200.00
Ware	3d class	4,842	4,985	5,813
Warren	do	3,395	3,097	3,406
Watertown	do	4,753	4,769	4,831
Webster	do	4,602	4,885	5,362
Wellesley	do	3,705	3,800	4,254
Westborough	do	5,865	5,920	6,427
Westfield		14,538	16,168	18,145	600.00
West Gardner	3d class	2,745	2,918	3,285
West Newton	do	4,448	4,599	5,015
Whitman	do			3,153
Williamstown	do	3,541	3,540	4,050
Winchendon	do	4,646	4,774	5,294
Winchester	do	3,840	3,789	4,991
Woburn	do	7,274	7,440	7,653
Worcester		86,087	93,077	101,587	3,000.00
MICHIGAN.
Adrian		13,606	13,829	14,654	350.00
Albion	3d class	6,270	6,342	7,081
Allegan	do	4,812	4,986	5,623
Alpena	do	5,431	5,879	6,916
Ann Arbor		19,148	19,915	21,380	1,200.00
Battle Creek		23,333	22,867	22,573	1,000.00
Bay City		21,043	22,546	21,057	700.00
Benton Harbor	3d class	4,239	4,646	5,372
Berrien Springs	do	2,577	3,274	3,996
Bessemer	do			3,582
Big Rapids		9,466	9,136	9,416	200.00
Buchanan	3d class	3,192	3,309	3,532
Cadillac	do	6,026	5,659	5,821
Calumet	do	4,894	5,092	3,948
Caro	do	2,978	3,054	3,284
Charlotte		7,691	8,834	10,863	400.00
Cheboygan	3d class	4,052	4,317	5,373
Coldwater		9,605	10,077	10,305	700.00
Detroit		300,010	302,063	326,007	G.B.
Dowagiac	3d class	3,790	4,188	4,267
East Saginaw		29,292	30,899	34,497	1,340.00
Eaton Rapids	3d class	3,365	3,420	3,975

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30— 1885.	1886.	1887.	Annual allowance for rent.
MICHIGAN—cont'd.
Escanaba	3d class	$4,442	$4,665	$5,939
Fenton	do	3,503	3,711	3,362
Flint		13,293	14,249	14,901	$800.00
Grand Haven	3d class	5,412	5,554	5,488
Grand Rapids		71,479	79,028	86,594	G.B.
Greenville	3d class	5,746	5,838	5,419
Hancock	do	4,951	4,951	5,649
Hastings	do	3,974	3,948	4,785
Hillsdale		7,898	8,030	9,284	375.00
Holland	3d class	3,786	3,776	4,121
Houghton	do	3,410	3,233	3,430
Howell	do	3,828	4,054	4,313
Hudson	do	4,204	4,230	4,371
Ionia		9,432	9,353	9,836	750.00
Iron Mountain	3d class	2,935	3,436	4,979
Ishpeming	do	6,612	6,633	*8,194
Ithaca	do	2,351	2,324	3,136
Jackson		25,111	27,058	29,633	1,100.00
Kalamazoo		29,573	31,971	37,093	750.00
Lansing	3d class	26,972	22,882	30,880	1,500.00
Lapeer	do	4,487	4,575	4,533
Lowell	do	3,057	3,162	3,267
Ludington		5,369	5,709	5,957
Manistee		9,478	10,802	10,385	700.00
Marquette		9,253	9,457	11,195	450.00
Marshall	3d class	6,935	8,896	8,290	360.00
Mason	do	3,147	3,252	3,571
Menominee	do	4,438	5,498	†8,015
Monroe	do	5,382	5,807	5,830
Mount Clemens	do	3,473	3,561	4,097
Mount Pleasant		2,916	2,823	3,606
Muskegon	3d class	18,152	18,034	19,024	500.00
Negaunee	do	3,233	3,475	4,377
Niles	do	6,176	6,141	6,511
Ovid	do	2,855	2,946	3,044
Owasso	do	5,903	6,628	7,360
Paw Paw	do	3,159	3,160	3,170
Petoskey		3,990	4,372	5,923
Pontiac		7,494	8,453	8,547	400.00
Port Huron	3d class	14,033	14,470	15,462	G.B.
Quincy	do	3,487	3,608	3,902
Reed City		3,000	3,309	3,616
Saginaw		10,379	10,644	11,436	525.00
St. John's	3d class	4,626	5,033	5,349
St. Joseph	do	4,340	5,016	5,117
St. Louis	do	3,732	3,535	3,760
Sault de Ste. Marie	do	2,175	2,616	3,346
Stanton	do	3,654	3,255	3,405
Sturgis	do	3,353	3,373	3,858
Tecumseh	do	4,328	4,186	4,393
Three Rivers	do	5,403	5,735	6,639
Traverse City	do	5,847	6,074	6,073
West Bay City	do	4,729	4,627	5,660
Ypsilanti		8,560	9,363	9,854	300.00
MINNESOTA.
Albert Lea	3d class	5,559	5,636	6,130
Alexandria	do	2,888	3,048	3,072
Anoka	do	4,867	4,073	4,825
Austin	do	4,219	4,299	5,230
Brainerd	do	8,714	4,840	5,955
Crookston	do	5,695	5,736	6,516
Duluth		21,498	25,871	32,710	1,450.00
Faribault		9,017	9,519	9,847	550.00
Fergus Falls	3d class	7,355	7,237	7,146
Hastings	do	5,108	4,980	4,717
Lake City	do	4,649	4,899	4,892
Litchfield	do	3,102	3,325	3,677
Mankato		11,201	12,459	13,153	1,100.00
Minneapolis		186,006	206,345	263,746	5,000.00
Moorhead	3d class	5,087	3,982	4,105
New Ulm	do	3,091	3,403	3,640
Northfield	do	5,746	5,687	5,565
Owatonna	do	5,124	5,175	5,617
Red Wing		10,385	10,038	10,295	1,000.00
Rochester		10,873	10,867	10,453	900.00
St. Cloud		7,262	7,165	9,294	500.00
St. Paul		187,958	208,589	247,542	G.B.
St. Peter	3d class	3,896	3,887	4,343
Stillwater		13,931	15,295	14,651	1,050.00
Wabasha	3d class	3,057	3,190	3,265
Waseca	do	3,313	3,370	3,325
Willmar	do	3,002	2,896	3,200
Winona		19,659	21,172	20,974	1,800.00
MISSISSIPPI.
Aberdeen	3d class	3,904	3,933	4,097
Canton	do	3,212	3,225	3,097
Columbus	do	5,670	6,250	6,397
Greenville	do	3,910	4,510	4,951
Holly Springs	do	3,159	3,280	3,358
Jackson		10,286	10,700	10,135	G.B.
Meridian		9,486	10,693	11,804	480.00
Natchez		8,790	9,200	10,450	420.00
Oxford	3d class	3,451	3,451	3,223
Vicksburg		17,494	17,099	17,590	1,000.00
West Point	3d class	2,978	3,073	3,516
Yazoo	do	3,198	3,746	3,831

* Receipts, adjustment March 31, 1887, amounted to only $6,393.
† Receipts, adjustment March 31, 1887, amounted to only $5,355.

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30—			Annual allowance for rent.
		1885.	1886.	1887.
MISSOURI.
Boonville	3d class	$5,223	$4,980	$5,138
Brookfield	do	3,483	3,764	4,149
Butler	do	5,019	4,924	4,753
Cameron	do	4,178	4,602	4,098
Cape Girardeau	do	3,386	3,308	3,671
Carrollton	do	4,321	4,419	4,665
Carthage		9,716	9,499	10,569	$200.00
Chillicothe	3d class	6,017	6,189	6,699
Clinton	do	6,001	6,379	6,198
Columbia		6,834	7,747	8,029	400.00
Fayette	3d class	2,899	2,794	3,971
Fulton	do	4,061	4,335	4,356
Hannibal		15,426	15,032	14,262	400.00
Harrisonville	3d class	3,426	3,320	3,332
Holden	do	4,455	4,033	4,134
Independence	do	5,704	6,259	6,871
Jefferson City		10,741	9,229	12,128	270.00
Joplin	3d class	4,709	4,822	5,037
Kansas City		224,846	119,060	312,394	G. B.
Kirksville	3d class	4,955	4,976	4,933
Lamar	do	4,844	4,692	4,651
Lexington	do	5,267	4,643	5,165
Liberty	do	2,651	2,459	3,002
Louisiana	do	6,225	6,176	6,736
Macon City	do	5,226	5,566	5,409
Marshall	do	5,105	5,328	5,543
Maryville	do	6,128	5,871	5,995
Mexico	do	6,442	6,379	6,616
Moberly		7,580	8,019	8,317	250.00
Nevada	3d class	6,234	6,555	7,069
North Springfield	do	5,839	5,398	5,855
Pierce City	do	3,705	4,026	4,006
Pleasant Hill	do	3,468	3,503	3,348
Rich Hill	do	4,240	3,950	4,069
St. Charles	do	4,347	4,529	5,098
St. Joseph		68,087	69,393	78,709	900.00
St. Louis		815,241	813,553	861,219	G. B.
Sedalia		18,145	17,283	17,869	400.00
Springfield		14,979	16,128	17,226	1,051.00
Trenton	3d class	3,964	4,100	4,506
Warrensburgh		5,489	5,126	5,353
MONTANA.
Anaconda	3d class		3,808	3,578
Billings	do	3,130	3,501	4,161
Bozeman	do		5,163	5,583
Butte City		19,848	23,394	21,625	1.00
Deer Lodge City	3d class	2,956	3,061	3,116
Dillon	do	3,030	3,223	3,636
Helena		19,738	18,796	25,469	1,250.00
Livingston	3d class	3,212	2,866	3,292
Miles City	do	4,856	5,334	4,957
Missoula	do	4,386	4,031	4,470
NEBRASKA.
Ashland	3d class	3,100	2,952	3,532
Aurora	do	3,615	3,645	4,026
Beatrice		10,639	11,470	13,940	700.00
Blair	3d class	3,548	4,344	4,249
Central City	do	3,549	3,868	4,241
Columbus	do	5,201	5,613	5,641
Crete	do	5,201	5,370	5,282
David City	do	3,020	2,924	3,670
Fairbury	do	3,375	3,553	4,469
Falls City	do	4,168	3,964	4,176
Fremont		10,949	11,588	13,657	480.00
Grand Island		9,040	9,952	11,084	400.00
Hastings		11,328	12,711	15,902	600.00
Hebron	3d class	2,538	2,837	3,225
Holdredge	do		5,786	4,969
Kearney		8,139	8,702	9,150	200.00
Lincoln		41,896	44,685	60,149	G. B.
McCook	3d class		4,861	5,559
Minden	do	2,974	2,877	3,528
Nebraska City		8,351	8,443	8,842	600.00
Neligh	3d class	2,423	2,653	3,237
Norfolk	do	3,749	4,304	4,507
North Platte	do	4,368	4,934	5,187
Omaha		110,283	126,582	161,251	G. B.
Pawnee City	3d class	3,349	3,417	3,918
Plattsmouth	do	5,220	5,759	6,255
Plum Creek	do	3,231	3,638	3,511
Red Cloud	do	2,634	4,098	4,472
St. Paul	do	2,346	3,618	4,161
Schuyler	do	3,777	3,742	4,258
Seward	do	4,264	4,290	4,413
Sidney	do	3,138	3,139	3,589
Tecumseh	do	4,113	3,820	3,597
Wahoo	do	4,285	4,542	4,942
Wymore	do	2,828	2,849	3,090
York	do	5,751	6,322	7,072
NEVADA.
Carson City	3d class	5,783	5,750	6,057
Eureka	do	3,947	3,534	3,409
Reno	do	5,836	6,280	6,896
Virginia City	do	6,893	6,632	7,396

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30—			Annual allowance for rent.
		1885.	1886.	1887.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.
Claremont	3d class	$6,021	$6,263	$86,678
Concord		25,806	26,747	27,425	$1,400.00
Dover		11,640	11,860	12,370	800.00
Exeter	3d class	6,596	5,807	6,842
Franklin Falls	do	2,989	3,106	3,658
Great Falls	do	4,418	4,610	4,706
Hanover	do	3,751	4,112	3,968
Keene		11,915	12,313	14,033	600.00
Laconia	3d class	5,320	5,987	6,302
Lake Village	do	2,322	2,703	3,179
Lancaster	do	3,216	3,804	4,124
Lebanon	do	4,095	4,421	4,685
Littleton	do	3,995	4,113	4,264	1,350.00
Manchester		32,032	32,057	35,374
Milford	3d class	3,618	3,634	3,775
Nashua		17,288	18,546	20,109	1,000.00
Peterborough	3d class	2,870	3,066	3,389
Plymouth	do	3,395	3,217	3,365
Portsmouth		12,881	14,008	14,990	G. B.
Rochester	3d class	4,793	5,368	5,423
Tilton	do	2,457	2,666	3,374
NEW JERSEY.
Asbury Park		10,543	11,218	11,980	600.00
Atlantic City		14,812	16,254	18,461	1,100.00
Bergen Point	3d class	4,029	3,193	3,570
Bloomfield	do	5,116	3,802	4,293
Bordentown	do	4,594	5,307	5,467
Bridgeton		9,232	9,972	9,991	500.00
Burlington	3d class	6,651	6,551	7,182
Camden		28,054	31,634	34,367	1,200.00
Cape May	3d class	4,502	4,695	4,679
Dover	do	4,634	4,679	5,094
East Orange		4,536	9,198	18,889	500.00
Elizabeth		24,149	23,225	26,514	800.00
Englewood	3d class	4,577	4,566	4,636
Flemington	do	3,465	3,494	3,792
Freehold	do	5,199	5,110	5,435
Hackensack	do	4,053	4,055	5,198
Hackettstown	do	3,415	3,591	3,589
Hightstown	do	2,750	2,875	3,330
Hoboken		15,441	16,453	18,414	800.00
Jersey City		75,151	83,001	82,694	G. B.
Lambertville	3d class	4,589	4,676	4,842
Long Branch	do	4,415	4,707	6,233
Madison	do	3,197	3,344	3,641
Millington	do	3,345	3,249	3,080
Millville	do	4,504	4,784	4,954
Mont Clair	do	6,647	6,680	7,470
Morristown		13,549	10,709	15,916	600.00
Mount Holly	3d class	5,261	5,797	6,251
Newark		129,713	143,262	162,252	G. B.
New Brunswick		17,403	18,873	20,592	1,050.00
Newton	3d class	5,475	5,402	5,688
Ocean Grove	do	5,415	5,091	5,878
Orange		12,204	12,472	15,052	600.00
Orange Valley	3d class	3,771	3,940	3,944
Passaic	do	7,707	7,275	7,568
Paterson		28,309	31,708	33,891	1,500.00
Perth Amboy	3d class	4,861	4,993	6,455
Phillipsburgh	do	4,232	4,054	4,480
Plainfield		20,514	20,563	20,601	1,050.00
Princeton		7,888	7,720	9,352	300.00
Rahway	3d class	8,681	5,041	6,783
Red Bank	do	6,437	6,091	6,849
Rutherford	do	3,486	4,539	7,001
Salem	do	4,929	4,679	5,037
Somerville	do	5,272	5,331	5,404
South Orange	do	3,048	3,099	3,407
Summit	do	2,709	3,225	3,793
Trenton		53,191	58,659	62,965	G. B.
Vineland	3d class	7,279	7,408	7,431
Washington		7,308	8,359	12,703	250.00
Weehawken	3d class	6,022	3,900	3,156
Westfield	do	2,786	2,195	3,031
Woodbury	do	4,984	7,329	5,789
NEW MEXICO.
Albuquerque		9,553	9,191	9,455	500.00
Las Vegas	3d class	8,728	8,263	5,179
Raton	do	2,925	2,894	3,918
Santa Fé		6,554	7,039	8,709
Silver City	3d class	4,445	4,423	4,845
Socorro	do	4,478	4,347	4,073
NEW YORK.
Addison	3d class	3,832	3,786	4,045
Albany		153,964	157,644	165,063	G. B.
Albion	3d class	6,297	6,274	6,634
Amsterdam		12,526	13,316	15,097	900.00
Astoria	3d class	2,324	3,230	3,650
Attica	do	3,607	3,614	3,729
Auburn		35,952	34,892	23,644	1,500.00
Babylon	3d class	2,931	3,092	3,080
Baldwinsville	do	3,790	4,054	4,081
Ballston	do	4,995	5,554	5,599
Batavia		13,336	13,281	13,712	1,100.00
Bath		7,641	7,955	8,949	500.00

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30—			Annual allowance for rent.
		1885.	1886.	1887.
NEW YORK—cont'd.
Binghamton		$41,353	$45,213	$49,698	$1,000.00
Boonville	3d class	3,246	3,125	3,689
Brockport		6,753	7,847	9,059	250.00
Brooklyn		377,880	413,559	490,490	14,395.00
Buffalo		328,405	333,430	366,696	G. B.
Cambridge	3d class	3,689	3,601	3,849
Camden	do	3,178	3,034	3,891
Canajoharie	do	4,935	5,372	5,012
Canandaigua		9,965	10,384	10,856	G. B.
Canastota	3d class	3,668	3,889	4,232
Canton	do	4,119	4,127	4,666
Carthage	do	3,757	3,557	4,040
Catskill		8,292	9,003	9,084	300.00
Cazenovia	3d class	4,155	4,205	4,240
Chatham	do	3,232	3,797	4,047
City Island	do	2,676	4,179	5,024
Clifton Springs	do	3,725	3,749	4,041
Clinton	do	3,920	3,772	3,938
Clyde	do	3,669	3,796	4,267
Cobleskill	do	3,692	3,512	3,506
Cohoes		11,475	11,772	12,450	850.00
Cooperstown	3d class	5,722	5,695	5,699
Corning		9,959	10,036	10,106	975.00
Cortland		12,978	13,795	15,315	700.00
Coxsackie	3d class	3,106	3,202	3,178
Cuba	do	3,338	3,375	3,555
Dansville		6,742	7,016	8,969	350.00
Delhi	3d class	3,807	3,167	3,526
Deposit	do	3,028	3,164	3,037
Dunkirk		9,653	11,406	12,067	450.00
Ellenville	3d class	4,514	4,471	4,689
Elmira		45,026	44,572	48,247	2,000.00
Fairport	3d class	5,259	5,121	4,693
Fishkill-on-the-Hudson	do	3,255	3,652	4,239
Flushing	do	6,127	6,249	7,880
Fort Edward	do	3,780	3,825	3,754
Fort Plain	do	5,232	4,575	7,196
Fredonia		8,460	8,112	8,720	225.00
Fulton	3d class	6,443	5,908	7,356
Geneseo	do	4,369	4,579	4,814
Geneva		17,388	20,203	22,383	500.00
Glens Falls		10,715	11,166	11,739	800.00
Gloversville		10,053	10,447	12,307	600.00
Goshen	3d class	7,784	6,891	6,513
Gouverneur	do	5,297	5,302	5,864
Greenport	do	3,279	3,592	3,643
Greenwich	do	2,944	2,940	2,126
Hamilton	do	4,210	4,017	4,450
Haverstraw	do	2,900	2,957	3,378
Hempstead	do	2,387	2,617	3,267
Herkimer	do	3,973	4,295	4,438
Homer	do	3,609	3,640	4,140
Hoosick Falls	do	5,710	5,825	7,141
Hornellsville		12,442	12,321	13,114	1,200.00
Hudson		12,923	13,273	14,309	850.00
Huntington	3d class	3,535	3,003	3,645
Ilion	do	5,889	5,650	5,086
Ithaca		21,285	17,236	23,425	1,500.00
Jamaica	3d class	4,100	3,995	3,804
Jamestown		19,734	19,730	22,014	1,200.00
Johnstown		7,041	7,370	8,508	400.00
Kingston		9,561	10,005	10,796	550.00
Le Roy		6,674	6,835	9,369	200.00
Little Falls		11,069	11,681	12,013	650.00
Lockport		24,488	23,581	20,998	1,000.00
Long Island City	3d class	4,268	4,832	5,294
Lowville	do	4,538	4,456	4,840
Lyons	do	5,442	5,334	5,759
Malone		7,317	7,222	8,183	300.00
Matteawan	3d class	3,063	3,440	3,785
Mechanicsville	do	2,906	2,798	3,120
Medina	do	6,418	6,142	6,468
Middletown		14,138	14,578	16,337	1,000.00
Morristown	3d class	6,385	3,021	3,339
Mount Morris	do	3,368	3,635	3,875
Mount Vernon		8,756	10,709	14,019	600.00
Newark	3d class	8,004	7,944	6,234
New Brighton	do	3,761	4,872	6,279
Newburgh		24,166	25,519	26,706	1,580.00
New Lebanon	3d class	5,402	8,130	5,159
New Rochelle	do	5,485	6,229	6,707
New York		4,340,128	4,416,848	4,753,516	G. B.
Niagara Falls	3d class	7,170	7,057	7,702
Northport	do	3,148	4,835	7,266
Norwich		7,698	7,647	8,713	600.00
Nyack	3d class	5,848	6,240	6,814
Ogdensburgh		11,236	11,846	11,941	G. B.
Olean		11,229	12,393	13,053	1,000.00
Oneida		10,335	10,149	10,840	600.00
Oneonta		7,993	7,005	10,694	600.00
Oswego		26,001	25,572	27,765	G. B.
Owego		10,193	10,580	10,794	700.00
Palmyra	3d class	6,072	5,685	5,539
Patchogue	do	3,337	3,439	3,977
Peekskill		8,032	7,887	9,104
Penn Yan		7,079	7,776	8,899
Plattsburgh		7,091	9,028	9,540	G. B.
Port Chester	3d class	5,291	5,904	6,589
Port Jervis		9,878	9,320	9,625	850.00
Port Richmond	3d class	3,923	4,564	5,330
Potsdam	do	5,871	5,895	6,642

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30—			Annual allowance for rent.
		1885.	1886.	1887.
NEW YORK—cont'd.
Poughkeepsie		$36,167	$37,500	$41,228	$1,350.00
Rhinebeck	3d class	2,749	2,883	3,022
Richfield Springs	do	4,308	4,494	4,350
Riverhead	do	3,514	3,592	4,169
Rochester		199,028	255,159	344,308	5,000.00
Rome		16,957	17,152	19,232	425.00
Rondout		10,083	9,653	10,621	350.00
Rye	3d class	2,298	2,633	3,199
Sag Harbor	do	3,305	3,359	3,385
Salamanca	do	4,210	4,683	4,735
Sandy Hill	do	3,126	3,177	3,798
Saratoga Springs		23,402	23,019	26,122	1,500.00
Saugerties	3d class	4,380	4,438	4,814
Schenectady		15,146	15,877	17,505	1,000.00
Seneca Falls		13,557	14,030	15,442	700.00
Silver Creek	3d class	4,660	3,462	4,743
Sing Sing		9,066	9,746	10,375	400.00
Skaneateles	3d class	3,116	3,312	3,633
Stapleton	do	4,604	4,822	5,163
Suspension Bridge	do	4,700	4,665	4,271
Syracuse		121,927	123,815	125,795	4,500.00
Tarrytown	3d class	5,099	6,224	7,286
Tonawanda		4,550	6,701	10,629	400.00
Troy		91,072	92,111	97,133	3,000.00
Trumansburgh	3d class	2,831	2,913	3,167
Utica		60,018	56,678	54,436	G. B.
Walton	3d class	2,812	3,064	3,396
Wappinger's Falls	do	3,239	3,524	3,737
Warsaw	do	4,859	5,616	6,352
Warwick	do	2,744	2,786	3,194
Waterford	do	3,144	2,624	3,117
Waterloo	do	5,275	6,740	7,607
Watertown		22,501	24,075	24,232	1,000.00
Waterville	3d class	4,028	3,899	3,483
Watkins	do	4,307	4,330	4,265
Waverly		8,541	8,084	8,684	500.00
Weedsport	3d class	3,008	2,992	3,408
Wellsville	do	5,737	5,802	5,871
Westfield	do	3,870	4,358	3,953
West New Brighton		8,000	8,771	8,501
West Troy	3d class	5,765	5,519	6,681
Whitehall	do	4,100	3,799	4,411
White Plains	do	4,681	4,917	5,183
Yonkers		20,683	22,677	24,437	1,500.00
NORTH CAROLINA.
Asheville		7,320	8,156	10,136	180.00
Charlotte		14,455	14,802	14,223	600.00
Durham	3d class	5,545	6,423	7,722
Fayetteville	do	4,351	4,000	5,450
Goldsboro	do	6,037	6,073	6,113
Greensborough	do	6,825	7,290	7,707
Henderson	do	2,778	3,214	3,179
New Berne	do	5,637	5,896	6,122
Raleigh		20,919	18,766	18,923	G. B.
Reidsville	3d class	2,631	3,276	3,540
Salisbury	do	3,612	4,056	4,321
Statesville	do	3,701	3,819	3,657
Tarborough	do	3,247	3,257	3,236
Wilmington		20,616	20,323	21,196	1,600.00
Wilson	3d class	3,271	3,154	3,246
Winston	do	6,401	7,298	7,872
OHIO.
Ada	3d class	4,249	4,401	4,688
Akron		31,656	45,923	38,600	1,380.00
Alliance	3d class	7,295	7,406	7,861
Ashland	do	5,436	5,605	6,078
Ashtabula	do	6,704	6,868	7,269
Athens	do	5,209	4,739	5,635
Barnesville	do	3,644	3,767	3,801
Bellaire		7,856	7,853	8,721	400.00
Bellefontaine	3d class	6,484	6,580	6,918
Bellevue	do	3,882	3,904	4,364
Berea	do	2,905	2,745	3,643
Bowling Green	do	2,304	2,491	3,098
Bridgeport	do	2,302	2,424	3,166
Bryan	do	4,404	4,284	4,900
Bucyrus	do	7,071	6,968	7,663
Cadiz	do	3,333	3,289	3,546
Cambridge	do	5,639	5,352	5,749
Canton		23,999	26,254	30,321	1,000.00
Cardington	3d class	3,007	3,083	3,187
Chillicothe		13,263	13,182	13,955	1,000.00
Cincinnati		595,762	623,945	654,262	G. B.
Circleville	3d class	6,921	6,975	7,457
Cleveland		296,668	309,025	344,052	G. B.
Clyde	3d class	3,650	3,492	3,336
Columbus		114,177	120,929	132,727	G. B.
Conneaut	3d class	3,877	4,239	4,043
Coshocton	do	3,403	4,091	4,367
Cuyahoga Falls	do	2,996	2,983	3,461
Dayton		66,187	68,729	75,480	2,950.00
Defiance	3d class	6,867	7,393	7,960
Delaware		12,260	12,605	12,280	500.00
Delphos	3d class	3,630	3,769	3,889
East Liverpool		8,690	8,495	10,688	725.00
Eaton	3d class	3,199	3,290	3,641
Elyria		8,093	8,398	9,122	650.00
Findlay		7,138	7,147	11,150	500.00

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30— 1885.	1886.	1887.	Annual allowance for rent.
OHIO—continued.
Fostoria	3d class	$5,658	$6,024	$6,913
Fremont		7,639	7,940	8,538	$400.00
Galion	3d class	5,955	6,663	6,511
Gallipolis	do	5,984	6,522	7,062
Geneva	do	4,117	4,077	4,261
Greenfield	do	3,042	2,852	3,095
Greenville	do	5,384	5,654	6,426
Hamilton		15,265	15,522	17,222	600.00
Hillsborough	3d class	4,685	5,255	5,776
Hiram	do	3,012	3,369	3,679
Ironton		7,141	7,658	9,082	380.00
Jackson	3d class	3,921	3,641	4,140
Kent	do	3,841	3,978	4,341
Kenton		6,277	7,222	8,197	1.00
Lancaster	3d class	8,039	7,630	7,960
Lebanon	do	5,813	5,653	6,162
Lima		11,920	13,205	17,243	1,600.00
Logan	3d class	3,442	3,613	3,862
London	do	4,017	4,260	4,610
Mansfield		25,117	23,825	25,444	1,150.00
Marietta		8,758	9,036	11,120	400.00
Marion		6,567	7,766	8,464	400.00
Martin's Ferry	3d class	2,554	2,731	3,238
Marysville	do	3,807	4,227	4,425
Massillon		9,560	9,054	10,287	1.00
Medina	3d class	4,203	3,934	4,382
Miamisburgh	do	2,582	2,813	3,212
Middletown		12,352	12,410	11,422	400.00
Mount Vernon		9,785	9,404	10,709	500.00
Napoleon	3d class	2,818	3,079	3,213
National Military Home.	do	3,556	3,656	3,438
Newark		13,175	13,377	13,865	700.00
New Lisbon	3d class	3,468	3,585	3,641
New Philadelphia	do	4,724	4,741	4,999
Norwalk		9,323	9,120	10,506	550.00
Oberlin		9,246	9,006	9,187	350.00
Oxford	3d class	3,274	3,404	3,719
Painesville		11,475	12,872	13,802	275.00
Piqua		9,393	10,733	11,929	720.00
Pomeroy	3d class	3,547	3,480	3,494
Portsmouth		11,292	11,640	12,587	300.00
Ravenna	3d class	5,926	6,093	6,111
Salem		9,548	10,033	11,261	2.00
Sandusky		17,120	17,208	17,440	G. B.
Shelby	3d class	3,000	3,111	3,095
Sidney		7,404	8,262	8,444	500.00
Springfield		54,107	62,374	65,482	2,200.00
Steubenville		13,185	12,723	14,192	900.00
Tiffin		10,181	10,570	10,516	500.00
Toledo		122,990	114,547	116,934	G. B.
Troy		8,797	8,516	9,967	600.00
Upper Sandusky	3d class	4,421	4,759	5,272
Urbana		9,391	9,326	9,908	300.00
Van Wert	3d class	6,151	6,414	6,566
Wapakoneta		3,139	3,355	3,837
Warren		9,374	9,543	10,118	650.00
Washington C. H	3d class	8,154	7,303	*8,105
Wauseon	do	3,373	3,270	3,459
Wellington	do	5,469	5,139	5,220
Wellsville	do	4,101	4,154	5,012
West Liberty	do	2,195	2,317	3,305
Wilmington	do	4,346	4,366	4,906
Wooster		9,464	10,224	11,397	600.00
Xenia		11,113	10,840	11,315	400.00
Youngstown		17,963	19,414	23,099	1,200.00
Zanesville		22,469	24,819	27,667	800.00
OREGON.
Albany	3d class	3,419	3,542	4,351
Astoria	do	6,488	6,177	7,338
Baker City	do	3,195	3,662	3,864
Corvallis	do	3,053	3,137	3,682
East Portland	do	3,542	3,493	3,754
Eugene City	do	2,984	3,192	3,644
Pendleton	do	3,393	3,535	4,459
Portland		66,307	68,888	78,758	G. B.
Salem		9,657	10,348	11,543	1.00
The Dalles	3d class	4,823	5,073	6,207
PENNSYLVANIA.
Allegheny		38,424	43,478	53,144	1,300.00
Allentown		21,156	20,931	23,398	1,300.00
Altoona		17,140	17,916	20,416	900.00
Ashland	3d class	3,824	3,972	4,417
Athens	do	3,235	3,573	3,629
Beaver Falls		8,938	10,234	10,556	400.00
Bedford	3d class	4,034	4,150	4,286
Bellefonte	do	7,289	6,983	7,637
Bethlehem		10,440	11,156	11,763	700.00
Bloomsburgh	3d class	4,360	5,436	6,275
Braddock	do	3,743	4,209	4,573
Bradford		22,152	23,319	20,299	800.00
Bristol	3d class	4,640	6,849	5,822
Brookville	do	4,177	4,065	4,635
Brownsville	do	2,937	2,764	3,084
Bryn Mawr	do			3,370
Butler	do	5,726	6,322	6,759
Carbondale	do	4,878	5,197	5,939

*Receipts, adjustment March 31, 1887, amounted to only $7,272.

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30— 1885.	1886.	1887.	Annual allowance for rent.
PENNSYLVANIA—continued.
Carlisle		$11,020	$10,209	$10,729	$200.00
Catasauqua	3d class	2,979	3,180	3,459
Chambersburgh		10,285	11,354	11,350	350.00
Chester		13,674	13,972	15,499	500.00
Clarion	3d class	2,784	3,116	3,449
Clearfield	do	4,882	4,817	5,168
Coatesville	do	4,855	4,950	5,100
Columbia	do	6,354	7,288	7,263
Connellsville	do	4,683	4,567	5,130
Conshohocken	do	2,903	3,206	3,511
Corry		9,764	9,444	10,415	350.00
Danville		6,290	7,208	8,120	500.00
Doylestown	3d class	4,388	4,283	4,726
Du Bois	do	4,366	4,464	4,780
Easton		21,161	20,725	21,779	1,100.00
Erie		37,525	37,994	41,188	1,000.00
Franklin		9,801	10,059	10,934	350.00
Gettysburgh	3d class	4,701	4,784	5,422
Greensburgh	do	6,259	6,471	7,834
Greenville	do	5,677	6,008	6,280
Hanover	do	4,220	4,157	4,625
Harrisburg		68,306	44,189	72,310	G. B.
Hazleton		8,667	10,736	11,131	975.00
Hollidaysburgh	3d class	4,170	4,214	4,541
Honesdale	do	5,998	5,861	6,446
Houtzdale	do	3,140	2,879	3,312
Huntingdon		9,971	11,571	10,616	250.00
Indiana	3d class	5,785	6,078	6,519
Irwin	do	2,659	2,990	3,358
Johnstown		13,044	13,955	15,502	750.00
Kingston	3d class	2,755	2,983	3,154
Kittanning	do	4,826	4,502	5,212
Lancaster		33,622	32,975	36,497	2,000.00
Latrobe	3d class	3,436	3,933	4,023
Lebanon		12,107	13,353	14,930	1,000.00
Lewisburgh	3d class	5,619	5,589	5,714
Lewistown	do	5,311	5,341	5,972
Lock Haven		10,177	9,743	10,318	600.00
McKeesport		7,840	8,641	10,806	400.00
Mahanoy City	3d class	5,125	5,132	5,701
Marietta	do	2,681	2,815	3,026
Mauch Chunk	do	6,536	6,873	7,446
Meadville		16,280	15,192	16,817	1,000.00
Mechanicsburgh	3d class	5,539	5,289	5,687
Media	do	5,429	5,764	5,878
Mercer	do	4,312	4,238	4,424
Middletown	do	3,640	3,640	4,091
Milton	do	5,207	5,428	6,009
Monongahela City	do	3,811	3,017	3,220
Montrose	do	4,188	4,213	4,272
Mount Pleasant	do	3,056	3,125	3,926
Muncy	do	2,759	2,812	3,200
Nanticoke	do	2,495	3,259	3,621
New Brighton	do	4,094	4,120	4,292
New Castle		10,876	12,156	13,293	700.00
Norristown		11,983	12,127	13,530	1,000.00
Oil City		11,862	12,324	13,645	350.00
Oxford	3d class	3,128	3,098	3,300
Philadelphia		1,544,920	1,611,147	1,748,795	G. B.
Philipsburgh	3d class	5,435	5,117	5,958
Phœnixville	do	5,526	5,524	6,224
Pittsburgh		320,500	330,303	368,376	G. B.
Pittston		10,004	9,916	11,485	500.00
Plymouth	3d class	4,461	4,547	5,088
Pottstown		7,114	7,836	10,208	800.00
Pottsville		14,331	14,831	15,367	650.00
Reading		39,944	43,147	47,396	1,300.00
Renovo	3d class	3,450	3,336	3,716
Ridgway	do	3,406	3,884	4,073
Rochester	do	2,229	3,331	3,326
Scottdale	do	2,551	2,811	3,315
Scranton		38,255	39,107	44,257	2,140.00
Sewickley	3d class	3,019	3,354	3,393
Shamokin	do	7,025	7,014	7,563
Sharon	do	6,746	6,908	7,492
Shenandoah	do	5,537	5,997	6,592
Shippensburgh	do	3,837	3,666	3,795
South Bethlehem	do	4,159	4,351	4,983
Steelton	do	3,131	3,669	4,623
Stroudsburgh	do	3,604	3,767	4,878
Sunbury	do	5,654	5,619	6,130
Susquehanna	do	3,872	4,097	4,439
Tamaqua	do	3,009	3,412	3,322
Titusville		14,840	15,223	15,957	700.00
Towanda		8,448	8,344	8,178	700.00
Troy	3d class	3,218	3,026	3,222
Tunkhannock	do	2,986	2,781	3,023
Tyrone	do	6,609	5,973	6,560
Union City	do	3,079	3,359	3,278
Uniontown	do	5,985	5,565	6,334
Warren		14,634	15,146	18,043	1,000.00
Washington		8,624	9,574	10,843
Waynesborough	3d class	5,884	4,242	6,109
Waynesburgh	do	3,115	3,065	3,262
Wellsborough	do	4,341	4,359	4,727
West Chester		14,183	14,018	15,450	850.00
West Grove	3d class	6,017	7,419	6,616
West Newton	do	2,457	2,219	3,089
Wilkes Barre		25,302	25,752	30,257	1,100.00
Williamsport		28,382	32,715	31,925	860.00
York		23,907	23,751	25,328	800.00

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30—			Annual allowance for rent.
		1886.	1386.	1887.
RHODE ISLAND.
Bristol	3d class	$4,386	$4,762	$5,131
Central Falls	do	5,070	4,234	5,094
East Greenwich	do	4,239	4,505	4,675
Newport		27,164	27,267	28,476	G. B.
Olneyville	3d class	5,012	6,211	6,535
Pawtucket		19,392	22,072	23,530	$1,250.00
Providence		175,205	185,259	199,526	G. B.
Warren	3d class	2,813	2,839	3,100
Westerly		9,039	10,278	10,672	500.00
Woonsocket		10,947	11,579	12,640	500.00
SOUTH CAROLINA.
Aiken	3d class	3,438	3,379	3,816
Anderson C. H	do	2,995	3,189	3,500
Beaufort	do	3,220	3,459	3,591
Charleston		65,519	63,800	66,240	G. B.
Columbia		16,040	16,125	16,453	G. B.
Greenville C. H		7,805	8,204	8,369	250.00
Newberry C. H	3d class	4,153	3,884	3,786
Orangeburgh C. H	do	2,871	2,674	3,029
Spartanburgh C. H	do	5,351	5,433	5,417
Sumter C. H	do	3,774	3,770	4,118
TENNESSEE.
Bristol	3d class	4,447	4,501	4,631
Chattanooga		30,859	32,789	45,789	5.00
Clarksville		7,819	8,150	9,081	200.00
Cleveland	3d class	2,377	2,541	3,109
Columbia	do	6,510	6,569	6,654
Franklin	do	2,491	2,473	3,009
Gallatin	do	2,636	2,835	3,129
Jackson	do	6,511	6,554	7,361
Knoxville		33,999	34,044	37,114	G. B.
Lebanon	3d class	3,357	2,993	3,315
Memphis		81,766	90,441	103,067	G. B.
Murfreesborough	3d class	4,155	4,102	4,869
Nashville		97,145	92,039	99,318	G. B.
Pulaski	3d class	3,258	2,958	2,512
Shelbyville	do	3,080	2,888	3,551
Union City	do	3,941	3,831	4,182
TEXAS.
Abilene	3d class	5,228	5,813	4,782
Austin		32,048	30,001	34,585	G. B.
Beaumont	3d class	2,883	3,221	3,450
Belton	do	5,001	5,192	5,661
Bonham	do	3,587	3,790	4,264	*1.00
Brenham	do	5,721	5,682	5,770
Brownsville	do	3,019	3,038	3,123
Brownwood	do	2,243	3,839	3,485
Bryan	do	3,879	4,010	4,111
Clarksville	do	2,442	2,465	3,893
Cleburne	do	4,811	4,978	5,154
Colorado	do	5,120	5,241	4,957	1.00
Corpus Christi	do	3,832	3,654	4,305
Corsicana	do	5,888	6,917	7,875
Dallas		41,736	46,861	58,982	300.00
Denison		9,802	9,861	14,037	120.00
Denton	3d class	3,871	3,641	4,034
El Paso		10,081	12,222	13,556	600.00
Ennis	3d class	2,889	3,217	3,416
Fort Worth		26,515	26,831	27,523
Gainesville		7,726	7,262	8,698	12.00
Galveston		59,391	56,338	56,129	G. B.
Georgetown	3d class	3,178	3,264	3,660
Greenville	do	3,577	3,961	4,950
Hillsborough	do	2,666	3,122	3,725
Honey Grove	do	2,350	2,599	3,608
Houston		33,300	33,007	33,553	900.00
Huntsville	3d class	3,450	3,338	3,934
Jefferson	do	3,773	3,744	3,403
Lampasas	do	5,038	5,863	5,076
Laredo	do	5,456	4,940	5,100
Longview	do	2,628	2,531	3,055
McKinney	do	3,559	3,714	4,109
Marshall	do	6,746	6,711	7,736
Mexia	do	2,733	3,019	3,394
Palestine	do	10,478	6,914	5,323
Paris		7,067	7,706	9,270	240.00
San Angelo	3d class	3,203	3,719	3,709
San Antonio		32,583	32,067	34,415	1,000.00
San Marcos	3d class	2,840	3,112	3,067
Sherman		10,546	10,487	11,717	360.00
Taylor	3d class	2,831	2,918	3,387
Temple	do	3,560	3,387	5,266
Terrell	do	3,860	4,464	4,775
Tyler	do	5,443	6,015	6,508
Victoria	do	4,202	3,893	3,825
Waco		17,295	19,209	22,477	550.00
Waxahachie	3d class	3,432	3,856	4,210
Weatherford	do	5,571	5,939	5,473
UTAH.
Ogden City		11,143	11,832	16,337	720.00
Park City	3d class	3,303	3,643	3,745
Salt Lake City		33,591	32,952	35,946	1,200.00

* Lease, act 1885–'86.

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30—			Annual allowance for rent.
		1885.	1886.	1887.
VERMONT.
Barre	3d class	$3,304	$4,001	$5,112
Bellows Falls	do	6,757	6,790	7,088
Bennington	do	4,910	5,384	6,013
Bradford	do	4,392	3,903	3,598
Brandon	do	3,385	3,593	3,709
Brattleborough		15,253	14,378	14,433	$650.00
Burlington		26,515	29,300	32,912	G. B.
Fair Haven	3d class	3,336	3,750	4,049
Middlebury	do	4,219	4,231	4,343
Montpelier		11,289	11,221	11,589	850.00
Newport	3d class	2,813	2,967	3,060
Poultney	do	2,916	3,247	3,279
Rutland		16,415	20,116	14,384	G. B.
St. Albans		8,536	8,602	9,775	350.00
St. Johnsbury		9,066	8,801	9,312	500.00
Springfield	3d class	3,217	3,291	3,167
Vergennes	do	3,573	2,729	3,296
West Randolph	do	3,078	3,261	3,515
Windsor	do	3,136	3,146	3,199
Woodstock	do	3,458	3,437	3,409
VIRGINIA.
Abingdon	3d class	3,533	3,488	3,559
Alexandria		12,827	12,560	12,459	G. B.
Charlottesville	3d class	6,854	6,723	6,920
Danville		12,451	14,022	13,294	G. B.
Farmville	3d class	2,770	3,193	3,122
Fortress Monroe	do	3,509	3,293	3,384
Fredericksburgh	do	5,510	5,593	5,972
Gordonsville	do	2,684	2,168	3,036
Hampton	do	4,421	4,822	5,271
Harrisonburgh	do	3,914	3,747	3,900
Leesburgh	do	2,716	2,848	3,112
Lexington	do	4,634	4,420	4,623
Liberty	do	4,111	4,000	4,418
Lynchburgh		27,003	27,723	28,493	700
Norfolk		43,260	45,913	47,056	G. B.
Petersburgh		17,794	19,678	20,328	G. B.
Portsmouth	3d class	7,384	7,389	7,793
Richmond		112,410	113,045	116,708	G. B.
Roanoke		8,198	7,601	9,626	400
Salem	3d class	3,543	3,329	3,452
Stanton		14,428	13,835	14,817	400
Suffolk	3d class	3,287	3,034	3,607
University of Virginia.	do	3,020	2,883	3,448
Warrenton	do	2,974	3,482	3,866
Winchester	do	7,017	7,121	7,643
Wytheville	do	3,269	3,266	3,539
WASHINGTON.
Colfax	3d class	3,585	4,113	4,618
Dayton	do	2,929	3,238	3,320
Ellensburgh	do			3,951
Olympia	do	3,639	3,848	3,879
Port Townsend	do	2,667	2,947	3,432
Seattle		14,076	13,349	16,805	600.00
Spokane Falls		5,731	6,519	9,279	420.00
Tacoma		9,111	8,894	10,990	300.00
Walla Walla		9,006	9,367	9,421	500.00
WEST VIRGINIA.
Charleston		8,455	10,716	12,581
Charlestown	3d class	3,726	3,745	4,040
Clarksburgh	do	4,240	4,254	4,613
Grafton	do	2,989	3,170	3,259
Huntington	do	4,587	4,695	5,521
Martinsburgh	do	5,741	6,055	6,286
Parkersburgh		11,554	11,798	13,457	G. B.
Piedmont	3d class	2,504	2,505	3,090
Wheeling		41,223	38,450	42,600	G. B.
WISCONSIN.
Antigo	3d class	2,806	2,981	*3,487
Appleton		12,959	13,647	13,191	600.00
Ashland		5,555	6,067	9,522	600.00
Baraboo	3d class	5,613	6,921	6,336
Beaver Dam	do	4,566	4,767	4,533
Beloit		9,817	9,911	10,420	800.00
Berlin	3d class	4,749	5,017	4,986
Black River Falls	do	3,268	3,389	4,000
Chippewa Falls		8,340	8,175	8,972	400.00
Columbus	3d class	2,715	2,929	4,969
Delavan	do	3,402	3,537	3,997
Eau Claire		16,602	16,467	17,043	1,500.00
Fond du Lac		15,004	15,464	15,896	1,100.00
Fort Atkinson	3d class	3,970	3,917	4,702
Green Bay		8,597	9,181	10,642	300.00
Hudson	3d class	4,286	4,072	4,385
Janesville		16,295	16,965	17,861	1,100.00
Jefferson	3d class	3,302	3,681	3,430
Kenosha	do	5,792	6,046	6,382
La Crosse		23,115	26,039	29,769	1,600.00
Lake Geneva	3d class	3,744	3,756	3,969
Madison		25,263	26,155	30,141	G. B.
Manitowoc	3d class	6,402	6,256	6,851
Marinette	do	5,702	5,683	6,952

Gross receipts which accrued at Presidential post-offices, etc.—Continued.

Office and State.	Class.	Fiscal year ended June 30—			Annual allowance for rent.
		1885.	1886.	1887.
WISCONSIN—cont'd.
Mauston	3d class	$2,137	$3,155	$3,563
Menasha	do	2,948	3,124	3,449
Menomonee	do	4,771	4,781	4,896
Merrill	do	3,785	4,061	4,772
Milwaukee		252,224	255,705	274,040	G. B.
Mineral Point	3d class	3,140	3,176	3,054
Monroe	do	4,417	4,544	4,980
Neenah	do	5,768	5,927	5,845
Neillsville	do	3,232	3,335	3,235
Oconomowoc	do	3,268	3,464	3,669
Oconto	do	3,659	3,465	3,779
Oshkosh		20,923	21,378	23,157	$1,200.00
Platteville	3d class	3,224	3,268	3,498
Portage	do	5,086	5,498	5,718
Racine		24,225	24,255	26,827	1,160.00
Ripon	3d class	4,851	4,917	4,812
River Falls	do	3,186	3,088	3,274
Sheboygan		8,409	9,474	10,419	600.00
Sparta	3d class	5,111	5,180	5,240
Stevens' Point	do	5,919	6,803	6,730
Stoughton	do	3,208	3,701	3,800
Watertown		7,307	7,857	8,192	500.00
Waukesha		8,135	8,067	8,713	400.00
Waupaca	3d class	2,706	2,921	3,124
Waupun	do	3,654	3,729	3,668
Wausau	do	7,796	7,607	7,464
White Water	do	6,614	6,724	7,152
WYOMING.
Cheyenne		15,300	16,181	16,805	4.00
Evanston	3d class	3,041	3,530	4,167
Laramie City		5,827	6,742	7,943	*4.00
Rawlins	3d class	3,166	3,686	4,177

* Lease, act 1885–'86.

Mr. BLOUNT. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS].

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I do not want to occupy one moment of time in any manner which may jeopardize the passage of this bill, because I believe that to the country itself and the post-office interests of the country this is one of the most important measures which has been brought before Congress. The objection is made to this bill that in our large cities the maximum amount allowed for the purchase of a site is not sufficient; that for $5,000 a sufficient amount of ground for the erection of a suitable post-office building can not be obtained in any of our large cities. In reply to this objection, I say, in the first place, that those large cities where the gross receipts are above $25,000 have been already provided with public buildings, or there are special bills now pending for that purpose.

Mr. STRUBLE. But with very poor prospect of passage in many instances.

Mr. PETERS. I concede that such is the case in many instances. Still, the object of this bill is to provide for the construction of public buildings in the country districts, in the villages and smaller cities, where the post-office receipts exceed $3,000 per annum and where it is desirable that the majesty of the Government should be represented by a suitable building, and where it is also important as a matter of business accommodation to the public.

Now, looking at this matter in a business light, the Government now pays an annual rental of $584,609 for post-office accommodations; and the interest at 3 per cent. on the money required to erect post-office buildings in all these 1,433 cities would amount to only $532,000.

Mr. WHITE, of Indiana. To towns of what population do you contemplate the provisions of this bill will apply?

Mr. PETERS. The question is not regulated by the population, but by the gross receipts of the post-office.

Mr. WHITE, of Indiana. But the population of these cities must be a basis on which you work.

Mr. PETERS. No, sir; we do not work upon the basis of population.

Mr. LIND. As a rule a town in the North having a population in excess of 3,000 will have post-office receipts exceeding in gross the requirements of this bill.

Mr. PETERS. I do not yield any further. In reply to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WHITE] I will say that in our preparation of bills on this question, and in the consideration of whatever bills have been passed by this House, we have proceeded, not upon the basis of population, but upon the basis of business done at the particular place—Government business of the Post-Office Department, Government business in the United States courts, Government business in the Land Department, etc. The basis of population is not a fair basis on which to proceed, because in many instances the gross receipts at the post-office in a town of small population will exceed the gross receipts of a town having twice the number of population, the population in the latter city being of a rural or resident character and not a business population.

The Government, by making the investment proposed under the provisions of this bill, will save money. I confess I feel an interest in this bill, because it is in line with a bill which I introduced in the Forty-ninth Congress. I believe I can say I have the honor of having introduced in this House the first bill indicating the general policy embraced in the present measure. In doing so I was influenced by the fact that in a large number of rural towns the Government is now renting buildings insufficient for the dispatch of the Government business, and there is nothing there in the shape of a building representing the majesty of the Government.

I know it is said that the question of receipts in the large cities must control, and control largely, this matter. But I beg leave to say that every rural hamlet in the United States contributes to the gross receipts of the postal business in all the large cities.

Take the city of New York, for instance. Of course the gross receipts in the post-office at the city of New York are very large, but every hamlet within the wide borders of the United States contributes its share to those gross receipts. And the same is true with reference to the gross receipts of the post-offices at the city of Philadelphia, at the city of Chicago, and all the other great cities of the United States. The rural hamlets and towns, by the operation of their industrial pursuits and business employments, contribute to swell the receipts of the post-offices in the larger cities of the country.

Now, in all the large cities and towns of the country we have provided large buildings, affording ample accommodation for the transaction of our postal business. Those buildings are commensurate with the business which they are required to transact, and furnish the facilities which are required for the necessary and orderly dispatch of that business. But in the small cities and towns throughout the country there is nothing provided except rented buildings, furnishing entirely inadequate accommodation in most instances. It is not the proper way in which this great Government should transact its postal business, in which the citizens of all classes and all parts of the country are most deeply interested.

It seems to me, therefore, Mr. Speaker, taking any view of the subject you please, this bill is one which ought to pass.

There is another point. It not only provides the needed accommodation for the transaction of the postal business of the country, but the erection of these public buildings will distribute throughout the country, through all the avenues of trade, in the country where these public buildings are to be erected, the money which we appropriate for that purpose, thereby giving employment to unemployed labor and stimulating industry in all parts of the country. There are now a great many unemployed laborers, and by passing this bill we will do something in the distribution of this money among the people to give employment to this unemployed labor, and at the same time we will stimulate the industries of the country in a way to produce only the very best results. [Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask, by unanimous consent, that the debate on the pending bill be closed, as it will be taken up by clauses for amendment.

Mr. ROGERS. I desire to be heard briefly.

Mr. BLOUNT. Certainly, I will yield to the gentleman. How much time does he desire?

Mr. ROGERS. Not more than fifteen minutes, and I may not even take that time.

Mr. BLOUNT. I will yield to the gentleman for fifteen minutes.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman who opened the discussion spoke of this as an important measure. It is an important measure; it is widespead in its importance.

It is well, when we are about to embark on a new sea of this character, to pause for a moment and take our bearings to see what our ancestry and our fathers thought of the exercise of the power conferred upon this department. Judge Story, in his second volume on the Constitution of the United States, paragraph 1536, made use of this language:

> The heads of Departments are, in like manner, generally entitled to the appointment of the clerks in their respective offices. But the great anomaly in the system is the enormous patronage of the Postmaster-General, who is invested with the sole and exclusive authority to appoint and remove all deputy postmasters; and whose power and influence have thus, by slow degrees, accumulated, until it is, perhaps, not too much to say that it rivals, if it does not exceed, in value and extent that of the President himself. How long a power, so vast and so accumulating, shall remain without any check on the part of any other branch of the Government, is a question for statesmen and not for jurists. But it can not be disguised that it will be idle to impose constitutional restraints upon high executive appointments if this power, which pervades every village of the Republic, and exerts an irresistible, though silent, influence in the direct shape of office, or in the no less inviting form of lucrative contracts, be suffered to remain without scrutiny or rebuke. It furnishes no argument against the interposition of a check, which shall require the advice and consent of the Senate to appointments, that the power has not hitherto been abused.
>
> In its own nature, the post-office establishment is susceptible of abuse to such an alarming degree; the whole correspondence of the country is so completely submitted to the fidelity and integrity of the agents who conduct it; and the means of making it subservient to mere State policy are so abundant, that the only surprise is that it has not already awakened the public jealousy and been placed under more effectual control. It may be said, without the slightest disparagement of any officer who has presided over it, that if ever the people are to be corrupted, or their liberties are to be prostrated, this establishment will furnish the most facile means and be the earliest employed to accomplish such a purpose.

I have read this paragraph, Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of arresting, if possible, the attention of this body. Let us look for a moment at the enormous power which this bill confers on the Post-Office Department, and in calling the attention to these provisions it is not my purpose in the slightest degree to reflect upon or detract from the integrity, ability or good faith of the presiding officer over that Department. Men pass away and administrations pass away, but power once lodged into control of one of these Departments is rarely ever surrendered.

And the very indorsement placed upon the bill to-day is the recommendation of the ex-Postmaster-General. It comes with his indorsement; it comes here begging for additional money, begging for additional power, to be placed absolutely under the control of that Executive Department of the Government.

Mr. SENEY. Is it under the control of the present Postmaster-General, or will it be under the control of his successor?

Mr. ROGERS. I would rather not be interrupted now.

Looking at the first section, the very first movement we find is the creation of a new bureau for which there is no present necessity. Already in the Treasury Department there is a bureau with an organization, with a superintendent, and with subordinate officials under him for this very purpose. There is an established corps already competent and able to do the work, and you will permit me to say that without having given careful and full investigation to the management of that office at any time, I have always believed and yet believe that if there is one of all the bureaus of the Government that requires reorganization it is this one, and I say this without intending any reflection at all upon the present presiding officer in charge, for I have had practically nothing to do with it since he has been at the head of the bureau.

That is the first thing we find in the bill—the organization of another great bureau, for which there is no necessity, with another head and a high salary, with a corps of subordinate salaried officials, with the creation of an immense establishment of persons under it, and officials scattered all over the country, into every State, and into every Congressional district. That, sir, is the first step. Why not let the authority rest where it properly belongs, with the Architect of the Treasury? What is the necessity for such a change as this bill contemplates? But the third section of the bill is still more objectionable, infinitely more so, in fact, than the first section. It provides—

That the Postmaster-General is authorized from time to time to construct, in his discretion, post-office buildings, etc.

Let us pause here for a moment and examine what is proposed by this section. "Shall construct, in his discretion, post-office buildings." Let us assume, sir, that some man not very scrupulous had found his way to the head of the Post-Office Department, and was himself a candidate for the Presidency or for the Vice-Presidency of the Republic. Let us suppose his success in a pending election depended upon one district or two districts or depended upon one State or two States. Yet under that condition of things you have placed by the terms of this bill $2,000,000, if I recollect aright, at least you propose here to say that he shall exercise control over a vast sum of money, and put it in the hands of a man whose election may depend upon the expenditure of that money where it will do the most good. Is that a wise measure of legislation? With the warning of Judge Story before us, of the enormous powers of that great Department already exercised, are we ready and willing to embark now in a scheme which is to place more millions of dollars in the control of one single Department and one single man at the head of the Department; place it in the hands of an officer who himself may be an aspirant to the highest or the second highest office within the gift of the people, with power in his discretion to construct public buildings wherever he pleases, keeping within the provisions of this law?

I say, sir, that the adoption and passage of this bills, anctioned as it is by the Department and indorsed by the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, involves a danger to the Republic, a danger to the liberties of the people, a danger to fair elections, and to the just administration of the laws, and is pernicious in its effects upon good government in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I had not the remotest idea that this bill was to be considered to-day. I have taken no steps to investigate its full scope, and have had no opportunity to criticise its provisions. We are called upon to act on it this morning in the morning hour without notice or opportunity to investigate or deliberate upon its provisions. I had determined, in the discharge of what I conceived to be a high public duty, to invite the attention of the House of Representatives and of the country to the fact that we are embarking upon an entirely new field, that we are entering a field that involves the expenditure of millions upon millions of public money.

Take my own district, for instance, situated far in the Southwest, and yet, familiar as I am with it, I could not tell you under the provisions of this bill what number of public buildings are to be constructed in a single year under the operation of law. Take some great State of the Union pending an election, and suppose it was a close State, a doubtful State whose vote would decide a national election. Two millions of money are placed in the hands of the Postmaster-General. One hundred towns in that State receive the benefits of the bill and this money is expended absolutely under his discretion. He alone is to determine when, where, and how it shall be expended and what buildings are to be erected. Can it be possible that our Government, with this enormous power in the hands of one Department, already wielding more than three times the power of any other Department of the Government, can place temptation of this character in the hands of any public official, tempting him to abuse a great public trust imposed in him by the people and corrupt a State or district, to overturn the will of the people in the exercise of the lawful power conferred upon him by the Congress of the United States?

Mr. Speaker, for one, cherishing the individual liberty of the citizen, cherishing the purity of the ballot-box, cherishing the great maxim handed down to us from our great forefather, that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," cherishing the Constitution derived from our forefathers, I stand here to-day, if I stand alone, in this House to enter my solemn and earnest protest against the enactment of any such law as this. [Applause.]

I would keep the expenditure of the people's money under the specific direction of the people's representatives. I would confide this enormous power to no single individual. I would avoid the abuses and the scandals that are sure to follow. I would observe the teaching of the Divine Master, "Lead us not into temptation."

Mr. BLOUNT. I now ask unanimous consent that the general debate be considered as closed, and that the bill be read by paragraphs for debate and amendment under the five-minute rule.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the first paragraph of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there shall be in the Post-Office Department one architect and superintendent of construction at a salary of $4,000 a year; one skilled draughtsman at a salary of $2,000 a year, and two skilled draughtsmen at a salary of $1,800 a year each, to be appointed by the Postmaster-General.

Mr. ROGERS. I move to strike out the whole of the first section of the bill. I do not care to be heard in advocacy of the amendment. It is the section which organizes a new bureau in the Post-Office Department.

Mr. PERKINS. Before the vote is taken I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads why this may not be done by the present bureau; why the Architect of the Treasury may not prepare these plans and specifications, but leave the buildings under the control of the Postmaster-General after the specifications are prepared and accepted?

Mr. BLOUNT. In relation to the buildings the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General are made a board to pass and approve them. The result is that the action of the Secretary of the Interior and the Postmaster-General has been merely pro forma, but they have been unable to control it, and the last Postmaster-General endeavored to do so, but found his associates unwilling to do more than follow the former practice, and the object is to put the matter in the hands of the officers in charge of this Department, with authority to control the erection of these buildings.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I would like to ask the gentleman from Georgia a question, if he will allow me.

Mr. BLOUNT. Certainly.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Has the committee carefully examined the question as to the saving there would be, if any, to the Government if this policy were pursued, taking into account the rent of buildings which are hired from other persons to carry on the post-office business?

Mr. BLOUNT. I will ask my colleague [Mr. ERMENTROUT] to answer that question, as he has given that matter special attention.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. I made an estimate of that. I found that at the present rent is not paid for all the post-offices; but the saving between the rent of buildings and interest on the sum which would be invested in their erection as I made the calculation would be about something over $50,000.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. So that, in the long run, it would be economy to erect these buildings?

Mr. ERMENTROUT. Unquestionably.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Are the committee unanimous in favor of this bill?

Mr. DINGLEY. I would like to ask the gentleman from Georgia a question. If the expense for this work should be placed upon the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, would it not be nearly as great as by having it under control of the Post-Office Department?

Mr. BLOUNT. It would be about the same.

Mr. DINGLEY. There would be no increase of expenditure on that account.

Mr. BLOUNT. The officers of the Treasury are not able to keep up with the work they now have.

Mr. BURROWS. I desire to ask my friend from Georgia a question.

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask a vote on this section.

Mr. BURROWS. I see this bill provides for the construction simply of post-office buildings.

Mr. BLOUNT. That is what it provides for.

Mr. BURROWS. Suppose in a place where one of these buildings is to be erected accommodation is required for a court or custom-house which are now provided for in one building. Are you to construct a separate building?

Mr. BLOUNT. By no means. It is in the discretion of the Postmaster-General where these buildings shall be constructed, and he is restricted by certain provisions in the bill and by the appropriation.

Mr. BURROWS. Suppose a case where there is a post-office, and where there is no court or custom house, then how are you to manage?

Mr. BLOUNT. Under this bill nothing can be done but construct post-office buildings. The power, of course, will rest with Congress, as it does to-day, if it wants to make a building sufficient to accommodate a court and for other purposes, to do so.

The amendment of Mr. ROGERS to strike out the section was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. That the Postmaster-General shall cause to be prepared by the Architect of the Post-Office Department, with the assistance of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, who is directed to furnish his counsel and aid thereto, a design for post-office buildings, which, before being adopted, shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Postmaster-General, and the Secretary of the Interior; that such design and plans shall be so devised as to enable the construction of post-offices of such variable size as may be required at the Presidential offices, so that additions or extensions to their capacity may be constructed from time to time in the future without injury to the harmony of the design or the usefulness of the constructed portion; that such design and plans shall be of uniform general character and exterior appearance, and, so far as may be most expedient for the service to be performed in them, of interior arrangement; and that all such buildings shall be constructed with a view to being fire-proof.

An amendment, recommended by the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, inserting the words "each of" in line 20, was read.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Chairman, this is a very important section, and I see that the morning hour for the consideration of the bill has expired; so I hope it will go over to-day.

Mr. FARQUHAR. I desire to offer an amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read, so that it may be printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The hour for the consideration of bills having expired, the committee will rise.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. SPRINGER having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. MCCREARY, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration the bill H. R. 3319, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found duly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 9771) for the erection of a public building at Ottumwa, Iowa;

A bill (H. R. 8353) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Hillsborough River, at a point in the town of New Smyrna, in the county of Volusia and State of Florida;

A bill (H. R. 5095) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Ocmulgee River, in the State of Georgia;

A bill (H. R. 9086) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Coosa River, or bridges across the Oostenaula and Etowah Rivers, at or near Rome, Ga.;

A bill (H. R. 3523) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, and to establish it as a post-road;

A bill (H. R. 10053) making May 30 a holdiday in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 7899) authorizing the construction of a bridge over the Tennessee River at or near Lamb's Ferry, Alabama;

A bill (S. 558) for the relief of certain settlers upon the school lands of Washington Territory;

A bill (S. 734) granting a pension to James Hall;

A bill (S. 888) granting a pension to Nancy A. Cutts;

A bill (S. 2033) granting a pension to Joseph Wirth;

A bill (S. 1051) to amend the act giving the approval and sanction of Congress to the route and termini of the Anacostia and Potomac River Railway in the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 1099) for the relief of the Church of the Ascension, in the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 1650) for the relief of Maj. Gen. W. W. Averell;

A bill (S. 1612) to provide for the closing of parts of two alleys in square 132, in the city of Washington, D. C., and for the relief of Charles Early and Corbin Warwick;

A bill (S. 1709) to provide for the issue of patents to certain persons for donation claims under the act approved September 27, 1850, commonly known as the donation law;

A bill (S. 1727) to grant to the trustees of the German Lutheran Trinity Congregation of Washington, D. C., the right to sell a portion of their cemetery land;

A bill (S. 1870) granting the use of certain lands in Pierce County, Washington Territory, to the city of Tacoma for the purposes of a public park;

A bill (S. 2307) to correct the records of the District of Columbia relative to certain real estate therein;

A bill (S. 2493) to perfect the quarantine service of the United States;

A bill (S. 2845) granting to the corporate authorities of the city of Tuscaloosa, in the State of Alabama, all the right, title, and interest of the United States to fractional sections 22 and 15, lying south of the Black Warrior River, in township 21, and range 10 west;

A bill (S. 3303) relating to "An act relating to postal crimes," and amendatory of the statutes therein mentioned, approved June 18, 1888; and

A bill (S. 3365) for the erection of a public building in the city of Chicago, Ill., to be used as an appraisers' warehouse and other public purposes.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask unanimous consent on behalf of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads that the House proceed with the consideration of the bill to provide for post-office buildings.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, I very much dislike to object, but I want to examine this bill with reference to amendments, and I can not do it at this time.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of resuming the consideration of the bill to organize the Territory of Oklahoma.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. DOCKERY in the chair.

PROPOSED TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is now in Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering the bill the title of which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10614) to organize the Territory of Oklahoma, and for other purposes.

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Chairman, the bill introduced by the Committee on Territories for the purpose of organizing and establishing a territory to be known as the Territory of Oklahoma presents, in all probability, the most singular instance of legislation upon the subject of creating Territories within the limits of the United States that has ever been presented to the consideration of the Congress of the United States. The bill itself is vague, uncertain, and indefinite as to the area which it proposes to embrace within the contemplated Territory.

In other words, Mr. Chairman, it is a bald proposition to create a territory out of lands which the Government does not own, and with the fact conceded and established by the report of the committee that there is no population on it. The bill presents a singular aspect. It is unlike any other bill that has ever been presented for the creation of a territory out of the public domain of the United States. It proposes to create a territory vast in extent, stretching over the great area of country which is embraced in the maps which the committee have submitted with the bill, although the Government of the United States does not possess a title to one foot of this land, with the exception of the very small strip known as "The Public Land Strip."

Therefore, sir, the boundaries of the Territory of Oklahoma as proposed by this bill include a vast area of country not owned by the Government of the United States, but belonging to other people. I have said that the bill itself is indefinite—indefinite in this, Mr. Chairman, that it says it will except from the operation of this act creating the proposed Territory all lands that may be occupied and owned by Indians, unless with their consent.

It proposes to embrace a vast region of country not now belonging to the Government of the United States; not territory out of which Congress has a right under its general power to create Territories, but a region which, as I have said, does not belong to the Government of the United States at all. In other words, this is a proposition in violation of the solemn treaties of the Government from 1830, when the Dancing Rabbit Creek treaty was made with the Choctaws in Mississippi, down to 1866; in violation of the solemn provisions of all those treaties with the Indians; the treaty of 1830, of 1833, of 1835, of 1855, of 1866, which last treaty it will be remembered reaffirmed all the grants made in prior treaties to all the Indian tribes named therein. This, I say, is a bold proposition to take those Indian lands and create a Territory out of them in violation, not only of all these treaties, but, as I shall proceed to show when I come to read the patents, in absolute violation of the solemn patents given by the Government of the United States to the various civilized tribes.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. And in violation of the express stipulation that they never would erect Territories around that Indian country.

Mr. HOOKER. And, as my friend from New York suggests, in violation of the express stipulation contained in the early treaties and reaffirmed in the treaty of 1866 that at no time in the future would the Government of the United States create States or Territories surrounding or adjoining the territory thus granted to the Indians.

Mr. WARNER. Let me ask the gentleman, then, was it a violation of those treaties to create the Territory of Kansas and later the State of Kansas? Were those treaties violated when Kansas was admitted, and when Texas was admitted, and when Colorado was admitted?

Mr. HOOKER. I take it for granted that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WARNER], who has already spoken on this subject, does not concede that those States were included, for if you will scan well his speech you will see that its main object was to show that if gentlemen had the power they would take all these grants from the Indians, including the lands held by the Creeks, the Chickasaws, the Choctaws, the Seminoles, and the Cherokees. And, Mr. Chairman, the bill of the Forty-ninth Congress, which was the parent of this one, was a bolder measure than this, because it expressly proposed to embrace all those lands.

Mr. WARNER. I interrupted the gentleman with that question simply because the suggestion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] was that under the treaties we were bound never to create any States or Territories around any of the lands conceded to the Indians, yet nevertheless the States I mentioned have been created.

Mr. HOOKER. I think that probably was a violation of the treaties, but that is what the French call un fait accompli, and the gentleman is a representative of one of those States and yet he is not satisfied.

Mr. WARNER. If the gentleman will pardon me, I represent a State that was admitted before that time.

Mr. HOOKER. You represent Missouri, but you are speaking for persons who represent those States.

Mr. WARNER. No; they speak for themselves.

Mr. HOOKER. The fact can not be concealed that this attempt to create a Territory in this manner is in gross violation of every one of the treaties to which I have referred and of solemn patents executed by the Government in binding form conveying these titles in fee-simple to the various semi-civilized tribes that I have mentioned.

It can not be denied that the object of this bill is to take from these Indians and constitute into a Territory of the United States the very land which, by the most solemn form of conveyance known to the law, the patent of the Government, has been given to these Indians. In other words, the gentleman who represents this committee as its chairman, and gentlemen who favor this proposition, not satisfied with the vast and illimitable domain of the United States, so well referred to in the table submitted by my friend from New York [Mr. BAKER] in his able speech of the other day; not satisfied with that, you are like the greedy Roman of whom Horace spoke, who, in the days of the decadence of the Roman Empire, not satisfied with his own vast possessions, said, "Ille angulus placet mihi præter omnia"—"That little corner of my neighbor's land pleases me better than all my vast estates."

In this spirit gentlemen say, "We want the lands which the Indians occupy; we need it; we intend to have it." Though you have had the Army of the United States at the frontier for years and years excluding from Oklahoma the intruders upon that territory; though while Captain Payne was alive as the leader of the marauders, you had the Army of the Government stationed upon the frontier protecting that territory, under the policy not only of this Administration but of former administrations, the whole power of the Government being invoked for that protection, you now propose absolutely, by the terms of the bill of the committee, to take from these Indians by law that territory the possession of which by them you have arrayed your whole Army to protect. Nothing more and nothing less than this is the proposition. You deal with the Indians with a hand of steel, but you put on gloves of velvet. You talk about protecting and guarantying their rights; yet this bill can not become a law nor this proposed territory have an existence except by an act of Punic faith of which I hope the Government of the United States will never be guilty toward the weak wards whom it has taken under its protection.

Sir, the history of the world has pointed to the subjugation and partition of Poland as a national crime by the great powers that perpetrated it, a crime which will stand as a blot upon the civilization of the age which witnessed that bold robbery and desolation of an entire people. Yet the partition of Poland was a venial offense in comparison with that act of Punic faith which this bill proposes the Government of the United States shall commit in regard to these Indians. The Poles were allowed at least to die with arms in their hands, but here by solemn treaties with these Indians you have given them this land; you have made it theirs. When Jackson consummated the treaties with them he said to them, speaking to them in that beautiful figurative language which the Indian so well understands (for all his expressions are taken from objects of nature): "This land shall be yours as long as the grass grows and the water flows."

Are you going back on this solemn asseveration of your great Presipent, the iron-handed and iron-hearted Jackson? Are you going back on the solemn patents of your own Government? Are you going back on the solemn treaties which you have made with these people? Yes, if you pass this bill, you are. And I say that you are committing a robbery upon these people. While you are professing friendship for them, you are crushing them with a hand of iron as palpably as the four walls of the dungeon invented by despotism closed upon its victim by invisible springs until he was crushed to death.

You have acquired from the Indians the vast empire out of which many of the States of this Union have been formed—aye, indeed, Mr. Chairman, have you not acquired this whole country from the Indian? For there was a time when they owned all this vast territory. They have conceded to you everything. They have retreated before the tide of civilization from the eastern coast, and now they are met by the tide of civilization coming from the Pacific coast. You acquired from them all this vast empire, forming now thirty-eight States, each in its own magnificence supporting the grand entablature of the Union which spans the continent from ocean to ocean.

You got it all from them. You got it by solemn treaty. You created States out of it. They gave it to us upon the most solemn conditions which the Government could make. It is said when we litigate among ourselves, we white people, the man who can trace his title back to the patent of the Government has that basis for his right of possession which is entitled to the greatest respect. Yet you propose now with these solemn treaties staring you in the face, entered into by the Government with these Indians, and under your authority, you propose to take this land from these Indians and create a Territory out of it.

You have driven them across the Mississippi River, they own no lands east of that river. You ceded this land west of the Mississippi to these Indians. You ceded it to them under the most sacred obligations which could bind the conscience of man or nation, and yet now the proposition is made and offered here to make a Territory out of land to which the Government of the United States does not own the title to an acre, with the exception of No Man's Land strip, which is but a very small part of it.

What is this bill stripped of all extraneous matter? It is uncertain in its terms. It is bristling all over with exceptions in its application. It is bristling all over with provisos. It is so drawn as if it needed an apology for the terms in which the measure shapes itself.

I wish to say to the committee, Mr. Chairman, that what I have already stated is not mere sentiment. It is not mere theory, but is the language of cold parchment to which the officers of this Government have affixed their names. It is the land which belongs to these Indians by the title which they hold under the solemn obligations of treaty. It is not sentiment; it is simply justice that they should be protected in their rights.

You talk about, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WARNER] talks about these Indians blocking the highway of civilization. Civilization—sir, what is civilization if it is not founded upon the acknowledgment of equity and justice? I would commend the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WARNER] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] if they want to apply the principle of civilization, to go back and read some of the first great principles which were engraved by the great law-giver of the world upon tablets of stone.

I would have them remember that the cardinal principle, the basis upon which civilization is built, is this sublime truth, "You shall do unto others as you would have others do unto you." You should deal in equity and justice.

And I would commend to these gentlemen another one of those laws written by the great lawgiver in immutable letters upon tablets of stone, spoken in language composed of but four words, and those monosyllabic, saying, "Thou shalt not steal."

The robber who meets you with arms in his hands you may be able to confront, but the robber who comes stealthily in the form of law and undertakes to take away that which you hold by the title of the most solemn character can not appeal to any principle of civilization for justification, for, sir, all civilization must rest upon the great cardinal principles of the Christian religion, and be founded upon the eternal laws of truth and right which lie back of and behind all legislation.

I appeal, therefore, to the sense of justice of the members of this Committee of the Whole to look at this matter as it is and to decide it upon the principle of right and justice.

It is said this is mere sentiment. Now, I do not know, as I have already stated, any sentiments more beautifully expressed as to the relations subsisting between man and man and between man and his God than those which are embodied in the Ten Commandments. I do not know of any civilization that does not date back to those grand cardinal principles.

Yes, sir, we are here now proposing to take away from these Indians a territory which we have ceded to them under the terms of a solemn treaty; which we have ceded to them for a valuable consideration; which we ceded to these Indians, Mr. Chairman, because they gave up under the stipulations of treaty all the territory which they held east of the Mississippi River, coupled with the condition that they should have title to these lands in the shape of patents from the Government of the United States.

Sir, if my honorable friend from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] holds a rood of land in that great State of his, the State of Illinois, and has the patent of the Government of the United States for it, would he not, if I were to go over and assail his title, and take possession, say to me, "I am in my occupancy and possession of these lands by the solemn patent of the Government of the United States."

The Indians who are affected by the provisions of this bill, and whose lands are to be taken away the same as if they were your own, are the Indians who have received their lands under solemn treaty stipulations with the Government in exchange for other lands, and neither the Government nor any other power has the right to dispossess them.

I beg to call the attention of the committee very briefly to the sixteenth article of the treaty of 1866, which will show at once that in that treaty the Government, referring to and embracing in it the regrants of everything that had been granted to the five semi-civilized tribes from 1830 up to that time, repeated the terms of the former treaties, and made an addition which in my judgment settles the whole question beyond all controversy; and it was referred to in the able, exhaustive, unanswered, and unanswerable speech of my distinguished friend from Georgia [Mr. BARNES], who is one of the signers of the minority report. I am gratified, sir, I may be permitted to state, to know that there were members of the committee on both sides of the House who could not be induced to become parties to this attempt to rob the Indians of the lands held by them under solemn treaties with the Government and by patents.

That sixteenth article of the treaty of 1866 settles this question, in my judgment, beyond all possibility of dispute, and particularly with reference to that portion of the lands embraced in this map and known as the Cherokee Outlet, and also the Oklahoma lands. This bill proceeds upon the idea that with the exception of No Man's Land, a small and insignificant strip of land, none of these lands are devoted to agriculture, and as there are no people occupying these lands these gentlemen want them for the homesteaders.

Sir, I never knew a man who wanted to commit a wrong who was not able to find some excuse to offer for the act, and bring to its support well-founded principles; and we have even heard the Scripture quoted in support of bad purposes.

The prejudice of the homesteader is appealed to, and his right to take possession of the lands as a reason for this unwarranted action. But the homesteader of the United States does not possess now, nor can he, in my judgment, under the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, assume the right, under any action of this body, to proceed to these lands and make selections upon them and obtain a patent, when the lands have been, as in this case, patented to the Indians. Millions of acres of our lands are still open for homestead settlement in other portions of the country, but the argument here is made to induce supporters to the bill in the interest of the homesteaders.

I deny it, sir. There is not an honest homesteader in the United States who has the right to go and select and locate upon a tract of 160 acres of land who would want to see the Government of the United States so much dishonored as that he would be willing to go and take possession of lands which had by solemn treaty of the Government been set apart for the Indians in payment of lands taken from them in exchange. But that argument is insisted upon here, and one gentleman from Missouri became quite eloquent in his appeal on behalf of the homesteaders, and also that we should protect the Indians against the cattle syndicates and against these rich corporations.

Allow me to say to the gentleman that on one occasion it was my fortune to go into that Territory on one of my trips, when I happened to be at Muskogee when the Indians were assembled for their annual agricultural fair. And by the bye, as typical of the civilization and advancement which has been made by these people in agriculture, although I have had occasion to attend agricultural fairs of many of the great States of the Union, I have nowhere seen an exhibition of the productions of the earth—grain, cotton, and rice—and the handiwork of women more striking and more beautiful than that I witnessed at Muskogee, where on this occasion the five semi-civilized tribes had met for their annual fair.

I may be permitted to say further, that it is not an illiterate, ignorant, uneducated, unthrifty, and unwise population with whom we are dealing and whom the Government is asked to rob by this bill; but an educated, cultivated, intelligent, thrifty people. I heard there on that occasion at Muskogee an agricultural address delivered by one member of the Cherokee tribes, a half-breed, whom I chance to know quite well, William P. Adair, and I have had the opportunity more than once to listen to the eloquent speeches and oratory at the agricultural fairs in the States of the Union, but I never heard an address on agricultural subjects grander in its theme, more lofty in its object, purer in its logic and rhetoric, and more accurate in its style than that delivered by William P. Adair on that occasion.

Sir, these Indians have in good faith taken the lands occupied and owned by them. They settled upon them and cultivated them. It has been said, "Why, we do not propose to do any wrong to the Indians. We are going to establish a Territory, and after that Territory is 'established' we will ask the 'consent of the Indians.'" Why, Mr. Chairman, this proposition would be an insult to the intelligence of a white man, and it is equally an insult to the intelligent Indians. You are going to organize a Territory out of his lands and then appeal to him to give his assent. You take possession of his property by force and then ask him to admit your right. You appeal to the Cherokees to break the very treaties that you have made with them. That is the proposition: to create a Territory and then to get the consent of the Indians.

Now, I have said that the sixteenth article of this treaty of 1866, in my judgment, settles this question beyond all controversy, and if the committee will bear with me I will read it. It will be remembered that the sixteenth article of the treaty of 1866 dates back and embraces within it features of all the other treaties with these tribes back to the "Dancing Rabbit Creek" treaty of 1830, the treaty of 1833, of 1835, and of 1855, and reaffirms every grant, privilége, and right ceded to these Indians. It is in the following language:

> The United States may settle friendly Indians in any part of the Cherokee country west of 96°, to be taken in a compact form in quantity not exceeding 160 acres for each member of each of said tribes thus to be settled; the boundaries of each of said districts to be distinctly marked, and the land conveyed in fee-simple to each of said tribes to be held in common or by their members in severalty, as the United States may decide.
>
> Said lands thus disposed of to be paid for to the Cherokee Nation.

Meaning, of course, the lands belonging to the Indians themselves. How could the Cherokees convey if they did not own? How could they dispose of the lands if they did not own them? Who was to petition for it? The Government of the United States? Oh, no. The Cherokees were to petition for it. They were the people who were to be paid for whatever lands other friendly Indians settled upon, and they were to be paid according to the contract made between the Cherokees and the other friendly Indians.

The land thus disposed of was to be paid for to the Cherokees—

> At such price as may be agreed on between said parties in interest, subject to the approval of the President; and if they should not agree, then the price to be fixed by the President.
>
> The Cherokee Nation to retain the right of possession of and jurisdiction over all of said country west of 96° of longitude until thus sold and occupied, after which their jurisdiction and right of possession to terminate forever as to each of said districts thus sold and occupied.

Now, sir, it is clear from this that the Cherokee Nation were to make the sales to the other friendly Indians, and they were to be paid the purchase money. They were the vendors, and the friendly Indians who were to be settled on said lands were the vendees. They were to pay the consideration money and the Cherokees were to receive it. It was settled by the treaty between the Indians and the Government that this land was theirs, subject to their right to sell to other friendly Indians, and you will observe the language in this section is that the United States "may." It is a permission granted. "The United States may settle friendly Indians." There is no right to take the territory; no right to settle white people; no right to give an acre of this land for any purpose whatever.

Now, it is said by the gentleman from Missouri in his argument that he wants to protect the Indians from the syndicates and corporations pasturing there. What right, sir, has the Government of the United States to say how the Indians shall use these lands? We had one fearful instance of this dictation to the Indians. It was caused by one of these agents, who said to the Indians, "I want this land for agricultural purposes." The Indians were pasturing their ponies there, and he said, "I want to plow up this land and grow corn and pumpkins and other things;" but the Indians said there was plenty of land elsewhere which he could use. It would be just as if I were to say to the gentleman from Missouri, "There is plenty of land to homestead in this country." They said, "This is our land; all this land is ours, and we have a right to use it as we please. You can go over there," pointing to other lands, "and break up and make agricultural fields of it if you please; but this is our land and we prefer to use it for pasturage." The agent, in violation of the express wishes of the Indians, put his men to plowing the lands, and the result was, one of the party was shot at, but not wounded. This produced one of the most fearful wars we have had with the Indians, and resulted in the desolation of that entire family. Sir, there is no power in the Government of the United States or its agents, or the members of this committee, to say to the Indians, "You shall use that land we gave you for agriculture rather than for other purposes."

The Cherokee Nation owns the land known as "the Cherokee Outlet," and no agent of the Government nor the Government itself can say how he shall use it. Are you to judge? Who gave you the right to say what the Indian shall do with what they paid for? You robbed him of an empire and gave him a corner in the Indian Territory, and now you want to rob him of that.

Mr. WARNER. Does the gentleman hold that the Indians had legal authority to lease these lands?

Mr. HOOKER. There is no question about that at all.

Mr. WARNER. Then you and the Attorney-General disagree.

Mr. HOOKER. I have my own views, and I hold that the Indians have just as much right to lease their land as you have got the right to lease your farm in Missouri that the Government gave to the man from whom you derive your title to the patent there; and the Government has just as much power to go into Missouri and dictate to the gentleman what he shall do with his land or to my honorable friend from Illinois as to what he shall do with his as to say to the Indians, "You shall not lease your lands for pasturage purposes."

Mr. WARNER. Two Attorney-Generals have decided that, and the circuit court of the United States has decided that in the decision of Judge Brewer.

Mr. HOOKER. I will come to that decision after awhile, and if I do not reach it in my time I will publish it in my remarks.

When you make a solemn patent, whether you make it with Indians or with white people, you part with all right and title of possession. There is but one condition embraced in the treaty and stipulated in the patent upon the happening of which the Government of the United States is to reacquire an interest in these lands—only one. No Attorney-General, no member of Congress speaking by the book, can assert that there is a single condition coupled with the conveyance of these lands to the Indians, save and except one only, and that condition is that if the Indian should become extinct or should cease to occupy the lands, then the Government of the United States reacquires an interest in the lands.

But the grant was an absolute grant in fee-simple, especially the grant to the Cherokees, and it has been so held by the courts of the United States. The courts have held, I say, that it was an absolute grant in fee-simple, and the Cherokee title, as was well said by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES], is firmer, stronger, more binding than that of any other tribe, though I hold that under the terms of the treaty and under the terms of the patents the other semi-civilized tribes hold their lands by an equally strong tenure. That article of the treaty has forever settled the question as to what was the character of the conveyance made.

I hold one of the patents in my hand, and I shall embody it in my remarks, and I invoke the attention of every member of this committee to its contents. Let us see how it reads. I will not read that portion of it which sets forth the boundaries of the land granted, but I will read certain portions which fix the nature of the grant. This patent begins:

The United States of America, to all whom these presents shall come, greeting: Whereas by certain treaties, etc.

It recites the various treaties with the Indians and the articles of those treaties upon which the grant is predicated, and reciting as one of the considerations of the grant the cession of the lands east of the Mississippi River, and, following these recitals, the Government of the United States agrees to convey, etc., and the grant concludes in this way: "Therefore, in execution of the agreement and stipulations contained in the said several treaties, the United States have given and granted and by these presents do give and grant unto the said Cherokee Nation the two tracts of land so surveyed and hereinbefore described containing, in the whole, 14,374,135.14 acres"—with remarkable particularity down to the very fraction of an acre do you write in this patent what you are giving to these Indians—"to have and to hold the same, with all the rights, privileges, and appurtenances thereunto belonging, to the said Cherokee Nation forever." There is no limit, no restraint.

Mr. WARNER. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. HOOKER. I would rather not be interrupted. I understand the purport of the gentleman's argument, and I think I shall answer it before I get through. It will be seen, therefore, Mr. Chairman, that there could not have been a more unlimited form of grant, a more absolute form of grant, a more unrestricted and unconditional form of grant, than this, which is as old as the forms of conveyance that belong to that great nation from which we borrow alike our language and our laws.

To proceed with the reading of this patent—

To have and to hold the same, together with all the rights, privileges, and appurtenances thereunto belonging.

Was it a right, privilege and, appurtenance thereunto belonging to lease the lands to lease them for ninety-nine years, or, if the owner desired, to lease them absolutely, or to sell them absolutely? Surely it will not be contended that any Attorney-General or any judge has ever so far forgotten the plain and simple provisions of the English language and the plain and simple impulses of common honesty as to say that a grant thus broad and liberal in its terms is coupled with restrictions by which the grantee may sell but can not lease, by which he may occupy for one purpose but can not occupy for another.

To have and to hold the same, together with all the rights, privileges, and appurtenances thereunto belonging, to the said Cherokee Nation, subject, however, to the right of the United States—to permit other tribes of red men to get salt on the salt plains on the Western prairie referred to in the second article of the treaty of the 29th of December, 1835, which salt plains have been ascertained to be within the limits prescribed for the outlet agreed to be granted by said article.

I call attention to the limitation—

And, mark you, by numerous adjudications, by numerous decisions, and by the terms of the patent itself, what is called the Cherokee Outlet, which is embraced in this bill as a part of the proposed territory was conveyed in the very same patent which conveyed the other lands to the Cherokee tribe of Indians—

Referred to in the second article of the treaty of the 29th of December, 1835, which salt plains have been ascertained to be within the limits prescribed for the outlet agreed to be granted by said article, and subject, also, to all the other rights reserved in the United States, etc., to the extent and in the manner in which the said rights are so reserved.

That refers to the reservation of the right to establish necessary military posts, etc.

And subject, also, to the condition provided by the act of Congress of the 28th of May, 1830, referred to in the above-recited third article, and which condition is that the lands hereby granted shall revert to the United States if the said Cherokee Nation becomes extinct or abandon the same.

With the exception, therefore, of the right to give to the other tribes settled on that land by consent of the Cherokees permission to use the salt lake which was found to be embraced in the survey, it is an unconditional grant of these lands for any and all purposes for which the Cherokees might see fit to use them—as full an ownership as any citizen of the United States has of his land. The sole reservation was that if this nation of people should become extinct or should for any reason abandon these lands, they should revert to the United States.

The other patents to all of the five semi-civilized tribes to whom these lands were granted by patent were couched in the same words. If you possess the power to take the Cherokee Outlet, why do you not possess the power to take the land of the Cherokee Nation itself? All the black part of that map you do not propose to include in this bill which my friend from Illinois has introduced—only the white part of that map is proposed to be included. The lands now belonging to the Cherokees, Choctaws, Creeks, Seminoles, and Chickasaws is represented in black on the map; yet the instrument which conveyed the land to these tribes, was precisely similar in terms to that which conveyed to the Cherokees what is known as the Outlet.

It was essential that they should possess this outlet; and it is probable that, sharpened as their wits were by experience of the manner in which they had lost lands east of the Mississippi this tribe of Indians, by no means deficient in intelligence, said "We will secure an outlet from this land." At the time when that grant was made to them these Indians maintained themselves mainly by hunting; and it was necessary they should have this outlet. The Government conveyed it by solemn patent precisely as these other lands have been conveyed. The patent to the Choctaws, to the Creeks, and other tribes is in precisely similar form. What right then has the Government of the United States to take one acre of this land and constitute it a Territory?

I wish now to refer to the terms of the treaty and to show by the interpretations which have been placed upon it that the Government of the United States designed to make an absolute conveyance of the title to this property. The United States by the fifth article of the treaty of 1830 covenanted and agreed—

That the lands so ceded to the Cherokee Nation shall at no future time without their consent be included within the territorial limits or jurisdiction of any State or Territory.

That is what was declared by solemn treaty—by solemn patent of the Government. Yet, now, by the report of the majority of the Committee on Territories, and the bill which they have presented, you are asked to violate this plain, essential feature of the contract between the Government and the Cherokees.

Mr. WARNER. The gentleman will permit me to say that that refers to Article V of the treaty of 1825.

Mr. HOOKER. I understand that.

Mr. WARNER. And if the gentleman turns to that he will find it includes only about forty-two sections of land, not one foot of which is included in this bill.

Mr. HOOKER. Yes; and the gentleman ought to know better than to attempt to impress upon this House the idea that there was a single patent issued prior to 1825. They were all issued subsequently.

Mr. WARNER. No one has been trying to mislead the House. I simply called the attention of the gentleman to the date of the treaty to which reference was made.

Mr. HOOKER. I understand what the gentleman refers to. But there were no patents issued until after 1825.

Mr. WARNER. I have not claimed to the contrary.

Mr. HOOKER. I have the date of every patent here. Here are the certificates of the Commissioner of the General Land Office in 1880:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., March 16, 1880.

I, J. A. Williamson, Commissioner of the General Land Office, do hereby certify that the annexed copy of a patent dated December 31, 1838, in favor of the Cherokee Nation, is a true and literal exemplification from the records of this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name, and caused the seal of this office to be affixed, at the city of Washington, on the day and year above written.

[SEAL.] J. A. WILLIAMSON,
Commissioner of General Land Office.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
March 16, 1880.

I, J. A. Williamson, Commissioner of the General Land Office, do hereby certify that the annexed, from page 1 to page 24, both inclusive, is a true and literal exemplification, from the records of this office, of the original letter to the Secretary of the Interior, dated October 13, 1877, relative to lands in the Indian Territory claimed by the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the seal of this office to be affixed at the city of Washington on the day and year above written.

[SEAL.] J. A. WILLIAMSON,
Commissioner of General Land Office.

So that it will be observed that this patent to the Cherokees was after the date to which the gentleman refers.

These lands having been surveyed, a patent was duly granted, bearing date December 31, 1838.

Therefore in execution of the agreement and stipulations contained in the said several treaties, the United States have given and granted, and by these presents do give and grant, under the said Cherokee Nation, the two tracts of land so surveyed and hereinbefore described, containing in the whole 14,374,-135.14 acres: To have and to hold the same, together with all the rights, privileges, and appurtenances thereunto belonging, to the said Cherokee Nation forever; subject, however, to the right of the United States to permit other tribes of red men to get salt on the salt plain on the Western prairie, referred to in the second article of the treaty of the 29th of December, 1835, which salt plain has been ascertained to be within the limits prescribed for the outlet agreed to be granted by said article; and subject also to all the other rights reserved to the United States in and by the articles hereinbefore recited, to the extent and in the manner in which the said rights are so reserved; and subject also to the condition provided by the act of Congress of the 28th of May, 1830, referred to in the above recited third article, and which condition is that the lands hereby granted shall revert to the United States if the said Cherokee Nation becomes extinct or abandons the same.

That, I have said, is the only reservation. It is a grant as absolute, as unqualified, as free from misconstruction as any patent of the Government to any man who now holds an acre of land granted from the public domain, whatever may be the color of his skin.

The United States guarantied to each tribe that they should hold their respective tracts by the same title and tenure as are provided for in treaties of 1832 and 1833, and agreeable to letters patent issued to Creek Nation August 11, 1852, and the guaranty was again renewed that no State or Territory should ever pass laws for the government of either of these tribes, and that no portion of either tract should ever be included within any Territory or State, nor shall either or any part of either ever be erected into a Territory, without the full and free consent of the legislative authority of the tribe owning the same.

The guaranty, therefore, that these lands should be theirs, absolutely theirs, unqualifiedly theirs, discloses the intention of the Government, and that intention of the Government is further disclosed by the decisions of the courts supporting the rights and title on the part of these Indian tribes to the lands which they hold.

Now, the whole of the Indian Territory was held by a fee-simple title from the United States, the Cherokees holding their lands by an absolute fee-simple title; the Creeks with the Seminoles and the Choctaws with the Chickasaws their respective districts by a qualified fee.

The question arises, do they hold it there now? Nothing has happened since to change the character of their title, and they hold it now as unqualifiedly as when it was first conferred upon them by the patent of the Government.

Besides, the treaties of 1866 with these different tribes provide for a general amnesty for all past offenses, referring to the recent unpleasantness between the States in which some of them had been engaged, but which had been fully condoned on the part of the Government so far as any interest or rights were affected by it.

It will be seen, therefore, whether you take the treaties themselves, or take the recitals of the patents, the intention of the Government by solemn stipulation was that no Territory should ever be created, that no State should be created within the borders of the lands held by these Indians without the consent of the Indians. Yet here it is proposed to occupy that land, and to create a Territory in violation of the rights of the Indians who settled there. You propose first to create the Territory and then to get the consent of these people.

The sixteenth article of the treaty of 1866 with the Cherokees is as follows:

The United States may settle friendly Indians in any part of the Cherokee country west of 96°, to be taken in a compact form in quantity not exceeding 160 acres for each member of each of said tribes thus to be settled; the boundaries of each of said districts to be distinctly marked, and the land conveyed in fee-simple to each of said tribes to be held in common or by their members in severalty, as the United States may decide.

Said lands thus disposed of to be paid for to the Cherokee Nation at such price as may be agreed on between said parties in interest, subject to the approval of the President; and if they should not agree then the price to be fixed by the President.

The Cherokee Nation to retain the right of possession of and jurisdiction over all of said country west of 96° of longitude until thus sold and occupied, after which their jurisdiction and right of possession to terminate forever as to each of said districts thus sold and occupied.

Jurisdiction over and right of possession in this land remains in the Cherokee Nation, and it so continues until the lands are disposed of in the manner mentioned in this article, and when so disposed of the United States can settle thereon none but friendly Indians.

It appropriated on March 3, 1883 (22 Stats., 624), out of the funds due under appraisement for Cherokee lands west of the Arkansas River, the sum of $300,000. Now, this is what Congress did. And for what was the appropriation made? The answer is found in the proviso annexed to the appropriation: "Provided, That the Cherokee Nation shall execute conveyances, satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior, to the United States in trust only for the benefit of the Pawnees, Poncas, Nez Perces, Otoes, Missourias, and Osages now occupying said tract, as they respectively occupy the same, before the payment of said sum of money."

Those who are seeking to open the lands to white settlement have called attention to the fact that under act of March 3, 1871, 16 Stat., 566, it is no longer the policy of the Government to make treaties with the Indians. But this very act provides that it shall not be so construed as to invalidate or impair any existing treaty. They then asserted that we had on the statute-books a statute prohibiting the settlement of any other Indian tribes on it; but when we examine the act—the act of February 13, 1879, 20 Stat., 313—we find the prohibition applies only to the Apaches and other Indians of New Mexico.

There is nothing, then, either to prevent faithful adherence to the treaties or to the continuation of the policy marked out by statesmen of a preceding generation, of making further settlements of Indians within this Territory. As late as 1870, Mr. Cox, then Secretary of the Interior, in a document indorsed by President Grant, said: "The policy of preserving the Indian Territory as far as possible from intrusion in any form has been hitherto regarded as firmly established in this country. * * * And in order to carry it out with any degree of success it is necessary to adhere to it as firmly as possible."

This bill proposes a departure from this policy. It proposes to take the land from these Indians and to create a Territory out of it. It proposes to do this in violation of the treaties and the patents to the land granted by the Government.

What do you propose to do? You propose to use the power of the Government of the United States to create a Territory, where, under the treaty stipulations, you agreed that no Territory should be created without the consent of these Indians to whom the lands were granted. You propose to organize a Territory there in violation of the rights of these Indians, as the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] has stated in his report.

The passage of a bill organizing a Territorial government, under such circumstances, over a weak and defenseless people, with a condition requiring their assent before the bill should become operative, would evince on the part of a powerful Government like that of the United States such a predetermination to create the proposed government as would deprive these people of all freedom of volition in the matter. It would be a miserable perversion of terms to call an assent thus obtained free and voluntary.

But, sir, as has been well said by the gentleman from Georgia, the bill contains more than that. It proposes in plain terms to confiscate the lands of these Indians unless they consent to the organization of this Territory; and that is the substance of the bill in words. The Indians are to be deprived of property solemnly conveyed to them by patents and treaties whether they will or no.

But again, sir, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Mr. Price, writes to the Indian agent, Mr. Tufts, on March 31, 1883, informing him of the Secretary's decision, and that on the previous day he had had an interview with Chief Bushyhead, of the Cherokee Council, to consider the subject and report the result to this office.

Chief Bushyhead replies on July 8, 1883, to a communication from the Commissioner of June 28, 1883, and inclosing a copy of an act passed at a special session in May, authorizing him and directing him to execute a lease to the Cherokee Strip Live Stock Association. This lease was executed in July.

No objections appear ever to have been made by any Department of the Government, although the lease was made, as is clearly seen, with its full knowledge.

The Department had written to know what the council had agreed upon.

The Department of the Interior, through Acting Secretary Joslyn, July 30, 1884, thus announces the position of the Department (see page 165, Senate Ex. Doc. No. 17, Forty-eighth Congress, second session): "The Department neither recognizes nor disaffirms leases from the Cherokee national authorities for grazing privileges. Parties occupying under such leases are not included in the Department request for the removal of intruders."

That is, the occupation under such leases was not included under the Department's request for removal. Hence the Department sanctioned the leases. If so, the Department will not interfere with them.

Mr. Chairman, I will ask how much time I have remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has two minutes of his time remaining.

Mr. BARNES. I would ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman be extended, the same privilege having been granted to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SPRINGER. How much time remains to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER]?

The CHAIRMAN. Eighteen minutes.

Mr. SPRINGER. I have no objection to his taking that time.

Mr. BARNES. I object to that.

Mr. SPRINGER. How much time does the gentleman want?

Mr. HOOKER. Ten or fifteen minutes only.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman proceed for that length of time.

There was no objection.

Mr. HOOKER. In addition to what I have cited and the passages to which I have referred in the very able report of the minority of the committee from whom the bill comes, and whose substitute accompanies the report, I turn now for a moment to consider what view the Indians themselves have taken of this matter. They have presented it in the shape of a memorial submitted by the delegates of the Cherokee Nation in language probably more clear and forcible than I could myself present it. They put a very pertinent inquiry in that memorial:

If the right of sale was given to them, to the affiliated tribes, and the price to be agreed upon between the Cherokees and the affiliated tribes was not satisfactory, then if they could not agree the President of the United States should fix the price as an arbitrator between the two, claiming to have no power or authority save that granted by the terms of the treaty within whose powers he was restricted.

They asked the question, "Who it is to be sold by?" By the Cherokee Nation; and if it is to be sold by the Cherokee Nation, the Cherokee Nation must own it. They say:

Such is the view of Congress itself, as formally expressed in an act passed on March 3, 1883. You are referred to the deeds executed by the Cherokee Nation, under the authority and requirement of that act, to the Poncas, Pawnees, Nez Perces, Ottawas and Missourias, and Osages, now on file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, leaving about 6,000,000 acres of the original tract unsettled by and unsold to friendly Indians and still in the possession and ownership and under the jurisdiction of the Cherokee Nation.

Will my honorable friend from Illinois or the other gentlemen advocate the position that the Cherokee Nation has not power to sell any portion or every rood of these lands to the affiliated tribes? Under the treaties and under the patents they have the right to do this, and if they have that right what right have you to take it?

Mr. WARNER. To whom have they the right to sell?

Mr. HOOKER. To any friendly nation, coupled with no condition as to how they shall sell. They have the right to sell to any friendly tribes; and they have now six titles recorded in your Indian Office. They were not secretly made, but were openly made with the approbation of your Government. They are recorded titles, and they can convey anything. Do you mean to cheat not only the Cherokees but the poor friendly tribes to whom they sold these rights, in their anxiety to care for that people and every nation and people who had a kindred feeling?

There are some people who manifest a great deal of sympathy for the colored people of the South. They are very anxious for the welfare of the colored race. I admire very much the feeling which prompts it; and in reply to what has been said upon that subject I would say there are no people who have protected them with more energy and zeal than the people in the midst of whom they have been reared from infancy to old age, and among whom they lived when slaves and since they have been free.

Here you have special treaty stipulations with the Indians who have holdings of land from the Cherokees, and I would like you to extend something of the sympathies to these Indians you claim for the colored people of the South when you undertake to dispose of their property. It is not only a proposition to take it from the Cherokees, to whom you granted it by solemn patent, but you propose to rob the semi-civilized tribes to whom they sold it. That is the view that these gentlemen take of this question, and I have given it an answer.

No lawyer can deny the proposition that the Cherokees have the right to the land described in this Territorial bill, known as the Cherokee Strip. They are exercising that right as thousands and millions of white people are exercising rights acquired by agreement with others. The Cherokees have, therefore, under the power acquired by their contracts with the United States, permitted certain persons to lease these lands at a rental of $100,000, and if they can get $200,000 they have the right to make that arrangement.

They have a patent to the land known as the Cherokee Strip, not a technical claim to a portion of the country authorized to be occupied, but they have the fee-simple, not only a right under the treaties of 1830-'35, but actually patented to the Cherokee Nation by President Van Buren on the 31st of December, 1838. The Cherokees claim the right of possession, and say that this is land which was secured to them by these stipulations.

I call the attention of the gentleman from Illinois and the gentleman from Missouri to the language of this grant. There is no such thing as an Indian patent and a white man's patent. It is the patent of the Government; the conveyance of the Government. It is an assertion of the Government's authority, power, control, and ownership, absolutely unrestricted and unconditioned. And yet that is what you propose to violate, and take this land for the purpose of creating a Territory, in violation of every provision under which the Indians occupied it, and create a Territory of it.

Now, Mr. Chairman, if you adopt the bill of my honorable friend from Illinois and the majority of this committee, what do you do? Have you the right, as the gentleman from Missouri in his speech indicated, that he looks not alone to the acquisition of the land now embraced in these territorial limits, but to the acquisition finally of all the land which the five semi-civilized tribes have?

Get your feet as a standing point upon what you call the Oklahoma land, and your greedy eyes will soon reach out to the land occupied by the five semi-civilized tribes. You will never be content until the territorial limits extend to those lands, and until the white people get in there and occupy them. The Government has been engaged in expelling intruders from this very Oklahoma Territory. Why and by what authority did the Government do this? They did it in performance of solemn duty and right to secure these lands to these Indians, and under no circumstances could there be an occupancy of the land except by their assent or by their sale or lease.

So that it will be observed, Mr. Chairman, that the Government of the United States, not only under this Administration, but under former Administrations, has found itself bound to protect this very territory which you now propose to make a white man's territory by a form of legalized robbery. You would not allow the white man to go in and rob them for himself, but absolutely in violation of every right of the Indian and every obligation of the Government you propose in the form of law now to go in and take this land whether the Indians agree or not.

Now, sir, the gentleman talks about the Indian standing in the way of civilization. I would not like to belong to a civilization, however grand and great, which would do wrong and which would be the perpetrator of an outrage upon the weak and defenseless, whom you are accustomed to denominate as the wards of the nation; for no one principle of law is held more sacred in any court of justice, outside of the rights existing between man and man, than the great principle by which a trustee is held to a rigid responsibility on account of his ward.

And yet you propose to rob your wards under the form of law of that which is theirs, and theirs by the most solemn of treaty stipulations. That is what this bill does; nothing more and nothing less.

I say I do not wish to belong to the most enlightened civilization of the nineteenth century if it proposed to do a wrong, and yet a greater wrong is here proposed than that which Great Britain has long administered upon down-trodden Ireland in denying its people home rule.

You have taken these people under your wing. You have conveyed to them these lands not as a gift but because they ceded what was far more valuable to you and what you absolutely needed for the white man's occupancy east of the Mississippi, and now you propose to rob them of that grant in utter violation of your plighted faith, in violation of the forms of law and of every principle of right and justice. Why, Mr. Chairman, a man who should present himself in court and say, "I deny my title," would be told by the court, "Sir, you can not deny your title. The court will not permit you to do it."

It is a great fundamental principle of law that no man shall be heard in a court of justice to deny a title which he has himself granted. He can not even be permitted to question the title of another man if derived from the same source as his own. But gentlemen propose by this law to absolutely violate every compact and every treaty with the Indians, and to take these lands away from them nolens volens. It is proposed to do this in violation of the solemn grant of the United States and of their solemn agreement that no Territory should be erected there.

Sir, it has been said at some time by the men who have gone farthest in this matter that the civilization of the age would require that the sentiment should be engraved on the hearts of the American people that the best Indian is a dead Indian. You are faithful guardians of your wards, are you not, when under the pretense of advancement and civilization you would absolutely rob your wards, and if you could not rob them while they were living you would be willing to kill them in order that you might, ghoul-like, rob them when they were dead! I trust that such a principle of civilization will never be asserted in this age.

It is a great thing to be a civilized people, to have men skilled in the arts, in science, in literature, in history. It is well to be a nation great in intellectual power as well as in domain and in material wealth. But, sir, the grandest nation of the Old World when it reached its sublimest degree of dominance over the then known world—when Rome sat the crowned mistress of the world upon her seven hills, boasting that she was first in art, in science, and in literature and law, having violated the great principles of right and justice as to the vast domain which she had acquired, she fell from her high estate, giving rise to the saying of the great Latin poet: Roma ruat sua mola.

Let that never be said of this great and glorious country of ours. I hope it never may be; but if our country is to do wrong with impunity, if it is to commit legalized robbery with the strong hand, if it is to violate every principle of human and divine law, then I do not know but what your boasted civilization may be merely the precursor of your downfall, as it has been the precursor of the downfall of every nation that has forgotten the law written by the hand of the Almighty on the immortal tablets, impressed by the hand of that magnificent law-giver of the world, whose form was chiseled from the insensate marble by the master hand of Michael Angelo, and stands to-day, in body as in mind, the most splendid specimen of humanity on the globe.

If you do what this bill proposes, you do it in violation of those great laws both human and divine which every just and upright nation should respect, and respect with more strictness when dealing with a weaker people, especially a people who have confided in you and trusted you and given their fate into your hands. I implore this committee, therefore, to look at this bill as it is, and not to be deceived or to permit its actual purposes to be hidden by any protestations which may be made here that it is in the interest of the Indians. It means absolute confiscation. It means absolute denial of every right which you have granted to them. It means utter disregard of the obligations of your solemn treaties and the solemn patents of your Government. [Applause.]

Mr. SYMES. I yield twenty minutes of my time to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. STOCKDALE].

[Mr. STOCKDALE withholds his remarks for revision. See APPENDIX.]

EXTENSION OF ANNUAL APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. SPRINGER. The Committee on Appropriations desire to have a joint resolution passed extending the appropriations owing to the failure of some of the appropriation bills, and I move that the committee now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. SPRINGER having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. DOCKERY reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 10614, had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. FORNEY. By direction of the Committee on Appropriations, I ask the immediate consideration of the following joint resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows.

A joint resolution to continue the provisions of a joint resolution approved June 30, 1888, entitled "A joint resolution to provide temporarily for the expenditures of the Government."

Be it resolved, etc., That the provisions of a joint resolution entitled "A joint resolution to provide temporarily for the expenditures of the Government," approved June 30, 1888, be, and the same are hereby, extended and continued in full force and effect to and including the 31st day of August, 1888.

Mr. FORNEY. I am directed to present this by the Committee on Appropriations. We find that the Navy, the Army, and the sundry civil bills are still in the Senate, and it will be necessary to make this provision in order that the appropriations may be extended.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I shall not object, but I desire to put on record my protest against the unusual, and I believe entirely unnecessary delay of the appropriation bills in the House in the first instance.

Mr. FORNEY. In reply to the gentleman I will say that the sundry civil bill has been before the Senate for over a month.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes, and it was before the House for six months.

There being no objection, the joint resolution (H. Res. 206) was read a first and second time, and ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being read the third time, was passed.

Mr. FORNEY moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

PROPOSED TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

Mr. SYMES. I reserve the balance of my time. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. PERKINS. Will the gentleman yield to me a portion of his time?

Mr. SYMES. I yield a portion of my time to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Chairman, in the short time allotted to me I will not be able to enter into a general discussion of this bill, nor will I attempt to review the circumstances that exist in the territory that are affected by the provisions of this bill. Perhaps the conditions existing there have been brought to the attention of the committee by gentlemen who have spoken on this subject; but as is well known to all who have had occasion to give the subject investigation and thought that great area of country furnishes to-day an asylum and resort for desperadoes and lawless characters, who flock there from all sections of the country. This great area of our common country is without law, order, or authority, or the representatives of law and order, and is a menace to the people who have located upon our public lands in the adjacent States and on the Public Land Strip which is provided for by the provisions of the bill; and in the name of these people, as well as in the name of the people of the West who are without homes, and in the name of the people who are looking to this territory as a place in which homes may be secured, we ask for the adoption of this proposed legislation. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] denounced it as wrong, as violative of treaty obligations, and as an attempt to take from the Indians that which they possess, without right, and in violation of law; and yet almost the very first provision of the bill is that—

Nothing in this act shall be construed to impair the rights of person or property, or to impair any patent to or right of occupancy of lands now pertaining to the Indians in said territory under the laws and treaties of the United States, executive order, or otherwise, or to include any territory occupied by any Indian tribe for which title has been conveyed by patent or otherwise from the United States, or to which such tribe may be entitled by law, executive order, right of occupancy, or treaty, without the consent of said tribe, or any territory which by treaty or agreement with any Indian tribe is not, without the consent of said tribe, to be included within the territorial limits or jurisdiction of any State or Territory; but all such territory shall be excepted out of the boundaries and constitute no part of the Territory of Oklahoma until said tribe shall signify its assent to the President of the United States to be included in the said Territory of Oklahoma, except for judicial purposes as provided herein, or to affect the authority of the Government of the United States to make any regulation or enact any law respecting such Indians, their lands, property, or other rights, which it would have been competent to make or enact if this act had never passed.

That is the provision of the bill, and yet gentlemen stand here upon the floor of this House and denounce it as violative of the obligations of the Government to these people. It is said that we propose to take from them, by the strong arm of the Government, that which they possess; that we propose to strike down our treaty obligations and take from them, by force and without right, that which they lawfully own, and to give it to others, and yet the bill expressly provides that nothing of the kind shall be done. There has been no claim or argument advanced upon the floor of this House of that kind, and it is only idle, vehement declamation against the provisions of the bill to make such statements or accusations. Let the enemies of the proposed legislation tell us what Indians are sought to be wronged by the provisions of this bill; what is to be taken from them in violation of the rights they possess. Let them tell us who are to be despoiled; what tribe of Indians, what band, what individual, and what land is to be taken from them in violation of treaty obligations and without fair compensation?

Mr. WEAVER. They do not mention any individual or specific case.

Mr. PERKINS. Of course they do not, but as my friend from Iowa would suggest, they indulge in glittering generalities and deliver long homilies upon the wrongs of the "poor red men."

The bill, in my judgment, is carefully guarded in its provisions, and recognizes the legal and equitable claims of the Indians. As was suggested by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WARNER] in a speech made by him on this subject when the bill was last before the House for consideration, the people of the West really complain of the provisions of this bill. They complain that it does not go far enough—that it does not necessarily remove all barriers to the peaceful and lawful occupation of these lands. These people have waited long, and perhaps not at all times patiently, for this proposed legislation. They have seen these lands idle and not occupied or needed by the Indians. In fact, they have known that more than twenty years ago some of these lands were ceded to the Government of the United States for certain and specific purposes, that large sums of money were paid to the Indians for such lands; that they are not now needed by the Government for the purposes mentioned in the treaties; that they are to-day, and have been for years, largely occupied by cattle companies, under cattle leases, while settlers are excluded and driven from the lands.

Knowing this and believing that without wrong to any one these lands could be opened to white settlement, those people for whom I speak ask, not as speculators, not as "boomers," not as "lawless trespassers," but as honest, industrious settlers, and law-abiding American citizens, that the barriers be removed and that they be permitted to occupy these lands under the public-land laws of the United States and appropriate legislation of Congress. They do not ask that the Indians be wronged or that they be driven from the lands they occupy, but they ask that these vacant and unoccupied acres be given to them under appropriate legislation, and that the Indians be fairly paid for any claim, legal or equitable, they may have to the lands thus opened to white settlement.

As to the Public Land Strip, commonly called "No Man's Land," it is not claimed by any one that the Indians have any claim or title thereto. It is now occupied by settlers, but without courts or constituted authority. Pass this bill and it becomes a part of Oklahoma Territory, and the people will secure law and order for the protection of their persons and the opportunity of securing a title to their homes. This, with Oklahoma, the Cherokee Strip, and other lands embraced within the provisions of the bill, will give the new territory more than 23,000,000 acres, an area larger than New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Delaware combined, and we ask that fair legislation may be enacted that will open up this great domain to honest, industrious, and intelligent settlement.

I have not in the time given to me the opportunity of considering this important subject in detail as I would like, or to answer the criticisms of the enemies of the proposed legislation, but let us, as a practical body, legislating for a practical people, take a practical view of all these questions and do that which will secure justice and right, rather than follow a sentiment which continues conditions hurtful and baneful to all.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose to receive a message from the Senate, Mr. CULBERSON in the chair.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which concurrence was requested:

A bill (S. 1873) increasing the rate of pension of W. A. Shappee;
A bill (S. 1766) granting a pension to Stephen Butler;
A bill (S. 2050) granting a pension to Mrs. Bridget Hackett;
A bill (S. 2321) granting a pension to John V. Hennessey;
A bill (S. 2490) granting a pension to Nicholas T. Lawrence;
A bill (S. 2514) granting a pension to Michael Shong;
A bill (S. 2626) granting a pension to Catlena Lyman;
A bill (S. 2803) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Logan;
A bill (S. 2836) granting a pension to William E. Taylor;
A bill (S. 2858) granting a pension to William Church;
A bill (S. 2864) granting a pension to James B. Bray;
A bill (S. 2887) granting a pension to George H. Johnson;
A bill (S. 2913) granting a pension to Mary Sturgess;
A bill (S. 2924) to increase the pension of Sterne H. Fowler;

A bill (S. 2939) granting a pension to Margaret E. Adamson;
A bill (S. 2951) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary Morrison Elliott;
A bill (S. 1683) granting a pension to Mrs. Jane Flynn;
A bill (S. 2977) granting a pension to Henrietta Brown;
A bill (S. 3013) granting a pension to William Meyer;
A bill (S. 3018) granting an increase of pension to John N. Bovee;
A bill (S. 3030) granting a pension to Mary J. Foster;
A bill (S. 3035) granting a pension to William Shields;
A bill (S. 3052) granting an increase of pension to George W. Durfee;
A bill (S. 3059) granting a pension to Rachel Dixon, mother of James Dixon, deceased;
A bill (S. 3118) for the relief of Mathew O. Regan;
A bill (S. 3130) granting a pension to Patrick Welch;
A bill (S. 3137) granting a pension to Ruth Ames;
A bill (S. 3141) granting an increase of pension to Jonas Doering;
A bill (S. 3144) granting a pension to Nancy A. Hayes;
A bill (S. 3145) for the relief of the heirs of John M. Powell, deceased;
A bill (S. 3150) granting a pension to William Schoffer;
A bill (S. 3157) granting a pension to Joseph S. Wilson;
A bill (S. 3158) granting a pension to Nancy L. Huffman;
A bill (S. 3166) granting a pension to William F. Pike;
A bill (S. 3175) granting a pension to Mrs. Caroline Taylor;
A bill (S. 3186) granting a pension to Christian Winkel;
A bill (S. 3189) granting a pension to William T. Hutton;
A bill (S. 3179) granting a pension to Abbie L. Ham;
A bill (S. 3198) granting a pension to Mary Murphy;
A bill (S. 3200) granting a pension to Scott S. Hawn;
A bill (S. 3219) to increase the pension of Keyes P. Cool;
A bill (S. 3221) granting a pension to Isaac A. Hawkins;
A bill (S. 3230) granting a pension to Martha J. Cole;
A bill (S. 3241) granting a pension to Esther A. Jackson;
A bill (S. 3255) granting a pension to Mary E. Cotrill, widow of Hugh B. Cotrill;
A bill (S. 3264) granting a pension to Mrs. Ellen Hand;
A bill (S. 3266) granting a pension to Mrs. Adelaide H. Woodall;
A bill (S. 3309) for the relief of Mrs. Elizabeth E. Groff;
A bill (S. 3316) granting a pension to Jasper N. Warren;
A bill (S. 3330) for the relief of William H. Thomas; and
A bill (S. 3369) granting an increase of pension to Henry Frantz.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed a bill (H. R. 9910) with an amendment, with which concurrence was requested.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed without amendment House bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 24) for the relief of Eliza Russell;
A bill (H. R. 149) granting a pension to Rachel Barnes;
A bill (H. R. 154) restoring to the pension-roll the name of Cynthia J. Coulton;
A bill (H. R. 160) granting a pension to Elizabeth B. Sailer;
A bill (H. R. 185) granting a pension to Samuel F. C. Garrison;
A bill (H. R. 486) granting a pension to Lydia Calhoun;
A bill (H. R. 490) granting a pension to George W. Pitner;
A bill (H. R. 621) granting an increase of pension to William M. Whaley;
A bill (H. R. 737) granting a pension to Joseph Peve;
A bill (H. R. 817) granting a pension to Mary Foster;
A bill (H. R. 8881) granting a pension to Hiram R. Ellis;
A bill (H. R. 945) granting a pension to Mary Kelley;
A bill (H. R. 965) granting a pension to George E. Wells;
A bill (H. R. 2140) granting a pension to Eliza Smith;
A bill (H. R. 2233) granting a pension to Bernard Carlin;
A bill (H. R. 2531) granting a pension to Frederick W. Travis;
A bill (H. R. 2776) granting a pension to William Jack;
A bill (H. R. 3521) granting a pension to Emanuel Garcia;
A bill (H. R. 3764) for the relief of Mrs. Delilah Whipps;
A bill (H. R. 3913) granting a pension to Mrs. Catharine Peterson;
A bill (H. R. 3923) to place the name of Frederick Ronicke on the pension-roll;
A bill (H. R. 4069) granting an increase of pension to Elnathan Meade;
A bill (H. R. 4098) granting a pension to Eliza Trefren;
A bill (H. R. 4270) granting a pension to William C. Tilly;
A bill (H. R. 4785) granting a pension to Rosanna K. Griffin;
A bill (H. R. 5383) granting a pension to George W. Flowers;
A bill (H. R. 5443) granting a pension to Isaac N. Johnson;
A bill (H. R. 5490) granting a pension to Mrs. Catharine Sinnott;
A bill (H. R. 6193) for the relief of Edson Saxberry;
A bill (H. R. 6220) granting a pension to John Taaffe;
A bill (H. R. 6307) granting a pension to Sarah A. Corson;
A bill (H. R. 6764) to grant a pension to Muck-a-pec-wak-keu-zah, or "John," an Indian who aided in saving the lives of many white people in the Indian outbreak in Minnesota in the year 1862;
A bill (H. R. 7093) granting an increase of pension to John A. Rolf;
A bill (H. R. 7111) granting a pension to Caroline Pautel;
A bill (H. R. 7160) granting an increase of pension to A. W. Rose;
A bill (H. R. 7162) for the relief of Mary Nevels;
A bill (H. R. 7202) granting a pension to William C. Lord;
A bill (H. R. 7253) granting a pension to the widow of Samuel Clary;
A bill (H. R. 7510) granting a pension to Stephen A. Seavey;
A bill (H. R. 7624) for the relief of Coburn D. Outten;
A bill (H. R. 7713) granting a pension to James McIntyre;
A bill (H. R. 8075) granting a pension to Ann M. Arnold, widow of John Arnold;
A bill (H. R. 8150) for the relief of John H. Claus;
A bill (H. R. 8256) granting a pension to George W. Croop;
A bill (H. R. 8423) for the relief of William H. Porter;
A bill (H. R. 8428) granting a pension to James T. Bourland;
A bill (H. R. 8460) to place the name of John J. Mitchell on the pension-roll;
A bill (H. R. 8523) granting a pension to Susan F. Scott;
A bill (H. R. 8574) granting a pension to Sallie T. Ward, widow of the late W. T. Ward;
A bill (H. R. 8677) granting a pension to Mary E. Farren;
A bill (H. R. 8761) granting a pension to Mrs. Anna Butterfield;
A bill (H. R. 8794) granting a pension to Levi Little;
A bill (H. R. 8953) granting a pension to Eliza Mathews;
A bill (H. R. 8988) to increase the pension of Mrs. Minerva Eagle;
A bill (H. R. 9029) for the relief of Marshall Burtrum;
A bill (H. R. 9034) granting a pension to Lydia A. Heiny;
A bill (H. R. 9119) granting a pension to George C. Chase;
A bill (H. R. 9126) granting a pension to Mrs. Caroline G. Seyfforth;
A bill (H. R. 9183) granting a pension to William P. Riddle;
A bill (H. R. 9314) granting a pension to Mrs. Judith Deig;
A bill (H. R. 9318) granting an increase of pension to Charles Jewett;
A bill (H. R. 9344) granting a pension to James C. White;
A bill (H. R. 9467) granting a pension to William M. Dicken;
A bill (H. R. 9540) granting a pension to Martha J. Rushford, widow of John Rushford;
A bill (H. R. 9595) granting a pension to David A. Yeaw;
A bill (H. R. 9729) granting a pension to Malinda Hardin;
A bill (H. R. 9731) granting a pension to William A. Humes;
A bill (H. R. 9732) granting a pension to Sarah Riddle;
A bill (H. R. 9733) granting a pension to Ralph P. Wilborn;
A bill (H. R. 9808) granting an increase of pension to Rebecca Manlove;
A bill (H. R. 9878) granting a pension to Moses T. Coffey;
A bill (H. R. 9894) granting a pension to Myron Teachout;
A bill (H. R. 9911) granting a pension to Mrs. Maria Hulse;
A bill (H. R. 9920) granting a pension to Daniel K. Harris;
A bill (H. R. 10244) granting a pension to Mrs. Betsy Lockwood;
A bill (H. R. 10318) granting a pension to Mary C. Davis;
A bill (H. R. 10334) to grant a pension to Elizabeth O'Laughlin, the helpless and invalid daughter of Dennis O'Laughlin, late a member of Company I, Ninth Minnesota Volunteer Infantry; and A bill (H. R. 10579) to place the name of Samuel Massey on the pension-roll.

TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA.

The committee resumed its session, Mr. DOCKERY in the chair.

Mr. SYMES. I yield five minutes of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. WHITE, of New York. In discussing this question I do so from the standpoint of the East. I desire to say that I think the best thought there is in favor of the common-sense treatment of the nomadic race of this country who are the wards of the nation.

This bill undertakes to organize into a territory a large and valuable tract of land which is now the home of outcasts and lawless people, and to give the benefits of law to those people and open up to civilization and the wealth which springs from well-directed industry this large and fertile region. If the bill involved bad faith towards any Indian tribe then I should be against it, because it is the duty of the strong to protect the weak.

I have no sympathy with the idea that when a patent was granted for what is called the Cherokee Outlet under President Van Buren, the United States did not pass away their title to that land. The Government did pass away the title, but they passed it away to a contracting power which had and has authority to re-cede those lands to the United States for a valuable consideration. Such action, I believe, was taken by the Cherokee Nation while Mr. Kirkwood was Secretary of the Interior, and in that way those Indians placed themselves fairly and squarely in the attitude of a high contracting power demanding the specific performance of a contract which they then believed to be beneficial to themselves. Such being the case, and this act going much further in their behalf than they asked, and as they are spoken of as "the five civilized nations," I believe they should be treated as a civilized people and as capable of selling back to this Government the lands to which they had acquired title under the grant made during the administration of President Van Buren.

In addition to this, the bill most carefully guards their rights and does not permit this territory to be taken from them or from any of the other Indian tribes located upon these lands without a proper cession and consent on the part of the Indians. Now, as sensible people, dealing with this question as a business matter, what is it our duty to do? Shall we forever set apart these lands to be the home of the lawless, without government and without protection for honest toil, or shall we open them up, as we have done with all the other portions of this country that have been opened up, in the interests of civilization and for the real betterment of the Indians themselves if they will but accept the advantages which will be accorded to them by the civilization which we offer? I believe that it is the part of true wisdom, the part of the true humanitarian, to pass laws which shall organize these lands into a territory with a proper form of government and give to it the benefits of law and of civilization—all the benefits which accrue as the reward of civilized industry. [Applause.]

Mr. SYMES. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL].

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Chairman, other engagements have prevented me from hearing all the arguments that have been presented against this bill. In the few minutes allowed me I desire to call attention to the provisions of the bill which apply to the Oklahoma strip and the Cherokee Outlet, because I am satisfied that many gentlemen in this House do not understand the true status of those lands. Under treaty the Government of the United States purchased from the Creek and Seminole Indians what is known as Oklahoma. The cession of that land was made to the United States, and it is in the possession of the United States to-day. They purchased it for a specific purpose at a nominal price. That purpose was to settle other friendly Indians and freedmen upon it. The Government long since determined that it would not put any more Indians upon that land, and now the question arises, what shall we do with it?

The Indians have parted with possession, so they can not control it, and unless we carry out the contract specifically we can not control it, and it is lying there idle to-day. The Cherokee Outlet contains about 6,000,000 acres, purchased for the same purpose, to be paid for as we utilize it for that specific purpose. Now, I defy any gentleman who is opposing this bill to find a single provision in it which proposes to take one foot or one inch of the Indian lands, either those that they hold an encumbered title to or those standing in the condition I have described, without their consent. If I understand this bill, it simply presents this proposition: That if the Indians will consent to it, the Government will take a perfect title to Oklahoma and the Cherokee Outlet at $1.25 per acre, but if the Indians do not consent, the transaction can not be perfected. The 6,000,000 acres contained in the Cherokee Outlet would bring at that price $7,500,000. Four per cent. interest on that would make $300,000 annually for those Indians. If they find that to be a better business transaction for them than to take the chance of leasing those lands for whatever they can get, why should they not agree to it?

That is the true status of these lands. When the attention of the Indians has been called to the liberal provisions of this bill, if they see proper to accept them, the measure will be perfected, and certainly no harm will be done to them. The other provisions of the bill, applying to the five civilized tribes, will not take effect over them without their consent.

Mr. SPRINGER. The bill does not apply to them at all.

Mr. PEEL. I am informed by the chairman of the committee that the bill does not apply to them.

Mr. SPRINGER. The bill of the last Congress did, but this does not.

Mr. PEEL. Now, I know it is a very easy matter for gentlemen who live east of the Mississippi River, who know the Indian only from history, to imagine that every move towards civilization in the Indian country means robbery. Those who live in the West and come into daily contact with the Indians know from constant experience that it is as impossible for their present status to remain as to stop the moon in its orbit. It can not be done. The question therefore presents itself to every practical mind, what is it best to do?

This must be treated as a plain, practical question. You propose in this bill to present to the Indians fair and liberal terms. If these terms be accepted the condition of the Indians will be benefited. The individual protection of the law will be placed over them, and the shotgun government which now reigns in that country will be brought to an end. Why, sir, it is a fact well known to every man living near the Indian country, and the newspapers bring us all intelligence of it, that under the execution of the law, as we undertake to execute it in that country, murders and other grave crimes are constantly committed. For offenses committed by them, Indians are hanged by the Federal court at Fort Smith by the dozen; and unless a dozen be hanged at once the matter hardly attracts attention. I would like gentlemen east of the Mississippi to take home to themselves the question whether such a state of things as that is desirable in a civilized land—whether such a condition of society and an execution of the law, attended with such fatal results, is a state of affairs which should be perpetuated?

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. COBB. I would like to be heard on this question.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] had eighteen minutes of his time remaining. I suppose there will be no objection to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. COBB] occupying that time now.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. COBB] to occupy the eighteen minutes belonging to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. COBB. Mr. Chairman, while I am decidedly opposed to this bill, I did not expect to enter into any argument upon it, and I do not propose now to go into any extensive discussion of the questions which have been thus far debated. It seems to me that in the eloquent, pathetic, poetical, and touching address of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. STOCKDALE], backed as it has been by the argument of my friend from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL], we have the "true inwardness" of this whole measure; and it will be observed that however gentlemen may start out in the argument of this bill with the declared purpose of presenting the legal features of it, they soon branch off into a discussion of the enormities which are being committed in this territory, and wind up by saying that because of these things this bill ought to pass. The effect of the whole argument, when reduced to its last analysis, is simply this—that the Indian has no right which the white man is bound to respect.

Perhaps there are none of us who would not readily agree that something out to be done for the relief of the Western country, if indeed it be true that the outrages detailed here are being constantly committed there. But surely the wisdom of the American Congress can provide a measure which will accomplish all the purposes desired, which will secure the peace and protection which these people demand, in some other way than by the deliberate violation of solemn treaties. The effort is made here to show us that no treaty is violated, that the rights of these Indians are to be protected; but the merest scrutiny of the bill discloses the fact, whether it appears upon the face of its provisions or not, that the ultimate result intended to be accomplished, and which will be effected if the bill passes, is to seize possession of this country, whether the Indians desire to part with it or not, and in utter disregard of any protest on their part, in utter disregard of the violation of any of their existing rights.

Some obscurity is thrown over the legal aspects of this question by gentlemen who are advocating the passage of this bill. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS], who sits before me, spoke as though the Cherokee Nation had ceded to the Government of the United States the lands embraced in this territory of the Cherokee Strip. Why, Mr. Chairman, if you will look into the treaty stipulations between this people and the Government, entered into as late as 1866, you will find it to be true that not one acre of the Cherokee Strip was ever ceded by hese Chero kee people to the United States.

The treaty does not cede an acre. It is only an agreement entered into between the Government and these people, that upon the happening of a certain contingency certain portions of land will be ceded. It is an agreement to cede and not a cession itself.

Let me read a portion of that treaty.

Mr. SPRINGER. That is conceded; that is not disputed.

Mr. COBB. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] says that is not disputed, and yet the argument on the part of other gentlemen who are not as well informed in reference to the law as the chairman of the committee has proceeded upon the idea that this land was ceded by the Cherokees to the United States. The treaty only provides that on the happening of a certain event, that is to say, when the Government of the United States desires to locate certain friendly Indians on this territory, then the Cherokees shall cede to the United States such lands as may be necessary for that purpose.

The sixteenth article of the treaty of 1866 with the Cherokees is as follows:

The United States may settle friendly Indians in any part of the Cherokee country west of 96°, to be taken in a compact form in quantity not exceeding 160 acres for each member of each of said tribes thus to be settled; the boundaries of each of said districts to be distinctly marked, and the land conveyed in fee-simple to each of said tribes to be held in common or by their members in severalty, as the United States may decide.

Said lands thus disposed of to be paid for to the Cherokee Nation at such price as may be agreed on between said parties in interest, subject to the approval of the President; and if they should not agree, then the price to be fixed by the President.

The Cherokee Nation to retain the right of possession of and jurisdiction over all of said country west of 96° of longitude until thus sold and occupied, after which—

And I will interpolate only "after which"— their jurisdiction and right of possession to terminate forever as to each of said districts thus sold and occupied.

Mr. WARNER. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. COBB. Certainly.

Mr. WARNER. The gentleman from Alabama is not unfamiliar with the law of 1872 under which commissioners were sent to this Territory in order to appraise the land. He is not unfamiliar with the demand made for the payment of the land or with the fact that these Indians were paid $600,000 as an entirety upon the presumption——

Mr. COBB. Is there any law directing this to be done?

Mr. SYMES. There is.

Mr. COBB. What law?

Mr. SYMES. The act of 1872.

Mr. COBB. I should like to know the provision of law to which reference is made.

Mr. SYMES. Pardon me. It would take a long time to go over the whole matter, but if the gentleman from Alabama will go with me to the Library I will take pleasure in pointing out to him when and where these lands were ceded by the Indians to the Government of the United States.

Mr. COBB. How does it happen that the distinguished chairman of the committee on my left [Mr. SPRINGER] directly admits my statements to be true, that these lands were never ceded on the part of these Indians to the United States?

Mr. WARNER. The gentleman will pardon me. Let us get our statements correct. I said the law was passed in 1872 providing for the appraisement of this land subject to the approval of the President. This land was appraised at 49 and 47, and then a portion was raised by the President to 70 cents an acre, so that the Indians were paid $300,000 in round numbers. Thereafter they complained the Government had located friendly Indians upon the western or least valuable portion of the land, and the Secretary of the Interior paid $300,000 for land on which no Indians had ever been located. The Indians then asked the Interior Department to pay them $3,000,000 for the entire land, according to the appraisement which had been made.

Mr. COBB. Under what authority was the appraisement made?

Mr. SYMES. If the gentleman will pardon me, I wish to make a suggestion as to the statement which he attributes to the chairman of the committee. Will he yield for that purpose?

Mr. COBB. Certainly.

Mr. SYMES. As I understand the matter the chairman of the committee has not taken the position this land was never agreed to be ceded by the Cherokee Indians to the Government. If A contract to sell to B a tract of land and the agreement remains unexecuted with but a few things to be done before the title passes from the grantor to the grantee——

Mr. COBB (interrupting). You mean that was the case under the treaty.

Mr. SYMES. That is the case under the treaty and under the acts of Congress, and under the positions taken by the Indians themselves by their agents and attorneys, and as was argued by them when they asked for pay for the lands in accordance with the wishes of the Indians.

Mr. COBB. Now, I will accept the gentleman's statement, and meet him face to face, and discuss it as a legal proposition. He says that under the treaty of 1866 there was a conveyance made to the Government of the United States by these Indians.

Mr. SYMES. No, I did not say there had been a conveyance made. I said that there was an agreement to cede the lands, and that the act of Congress was afterwards passed to carry out the treaty agreement for the cession. That is the position. They went on and made an agreement as to price, the President appraised the lands according to the act of Congress and the agreement with the Indians, and the Indians accepted that appraisement and then came here asking for their pay. And they contended before the committees of the Senate that the Government had bought the lands; that it owned them and was in possession, and if there had been a court of justice——

Mr. COBB. Now, I have but a few minutes.

Mr. CUTCHEON. It was a mere executory contract.

Mr. COBB. I must decline to yield further; I understand the point.

Mr. SYMES. I have taken a little advantage of the time of the gentleman, and as I have some of my own time remaining I desire to yield to him two minutes to compensate for what I have occupied.

Mr. COBB. I may not need it.

Let us see now what is the argument. Here was the solemn treaty of 1866 between the Government of the United States and the Cherokee Nation of Indians. If there is any statute, law, or treaty, or contract of any kind doing away with or annulling the provisions of this treaty, the gentleman does not furnish it. Now, I stand upon the treaty stipulations, and I appeal to every lawyer in this House to say if my statement is not correct, that this treaty provides nothing in the world except an agreement to convey upon the happening of certain contingencies.

Mr. SYMES. That was my position. But I will say that the contingency has happened.

Mr. COBB. Then you need not have taken up so much of my time. The conditions upon which this conveyance was to take place have never happened, and inasmuch as the conditions have never happened there has been no recession of the lands from the Cherokee Nation to the Government of the United States.

The sixteenth article of this treaty provides:

> The United States may settle friendly Indians in any part of the Cherokee country west of 96°, to be taken in a compact form in quantity not exceeding 160 acres for each member of each of said tribes thus to be settled; the boundaries of each of said districts to be distinctly marked, and the land conveyed in fee-simple to each of said tribes, to be held in common or by their members in severalty, as the United States may decide.
>
> Said lands thus disposed of to be paid for to the Cherokee Nation at such price as may be agreed on between said parties in interest, subject to the approval of the President; and if they should not agree, then the price to be fixed by the President.
>
> The Cherokee Nation to retain the right of possession of and jurisdiction over all of said country west of 96° of longitude until thus sold and occupied, after which their jurisdiction and right of possession to terminate forever as to each of said districts thus sold and occupied.

Now, this is in full force to-day; and what does it mean? Not that this whole country was to be ceded by the Cherokees to the Government. There is no contemplation of such a thing, unless it should be needed by the Government to settle thereon the friendly tribes. But acre by acre, piece by piece, section after section, as might be needed to be occupied by the friendly tribes, the cession was to take place from the Indians to the Government of the United States, and all the remaining lands after these several acts of cession by the Cherokees were to remain in their possession and within their jurisdiction. Does this bill carry out that idea? You now place on this law, plainly written as it is, a very different construction. Gentlemen talk of the Indians having no right over the lands. They talk about the cattle syndicates coming in and renting the lands. Here is the law, to which I call your attention, giving them the right, and it is in force to-day and has been since the treaty of 1886, and even before, because this treaty is but the reaffirmation of all of the treaties of a similar character which preceded it.

Now, Mr. Chairman, is there no right invaded here when you propose to organize a Territory over this very land that is held, that is owned and possessed by these Indians, under your own treaty?

Mr. SYMES. Will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. COBB. Yes, sir.

Mr. SYMES. Does the gentleman not know that the bill under discussion expressly provides that this Territorial government shall not be extended over this land until after the commission provided for shall treat with the Indians in the usual way?

Mr. COBB. In the usual way; yes. [Laughter.]

Mr. SYMES. Shall treat with the Indians to carry it into effect in the usual way.

Mr. COBB. I say in the "usual way."

Mr. SYMES. Well, does the gentleman deny that? Is there anything in the bill providing for the extension of this territorial provision over this land until the commission provided for has treated with the Indians?

Mr. COBB. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. STOCKDALE] in his eloquent remarks has told us what "the usual way" is.

Mr. STRUBLE. The American way, of course.

Mr. COBB. Yes; the American way, "the usual way," the way of Daniel Boone and others mentioned by the gentleman from Mississippi. We all heard the gentleman's speech. We have not had a more eloquent display here this Congress. He told us all about the beautiful front of the Capitol, and what was there represented; he told us about the white man having his rifle in one hand and his ax in the other, driving the Indian before him, and he told us also about the God-given right of the "pale-face" to go with his rifle and his ax wherever he chose, and that no Indian must stand in his way. That is what the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. STOCKDALE] told us, and that, my friend, is "the usual way." [Laughter.]

There is another part of this Territory that I want to refer to specifically, and that is Oklahoma proper. Let us look at that a little, and see about the title to it. That part of this Territory comes from the Creeks, and comes, I admit, under stipulations somewhat different from those that were made with the Cherokees, giving, perhaps, a little stronger title. I agree to that; but what are the facts in regard to the acquisition of that land? In the stipulations which were made between the Creeks and the Government of the United States the Creeks said to this Government: "We will cede to you this land at the nominal price of 30 cents per acre." Now, Mr. Chairman, we have had some descriptions of that country here, and they have been rather glowing. These Western gentlemen, I know, believe that a man who lives on the east side of the Mississippi has not much sense anyhow [laughter], and when it comes to the Indian question they feel certain that his views are all "sentiment" and "gush" and "nonsense."

Mr. PETERS. No. But we know that you unloaded your Indians onto us.

Mr. COBB. Unloaded them on the gentleman from Kansas! Who was there first, he or the Indians? [Laughter.]

Mr. PETERS. Who was in your country first, you or the Indians? [Laughter.]

Mr. COBB. Did we unload the Indians on the gentleman, or did he unload himself on the Indians? [Laughter.] Sir, the fathers of the gentleman from Kansas, and all of our fathers, in days gone by wanted the lands which these red men had east of the Mississippi, and they said to them, "we want these lands; we will make a contract with you for them; but if you will not make a contract with us for the lands, we will take them under a contract made in the usual way." [Laughter.] That is about what they said, and what they did.

Mr. WEAVER. Which do you indorse, your ancestors or the Indians. [Laughter.]

Mr. COBB. I am talking about the rights of the Indians now, and I believe that "the usual way" of dealing with them ought to stop.

Mr. WARNER. That is the objection to this bill, that we do not go at this business in "the usual way."

Mr. COBB. I hope this will not all come out of my time.

Mr. PETERS. It is "the usual way" for it to come out of the gentleman's time. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. It can not come out of the gentleman's time, because his time has expired. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. COBB. I should like to have about fifteen minutes more.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. COBB] be allowed fifteen minutes' additional time.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. COBB. I did not expect, when I rose, to make a speech on this subject, but "the usual way" was put at me so forcibly that I have felt called upon to say a few words in reply.

Mr. SYMES. I can well believe that the gentleman did not expect to argue this case, because if he had expected that he would have known the facts of the matter.

Mr. COBB. I am much obliged to the gentleman. I have got the treaty here, and I stand pretty squarely upon that.

Mr. SYMES. That is what we have been carrying out for twenty-five years.

Mr. COBB. That is what I want you to continue to do. I stand by the treaty. You do not. Now, Mr. Chairman, we all remember that when we were at school the maps showed a vast extent of country in the West which was described as the "Great American Desert," and we thought it was a vast arid region covered with sand-hills, something akin to the Great Sahara of Africa. That is what our people generally thought that western country was, and they thought that if they got the Indians off there they would be rid of them; so they "unloaded" the Indians, not upon the people of Kansas, as the gentleman [Mr. PETERS] says, but, as our fathers thought, upon the sandy plains of the great Western desert. I do not suppose that the Government of the United States intended to do quite as well by those Indians as they actually did.

Not anticipating the early settlement of our extreme Western country, Oregon and Washington and California: not foreseeing that civilization would go there, and would come back across the continent to meet the civilization of the East, and thus inclose these Indian tribes between the two—not foreseeing these great results, they put into their treaties the provision that the Indians should have those lands as far west as the jurisdiction of the United States should extend, and that provision was put into every treaty made with the Indians up to the last.

But, Mr. Chairman, I have been diverted a little from the line of my argument. I was talking about lands that were ceded from the Creeks to the Government of the United States. What are the circumstances in regard to that cession? I said just now that we had been entertained here to-day with a beautiful description of the fertility of this land, of its great value as an agricultural country, and the great indications of future growth which it contained. Now, the Government of the United States paid 30 cents an acre for that land, and why was it that the Indians sold it at that nominal price?

These Indians are not fools; they are not savages; they are civilized Indians; they have a government of their own, with judicial, executive, and legislative departments. They are a self-governing people; they are civilized and know the value of a dollar.

Now, they ceded this land for a purpose; and my contention is that the Government of the United States, by the terms of this contract, pledged itself that this land should be used for this purpose and this alone. Are we to keep our pledged faith or not? For the whole argument comes to that at last. If you take the argument of my friend from Mississippi [Mr. STOCKDALE], if you take the argument of my friend from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL], if you take the glowing periods of my eloquent friend from Kansas [Mr. PETERS], who tells us about this unloading business; if you take the assertions of my friend from Colorado [Mr. SYMES], who tells us about making treaties "in the usual way;" if you take the assertions of these gentlemen in regard to this matter and follow them to their legitimate conclusion, the argument in regard to the plighted faith of the Government is ended; such a little thing as the plighted faith of the Government is not to stand in the way of the advancing civilization of the white man! That is the argument, and the whole of it.

Now, in spite of the pledged faith of the Government in reference to this land thus taken from these Creeks, not purchased for its value, ceded by these Creeks in order that their friends and relatives should have a home, the purpose now is to divert this grant from the original purpose and to make use of it for the utter extinguishment of the people who made the cession.

Mr. Chairman, I have not time to go into this question minutely. There are many things I might say, but gentlemen are impatient. The point I wish to impress upon this committee is that this bill can not become a law without violating the faith of the Government pledged to these Indians. Admitting everything that has been said as to the lawlessness prevailing in the region under consideration, admitting everything that is urged as to the necessity of a strong hand being used there for the purpose of protecting peaceful citizens, I say such considerations do not warrant the doing of an act of injustice, do not justify this great Government in violating its pledged faith; for there is a way in which protection can be secured without any objectionable measure of this kind. Therefore for one I protest against the passage of this bill.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SYMES. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, in a former Congress I had occasion to submit, somewhat at length, my views touching this question. I can not now do more in five minutes than say that after a somewhat careful examination of this bill I shall very cheerfully vote for it, not only on account of the white man, but on account of the Indian as well.

I agree with the gentleman that our policy toward the Indian has been in the centuries past short-sighted and sometimes cruel. We are still in some instances continuing that policy; but the country is desirous of pursuing and is tending towards a better policy. I believe that it is the height of cruelty to keep the Indians together in the tribal relation. It is a barbarous relation. I believe that as we have to make contracts for ourselves and at the same time practically for the Indians, that statesmanship, that humanity dictates we should take the Indians and put them under a government of law.

Heretofore it has been the policy of the Government to place the Indians on reservations and prohibit the white man from going upon or settling on the reservation under severe penalty. The result has been that the great body of white men obey the law and the Indian is thereby cut off from the association and example of good white men, while the bad white man breaks the law, enters the reservation, and debauches the Indian.

More than this; it is our duty to extinguish the Indian title to the lands occupied by them, selling the lands to settlers or purchasing them for what they are worth, put the proceeds into the Treasury and use the interest thereon for the benefit of the Indians, at the same time assigning to each head of a family, under proper guards as to alienation, lands in severalty, and let the white people in to settle with them—a hundred white families, if you please, more or less, to one Indian family.

The white man takes his civilization with him, builds churches and school-houses and develops the country, and the Indian with such surroundings, protected by and amenable to law, will work out his own salvation. His trust fund will assist him at the beginning, at least will enable him to bear the burdens of government pending his development.

We have for years been educating Indian children at Carlisle and other schools off the reservations. They make splendid progress, and when among white people work, and would make good citizens if they could remain with the white people, but the moment they return to their respective tribes and fail of employment by the Government they drop back into barbarism.

I am for this bill, because it tends in the right direction. It places law and government over "No Man's Land," and places the machinery in motion that will place government and law over the greater portion of the Indian Territory, and to the benefit of both Indian and white man.

But gentlemen say that we violate treaties. If that is a violation of treaty, then we have violated treaties from the very first day we settled on this continent. If we have violated treaties they have been violated from necessity, and we are subject to criticism, not for settling the country, but for permitting, yes, forcing the Indian to continue the tribal relation. We now have an opportunity to settle the Indian question by pursuing a policy that will destroy the tribal relation.

Take the Great Sioux reservation. We violated the treaty in the same way. The title of the Indians to the lands in the Indian Territory is no higher than the title of the Siouxs to their reservation. Their rights are no more sacred. That magnificent extent of territory west of the Missouri River is a barrier in the way of civilization. We passed an act in the House and in the Senate authorizing a treaty with the Indians for the extinguishment of their title to the larger part of the Sioux reservation. It is for the benefit of the Indians as well as for the benefit of the white men that this should be done, and it will be done. It will tend to bring these Indians into closer contact with the better elements of our people instead of allowing them to remain under the evil influence of bad white men with whom they come now chiefly into contact.

Mr. HOOKER. What about the patents which these Indians hold from the Government of the United States for these lands?

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman from Mississippi lays great stress upon the fact that the Government of the United States, in pursuance of treaty, has made a patent for these lands to the Indians. Now, when the gentleman talks about a piece of paper which he calls a patent, let me tell him that it is of no greater force or validity than the solemn act of legislation on the part of the Congress. [Applause.] Certainly there can be no higher title to land than the solemn grant of the Congress of the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. RYAN. It is the highest possible title.

Mr. CANNON. I wish to say further, that I wish every member of this Congress could go out and look at these lands and see the condition of the Indians. I would like to have them informed of the facts just as they are.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. CANNON. Just permit me a sentence more. If this bill is enacted into law we enter upon a policy that will protect and benefit the Indians, and at the same time benefit the white settler who desires a home. It will in the near future drive off from the Cherokee Outlet the cattle syndicates now there in defiance of law, and those permitted to remain in exclusive possession, while the individual who only wants a modest home is kept off at the point of Federal bayonets. It will remove the evil influence of these cattle syndicates that corrupt the Indian councils in procuring unlawful leases of Indian lands [applause], and are strong enough to stay the hand of the Executive in the enforcement of the law in their removal, strong enough to exercise great influence in opposition to any legislation that looks towards the settlement of any lands in the Indian Territory. [Applause.]

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire, if possible, to come to some agreement with the committee in regard to the general debate upon the bill.

Mr. PAYSON. Why not close it now? [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. SPRINGER. I am ready to vote, and hope we will be able to come to a vote at once on the different sections of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. What proposition does the gentleman make?

Mr. SPRINGER. I have no proposition to make except to vote upon the amendments now pending.

Mr. PAYSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PAYSON. Would it now be in order to proceed to the consideration of the bill by sections?

The CHAIRMAN. It will be in order when the general debate is closed.

Mr. PAYSON. Then I make that request.

Mr. FINLEY. I object.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move that the committee now rise with a view to limiting debate.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. DOCKERY reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 10614, had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found duly enrolled a bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same, namely:

A bill (H. R. 9859) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message from the President, by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had approved and signed on the 24th instant bills of the following titles:

An act (H. R. 7749) to authorize the building of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Wabasha, Minn.; and

An act (H. R. 9345) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889.

The message also announced that the President on the 25th instant had approved and signed a bill and joint resolution of the following titles:

An act (H. R. 5064) to construct a road to the national cemetery at Baton Rouge, La.; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 195) electing managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, to fill vacancies caused by the expiration of the terms of office of members of the present board of managers on the 21st day of April, 1888.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Oklahoma bill; and pending that motion that all general debate be closed in one minute. I further ask unanimous consent that any gentlemen who desire to do so may be permitted to print remarks in the RECORD upon the bill.

Mr. FINLEY, Mr. HOOKER, and others objected.

Mr. HOOKER. I have no objection to gentlemen printing remarks if they desire to.

Mr. SPRINGER. Then I ask unanimous consent that gentlemen be permitted to print on this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. FINLEY. I have no objection to that.

There was no objection.

Mr. SPRINGER. I now move that all general debate upon the bill in Committee of the Whole be closed in one minute; and on that motion I demand the previous question.

The previous question was ordered, under the operation of which the motion of Mr. SPRINGER was agreed to.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union to further consider the Oklahoma bill.

The motion was agreed to.

PROPOSED TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. DOCKERY in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. By order of the House, all general debate on this bill is limited to one minute.

Mr. SPRINGER. I simply desire to occupy that time in stating that this bill will now be read by sections under the five-minute rule. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNES] has moved a substitute for the whole bill. If there be no objection, I would like to have a vote on the substitute now, as I understand the gentleman from Indiana desires if that be rejected, to offer another substitute for the bill.

Mr. PAYSON. I object to that.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the first section of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all that part of the United States included within the following limits, except such portions thereof as are hereinafter expressly exempted from the operations of this act, to wit: Bounded on the west by the State of Texas and the Territory of New Mexico; on the north by the State of Colorado and the State of Kansas; on the east by the reservation occupied by the Cherokee tribe of Indians east of the ninety-sixth meridian of west longitude, and by the Creek, Seminole, and Chickasaw reservations; and on the south by the Creek, Seminole, and Chickasaw reservations, and by the State of Texas, comprising what is known as the Public Land Strip, and all that part of the Indian Territory not actually occupied by the five civilized tribes, is created into a temporary government by the name of the Territory of Oklahoma: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to impair the rights of person or property, or to impair any patent to or right of occupancy of lands now pertaining to the Indians in said Territory under the laws and treaties of the United States, executive order, or otherwise, or to include any territory occupied by any Indian tribe for which title has been conveyed by patent or otherwise from the United States, or to which such tribe may be entitled by law, executive order, right of occupancy, or treaty, without the consent of said tribe, or any territory which by treaty or agreement with any Indian tribe is not, without the consent of said tribe, to be included within the territorial limits or jurisdiction of any State or Territory; but all such territory shall be excepted out of the boundaries and constitute no part of the Territory of Oklahoma until said tribe shall signify its assent to the President of the United States to be included in the said Territory of Oklahoma, except for judicial purposes as provided herein, or to affect the authority of the Government of the United States to make any regulation or enact any law respecting such Indians, their lands, property, or other rights, which it would have been competent to make or enact if this act had never passed.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I move to amend the first section by inserting at the end of it what I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That nothing contained in this act relating to the boundaries of said Territory of Oklahoma shall be construed to affect the rights of persons or property now pertaining to the Indians in said Territory, so long as such rights shall remain unextinguished by agreement between the United States and such Indians, or to include any part of the territory of the Indian Territory, without the consent of all the tribes established by treaty or law within the same; but all such territory shall be excepted out of the boundaries and constitute no part of the Territory of Oklahoma until all of said tribes shall signify their assent to the President of the United States that it be included within said Territory, or to affect the authority of Congress to make any regulations respecting such Indians, their lands, property, or other rights, by agreement, law, or otherwise; but all such authority is directly reserved to Congress. The consent hereinbefore mentioned, when given by a tribe having an organized civil government, shall be given by the proper constituted authorities thereof, and where given by a tribe without such organized civil government shall be by the assent of not less than two-thirds of its male members over twenty-one years of age.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. This amendment is intended to make explicit that provision of the bill which it is claimed already exists in the act affecting these lands—that is, in regard to the consent to be obtained of the Indians before this act shall extend over the territory not now intended to be affected by the bill.

It is for the purpose of requiring not only the consent of one tribe, but all of the tribes before the bill shall affect the lands outside of the present bounds of the territory now occupied by the five semi-civilized tribes or any one of them. It also provides for the manner in which that consent shall be obtained.

It seems to me that it is a proper provision to incorporate, for the reason that every one of the five tribes has a right and interest in and over the lands proposed ultimately to be affected by this bill. Hence it would be unjust to proceed under the bill, or to assert any authority for the extension of the Territorial jurisdiction or limits until the consent of all the tribes will be first obtained in the manner explicitly stated.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that this amendment is to come in after line 37.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. It is an amendment to be added to the first section.

The CHAIRMAN. That is the last line of the first section.

Mr. STRUBLE. I desire to oppose this amendment. It is evident that if my friend from New York had not heretofore signalized his opposition to this bill the reading of this amendment would indicate that opposition quite fairly. Now, unless I mistake the scope of the amendment it not only provides for the consent of the so-called civilized tribes, but it goes so far as to declare that the consent of every tribe located within this territory shall be required before anything can be done under this bill. I think it is going too far. So far as the civilized Indians are concerned, I have no objection to it, but when the proposition goes to the extent this does, requiring the assent of two-thirds of all the Indians there, I insist that the result is too far reaching, and hope it will be voted down.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope it will be voted down, for it will enable the Kiowas, of whom there are about eighty-nine, to prevent anything being done towards the purchase of the land.

Mr. HOOKER. It is very evident that there must be some method provided by which the consent of these Indians shall be obtained, and I do not see why the suggestion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] should not apply to any of the various tribes who are associated on this land. But the gravamen of the amendment of the gentleman from New York is this: That it shall require assent by a two-thirds vote of the five semi-civilized tribes of Indians before this territorial government shall exist. They have the right, according to what the gentleman from Illinois says in his bill, to determine whether or not they will allow this territorial government to be created, and they certainly have that right under the authorities and under the patents.

You can not create a territorial government first under this bill and then turn round and get the assent of the Indians. It ought to be had as a condition precedent. That is required by every principle of equity and justice. The proposition of the gentleman from New York is that that assent shall be obtained, not in any doubtful, vague, or uncertain way, but by a two-thirds vote of all the people interested in this matter. If you were going to establish a government or any particular branch of the government you would not establish it against the wishes of the people there. Here you are taking the land, and you are establishing a territorial government without the consent of the people who own it, who bought it, and who have the right to own it; and it ought to be required that their assent should be obtained in some manner known to law.

Now, the proposition would be to appoint a commission to go out and get the assent of these Indians. We all know how that has worked in other matters where the question was as to whether they should be compelled to hold their land in severalty or whether they should hold it in common. In numerous instances where consent was required that consent was obtained in a very doubtful form. I say here and now that I do not think there is an intelligent Indian in the Choctaw, Cherokee, Creek, or Chickasaw Nation who would be willing to see their lands divided into severalty, and as an evidence of it the Interior Department and the Indian Bureau of the Interior Department never before attempted to apply that to any of the five civilized tribes, because it is known they have sense enough to reject it. You may impose it upon the barbarous tribes but would not attempt to propose it in your bill to these five semi-civilized tribes, because they understand their interests and are willing and prepared to guard them. Now, the proposition of the gentleman from New York is simply to give to these tribes the right to determine the question as to whether they should have a territory or not; just what you would propose to give to any other country in which you proposed to establish a territory. You would not impose it upon them except by legal means; you would not create a territorial government without the assent of the people and establish it against their wishes. I therefore think the amendment of the gentleman from New York should be adopted.

Mr. SPRINGER. I rise to oppose the amendment, but I only want to say that this clause in the bill was prepared under the precedent and with the conditions contained in all bills heretofore passed by Congress organizing Territories in which there were Indian reservations, and to that were added some clauses submitted to myself by a representative of the Indian Rights Association. This clause as it stands meets the approval of that association, who carefully considered and suggested it. The words "under executive order and right of occupancy" were put in because the Wichitas are occupying a portion of this country by occupancy to which they have no title. Yet these people were so provided for that they are not to be disturbed in their occupancy without their sanction. This is a fair proposition; but if you adopt the proposition of my friend from New York [Mr. BAKER] there can never be any consent given. I now ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will assume that the formal amendment is withdrawn, and the question is on the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER].

The question was put, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 34, noes 70. So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. CHIPMAN. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add at the end of the first section the following: "Provided, That the President of the United States is directed, when he deems expedient, to negotiate with all uncivilized tribes in said Territory for the dissolution of their tribal relations, the holding of lands by them in severalty, and their ultimate citizenship."

Mr. SPRINGER. I suggest to the gentleman that he withhold that amendment until we reach the section which provides for a commission to treat with the Indians.

Mr. CHIPMAN. At the suggestion of the gentleman in charge of the bill, I will withhold the amendment for the present.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. That there shall be a governor, secretary, legislative assembly, supreme court, attorney, and marshal for said Territory, who shall be appointed and selected under the provisions of Title XXIII, chapter 1, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to the government of all the Territories. The provisions of said title shall have the same force and effect in the Territory of Oklahoma as in other Territories of the United States: Provided, That the legislative assembly and delegate to the House of Representatives shall not be elected until the President shall order: Provided further, That no person shall be entitled to vote at the first election, or to be elected to any office, who has not been a bona fide resident of said Territory for sixty days previous to said election: And provided further, That the council in said Territory shall consist of thirteen members, and the house of representatives shall consist of twenty-six members, which may be increased to thirty-nine.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I move to amend the bill by striking out the second section. I make this motion for the purpose of saying that I am in full sympathy with the object of the committee, which is to open up the country of Oklahoma for settlement by white people; but it seems to me that in this bill they have gone at it wrong end foremost; they have got the wagon before the horse. They have organized, or propose to organize, a government where there is no constituency to be governed. There is not to-day a white man within the entire bounds of the proposed Territory of Oklahoma who is there by authority of any law. I know it will be said by the chairman of the Committee on Territories that that is not true of the Public Land Strip, that there are from fifteen to twenty thousand people on the Public Land Strip who have gone in there, and, to use a common expression, squatted upon that strip, and that they need local government. I do not know but it is true that they need local government; but I know there is not a man there to-day who is there by authority of any law of the United States.

There is no land law in that country. The settlers can not take up legally an acre of land. There is not any valid local government over any single quarter-section of the Public Land Strip. There is not a white man legally upon any part of the territory over which it is proposed to erect a Territorial government, except the officials of the United States. Now it is proposed to organize a government, with a governor, a secretary, a Legislative Assembly, a supreme court, an attorney, a marshal, a Territorial Legislature with a senate and a house, when there is not a man there to be governed. Now, it seems to me that the proper mode of procedure is a very simple one. In the Forty-eighth Congress we authorized the President of the United States to appoint a commission to go out and treat with these Indian tribes, to liquidate their claims, to adjust and extinguish them. When that has been done, and when we have some right to let white men go in there, it will be time enough to provide for a Territorial government.

I have not much fault to find with the provisions of this bill, if we had a right to enact any such bill at this time. They seem to be reasonable and equitable, but the trouble is that there is no constituency over which to erect this Territorial government, and beyond that, we have not acquired the territory. You can not acquire your territory until you have treated with the Indians, and that is not to be done all at once. You may treat with one tribe and extinguish their title and take that within your territory, and then treat with another and extinguish their title and take that into your territory, and this Territorial government is not to be extended over any tribe or any part of any tribe until they have consented to the provisions of this bill. Your territory, therefore, is one thing to-day and another thing to-morrow, one thing this week and another thing next week, one thing this year and a different thing next year.

It is a territory at large, a territory in the clouds, a territory without fixed boundaries, a territory without a people, a territory with nothing but a government and government officers appointed by the President of the United States. Now, we do not want any such territory as that. Let us get at this business right hand foremost. Let us first extinguish the rights of the Indians so that we may allow white people to go in there, and then let us give them a government as quickly as we can; but let us not have a governor and a marshal and a Legislature until there is somebody there with proper authority of law to be governed.

I do not care to insist upon my amendment, but it seems to me that it is a just and proper one, because we do not want a government and government officers until they have a constituency.

Mr. PERKINS. Do you argue that the settlers who are upon what is known as the Public Land Strip are there in violation of law?

Mr. CUTCHEON. They are there without any law.

Mr. PERKINS. But they are not there in violation of law.

Mr. CUTCHEON. They are there without authority of law. They have just as much right to settle down in the West Capitol park.

Mr. RYAN. Ever since the public domain has been open to settlement settlements have gone on in advance.

Mr. CUTCHEON. But they have not gone on until the land laws have extended over the territory so as to give them the means of acquiring lands.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. CUTCHEON to strike out section 2, there were—ayes 34, noes 64.

Mr. HOOKER. No quorum.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope the gentleman will not make that point.

Mr. HOOKER. I intend to make it at every stage of your bill.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. HOOKER and Mr. SPRINGER were appointed.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the proposition of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCHEON] to strike out section 2.

Mr. CUTCHEON. To strike out the provision for a government where there is not anybody to be governed.

The Committee of the Whole proceeded again to divide.

Mr. CUTCHEON (during the count). Mr. Chairman, I offered this amendment with no purpose to obstruct the bill. I hope the gentleman from Mississippi will not press the point of "no quorum."

Mr. HOOKER. I decline to withdraw the point.

Mr. SPRINGER. Does the gentleman from Michigan withdraw his amendment?

Mr. CUTCHEON. With the leave of the Committee of the Whole I will do so.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan asks permission to withdraw his amendment.

Mr. HOOKER. I raise the question that he can not do it now.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman object to the withdrawal of the amendment?

Mr. HOOKER. I do.

The committee having divided, the tellers reported—ayes 41, noes 123.

So the amendment of Mr. CUTCHEON was rejected.

Mr. HOOKER. I send to the desk an amendment which I desire to offer.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to section 2 the following:

"Provided further, That there shall be no appointment of officers or organization of said territory until the assent of the Indians of the five civilized tribes of Choctaws, Chickasaws, Creeks, Cherokees, and Seminoles, and the assent of all other Indians settled and residing on said lands."

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Chairman, in order to test the sincerity of the chairman of the committee and other gentlemen who advocate this bill I have offered this proviso to the second section. There are already two provisos. As I had occasion to remark a few moments ago, the bill bristles with exceptions and provisos, which seek to strengthen the native weakness that the framers of the bill seem to have been conscious existed in the very subject-matter of the bill itself.

Gentlemen who have advocated this bill have declared that this is to be a Territorial government established over a people who are to give their own consent to it; they have conceded that by the treaties, as well as by the patents issued by the United States, any Territorial government which may be established by Congress over any portion of the land thus ceded to the five semi-civilized tribes, and occupied by their consent and agreement by other tribes affiliated with them, must be established with the consent of these tribes.

Now, if gentlemen are sincere in these declarations and really mean to require the assent of the Indians before undertaking to establish a Territorial government over what has been properly described by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCHEON] as a territory without a boundary and without a people (the very land upon which the territory is assumed to be established not belonging to the United States)—if gentlemen are in earnest and mean to be frank with the Indians, mean to deal with them with open hands, mean to say to them, "You have the right to object to the establishment of a Territorial government over any portion of this territory"—this amendment under such circumstances can not be justly objected to. It simply recognizes the right of these Indians to declare their voice in this matter before you clothe the President of the United States with power to appoint a governor, a secretary, a legislative assembly, a supreme court, United States attorneys, and marshals for the territory. You should not undertake to establish the whole paraphernalia of a government over a territory with these indefinite boundaries and then obtain the assent of the Indians afterward.

Now, inasmuch as the Government of the United States covenanted in that most solemn form with these Indians there should be no territorial government established there except by their consent, is it not fair that consent should be obtained as a condition-precedent before any territorial government should be established?

Why should you have a governor over a Territory covering land that does not belong to you and where the boundaries are not well defined, so that it would require the service of a corps of engineers to lay out the boundaries of the proposed territory before anything else could be done? Why is it necessary that the Government of the United States in violation of the treaty and without the consent of these Indians should set up a territorial government with all the paraphernalia of territorial officers? Why should these Indians have such an expense imposed upon them? Why should we do this thing in opposition to the consent and against the interest of the very people who are most interested in this question?

There is no reason for it at all, unless the policy is to prevail hereafter, that the Indian Territory is to be settled up by white people, and the Indians who now occupy it are to be deprived of their rights. I hope the House will consent to the adoption of the amendment I have offered, as it is merely equitable and just in its provisions.

Mr. SPRINGER. The five civilized tribes are not in this bill at all, and their consent therefore is not necessary.

Mr. HOOKER. They own the land.

Mr. SPRINGER. No, the Cherokees do not own the land.

Mr. HOOKER. They have an equitable interest in it. [Cries of "Vote!"]

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on Mr. HOOKER's amendment.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 19, noes 83.

Mr. HOOKER. No quorum.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope the gentleman will not obstruct the business. I hope he will allow us to have a vote on these amendments.

Mr. HOOKER. This is an important amendment.

Mr. SPRINGER. It is an important amendment, but the House is against it.

The CHAIRMAN appointed as tellers Mr. HOOKER and Mr. SPRINGER.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 20, noes 134.

So the amendment was disagreed to.

Section 2 was read, as follows:

SEC. 2. That there shall be a governor, secretary, legislative assembly, supreme court, attorney, and marshal for said Territory, who shall be appointed and selected under the provisions of Title XXIII, chapter 1, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to the government of all the Territories. The provisions of said title shall have the same force and effect in the Territory of Oklahoma as in other Territories of the United States: Provided, That the legislative assembly and delegate to the House of Representatives shall not be elected until the President shall order: Provided further, That no person shall be entitled to vote at the first election, or to be elected to any office, who has not been a bona fide resident of said Territory for sixty days previous to said election: And provided further, That the council in said Territory shall consist of thirteen members, and the house of representatives shall consist of twenty-six members, which may be increased to thirty-nine.

Mr. CAREY. I move the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend section 2, line 8, by inserting after the words "United States" in said line the following words, "Provided, That all such officers appointed and selected for any Territory which has been organized for a period of five years or more shall hereafter be appointed and selected from the bona fide residents of the Territory wherein they are to serve."

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. SPRINGER having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message was received from the Senate by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announcing the passage of the bill (H. R. 10234) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for other purposes, with amendments in which concurrence was requested.

FORTIFICATION BILL.

Mr. SAYERS. I ask by unanimous consent to submit a report from the Committee on Appropriations.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SPRINGER in the chair). If there be no objection, the report will be received.

Mr. SAYERS, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported a bill (H. R. 10998) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. RYAN. I reserve all points of order.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I ask by unanimous consent to non-concur in the amendments of the Senate to the Army appropriation bill.

Mr. SAYERS. Is it necessary to raise at this time any question in regard to any amendment proposed by the Senate to the Army appropriation bill in order to obtain consideration upon points of order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has decided that it is not necessary to reserve points when the bill and amendments are referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. SAYERS. That is under the new rule.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Yes, under the new rule.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to non-concur in the amendments of the Senate to the Army appropriation bill, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. SAYERS. I object. Let it go to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Does the gentleman move to concur?

Mr. SAYERS. No; I want the committee to consider and act upon the amendments.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Then I ask that the bill be allowed to remain on the table.

There was no objection.

PROPOSED TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the pending amendment on which the point of order is made.

The amendment of Mr. CAREY was again read.

Mr. SPRINGER. The point of order is that it is not germane.

Mr. SYMES. It relates to other Territories not covered by this bill.

Mr. CAREY. This is an amendment to a provision where it is proposed to insert a section of the Revised Statutes. I believe that the amendment is germane to this bill. The committee that reported the bill saw fit to re-enact certain sections of the Revised Statutes. This amendment relates simply to the sections of the Revised Statutes referred to, and I believe is germane. If, however, the Chair holds that it is not, I then desire to offer a special amendment applicable to the Territory of Oklahoma after it has been organized for a period of five years.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair must hold that the point of order is well taken.

Mr. CAREY. Then I offer a further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend section 2, line 8, by inserting after the words "United States:"

"Provided, That all such officers appointed and selected for said Territory, after the said Territory has been organized for a period of five years, shall be appointed and selected from the bona fide residents therein."

Mr. SPRINGER. I have no objection to that.

The amendment was adopted.

Sections 3 and 4 of the bill were read, as follows:

SEC. 3. That the Constitution and all laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable shall have the same force and effect in said Territory of Oklahoma as elsewhere in the United States: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to interfere with the local governments of any of the Indian tribes which may now be provided for by the laws and treaties of the United States, or which may exist in conformity thereto: And provided further, That the supreme court of the Territory shall have jurisdiction and shall embrace all causes of action, crimes, and offenses arising within the limits of the Territory organized by this act; and all laws heretofore passed granting jurisdiction to United States courts within the limits of said Territory are hereby repealed; but cases now pending shall be prosecuted to their final disposition therein the same as if this act had not been passed.

SEC. 4. That the section of country lying between the States of Kansas, Colorado, and Texas, known as the Public Land Strip, is hereby declared to be a part of the public domain of the United States, and shall be open to settlement under the operation of the homestead laws only, except as otherwise provided in this act: Provided, That the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of land in each township shall be reserved for school purposes.

Mr. PAYSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert after the word "only," in line 5 of section 4, the words "but the provisions of section No. 2301 of the Revised Statutes shall not apply to any entry of any of said land."

Mr. SPRINGER. If I can, I will accept that. That, I believe, is the commutation clause.

Mr. RYAN. I hope the gentleman will explain the amendment.

Mr. PAYSON. Section 2301, to which the amendment refers, is what is known commonly as the commutation clause of the general homestead law; and in order that I may be fully understood in reference to the amendment I send to the desk to have read an advertisement, which is marked, from a newspaper.

Mr. RYAN. What does the amendment refer to specially?

Mr. PAYSON. That the commutation feature shall not apply to any lands under the operation of this section.

Mr. RYAN. That is all right.

Mr. PAYSON. I ask the Clerk to read what I have sent to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Cheap homes. McAllister & Scranage, locators of land in Neutral Strip, Indian Territory. Can give you the best situation and figures on land. See Capt. A. J. McAllister, on board Steamer Louise. Finest climate, best farms, purest water in the country. Titles clear and terms easy. McAllister & Scranage, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mr. SPRINGER. There can be no commutation under the provisions of section 8.

Mr. PAYSON. In connection with what has been read I ought to say, as an apology to the House for giving the parties who have inserted this advertisement the benefit of the notoriety it will have by an insertion in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, that it will not perhaps be so conspicuous a pleasure to them when they read what I wish to say in reference to it.

This being but a sample of hundreds of other advertisements of like character published in the Mississippi Valley and West, I wish to state that every man who publishes advertisements of that kind, or is connected in any way with them, is a thief and a robber—every one of them.

It is an attempt on their part to secure from the honest people of the country under false pretenses their money to secure titles to public lands in the Neutral Strip and in that Territory if the bill becomes a law; and I desire particularly to call the attention of the members of this committee to the advertisement so that they may be careful to see that every provision in the bill shall be thoroughly guarded, in order that not an acre of these lands shall go to anybody except to the actual settlers, and in no other way. [Applause.]

Mr. SPRINGER. That is right.

Mr. STRUBLE. That is what the bill does further on.

Mr. PAYSON. I think not.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SPRINGER. I have no objection to that. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. PAYSON. I ask a vote.

The amendment was adopted.

Section 5 was read, as follows:

SEC. 5. That whenever the Creek and Seminole tribes of Indians shall signify their assent to the provisions of this section, in legal manner, to the commission provided for in this act, and the President has issued his proclamation fixing the time as provided herein, the unoccupied lands ceded to the United States by said tribes under the treaties of June 14, 1866, and March 21, 1866, shall be open to settlement, except the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections in each township, which shall be reserved for school purposes, and shall be disposed of to actual settlers only, in quantities not to exceed 160 acres in square form, to each settler, at the price of $1.25 per acre. All persons who are heads of families or over twenty-one years of age, and who are citizens of the United States, or have resided in the United States for two years, and have declared their intention to become citizens thereof, shall be entitled to become actual settlers on such lands. An accurate account shall be kept by the Secretary of the Interior of the money received as proceeds of the sale of such lands. The commission hereinafter created by this act is hereby authorized to confer with the Creeks and Seminoles to ascertain whether said Indians are entitled to any further compensation than that heretofore paid for said unoccupied lands. If said commission shall find that further compensation should be paid said Indians, they may, by negotiation with said Indians, fix the amount of such additional compensation, not to exceed the sum of $1.25 per acre, less the cost of sale and the amounts heretofore paid said tribes in the purchase of said lands; and any additional sum agreed upon by said commission to be paid said tribes for said lands as provided herein shall be placed to the credit of said tribes in the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. PAYSON. I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

In lines 12 and 13 strike out the words "at the price of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre" and insert "under the homestead laws, only except that section 2301 of the Revised Statutes shall not apply."

Mr. SPRINGER. Do I understand that there is to be nothing paid for the land, and that the Government will have to appropriate the money?

Mr. PAYSON. Precisely.

I desire in this amendment to present this question to the committee. I do not understand that any explanation has yet been given why the Committee on Territories report a bill proposing to give settlers land which shall be acquired as public land, under the right as homesteaders and settlers, and require them to pay therefor $1.25 an acre. In my judgment it is a matter of the utmost indifference how public land may be acquired. It is enough that the Government own agricultural land, and the proposition I present to the committee is that all public lands which the United States have shall be offered as a donation to actual settlers in good faith who will go and reside upon the land for five years. I suppose the argument will be advanced by the chairman of the committee that these lands being incumbered by some kind of Indian title which is undetermined by the lawyers, and a title which it may cost something to extinguish, the homesteader shall be required to reimburse the Government for the outlay in securing this public land. That has never been the principle which applied to the disposition of public lands since the homestead law has been in existence.

When that vast territory in the Southwest was acquired under the treaty of Mexico we did not institute an inquiry as to how much it cost the Government of the United States in blood or treasure. It was enough that it was public land and that it was susceptible of cultivation; and no matter what it may have cost the Government when it became its property, it has been the settled policy of the Government of the United States to offer land as a donation to the actual settler who would brave the privations of frontier life and go out and make a home upon it; and so it ought to be in this case. Here are twenty-odd million acres of land upon all of which there is some claim by these Indians. We propose to acquire this land; but we should acquire it as homes for the industrious people of this country who will go out and occupy it, and in my judgment the economic question whether it cost the Government 5 cents or $1.25 an acre ought not to be considered.

Gentlemen must remember that whenever 160 acres of land is taken by a poor man who goes out there to make a home for himself and family, it causes him to pay into a Treasury that is now overburdened $200 of his hard earnings. This Government can afford to be generous to the agricultural settler who goes to the frontier and contributes to the wealth of the nation by building up a home for himself and those who come after him, and to do this independent of contingencies of what the Government shall secure to itself in the way of agricultural lands by legislation that the lands shall only be disposed of by the Government to those who are its beneficiaries. These are always the poor men who go upon the public lands and improve them. That the Government shall be recompensed to the extent of the outlay which it has brought upon itself in securing these lands should not be the policy in settling that land. This land ought to be subject to the homestead law only.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to oppose this amendment offered by my colleague. The land under the provisions of this bill does not belong to the Government of the United States. The Government proposes by this bill to purchase it from the Indians, with their consent, and sell it to settlers under the homestead law for precisely the sum that it cost the Government.

Mr. STRUBLE. Or may cost the United States.

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes; or may cost the United States, not exceeding $1.25.

Mr. PAYSON. When the Government undertakes to acquire these lands from the Indians it acquires them precisely in the same way in which it acquires other lands upon which there is some claim by a foreign power, or where the Indian title is extinguished, as it has been in dozens and dozens of cases heretofore, by treaty stipulations or by actual purchase.

Mr. SPRINGER. Do not take up all my time.

Mr. PAYSON. I am not taking up the gentleman's time, except to ask him what difference there is in principle between this and, for instance, the Gadsden purchase from Mexico?

Mr. SPRINGER. I will tell the gentleman. When the Gadsden purchase was made it was a vast unoccupied desert region, as most of it is now, and it was acquired in pursuance of a treaty with a foreign government at the close of a war as a means of indemnifying us, but the lands to which this bill relates are surrounded by settlements on every side except the west, and even on that side there are large settlements.

The land has been made very valuable from the fact that it has been kept so long from settlement, and now the Government proposes to purchase it from the Indians at a price not exceeding $1.25 per acre, and to allow settlers to go upon it under the homestead law for precisely the same price we are obliged to pay for it. That provision is just to the United States and just to the settlers; and I speak for the persons who propose to go into that Territory and settle it when I say that they do not ask this Government to buy it for them and give it to them, but that they are begging and imploring us to offer them an opportunity of purchasing it under the provisions of this bill.

Mr. RYAN. I want to say to my friend that it has been the policy of the Government, where the Indian title has been extinguished by treaty, to open up the lands to settlement by requiring the settler to pay the Government for the benefit of the Indians the amount that was agreed by the negotiation to be paid.

Mr. SPRINGER. That has been the general policy.

Mr. RYAN. And in my State, which was perhaps more than one-half covered by Indian reservations, that was the policy. Take, for instance, the Osage Indian reservation. I do not care to interrupt the gentleman from Illinois at too great length, but I wish to say that the Osage Indian reservation was a very large one, 50 miles wide and over 300 miles in length, and the settlers upon that land were required to pay a dollar and a quarter an acre to the Indians or to the Government for the Indians.

Mr. SYMES. Not to the Indians.

Mr. RYAN. That does not matter. The principle is the same. The title of the Indians was extinguished in that way.

Mr. WEAVER. That was the rule that was followed in Iowa under the treaty with the Sac and Fox Indians.

Mr. RYAN. I think that has been the rule as to nearly every Indian reservation in the West.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will say to my colleague [Mr. PAYSON] that it would cost $10,000,000 to buy these lands under the provision of this bill.

Mr. PAYSON. Suppose it does.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, the question presented by the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PAYSON] is not free from embarrassment, and yet I do not think that the committee ought to hesitate as to the line of policy that ought to be adopted. This session we have passed two acts involving the same question and touching the same principle that arises here. One of those acts was in regard to lands which we proposed to obtain from the Sioux Indians in the Territory of Dakota. By that act we propose to acquire from the Sioux by proper cessions from them 11,000,000 acres of their land, and we propose to apply the homestead principle to that land, but to require the settler to pay, in installments, 50 cents per acre.

Mr. RYAN. That is the price we pay the Indians.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes; that is just the amount to be paid to the Indians. Later, when we negotiated with the Blackfeet and other Indians in Montana, on the Upper Missouri, we acquired 17,000,000 acres, which they held partly under treaty and partly under an Executive order, and we provided that those lands should be disposed of under the homestead law.

Mr. NELSON. And if the gentleman will permit me to make a statement, in addition to the Sioux bill to which he refers and by which we acquire 11,000,000 acres of land, we have passed a bill relating to reservations among the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota, which land is to be disposed of to settlers at a dollar an acre.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is true, but that is an exceptional case. That is a case where the lands are surrounded by settlements and are of value greatly above the average of homestead lands. The question presented here is simply whether in the present condition of our country, and in view of the rapid growth of our population, and the importance of securing land for the landless, the public Treasury shall bear the burden of paying the Indians for those lands and devote them to homes for our landless people, or whether the people who settle upon the lands shall be required to pay $200 apiece for their homes? That is the question, and it is a question of political economy that may well arrest the attention of this committee. I think it is a great question. Any measure that will enlarge the number of our freeholders is, I think, of high moment.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. I would like to interrupt the gentleman from Indiana for one minute only. I have presented to this House and this committee resolutions and memorials of the Indian Rights Association of the State of Pennsylvania; and my only desire is that any bill which may be passed on this subject may not interfere in any way with the distribution of the Indian lands in severalty to the Indians.

Mr. STRUBLE. This bill will not do that.

Mr. HOLMAN. This measure has nothing to do with that.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. That is the only question which has troubled me in connection with this bill; and if there is no interference with that policy, I am for the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, my friend from Pennsylvania interrupts me with a matter which is entirely foreign to the question I was discussing.

As I was saying, the question is whether the Government should, as has been our policy for years, extinguish the Indian title and permit the settlement of the land under the homestead laws, or the burden of purchasing these lands should fall on the landless people who are to occupy them. In the present state of the land laws, would it be wise policy for the Government to pay for the lands and then divide them up among persons who may settle upon them under the existing provisions? Should persons be permitted to enter these lands under the homestead law with the commutation clause in force? I think not.

I am inclined to think in the present condition of our country it is better to extinguish the Indian title by payment from the national Treasury and secure the lands to actual and bona fide settlers—landless citizens—for homes. I believe this would be a measure of wealth to the nation and a measure of national security. It would be exactly in harmony with the principle of the homestead law. But in such case every security which law can provide should be resorted to to protect the land from the speculator. Nothing would justify the policy suggested except the far-reaching importance of securing independent freeholds for our people.

In the first draught of the homestead law it was provided that the settler should pay 25 cents an acre, which was supposed to be about the cost of the land to the Government; but that principle was properly rejected. The tendency of the public mind has been all the time toward the conviction that this public wealth, this most valuable of our property, our public lands, should be so employed as to secure the greatest strength and stability to our Government by increasing the number of its freeholders. [Here the hammer fell.] I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move that the committee rise. Before that question is put, I wish to say that I hope the friends of this bill will be here to-morrow. We are going to press it until it is passed.

Mr. HOOKER. I hope the enemies of the bill will be here too.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope they will, and that they will not break a quorum.

The motion of Mr. SPRINGER, that the committee rise, was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose: and Mr. ROGERS having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. DOCKERY reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 10614) to provide for the organization of the Territory of Oklahoma, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania, by unanimous consent, obtained indefinite leave of absence.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. THOMAS, of Kentucky, by unanimous consent, obtained leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, papers in the case of James B. Evans filed during the Forty-eighth Congress.

An then (the hour of 5 o'clock having arrived) the House, according to order, took a recess until 8 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House (at 8 o'clock p. m.) was called to order by Mr. DOCKERY, who directed the reading of the following communication:

SPEAKER'S ROOM, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 26, 1888.

SIR: Hon. A. M. DOCKERY is designated to preside as Speaker pro tempore at the session of the House this evening.

JOHN G. CARLISLE, Speaker.

Hon. JOHN B. CLARK,
Clerk House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the order under which the House assembles to-night.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That on July 26 the House take a recess at 5 o'clock until 8 o'clock p. m., said session not to extend beyond 10 o'clock p. m., to be devoted exclusively to the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on the Judiciary to which there may be no objection.

JURISDICTION OF UNITED STATES COURTS.

Mr. CULBERSON. I call up for consideration the bill (S. 753) to correct the enrollment of an act approved March 3, 1887, entitled "An act to amend sections 1, 2, 3, and 10 of an act to determine the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of the United States, and to regulate the removal of causes from the State courts, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1875.

The Clerk proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. LANHAM. I understand that this is quite a lengthy bill, and is merely to correct certain errors in the enrollment of a bill heretofore passd. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the reading of the bill be dispensed with, and that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON], my colleague, be permitted to make an explanation of the bill.

Mr. CULBERSON. It will be remembered, Mr. Speaker, that in the last session, and in the last days of the session, of the last Congress, a bill was passed to regulate the jurisdiction of the United States courts, and to regulate the removal of causes from the State courts to the Federal courts. The bill was passed in the last hours of the night before adjournment, and numerous errors crept into its enrollment, consisting mainly of the want of proper punctuation, and in one place the change of the word "or" for "if," and in other places mingling and commingling the sentences together. The Senate passed this bill now under consideration to correct these errors of enrollment. There is no change in the law whatever, and is simply to correct the errors in the enrollment of that bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to dispensing with the reading of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time by its title, was passed.

Mr. CULBERSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JURIES UNITED STATES COURTS.

Mr. CULBERSON. I now call up the bill (S. 64) to authorize the juries of the United States circuit and district courts to be used interchangeably, and to provide for drawing talesmen, and yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR].

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of Congress approved June 30, 1879, chapter 52, section 2, be, and the same is hereby, amended, so that whenever any circuit and district court of the United States shall be held at the same time and place they shall be authorized and required, if the business of the courts will permit, to use interchangeably the juries in either court drawn according to the provisions of said act.

Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR. The object of this bill is so apparent, merely for convenience and economy in regard to the juries of the United States courts, that there is no need of delay or argument in support of it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, and being read the third time, was passed.

Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

RECORDING COMMISSIONS, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

Mr. CULBERSON. I now call up the bill (S. 143) to provide for the issuing and recording of certain commissions in the Department of Justice, and yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SENEY].

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter the commissions of all judicial officers, including marshals and attorneys of the United States, appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and all other commissions heretofore prepared at the Department of State upon the requisition of the Attorney-General, shall be made out and recorded in the Department of Justice, and shall be under the seal of said Department and countersigned by the Attorney-General, any laws to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided, That the said seal shall not be affixed to any such commission before the same shall have been signed by the President of the United States.

Mr. BUCHANAN. What change does this bill make?

Mr. SENEY. I think there is a report accompanying this bill, which will perhaps explain what the gentleman asks.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Let the report be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on the Judiciary, having considered the bill S. 143, recommend its passage.

Mr. SENEY. I was under the impression that there was another report. I believe under existing law that the commissions of all officers under the control of the Department of Justice, as well as the commissions of all other officers of the Government are lodged with the State Department, and are there preserved. The purpose of this bill is to take from the State Department the custody of all commissions belonging to the Department of Justice, so that the Department may keep the records itself, instead of being kept in the Department of State.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. SENEY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

BONDS OF UNITED STATES OFFICIALS.

Mr. CULBERSON. I now call up the bill (S. 183) requiring notice of deficiency in accounts of principals to be given to sureties upon bonds of United States officials, and fixing a limitation of time within which suits shall be brought against said sureties upon said bonds, and yield to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS].

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter, whenever any deficiency shall be discovered in the accounts of any official of the United States, or of any officer disbursing or chargeable with public money, it shall be the duty of the accounting officers making such discovery to at once notify the head of the Department having control over the affairs of said officer of the nature and amount of said deficiency, and it shall be the immediate duty of said head of Department to at once notify all obligors upon the bond or bonds of such official of the nature of such deficiency and the amount thereof. Said notification shall be deemed sufficient if mailed at the post-office in the city of Washington, D. C., addressed to said sureties respectively, and directed to the respective post-offices where said obligors may reside, if known; but a failure to give or mail such notice shall not discharge the surety or sureties upon such bond.

SEC. 2. That if, upon the statement of the account of any official of the United States, or of any officer disbursing or chargeable with public money, by the accounting officers of the Treasury, it shall thereby appear that he is indebted to the United States, and suit therefor shall not be instituted within five years after such statement of said account, the sureties on his bond shall not be liable for such indebtedness.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, was passed.

Mr. ROGERS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MARRIAGE BETWEEN WHITE MEN AND INDIAN WOMEN.

Mr. CULBERSON. I now call up the bill (S. 928) in relation to marriages between white men and Indian women, and yield to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS].

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That no white man, not otherwise a member of any tribe of Indians, who has married, or may hereafter marry, an Indian woman, member of any Indian tribe in the United States or any of its Territories, except the five civilized tribes in the Indian Territory, shall by such marriage hereafter acquire any right to any tribal property, privilege, or interest whatever to which any member of such tribe is entitled.

SEC. 2. That every Indian woman, member of any such tribe of Indians, who has been or may hereafter be married to any citizen of the United States is hereby declared to become by such marriage a citizen of the United States, with all the rights, privileges, and immunities of any such citizen, being a married woman: Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall impair or in any way affect the right or title of such married woman to any tribal property or any interest therein.

SEC. 3. That whenever the marriage of any white man with any Indian woman, a member of any such tribe of Indians, is required or offered to be proved in any judicial proceeding, evidence of the admission of such fact by the party against whom the proceeding is had, or evidence of general repute, or of cohabitation as married persons, or any other circumstantial or presumptive evidence from which the fact may be inferred, shall be competent.

The report (by Mr. ROGERS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the Judiciary, having had under consideration Senate bill 928, report the same back favorably with the following amendments:

Strike out, in line 2 of section 1, the words "has married, or;" and strike out, in line 2 of section 2, the words "has been or."

The committee think the bill, with these amendments, will operate prospectively only, and is a wise measure, and asks its passage.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The amendments recommended by the committee were adopted.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Arkansas what is the overwhelming necessity for the passage of this bill, what constitutional power we have to pass it, and what great benefits to the country are to result therefrom?

Mr. ROGERS. This bill found its birth, I think, with the late Secretary of the Interior. It was recommended in the report of the Secretary of the Interior to the last Congress. The subject was taken up by Mr. DAWES, who was a member of the committee sent by the Senate to visit the various Indian tribes in the West with a view to protecting the interests of all these tribes. Upon his return, amongst other things, he presented us this bill.

It proceeds upon the theory that the worst element to be found among the Indian tribes is that class of white men who are willing to sacrifice everything like civilization for the purpose of getting beyond the law and gaining head-rights among the Indian tribes beyond the jurisdiction of the courts.

Mr. Lamar stated—and I thought I had the report of the Secretary of the Interior in my desk, but I am unable to find it—that the Department of the Interior found more trouble in preserving peace, order, and quiet among the Indian tribes because of the presence of this disturbing element than from any other cause that could be mentioned in connection with the subject.

I do not remember the exact purport of his observations upon that subject, but I think I have given them substantially.

The object and purport of this bill, therefore, is that if these parties intermarry, if a man wants to abandon civilization and going into that country and marrying a squaw to get a head-right, he shall not get it; but if he marries he makes the squaw a citizen of the United States also. We are making citizens of the United States instead of making Indians of our citizens. I do not know any other reason that I could give beyond that.

Mr. BUCHANAN. If this squaw marries a white person, does she become a citizen of the United States?

Mr. ROGERS. He remains a citizen and she becomes a citizen of the United States.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Does the gentleman think that addition to our citizenship would be very desirable?

Mr. ROGERS. I think it is not highly desirable. In seven cases of ten where this class of people go into the Indian Territory, instead of elevating the Indians they do them harm. They come out of there in a year with feathers in their hats, with revolvers buckled round them, and a pair of Texas spurs, whooping and yelling whenever they can get drink. If a white and an Indian both want to marry, let them come back into a State and we will civilize both together.

Mr. PARKER. I wish to inquire of the gentleman having charge of this bill whether it is not a necessary result that the children of the marriage will be citizens of the United States?

Mr. ROGERS. That is my understanding.

Mr. PARKER. Therefore, if in the State where women have the right to vote, the squaw becomes a voter. Is that so?

Mr. ROGERS. I should think so. That would be a very rare case; but I think it would be the case under this bill.

Mr. PARKER. And also that these degenerate men, which my friend from Arkansas has described so graphically, will be citizens of the United States, while the Indian who has been so romantically described with wonderful physical capacity, would be civilized, but have only the rights of a barbarian, while the degenerate white and his degenerate progeny will become citizens of the United States.

Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR. Is not the object of this bill to prevent the marriage or miscegenation of these degenerate whites with the Indian squaws?

Mr. PARKER. That was one of the things I was going to ask.

Mr. WEAVER. The effect of the bill is to encourage Indians to marry white men and become citizens of the United States.

Mr. PARKER. I have been many times instructed with the advice and suggestions of the gentleman from Arkansas. Having a broad experience on the Indian border, I have received more information relative to this class of cases and legislation from him than from any other man. But it seems to me that this is at least subject to the query whether this bill does not go pretty far; and I would like the gentleman from Arkansas to state the result he expects to follow its enactment.

Mr. ROGERS. I have said about all I cared to say on this subject. I think the tendency and effect will be to keep white men out of the Indian Territory. They are deterring the Government in its effort to civilize these people. That is my judgment as to the best result of it. I think the tendency will likewise be to prevent to a very large extent the intermarriage of these Indian women, because these men are not going to marry Indian women except for the purpose of obtaining a head-right. Many of them are fugitives from justice. Others are those who do not wish to pay their debts, and take their property there for the purpose of evading process of court. There are others who desire to marry these squaws in good faith; but let them come back to the confines of civilization, so that their offspring, if they have any, shall be raised up in Christian civilization, a higher civilization than there is among the tribes of Indians. These are the main benefits to be derived. It is not a bad measure. I think it involves a great deal of genuine philosophy in the treatment of the Indian tribes. I think it will be highly beneficial to keep that class of men out of the Indian Territory. The policy of the Government has been to keep them out, as they are intruders.

This is simply in the line of our treaties to keep these people out of that country, and, in my judgment, they ought to be kept out. There is a class of persons who go there that are highly valuable. That is the class of industrious farmers who take their families into the Territory and become tenants of these people. By them they are taught agriculture, stock-raising, and all the ways of civilized society, and they are a very great benefit; but the rough class, the fugitives from justice and criminals, have no business in the Indian country. Instead of having civilizing influence they have a discivilizing influence. For these reasons I think the bill is fraught with a great deal of philosophic wisdom.

Mr. BUCHANAN. The gentleman has answered one part of my inquiry very fully. I should like him now to state what constitutional power we have to do this.

Mr. ROGERS. That grows out of the constitutional power which gives Congress the right to make needful rules and regulations touching the Indian tribes, and by virtue of our treaties we have always endeavored to keep people from going in there for the purpose of living in the Territory and keep these people isolated from the outside world. It is true the law favors marriage. This simply says that they can marry; but if she does she must become a citizen, and that she must no longer remain in that country or a member of an Indian tribe. The marriage of a Choctaw Indian to a white makes the man a Choctaw, and he is decitizenized and becomes a citizen of that country; but even in doing that he is still subject and amenable to the laws of the United States, under this bill, so that he can not escape process of courts so far as the criminal law is concerned by going into the Indian country, and if we shall extend the civil jurisdiction to that country, we shall still have him where a process of law will reach him without violating treaties with the Indians themselves. I ought to thank the gentleman from New York for the graceful compliment he paid me. But I did not claim to have any particular knowledge of the subject.

Mr. ADAMS. I shall be glad to renew in my own person that compliment to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS], for I admit that he is far more familiar with the subject of Indians and their relations with white people than I can possibly be; but as I am a member of the committee that reported this bill, and am opposed to it, and shall vote against it, I wish briefly to state my reasons.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas is entitled to the floor.

Mr. ROGERS. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois such time as he desires to occupy.

Mr. ADAMS. The ground on which this bill is urged is the ground last stated by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS], that for reasons of public policy it is desirable to discourage marriages between white men and Indian women. I do not believe that is sound public policy. In the first place, if we are to discourage such marriages for the moral welfare of the Indian woman, the answer is that the United States has nothing to do with that question; and if we are to discourage such marriages for the purpose of expediting the civilization of the Indian tribes, then I say that the white man who goes into the Indian nation and marries an Indian woman, however degraded he may be, is likely to be more an instrument of civilization than a full-blooded Indian.

Mr. PETERS. Will the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] yield to me for a few minutes?

Mr. ROGERS. Certainly.

Mr. PETERS. One of the motives that induce a man to marry an Indian woman is that he may obtain certain rights under the tribe into which he marries, a head-right, for instance. That, I say, is one of the motives. Another motive—and this is the one which actuates the baser sort to intermarry with Indians—another motive is that he may become a part of the tribe, subject to the tribal law, and may thereby put himself outside of the civilized law, which he leaves when he marries into the tribe.

In other words, the man who goes into one of these tribes and marries an Indian woman in nearly all cases becomes, as has been stated here, one of the worst and most degraded characters, even if he has not been such prior to the marriage; causes turmoil and disturbance in the tribe, and then, by reason of his superior education, or by reason of the fact that he is a white man, exercises his influence over the tribe to escape the punishment that ought to be visited upon him by the tribal law, knowing at the same time that he is not amenable to the laws of the United States. Now, one of the great objects of this bill is to continue that man's responsibility for any violation of United States law that he may commit, and to hold him to the same accountability under the law that he would have been held to prior to the marriage.

Mr. ADAMS. Are not the children of such a marriage likely to be a little nearer to civilization—which we hope to be the ultimate outcome— than the children of a full-blood Indian marriage?

Mr. PETERS. That depends entirely upon the influences by which they are surrounded. I do not believe that the children of such a marriage, by reason of the white blood that is in them, are in any manner superior to a full-blood Indian, so far as any tendency to civilization is concerned. It depends entirely on the associations and the influences that surround them whether they will be any better or nearer to civilization than full-blood Indian children.

If they are left to grow up with the tribe and to be influenced by its customs, they are often in a certain sense greater enemies to civilization than full-blood Indians. That has been my observation in all these cases. Some of the worst characters in the Indian Territory to-day are the descendants of white men, who went in there and married Indian women. Some of the worst characters, the vilest outlaws, men who violate every law known to humanity as well as to Christianity, are the children of white men who went among the Indians and intermarried with them. I would rather trust my life or my property to-day in the hands of a full-blood Indian than trust it in the hands of a half-breed who has been raised in the midst of the barbarous influences that surround many of those tribes.

[Mr. WHEELER withholds his remarks for revision. See APPENDIX.]

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ROGERS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SCHOOL FARMS IN BEAUFORT COUNTY, SOUTH CAROLINA.

Mr. CULBERSON. I call up the bill (H. R. 8053) to extend the time for the redemption of school farms in Beaufort County, South Carolina.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the time prescribed for the redemption of school farms in Beaufort County, South Carolina, by the act entitled "An act to provide for the redemption and sale of the school-farm lands now held in Beaufort County, South Carolina, by the United States," approved March 3, 1887, be, and the same is hereby, extended to one year from the passage of this act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CASWELL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CRIMINAL JURISDICTION ON THE GREAT LAKES.

Mr. CULBERSON. I call up the bill (H. R. 10041) extending the criminal jurisdiction of the circuit and district courts to the Great Lakes and their connecting waters.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the criminal jurisdiction of the circuit and district courts shall extend to all crimes and offenses now punishable by law committed upon the Great Lakes or any bay, river, strait, or other navigable waters connecting or connected with said Lakes, on board of any vessel belonging in whole or in part to the United States or any citizen thereof with like force and effect as if the same were committed upon the high seas: Provided, That this act shall not apply to rivers wholly within the United States.

SEC. 2. The trial of all such crimes and offenses not committed within any State shall be in the district where the offender is found or into which he is first brought.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CULBERSON. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ADAMS].

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, this proposed legislation was suggested by an atrocious assault committed last October on an American steamer on the Canadian side of the Detroit River. It was discovered that there was no Federal statute to punish the offender. Legislation to meet the case was proposed by Judge Brown, of the eastern district of Michigan, and approved by the Attorney-General. Bills were introduced by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CHIPMAN] and by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS]. This bill is a substitute for one of theirs. The matter is one of urgent importance along the Canadian border. As the law now stands there is no adequate protection to life and property on American vessels navigating the Great Lakes.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ADAMS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

J. EDWIN PILCHER.

Mr. CULBERSON. I call up the bill (H. R. 10240) for the relief of J. Edwin Pilcher. This bill is in Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from its further consideration and that it be now considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of this bill, and that it be considered in the House. The Chair hears no objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay to J. Edwin Pilcher, of Louisville, Ky., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $905, it being the amount of one bond of $100 and $905 in paper money of the Republic of Texas. This claim being a proper one against the Texas indemnity fund, the balance of which fund having been heretofore covered in the Treasury of the United States, payment is hereby directed to be made out of the general funds of the Government.

The amendment reported by the Committee on the Judiciary was read, as follows:

Strike out the following words at the close of the bill:

"This claim being a proper one against the Texas indemnity fund, the balance of which fund having been heretofore covered in the Treasury of the United States, payment is hereby directed to be made out of the general funds of the Government."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Does this bill provide for the surrender of these securities upon the payment of this claim? I fail to notice any such provision in the bill.

Mr. CULBERSON. There is no provision in the bill for such surrender; but I suppose that, of course, the Secretary of the Treasury when he pays off the claim will require the delivery of the securities.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Not necessarily, under the terms of this bill.

Mr. CULBERSON. I suppose, Mr. Speaker, it is proper for me to state that in the early days of this session a bill was passed by the House and Senate and sent to the President, to pay Mr. Pilcher this amount of money out of what is known as the indemnity fund of Texas. Upon investigation the President ascertained that the indemnity fund had been covered into the Treasury. In his veto of that bill he suggested that some provision had better be made for payment of this claim either upon a deficiency bill or by a bill carrying a general appropriation. The Committee on the Judiciary adopted the latter suggestion, and this bill is the result of it.

I want to state there are now in the Treasury Department of the United States $60,000, the balance of this fund called the indemnity fund of Texas; originally it was $7,750,000. Texas deposited this money in the Treasury of the United States in order to indemnify the United States against the creditors of the Republic of Texas, who claimed the Government of the United States had made itself liable for the payment of these claims against the Republic of Texas in consequence of the annexation of that republic to the United States. All those debts have been paid, all that I know of or that anybody else knows of, except perhaps this one.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I have no objection to the bill if it be properly guarded. I suggest the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That the said Pilcher shall first surrender said securities to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. CULBERSON. I have no objection in the world to that amendment.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I move the amendment.

Mr. BUCHANAN'S amendment was agreed to; and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CARUTH moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

RUFUS LOWE AND C. M. LOFTIN.

Mr. CULBERSON. I call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 10578) for the relief of Rufus Lowe and C. M. Loftin.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Rufus Lowe and C. M. Loftin, sureties on the distillery warehouse bond of J. C. Hobbs, distiller, and against whom there is now pending a suit in the district court of the western district of North Carolina, at Charlotte, N. C., in behalf of the United States, against said sureties, be, and they are hereby, released from all liability as said sureties on account of the breach of said bond, as alleged in said suit now pending.

Mr. CULBERSON. This bill is on the same Calendar—the Private Calendar—and I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from its further consideration and it be considered at this time in the House.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. CULBERSON. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COWLES].

Mr. COWLES. Mr. Speaker, I deem it to be altogether unnecessary to make any lengthy statement in support of this bill. It was unanimously reported by the Judiciary Committee of the Forty-ninth Congress, and has the unanimous report of the Committee on the Judiciary at this session. This of itself should be sufficient to establish the justice of the claim in this House. The facts are somewhat prolix, but I will make a brief statement.

These gentlemen were sureties on a distiller's warehouse bond. The distiller suspended operations and the warehouse passed into the hands of a general storekeeper, the distiller having absconded. These sureties ascertaining it was not safe went to the collector and informed him of that fact, and asked that the whisky should be removed to a safe place of storage. They offered to remove it to the warehouse of a distillery in operation near by, but were refused permission to do this. The warehouse was entered and about two barrels of whisky was taken out.

No one believes in that section of the country that these sureties were liable for any laches, and the fact is, they did all in their power to save the Government and themselves harmless. The district attorney of the United States who investigated the facts recommended the suit should be dismissed. The judge of the Federal court, from whom I received a letter this morning and who rendered the judgment, said in justice these parties ought not to be held liable. And I hope the bill will pass.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. COWLES moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

DANIEL W. PERKINS.

Mr. CULBERSON. I call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 8846) for the relief of Daniel W. Perkins, and move, by unanimous consent, that the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar be discharged from its further consideration, and it be now taken up for consideration in the House.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Daniel W. Perkins, of East Saginaw, Mich., the sum of $915, being in full for his services rendered as substitute district attorney of the eastern district of Michigan from October 1, 1871, to June 30, 1875.

The report (by Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8846) for the relief Daniel W. Perkins, submit the following report:

This bill was favorably reported by the Committee on the Judiciary in Forty-seventh Congress, and as that report embodies the facts in the case, it is adopted as the report of this committee, and is as follows:

"This bill is for the relief of Daniel W. Perkins, of East Saginaw, Mich., who was appointed a substitute attorney under section 14 of the act of Congress of August 16, 1856, and acted as district attorney in cases before United States commissioners in Saginaw County, in said State. His claim is for services rendered from October 1, 1871, to April, 1875. The claim of Mr. Perkins seems to your committee to be entirely just and reasonable. When Mr. Perkins presented his bill for said services he was told that the appropriations for the various years he had served the United States were exhausted, and it could not be paid without an act of Congress authorizing the payment. The act referred to fully authorized the appointment and employment of substitute attorneys, who are to receive the same fees as the district attorney. This law continued in force up to 1874, when the Revised Statutes were adopted, at which time this provision seems to have been dropped; but the omission was not discovered by the authorities in the Department until July, 1875, and notice was not given until August following.

"The claimant, it seems by the printed report of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Forty-fourth Congress—which was a favorable report,—furnished said Judiciary Committee a list of the cases he tried as such substitute attorney, and a full copy of his account, but the same is not now to be found; which account, as appears from said report of the Judiciary Committee, was duly certified to by the commissioners before whom the cases were pending when the services were performed; also the certificate of the First Comptroller of the Treasury, showing that the charges correspond with the cases reported, and that neither the claimant nor any one else has ever been paid for the services rendered.

"The district attorney also appends his certificate to the same, as appears by said report, showing that he appointed Mr. Perkins as such substitute, and that he rendered said services for several years.

"The claim of the memorialist amounts to the sum of $1,090, and appended to it, as appears by said report of said Judiciary Committee, are the following certificates:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
"Washington, D. C.:

"I, James R. Cook, late United States commissioner for the eastern district of Michigan, do hereby certify that the dates stated in the foregoing cases as examinations had before me are correct and true, showing the time occupied in such examinations; that Daniel W. Perkins was the attorney, and the only attorney, who appeared for the United States Government and conducted such examinations.

"JAMES R. COOK,
"Late United States Commissioner, Eastern District of Michigan.

"TREASURY DEPARTMENT, FIRST COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE,
"July 10, 1876.

"The records and files of this Department show that examinations were had in the cases specified in the foregoing statement of D. W. Perkins, substitute United States attorney, in said cases have been made by said attorney or his substitute, D. W. Perkins.

R. W. TAYLER, Comptroller.

"UNITED STATES DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S OFFICE,
"For the Eastern District of Michigan:

"I, A. B. Maynard, United States district attorney for the eastern district of Michigan, do hereby certify that D. W. Perkins, of East Saginaw, Mich., has been my deputy at that place for a number of years; that none of the services of the said Perkins were ever audited with my services in any cases in which said Perkins appeared; that I have never been allowed or paid for any services which said Perkins has performed as such deputy district attorney; that all the pay which said Perkins has received for his services as such deputy district attorney has been allowed and audited by the First Auditor of the Treasury; and that the said Perkins should receive pay for such services as he has performed which do not appear to have been audited by said First Auditor; that the certificate of United States commissioner, before whom said Perkins performed said services, will show what these services were; that I have been personally acquainted with Mr. D. W. Perkins for many years, and know him to be reliable and truthful and trustworthy, and that he would not present any account for services which was not correct and true; that I personally know that he has not been paid for a number of years, but I can not give the exact date; that the fact of his not being paid grew out of the fact of Mr. Perkins not presenting his account till after the estimates for the years had been exhausted or closed.

"Dated June 24, 1876.

"A. B. MAYNARD,
"United States District Attorney for the Eastern District of Michigan.

"TREASURY DEPARTMENT, FIRST COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., June 5, 1876.

"SIR: Your letter of the 3d instant to the First Auditor relative to a claim of Daniel W. Perkins has been referred to this office. By section 14, act of August 16, 1856, district attorneys were authorized to employ substitutes, who were to receive the same fee as the district attorneys for the same services. Mr. Perkins was so employed and so paid. His last account settled at this Department embraced services to the 30th day of September, 1871. In the revision of the statutes of the United States the authority to employ substitutes was dropped.

"It appears from the district attorney's statement that Mr. Perkins continued to act until April, 1875. I therefore presume that his claim is for compensation as substitute attorney from October 1, 1871, to April, 1875, which can not be paid at the Treasury for want of authority. His account has probably been rendered to the Department of Justice, where it would properly go if it could be allowed.

"R. W. TAYLER, Comptroller.

"Hon. N. B. BRADLEY,
"House of Representatives.

"Your committee, from this examination and from the above facts as found by the Judiciary Committee of the Forty-fourth Congress, and from the evidence attached to their report, come to the conclusion that there can be no doubt about the justice of the claim of the said Daniel W. Perkins, and that it should be paid; and therefore, without waiting for the filing of a new statement of his account, so lost, we report back the bill so referred to said committee and recommend that it pass."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

P. H. WINSTON.

Mr. CULBERSON. I now call up the bill (H. R. 4239) for the relief of P. H. Winston, and ask also in this case to discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar from its further consideration, and consider it in the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there be paid to Patrick H. Winston, of Lewiston, Nez Percé County, Idaho Territory, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $750, in full compensation for his legal services in defense of Tom Hill, a captain of the Indian police of the Nez Percé agency, tried and acquitted in the first district court of Idaho Territory in the year 1886.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ROGERS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JOHN W. MEARS.

Mr. CULBERSON. I now call up the bill (H. R. 3235) to restore to John W. Mears a fine improperly imposed upon him.

Mr. CASWELL. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar be discharged from the further consideration of this bill, and that it be considered in the House.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is, directed to pay to John W. Mears the sum of $200, being amount of a fine improperly imposed upon and collected from him, and which was turned into the Treasury of the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KERR. I would like to have the report read in that case subject to the right of objection.

The report (by Mr. CASWELL) was read, as follows:

This bill passed the Senate in the Forty-ninth Congress. It was also considered by the Committee on Claims of the House in that Congress and received a favorable report. That report sets forth the facts substantially as we find them, and we adopt and make it a part of our report and recommend that the bill do pass.

The claimant was master of the schooner Brinton M. Tilton, of Onancock, Va. On his return from James River to Chincoteague Bay, Virginia, on the evening of March 22, 1884, he ran his schooner into Wachapreague Inlet, to land some of the men who had gone to Norfolk with him. He anchored at least a mile above the anchorage for vessels, where the channel is not more than a hundred yards wide. He went ashore in the afternoon, expecting to return to the schooner by sunset, and omitted to tell the crew, who were new men, to place the lights in position. Claimant was detained on shore, and the crew, thinking the anchorage was not on a navigable stream, failed to place the lights upon the schooner, as required by Revised Statutes, section 4233. The schooner was without a light for a few hours in the early part of the night, and before the return of claimant on board.

Whilst in this condition a small revenue-cutter (drawing 2 feet 6 inches of water), which had been detained in the bay above by the tide, passed by, and the schooner was reported for not having lights, and the fine of $200 provided by section 4234, Revised Statutes, was imposed upon claimant, and he was compelled to pay the same, and it was covered into the Treasury before he obtained judicial action in the premises.

George Toy, the collector at that point, in a letter of October 27, 1884, to the Secretary of the Treasury, says, "I am satisfied it was not the intention of Mr. Mears to violate the law in the premises;" and he recommends that the fine be remitted.

Your committee are of opinion that the fine should have been remitted, and they therefore recommend that the bill (H. R. 5477) which they have had under consideration do pass.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CULBERSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ANNULMENT OF CERTAIN LAND TITLES, TEXAS.

Mr. CULBERSON. I now call up the bill (H. R. 1887) to annul certain titles to land acquired by judicial proceedings in the courts of the United States in Texas, and for other purposes.

I ask that this bill, which is on the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

There was no objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas on the 11th day of December, 1873, the United States obtained judgment in the circuit court of the United States sitting at Tyler, Tex., in the western district of Texas, for $50,000, against William T. Scott, William Umbdenstock, and others, sureties on the official bond of Davis B. Bonfoy, late collector of internal revenue for the fourth district of Texas, cause 1037, and it appearing from the facts that on the trial of the cause against the said sureties they were deprived of their defense by having, through mistake, presented their accounts and facts in favor of Davis B. Bonfoy, their principal, then deceased, to the wrong accounting officer at Washington, D. C., for his action thereon, and said accounts were returned by said officer to the United States attorney representing the Government in the cause without any action thereon, which fact was not known to defendants until they had announced themselves ready for trial; and

Whereas facts subsequently discovered show that at the date of said judgment Davis B. Bonfoy, as collector aforesaid, was not really indebted to the United States, which facts could not have been known at the time to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department, for the reason that the moneys belonging to the United States in the hands of Bonfoy at the time of his death were taken charge of by the military authorities of the United States then commanding at Marshall, Tex. (the State being under military rule), and returned to and accounted for by said military authorities to the War instead of the Treasury Department; and

Whereas since said money so returned to the War Department has been taken up by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department in a readjustment of the accounts of the said Davis B. Bonfoy, as collector, and it appearing from said last adjustment, including the newly-discovered funds in the War Department, that at the time said judgment was obtained against said sureties Bonfoy really owed the Government nothing, but in fact had a balance due him from the Government: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the United States hereby relinquishes to the heirs or legal representatives of William T. Scott, late of Scottsville, Harrison County, Texas, all the right, title, and interest, real or pretended, of the United States in and to fifty-two sections of land, of 640 acres each, aggregating 33,280 acres, lying and being situated in the counties of Tom Green, Mitchell, Concho, and Atascosa, in the State of Texas, which said lands were bought in for the United States by Stillwell H. Russell, then United States marshal for the western district of Texas, at a public sale made by him, the said Stillwell H. Russell, United States marshal, on the first Thursday in October, 1878, under and by virtue of an alias pluries execution dated June 10, 1878, issuing out of the circuit court of the United States on a judgment obtained by the United States in the circuit court of the United States sitting at Tyler, Tex., in the western judicial district of Texas, on the 11th day of December, 1873, against William T. Scott and others, as sureties on the bond of Davis B. Bonfoy, collector aforesaid, cause 1037, and levied on said lands on the 5th day of September, 1878, and by him, as such marshal, following the statute in such case made and provided, deeded to the United States in a deed bearing date December 9, 1878, and recorded in Tom Green County (the county of Mitchell being then a part of Tom Green County), in book C of deeds of said county, folios 128 to 138, inclusive; and that all the right, title, and interest of the United States, real or pretended, to said lands, be, and the same are hereby, as fully and thoroughly divested out of the United States as if no such judgment had ever been obtained; and the Solicitor of the United States Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to reconvey to the said heirs or legal representatives of the said William T. Scott all the right, title, and interest of the United States to said lands, as fully described in the aforesaid deed.

SEC. 2. That the Treasurer of the United States be, and he is hereby, directed to refund to William T. Scott and William Umbdenstock, of Harrison County, Texas, sureties aforesaid, or to their heirs or legal representatives, the sum of $5,500, by them paid into the Treasury of the United States on the 17th day of September, 1881, in compromise of said judgment; and said sum is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and made immediately available for said purpose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HOVEY. I object to the consideration of that bill.

Mr. KERR. I would like to ask a question.

Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR. I think if these gentlemen understood the nature of this bill there would be no objection to its consideration.

Mr. KERR. I am not objecting, but only wish to ask a question.

Mr. HOVEY. I am objecting.

Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR. This bill is to correct, as far as can be corrected, a case in which there was more injustice, more crime, and more accident against the parties whose relief is sought than in any other bill that has ever been presented to this House.

Mr. KERR. Is there authentic evidence before the committee that the bill recites the facts?

Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR. There is, and more than that. The bill recites the facts, but does not recite all of the facts of the case. It is the most wonderful case that has ever come to my knowledge since I have been a member of this House.

Mr. PARKER. I hope the gentleman from Indiana will withhold his objection until an explanation can be made.

Mr. HOVEY. I have read the report in this case and understand it.

Mr. PARKER. Of course if the gentleman feels justified in his objection without reading the report, it is in his power to prevent the consideration of the bill.

Mr. HOVEY. This was a judgment of $50,000 against the sureties in this case; the land was sold under the judgment, and they not only seek to get back the land, but also to have the sureties paid $5,000 in addition.

Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR. After that judgment was obtained, it was found that this man who was supposed to be a defaulter, and who had been arrested and put in jail and died there, and his wife killed by the guard who was supposed to be protecting the money of the Government in her house, had deposited to the credit of the United States more money, and more was taken from him by force than the amount of the judgment. That is why the claim of $5,000 is to be paid back.

Mr. LANHAM. Is it not fully sustained by the evidence?

Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR. It is, unquestionably.

Mr. HOVEY. I object to the consideration of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection being made, the bill will be withdrawn, under the order.

CORPORATIONS AS SURETIES.

Mr. CULBERSON. I call up the bill (H. R. 3380) to authorize certain corporations to become surety in cases within the jurisdiction of Federal courts and Departments.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I would like to have the bill read, subject to the right of objection.

Mr. CULBERSON. This bill is on the House Calendar.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever by the laws of the United States any person or corporation is required or permitted to make, execute, and give bond, stipulation, or undertaking, with or without sureties, conditioned for the faithful performance of any trust, office, or duty, or for the doing or not doing of anything in said bond, stipulation, or undertaking specified, any company incorporated and organized under the laws of any State of the United States and authorized to guaranty the fidelity of persons holding positions of public or private trust, and to execute or guaranty bonds and undertakings, may, upon production of evidence of solvency and credit satisfactory to any judge of any Federal court, or clerk thereof, district attorney, United States commissioner, head of a Department, collector of customs or revenue, or any other officer who is now or may hereafter be authorized by law or regulations to approve of the sufficiency of any such bond, stipulation, or undertaking, or of the sureties thereon, be accepted as sole and sufficient surety upon the bond, stipulation, or undertaking of any person or corporation required by the laws of the United States to make, execute, and give a stipulation, bond, or undertaking.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

Add to the bill the following proviso:

"Provided, That the proofs taken of the solvency of the surety approved shall be attached to the bond and filed in the office where it is required to be kept."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I shall not object to its consideration, but it seems to be a bill of doubtful utility, and I think some explanation why the United States shall make this departure should be given. I do not believe in killing bills by single objections, but certainly some reason for this innovation should be given.

Mr. CASWELL. If the report was read it would satisfy the gentleman.

Mr. CULBERSON. The report is quite lengthy.

Mr. CASWELL. I would like, then, to have the gentleman from Texas make a brief explanation of it. It is a bill full of merit.

Mr. CULBERSON. This bill was reported to the House by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES], who is now necessarily absent. The bill, as I understand, was introduced into the House by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER], and also one by Mr. MORSE, of Massachusetts.

I will yield the floor for five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] to explain the bill.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. The subject covered by the bill can be explained in a very few words. Under existing laws persons required to give bonds for the faithful performance of official duties give individual sureties. Under our State laws we have corporations organized according to law whose sole purpose is to guaranty the bonds of public officials. These corporations do this business now under the courts of the State. They are subject to frequent examination and careful investigation. They are supervised in the State of New York by the insurance department. The capital is required to be invested, and altogether they comprise far better security than can be had under any individual suretyship.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Will the gentleman from New York yield for a question? These corporations are creatures of State laws, and there is no Federal supervision extended over them. In what way can they be of use on official bonds?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. There is no difficulty about that at all. I desire to say that the whole subject has been treated in a report of the Postmaster-General, the Secretary of War, and the Paymaster-General of the Army, and they have urgently recommended that they be permitted to accept the surety of these corporations upon bonds in lieu of individual bonds.

Mr. BUCHANAN. You refer to corporations organized expressly for the purpose of offering suretyships for so much percentage.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. They are doing business in the different States.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Does not the gentleman know that many of these companies have accepted liabilities ten times in excess of their assets?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. The bill itself provides that the solvency of the companies taking the surety shall be attached to the bond and recorded in the office where it is required to be kept, and under State laws they are subject to frequent investigation, and a rigid examination may be required to be made at any time.

Mr. BUCHANAN. This might mean that the company is solvent itself and could provide for its debts, but does the solvency apply where an excess exists over their contingent liabilities?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. In regard to that, the experience of all those corporations that have existed for many years in Europe has been that men as a rule are honest, and that the companies are watching and looking after persons for whom they may be surety, and for the protection of the principal in every case. The committee, in order to investigate this subject, heard the recommendation of the Departmental officials, and in closing a long report say they "unanimously approve this bill with an amendment, and recommend its passage as a valuable addition to existing legislation, and as tending to strengthen the Government's security in all forms of bonds and undertakings, as well as to largely decrease the expense in every Department, now inseparable from the investigations touching the solvency of individual sureties."

There would be no trouble with the corporation in guarantying the bond of an official. They have a fixed liability, with a responsible company always ready to respond; and it has come to be taken as a maxim that the safest and best means to relieve a surety upon a bond, or an official bond, or upon an undertaking of any character in a court or in a surrogate's court is a bond provided by these guaranty companies.

Mr. CASWELL. Is it not true that these companies have the right to keep watch upon the principals, and to see that they perform their duties and are not liable to become defaulters?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. They do look after those for whom they are surety.

Mr. KERR. Is there not this objection, that it gives aggregated capital power over their dependents?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. On the contrary, I happen to know that through the supervision of these companies in the State of New York in a number of cases defaulting officials and trustees have been apprehended; and their system is such that they keep a constant watch over persons for whom they are surety. In many cases they protect the principal by the watchfulness they exercise as surety.

Mr. CASWELL. Will the gentleman read the list of the States that have adopted this system?

Mr. BUCHANAN. But my objection is beyond that, and it is this——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] has expired.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a statement. I am satisfied that this bill can not pass the House to-night——

Mr. CASWELL. Why not?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. If the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON] will permit me, I would like to read the names of the States that have adopted this rule. The committee say:

We find that already the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Alabama, Georgia, California, Oregon, and some others have passed such laws, and from the reports of judges and referees in certain cases we find that the suretyship of corporations organized for that purpose has proved itself of inestimable value to litigants, officials, and the bar generally.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Does the gentleman know of any institution of this kind in any of the States over which the Federal laws have any sort of supervision?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. There is no difficulty in enforcing a bond executed by a guaranty company in any State where such a corporation exists. By the law of New York, where we have such corporations, they are subject to prosecution, and in no case has there been any trouble in enforcing their liability.

Mr. CASWELL. They assume the same general status as life-insurance companies.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I am not speaking of that; I am speaking of power of supervision, power to make examination into their solvency and responsibility.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. There never has been any trouble at all in that respect.

Mr. BUCHANAN. We shall be obliged to depend upon the State officers for that in every case.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. There has never been any trouble about that. And then it will be observed that this bill is not obligatory; it is only permissive.

Mr. PARKER. I should like to be heard for one minute on this bill.

Mr. CULBERSON. I yield to the gentleman for one minute.

Mr. PARKER. I am in favor of this bill for two reasons: one is a reason that has been already suggested, namely, that these companies assuming this responsibility always have vigilant and skilled agents to watch the principals to see that they are not following courses likely to result in default. The other reason I will state in answer to the suggestion of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR], who thinks that these companies, as parties defendant, may have an interest to defend powerfully persons who are charged with defalcation. I wish to say that the effect is just the other way, because when such a case comes before a jury they have not the sympathy that they would have for the man, for the wife of the man, for the children of the man who is defending. They treat the defendant as a corporation and make it pay the damages, just as they would make a railroad company or any other corporation pay.

The amendment reported by the Committee on the Judiciary was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CULBERSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

TO ANNUL CERTAIN LAND TITLES, TEXAS.

Mr. HOVEY. Mr. Speaker, at the earnest solicitation of my colleagues from Ohio and Illinois I withdraw my objection to the consideration of House bill 1887, to annul certain titles to land acquired by judicial proceedings in the courts of the United States in Texas, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there further objection to the consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. KILGORE moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

UNITED STATES COURTS, FLORIDA.

Mr. CULBERSON. I call up the bill (H. R. 8025) to amend an act entitled "An act to extend the jurisdiction of the district and circuit courts of the United States for the southern district of Florida," approved February 3, 1879.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This bill is reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add as section 2 of the bill the following:

"SEC. 2. That all process and recognizances issued from the clerk's office of said circuit or district court shall be taken and considered as returnable to the term or terms hereby established in lieu of the term existing at the time such process was issued."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DAVIDSON, of Florida, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

STERLING H. TUCKER AND OTHERS.

Mr. CULBERSON. I call up the bill (H. R. 8674) for the relief of Sterling H. Tucker and others, and yield to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This bill is in Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar. In the absence of objection the Committee of the Whole House will be discharged from its further consideration, and it will come before the House, subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Sterling H. Tucker, William P. Grace, Elhanon J. Searle, Josiah H. Demby, Samuel Bard, and William G. Pennington, or their estates, be, and they and each of them are hereby, released from any and all liability as the sureties upon the official bond of James W. Demby, formerly pension agent, the said release to take effect upon the payment of the legal costs heretofore accrued in the prosecution of said claim by the United States: Provided, That all the rights and remedies of the Government on said bond as against said James W. Demby shall in no manner be affected hereby, but remain in full force and effect in law.

The SPEAKER pro tempore Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. KERR. I would like to hear a statement of the circumstances of the case.

Mr. ROGERS. The report is not very long; but I believe I can state the substance of it more quickly than it can be read. Mr. James W. Demby, the principal in the bond in this case, was appointed a pension agent at Little Rock, Ark., in 1868, and went out of office June 20, 1870, a defaulter to the Government in the sum of about $14,000; that was the amount of judgment rendered against him. The Government remained quiet, brought no suit, gave the sureties no notice, took no steps of any description to collect this money, until April 30, 1886, sixteen years after Mr. Demby went out of office. When he went out of office every surety on his bond was solvent and entirely capable of paying the debt.

Sterling H. Tucker, for instance, was the most prominent banker in the State, his paper being considered as good as bank notes. He is now a man of seventy years of age, and absolutely insolvent, working in the post-office at Little Rock as a clerk on a small salary. Samuel Bard, another of the sureties, is dead, having died insolvent. Mr. Searle I have lost sight of entirely. He was a supreme judge under reconstruction; some years ago I learned he was in St. Louis in extreme poverty; in recent years I have never heard of him. Josiah H. Demby, the brother of the principal in the bond, is residing in the city of Pine Bluff. The only property he had, a single lot, was sold the other day for $100, to satisfy, so far as it went, this judgment.

William P. Grace, the only one now remaining of the sureties who has a cent of property subject to execution, is a man seventy years of age, living in Pine Bluff; he has a small home, and I suppose ekes out an humble livelihood.

When this matter was brought to my attention I applied to the Solicitor of the Treasury to ascertain the facts, and his reply is embraced in this report. My fullest information, however, I obtained by addressing a letter to the United States district attorney at Little Rock, who gives me the facts substantially as I have stated them. He closes his report by saying:

The defalcation took place some fifteen or eighteen years ago, and if the matter had been pressed then many of the sureties were entirely solvent who are now worth nothing. Tucker at that time was a banker here, and could have paid the whole amount without embarrassment; but now he has nothing, is working on a small salary in the post-office at this place, and the other sureties were then, I understand, in a good financial condition. So, under the circumstances, I think the relief should be granted.

I have given the substantial points of this case. It is one which illustrates in the strongest manner the wisdom of the bill which we passed to-night requiring the Government to proceed promptly against parties who are charged with being defaulters, and providing that if suit be not instituted within five years after the person retires from office the sureties shall be discharged.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ROGERS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ALIEN OWNERSHIP OF LAND IN TERRITORIES.

Mr. CULBERSON. I call up House bill No. 6832, and yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. CASWELL]. I will state that this is the last bill which we propose to bring before the House this evening.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6822) to amend chapter 340 of the laws of 1887, entitled "An act to restrict the ownership of real estate in the Territories to American citizens, etc."

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3 of chapter 340, of the laws of 1887, approved March 3, 1887, be amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 3. That no corporation other than those organized for the construction or operation of railways, canals, or turnpikes, shall acquire, hold, or own more than 5,000 acres of land in any of the Territories of the United States; and no railroad, canal, or turnpike corporation, shall hereafter acquire, hold, or own lands in any territory, other than as may be necessary for the proper operation of its railroad, canal, or turnpike, except such lands as may have been granted it by act of Congress. But the prohibition of this section shall not affect the title to any lands now lawfully held by any such corporation: Provided, That this section shall not apply to lands acquired, in good faith, by mercantile or manufacturing corporations, organized under the laws of the United States, or the constitutions or laws of any State or Territory in the United States or the District of Columbia, upon foreclosure, execution, or judicial proceedings, or taken in payment of pre-existing bona fide indebtedness due to such corporations in the ordinary course of business."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill.

Mr. FULLER. I object.

Mr. CULBERSON. I move that the House adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 9 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills of the following titles were introduced and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. DINGLEY: A bill (H. R. 10999) granting a pension to William H. Coffin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DUBOIS: A bill (H. R. 11000) to authorize the leasing of the school and university lands in the Territory of Idaho, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. MCKENNA: A bill (H. R. 11001) granting a pension to George W. Johnson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MCKINLEY: A bill (H. R. 11002) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Eli Haines—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11003) granting a pension to Edward Balmat—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. THOMAS WILSON: A bill (H. R. 11004) granting a pension to Sarah A. Tryon—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. YODER: A bill (H. R. 11005) granting a pension to Ester Gaven—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. J. M. ALLEN: Petition to have the claim of Peter F. Archer, deceased, referred to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BLOUNT: Petition of heirs of H. J. Dickson, for reference of their claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BINGHAM: Petition of the Commercial Exchange of Philadelphia, requesting prompt passage of Senate bill 2851—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. BUNNELL: Petition for the relief of Mary Van Buskirk, widow of John B. Van Buskirk—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. COWLES: Resolution asking that a day be set apart for consideration of bill relating to compensation of district attorneys, marshals, etc.—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. CUTCHEON: Petition of citizens of Manistee County, Michigan, for amendments to the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. GOFF: Petition of Mrs. Lavinia A. Patton and Miss Belle Hartley, for pensions—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of the board of commissioners of Ohio County, West Virginia, for an appropriation for the repair of the national road recently damaged by the great flood in West Virginia—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. JACKSON: Petition of Council No. 48, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Beaver Falls, Pa., for the passage of Senate bill 553, regulating immigration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MCCREARY: Petition of James H. Orr, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOFFITT: Petition of Knights of Labor of Ellenburgh, N. Y., in favor of H. R. 8716—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. NICHOLS: Petition of citizens of Caswell County, North Carolina, for certain amendments to the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. CHARLES O'NEILL: Petition of citizens of Philadelphia, Pa., in favor of House bill No. 8716—to the Committee on Labor.

The following petition, indorsing the per diem rated service-pension bill, based on the principle of paying all soldiers, sailors, and marines of the late war a monthly pension of 1 cent a day for each day they were in the service, was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions:

By Mr. GIFFORD: Of Joseph Elson and 28 others, soldiers of the late war, of Spink County, Dakota.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, July 27, 1888.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 13th instant, reports of the Solicitor of the Treasury and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and of Mr. H. B. Littlepage, lately employed as an agent of the Treasury Department, in regard to property of the United States, or to which the United States have a valid claim, which is held in adverse possession against the United States; which, on motion of Mr. CALL, was, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented two petitions of citizens of Coos County, New Hampshire, praying for certain amendments to the interstate-commerce law; which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. PLATT presented a petition of citizens of Connecticut, praying for the passage of such legislation as will more effectually protect agriculture; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Meriden, Conn., praying for certain amendments to the interstate-commerce law; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. QUAY presented petitions of Southwark Council, No. 144, Philadelphia, Pa., and of Sewickley Council, No. 170, Sewickley, Pa., Junior Order of United American Mechanics, praying for the passage of Senate bill 553, to regulate and restrict immigration; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented petitions of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Union City, Pa., and vicinity, of John C. Steiner and 24 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of W. H. Wharton and 14 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of William H. Vantassel and 43 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of H. W. Drips and 28 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Theodore Hunt and 10 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of William Frasier and 23 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Samuel B. Kennedy and 27 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of J. H. Lasher and 30 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of William McElfresh and 12 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of W. H. Smith and 9 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Amos Kuhl and 28 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of J. D. McQuaide and 11 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Jacob L. Grove and 17 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of John H. Anderson and 6 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Henry Bain and 2 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of M. L. Carnahan and 5 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of John H. Park and 38 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Vachel Catlin and 31 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Albert S. Borlin and 12 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of George H. Murphy and 28 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of J. A. Pearce and 18 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of C. L. Palmer and 8 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of C. P. Craver and 66 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of J. H. Murdock and 12 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of W. H. Swart and 18 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of William Anderson and 14 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of D. L. Crawford and 36 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of M. R. Haymaker and 15 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Henry Campbell and 18 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of H. C. Fishel and 18 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Michael R. Meanor and 37 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Andrew Cook and 35 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Henry Stoble and 25 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Charles Wiley and 6 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of C. G. Koechlin and 27 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Samuel McCutchin and 20 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of W. D. Patterson and 17 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of William J. Woods and 44 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of N. N. Fullerton and 19 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Jesse A. Clements and 8 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of John R. Henry and 7 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of William Behney and 10 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of J. W. Wilson and 6 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Joseph P. Love and 15 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of John Lauffer and 5 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of James Miller and 18 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Simon Bitts and 37 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of P. C. King and 14 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, and M. S. Tarr and 14 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, all of Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE presented the petition of W. W. Smith and 89 others, citizens of Manistee, Mich., praying for an amendment of the interstate-commerce law; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. VOORHEES presented a petition of citizens of Farmland, Ind., praying for the better protection of the Yellowstone National Park; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of Andrew Weiand, late private of Company A, Eleventh Regiment Indiana Infantry, praying for an increase of pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SPOONER presented the petition of S. A. H. McKim, executor of the estate of James Gill, praying that the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized and instructed to cancel a draft heretofore issued in the name of Joseph N. Gill for $159.77, and issue a new draft in its stead for a like sum, the discrepancy in the name having been occasioned by a clerical error; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

CAPITOL, NORTH O STREET AND SOUTH WASHINGTON RAILWAY.

Mr. HARRIS. The Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 10758) to amend the charter of the Capitol, North O Street and South Washington Railway Company, direct me to report the same back without amendment, and as it is an exceedingly short bill I will ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that it be now considered.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let it be read for information.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read at length, subject to objection.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Capitol, North O Street and South Washington Railway Company is hereby authorized to extend its tracks and run its cars thereon through and along the following-named streets: Beginning at Fourteenth and B streets southwest, east along B street southwest to Twelfth street southwest, to an intersection with its present line on said Twelfth street.

SEC. 2. That section 3 of the act entitled "An act to amend the charter of the Capitol, North O Street and South Washington Railway Company," approved March 3, 1881, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. 3. That unless said extension is completed and the cars run thereon within six months from the passage and approval of this act, the authority herein granted shall be void.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SHERMAN. What is the section repealed?

Mr. HARRIS. This extension simply connects the detached link described in the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. But what is the section repealed?

Mr. HARRIS. The section repealed is the section which fixes a two-cent fare extra on that detached link. It simply makes that link a part of the general system.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISTRICT POLICE-COURT JURY.

Mr. FAULKNER. I am instructed by the Committee on the District of Columbia to report with an amendment the bill (S. 3132) to provide for four police magistrates in the District of Columbia, to define their powers and jurisdiction, to provide for trial by jury in the police court of the said District, and for other purposes; and as the bill is simply for the purpose of providing a jury for the police court under the decision of the Supreme Court rendered in May last, I am instructed to ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered at this time.

The bill, I will state, has been drawn by the judges of the District and approved by the District attorney, and carefully considered by the committee.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. That in all causes of which the police court of the District of Columbia has original jurisdiction and in which, under the law, a person accused of an offense is entitled to a trial by jury, the said jury shall consist of twelve persons selected in conformity with the provisions and requirements of the twenty-fourth chapter of the Revised Statutes relating to the District of Columbia, except in so far as the said provisions and requirements are modified, altered, or amended by the provisions of this act: Provided, That the person charged may waive his right to a trial by jury, which waiver shall be entered on the records of the court, and submit the trial of the cause to the judge of said police court, whose judgment therein shall have the same effect as if the cause had been tried by a jury.

SEC. 2. That the names of those persons who may be selected to be drawn for jury service in the said police court, as herein provided, shall be put and kept in a box for that purpose, distinct and separate from that used for the names of persons selected to be drawn for jury service in the supreme court of the District of Columbia. Such names shall be put in said box at such times as the public convenience and the necessities of the case may require; and should said names be exhausted by drawing from said box at a time when said supreme court in general term is not in session, and the officers or persons to make lists of jurors are from any cause not in existence or capable of acting, the commissioners of the District of Columbia shall act as such officers or persons for the time being, with respect to jurors for said police court; and at least twenty-six names shall be drawn at any given time for service on the jury at the said police court.

SEC. 3. That all jurors summoned to serve on a jury in the said police court shall serve for a term of one month, and shall receive as compensation for each day's attendance the sum of $2, and for each half-day's attendance the sum of $1. Any vacancies in the jury so called for service in the police court shall be filled by talesmen to be supplied as now provided by law in the case of vacancies in a jury for service in the supreme court of said District of Columbia. No person shall be eligible for service on a jury in said police court for more than one term in any period of twelve months; but service on said jury shall not render any person so serving exempt, ineligible, or disqualified for service in the said supreme court, except during the time of actual service on such jury in said police court.

SEC. 4. That the power to examine and commit, or hold to bail, in any offense cognizable in the supreme court of the said District, shall remain in the judge of the said police court, as is now provided by law.

SEC. 5. That all laws or parts of laws inconsistent with the foregoing are hereby repealed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. PLATT. I wish the Senator who reported the bill would make some explanation of the provisions of the amendment.

Mr. FAULKNER. The bill simply provides for a jury in the police court of the District of Columbia.

Mr. PLATT. In what kind of cases?

Mr. FAULKNER. Under the existing law there is no provision for a jury in the police court of the District, and under the decision of the Supreme Court, made on the 14th of May, the court held that no case could be tried in the police court except those inferior misdemeanors for breaches of ordinances of the city, and similar offenses, as in other cases the Constitution guarantied to the accused a trial by jury.

When that decision was rendered, of course it limited very greatly the jurisdiction of the police court by reason of the fact that it had no jury to try cases coming within the decision of the Supreme Court.

The judge of that court, one of the judges of the supreme court of the District, and the district attorney prepared a bill and had it presented in Congress and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia. The bill has been carefully examined, and all its provisions have been excluded in reference to the appointment of magistrates, which was provided for in that bill extending the criminal system, and only the provisions in reference to the jury retained.

The provisions as to the drawing of a jury are the same as those which govern in regard to the drawing of juries for the supreme court; they are to be drawn under the provision of the law which governs the drawing of juries for that court.

I will state to the Senator from Connecticut that this bill is regarded as exceedingly important in the interest of public justice, for the reason that the criminal court has now adjourned and will not have any jury before October, and unless this bill is passed any one charged with an offense governed by the decision of the Supreme Court will have to remain in jail until the first of October without trial, if it is impossible for him to give bail. For that reason the officers of the District are very anxious that it should be passed as promptly as possible.

Mr. PLATT. In what sort of criminal cases does the police court have original jurisdiction?

Mr. FAULKNER. It has original jurisdiction by statute of petit larceny, of assault and battery, and of such inferior misdemeanors, and is the committing court for all felonies for the criminal court.

Mr. PLATT. It does not include felonies?

Mr. FAULKNER. No.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for trial by jury in the police court of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes."

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. FARWELL. I am directed by the Committee on the District of Columbia to report favorably, and to ask the consideration at this time of the bill (H. R. 9977) to authorize the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company to extend a side track into square No. 1025, in the city of Washington.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois asks that the bill may be now considered. It will be read at length for information.

Mr. FRYE. I shall be obliged to object to its present consideration.

Mr. FARWELL. It will take but a moment. It will provoke no discussion.

Mr. FRYE. I am obliged to object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine objects, and the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2590) granting a pension to George L. Sanders, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SAWYER (for Mr. DAVIS), from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3325) granting an increase of pension to Julia M. Edie, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PAYNE. I am directed by a majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the bill (S. 948) for the relief of James and William Crooks, of Canada, to report it without amendment.

In the course of the morning I shall file a written report and the views of the minority.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Meanwhile the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. FAULKNER, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3054) to abolish the police court and office of justice of the peace in and for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. DANIEL, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom were referred amendments intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill for a public building for post-office and other Government purposes, at Roanoke, Va., and for extension of the public building at Lynchburgh, Va., reported them favorably, and moved their reference to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7762) authorizing the restoration to the Reform School of boys who have been discharged on probation, and for other purposes, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment:

A bill (H. R. 8855) for the establishment of a light-ship with a steam fog signal at Sandy Hook, New York Harbor;

A bill (H. R. 1228) for establishing a light or lights and a fog-signal at or near Ballast Point, entrance to San Diego Bay, California;

A bill (H. R. 1239) to extend the jurisdiction of the Light-House Board to the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers, California;

A bill (H. R. 10181) to establish a light-ship off Great Round Shoal, near Nantucket, Mass.;

A bill (H. R. 7604) for the establishment of a light-house and fog-signal at or near Gull Shoal, Pamlico Sound, North Carolina;

A bill (H. R. 8750) for the establishment of a light-house at or near Tangier Island, Chesapeake Bay;

A bill (H. R. 7421) for establishing a light off Pamlico Point, North Carolina;

A bill (H. R. 5716) for establishing a light at the mouth of Otter Creek, Lake Champlain;

A bill (H. R. 1541) for the erection of a light-house at or near a point about midway between Barnegat and Navesink lights, in the State of New Jersey;

A bill (H. R. 1249) for establishing a light-house and fog-signal on Roe Island, Suisun Bay, California; and

A bill (H. R. 1912) for the establishment of a light-house at the mouth of Great Wicomico River, Virginia;

Mr. MANDERSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9396) for the relief of General William F. Smith, reported it with amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. VOORHEES introduced a bill (S. 3383) granting a pension to Mary A. Potts, widow of Dr. Alfred Potts; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3384) to purchase a painting of Abraham Lincoln; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on the Library.

Mr. FAULKNER introduced a bill (S. 3385) to regulate the practice of pharmacy in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. PALMER (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3386) providing that the fund held for the redemption of United States notes shall be composed of gold and silver, half in gold coin and gold bullion and half in silver bullion equal in value to the gold half; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SPOONER introduced a bill (S. 3387) granting a pension to Charles S. Hamilton; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. FARWELL introduced a bill (S. 3388) granting a pension to Morgan Welsh; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. DANIEL and Mr. GORMAN submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORT OF COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION.

Mr. BLAIR submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That of the report of the Commissioner of Education for 1887–'88 there be printed 6,000 copies for the use of the Senate, 1,000 copies for the use of the House, and 20,000 copies for distribution by the Commissioner.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

Mr. CULLOM. The resolution introduced by me two or three days ago in reference to the Canadian Pacific Railway was to be laid before the Senate this morning. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] wishes to have it lie over. The amendment which he has prepared to offer to the resolution he left by mistake at his rooms.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask that the resolution may lie over until Monday.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will lie over until Monday.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 64) to authorize the juries of the United States circuit and district courts to be used interchangeably, and to provide for drawing talesmen;

A bill (S. 143) to provide for the issuing and recording of certain commissions in the Department of Justice;

A bill (S. 183) requiring notice of deficiency in accounts of principals to be given to sureties upon bonds of United States officials, and fixing a limitation of time within which suits shall be brought against said sureties upon said bonds; and

A bill (S. 783) to correct the enrollment of an act approved March 3, 1887, entitled "An act to amend sections 1, 2, 3, and 10 of an act to determine the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of the United States, and to regulate the removal of causes from the State courts, and for other purposes, approved March 3, 1875."

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 928) in relation to marriage between white men and Indian women, with amendments; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 1312) to provide for a term of court at Quincy, Ill.;

A bill (H. R. 1426) supplementary to the act of July 1, 1862, entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," and also of the act of July 2, 1864, and other acts amendatory of said first-named act;

A bill (H. R. 2625) authorizing the erection of a bridge across the Missouri River at Ponca, Nebr.;

A bill (H. R. 3070) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, in Montana;

A bill (H. R. 3361) to provide for holding terms of the circuit and district courts of the United States for the district of Kentucky at Owensborough, in said district, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7438) granting to the Aberdeen, Bismarck and Northwestern Railway Company the right to construct and maintain a bridge across the Missouri River, near Winona, Emmons County, Dakota;

A bill (H. R. 6602) for the relief of James O'Brien;

A bill (H. R. 6699) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at Forest City, Dak., by the Forest City and Watertown Railroad Company;

A bill (H. R. 8355) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the St. John's River between De Land Landing and Lake Monroe, in the State of Florida;

A bill (H. R. 9420) authorizing the Houston, Central Arkansas and Northern Railway Company to construct and maintain bridges across Bayou Bartholomew, and across Ouachita, Red, Little, and Sabine Rivers, in Louisiana;

A bill (H. R. 10527) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Alabama River;

A bill (H. R. 10524) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Chattahoochee River, in the State of Georgia;

A bill (H. R. 10538) to authorize the construction of bridges across the Flint and Chattahoochee Rivers; and

A bill (H. R. 10347) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near the city of Plattsmouth, Nebr., and for other purposes.

THE FISHERIES TREATY.

Mr. FRYE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business with open doors.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine moves that the Senate proceed in open executive session to the consideration of the fisheries treaty.

Mr. BECK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion is not debatable. Is there objection to the Senator from Kentucky proceeding? The Chair hears none.

Mr. BECK. I beg pardon. I rose to object to the motion, if I can, and to say that the sundry civil appropriation bill has been pending for several days, and I understood the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] intended to call it up this morning. It is a bill of very great importance. There is a great deal of matter in it, and it will take, perhaps, two or three days to dispose of it. Nearly thirty days have gone now since the beginning of the fiscal year, and perhaps it will be necessary to extend the appropriations made by the last sundry civil appropriation act if the bill is not proceeded with at once. I do not think anything else can be as urgent as that bill, and I hope the Senate will proceed to its consideration.

Mr. FRYE. I made the motion because the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] is very anxious to occupy the floor this morning. His family is sick, and he is liable to be called away at any moment.

Mr. BECK. Oh, if that is the object, it is all right.

Mr. FRYE. I had arranged it practically with the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. BECK. That settles it.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say that I feel the same urgency respecting the sundry civil appropriation bill that the Senator from Kentucky does, but the Senator from Delaware appealed to me saying that he would be perhaps obliged to go away.

Mr. BECK. I did not know that.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say to the Senator from Kentucky and to the Senate that immediately after the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from Delaware I shall ask the Senate to consider the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. BECK. That is all right.

Mr. SHERMAN. I feel bound to give notice that after the sundry civil appropriation bill is out of the way I shall insist on getting the treaty disposed of as soon as possible, and request Senators who desire to speak on the treaty to be ready to do so early next week. The reasons are manifest, and I shall feel it my duty to press the consideration of the treaty; and in my absence the Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE] will also press it. I hope that Senators will make their arrangements so as to close the debate at least by Wednesday next.

Mr. FRYE. I beg pardon of the Senator from Ohio for making the motion to proceed to the consideration of the treaty this morning. I did not see him present when I made it.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is all right.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Maine.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate is now in open executive session. If there be no objection the reading of the Journal of the last open executive session will be dispensed with. The Executive Clerk will report the treaty by title.

The EXECUTIVE CLERK. A treaty, Executive M, between the United States and Great Britain concerning the interpretation of the convention of October 20, 1818, signed at Washington, February 15, 1888.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Mr. President, before proceeding to discuss the treaty under consideration I may be allowed to refer to a matter which has nothing to do with the merits of the treaty, but which it is necessary shall be placed right before the country.

It is known by the published proceedings of the secret executive session relating to the treaty that the Democratic members of the Senate voted against a motion made by the Senator from Massachusetts to consider the treaty in open executive session, and that the Republican side of this Chamber voted for that motion. This fact has been made the basis for the assertion by the Republican press that the Democratic Senators so voted because they believed the treaty indefensible and desired to prevent a public exposure of its real character. Indeed, it has been intimated upon this floor that our opposition to a public discussion of the treaty proceeded from that cause. These statements may have prejudiced some persons against the treaty who know nothing of its merits, and will justify a brief statement of the facts relating to the consideration of the treaty in open executive session. Soon after this treaty was sent to the Senate the Senator from Virginia [Mr. RIDDLEBERGER] offered a resolution providing for the consideration of the treaty with open doors, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations. That committee at the proper time took the resolution into consideration and reported it back adversely. When it came up in this body the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] made an able speech in opposition to an open discussion of the treaty and depicted in a most solemn manner the danger of discussing treaties with foreign powers in open executive session. He was followed by the Senator from Vermont in an equally able and elaborate argument on the same side, deprecating the injury which would be inflicted on the country by discussing in public treaties negotiated with foreign countries. Mr. HAWLEY, of Connecticut, ably presented the same view of the matter, and upon a yea-and-nay vote only three Senators voted for open discussion. In less than forty-eight hours thereafter (I believe on the very next day) a Republican caucus was held, and it was determined by the caucus that the treaty should be considered with open doors. Then the humiliating sight was presented of every Republican Senator, with one exception (Mr. HALE, of Maine), coming into the Senate and voting for an open executive session, reversing their own action upon the Riddleberger resolution. No more humiliating sight was ever witnessed in the American Senate; Senators who had declared that the interest of the country in its foreign relations would be sacrificed by repealing or suspending the rule of the body which had existed from the foundation of the Government, requiring the consideration of treaties in secret session, at the mandate of a party caucus for a partisan purpose, deliberately bartering their expressed convictions and surrendering their opinions upon a matter of public duty in order to obtain a supposed party advantage. It is supposed that there is a class of voters in this country who are opposed to any treaty or other friendly relations with Great Britain, and the public discussion of the proposed treaty was decreed by a party caucus in order that appeals might be made to their prejudices which would influence their votes in the coming Presidential election. This side of the Chamber deprecates most sincerely the prostitution of the high function of the Senate as a part of the treaty-making power of the Government to partisan purposes, and regrets the evil consequences which may result to the country in the conduct of its foreign relations from the example which has been set in the consideration of this treaty by the Republican members of this body.

But, Mr. President, we have not opposed an open executive session from any apprehension that the treaty was indefensible, or that its public discussion would injure the Administration or the Democratic party. On the contrary, we believe a full understanding of the treaty will commend it to the favorable judgment of the country as a wise and just settlement of a controversy which has threatened at times the harmony and peace of both countries.

If no supposed partisan interests had entered into the consideration of this treaty it would doubtless have encountered hostile criticism and opposition. Almost every important treaty entered into with Great Britain has been opposed by no inconsiderable number of the American people, and too often without such consideration as was necessary to the formation of correct opinions upon the merits or value of the treaties themselves.

While the United States has at all times had greater reasons to maintain friendly relations with England than any other European country, there has seemed to be on the part of many less desire for amity and friendship with that Government than any other foreign power, and less inclination to adjust amicably any matter in dispute between the two Governments.

The treaty of 1793 is, perhaps, the only treaty of much importance which this country has ever made with England that has not encountered severe criticism and opposition.

The struggle for independence and the sacrifices and hardships which it entailed had prepared the people of that day to accept a treaty which acknowledged their independence and established relations of amity and friendship with the government and people from which they had separated. I can recall no other treaty of any great importance negotiated between this country and England that has not met with opposition from some portion of the American people, and for some reason there has seemed to be less desire to maintain kindly relations with that country than other European powers.

The treaty of 1794, negotiated by Mr. Jay, at the time Chief-Justice of the United States, was denounced in every part of the country as a surrender of American rights and a betrayal of American interests, and after its approval by the Senate petitions and remonstrances were sent to the President imploring him not to exchange the ratification of the treaty. Meetings were held in numerous towns and cities and addresses made by able and patriotic men in opposition to the treaty, and its details discussed in the press of that day in no temperate language. The negotiator, Mr. Jay, was denounced and traduced in unmeasured terms, and President Washington censured for his appointment and accused of assuming power not conferred upon him in negotiating a treaty without having previously submitted the instructions given to Mr. Jay to the Senate for its approval.

The treaty of 1814, which left unsettled some of the very questions for which the war of 1812 was supposed to have been declared, was also denounced for its failure to adjust some of the questions in dispute between the two countries; questions which were considered to some extent, but upon which no conclusion was reached, among others the question of our fishing rights as well as the questions of the right of search and the impressment of seamen.

The treaties of 1818, 1854, and 1871, relating to the fisheries, have been productive of severe animadversion, especially by those engaged in fishing in the neighborhood of the Dominion and by persons representing their interests. Judging from previous efforts at negotiation upon the subject of our fishing rights it is safe to say that no treaty can or will be found on that subject that will not be opposed and denounced by the New England fishermen and those representing their wishes.

The treaty which settled our northwestern border, at one time a very threatening question, gave dissatisfaction to many at the time, and has since frequently been referred to as a surrender of territory that properly belonged to this country. The English people as firmly believed that the settlement then made deprived them of the San Juan Islands and other territorial rights belonging to them. So that it seems to be impossible to adjust any disputed question to the entire satisfaction of everybody concerned. To have insisted upon all that we claimed and to have rejected all overtures of compromise and refused to concede anything to the other party must have eventuated in a war as damaging to us as to Great Britain. The statesmen of that day in both countries had the good sense to prevent by mutual concessions a calamity so dire as well as so unnecessary.

I will refer to one other treaty with England which has been very severely and very unjustly criticised by many persons in this country. I refer to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, negotiated during the administration of President Taylor. That treaty, after full discussion in the Senate, was ratified; but a misunderstanding having arisen in reference to some of its provisions, it has remained in a measure obsolete and inoperative. Owing to the different constructions put upon it by the two countries, the full benefit which it was intended to secure has not been realized; but it has not been without decided advantage to this country, especially in removing the assumed protectorate of England over what was known as the Mosquito Coast, whereby it has been made possible to construct a canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific by the Nicaragua route, a matter deemed of great importance at the present time. I want to add, in justice to the American negotiator of that treaty, that in a memorable discussion on the subject in the Senate he demonstrated the correctness of his construction of its provisions and vindicated its value and importance to this country.

I have referred to these treaties for the purpose of showing the impossibility of negotiating any treaty with the English Government, however wise its provision or however advantageous to this country, which will give entire satisfaction to the American people. There has always been, and probably always will be, hostility on the part of some persons to the friendly adjustment of any question in dispute between the two countries, and who would rather see the threatening visage of war than the bow of peace on the national horizon.

The President and Secretary of State knew full well before entering into the negotiation upon the subject of this treaty the impossibility of any arrangement that would be acceptable to the New England fishing interest, however just or beneficial to them it might be, but they had a duty to perform to the country whose friendly relations with our neighbors on the north and with England were liable to be interrupted by longer continuance of a condition of affairs such as had existed since the termination of the fishery clause of the treaty of 1871.

The contention about American fishing rights had existed for nearly seventy years and had on more than one occasion excited apprehensions of a serious character, which were only allayed by temporary expedients to be renewed upon the termination of the arrangements adopted.

These temporary arrangements were terminated by our own Government upon proper notice, because they were unsatisfactory to our fishermen and deemed prejudicial to their interest. No preceding administration had attempted or been able to secure a permanent settlement of the questions in dispute, and President Cleveland's administration inherited from those preceding it a controversy which ought to have been disposed of by Congress and the executive government many years ago.

In fact, the settlement of the dispute had been rendered more difficult by the delay in its settlement and by the temporary arrangements of 1854 and 1871.

By the reciprocity treaty of 1854 the Canadian fishermen had been permitted to send their fish into our markets free of duty, and very naturally desired a continuation of that privilege and deemed its discontinuance by the termination of the treaty a wrong and injustice to themselves. On the other hand, our fishermen under the operations of that treaty were unrestricted in their privileges and fishery rights in Canadian waters and free from all interference in provincial ports and harbors under Canadian and British statutes relating thereto. The advantages enjoyed both by the Canadian and American fishermen under that treaty became to be regarded by both as natural rights of which they could not be properly dispossessed. The treaty of 1871, securing the right of inshore fishing to our fishermen and an exemption from the enforcement of Canadian regulations in provincial ports and harbors, has likewise impressed them with the belief that this deprivation of the privileges which they enjoyed under that treaty is unjust and cruel. The operation therefore of both the treaties of 1854 and 1871 has been to instil into the minds of both the Canadian and American fishermen ideas of respective rights not secured to them under the provisions of the treaty of 1818, the basis of all rights which either can claim. These views on the one side and the other have rendered the adjustment of the contention more difficult from year to year. This difficulty will continue and increase the longer a settlement is postponed.

I have referred to this matter to remind the Senate of some of the embarrassments which had to be encountered by the American negotiators of this treaty—embarrassments which had been intensified by the failure of preceding administrations to settle as they ought to have done the questions in dispute in reference to the rights of our fishermen under the treaty of 1818.

In order to understand properly the grounds of the contention between the two Governments it is necessary to look behind the treaty of 1818 to the fishing rights we enjoyed prior to that treaty. It is well known that England at the time these States were her colonies claimed and exercised exclusive jurisdiction over the waters adjacent to Canada and the other British provinces to the north. She had driven the French fishermen from the neighborhood, and practically controlled the fisheries in those waters many leagues from her provinces, and even from some of the banks, far out in the open sea. The right of all nations to navigate and fish in the open sea was not as well understood and respected at that time as at the present, and the pretensions of England were for a time acquiesced in by other powers.

As subjects of Great Britain our fishermen enjoyed the same liberty of fishing in all the waters claimed to be under the control of England as other subjects of that country, and continued to fish in those waters and along the shores of Canada and the other northern provinces without restriction or hinderance from any quarter until the Revolution which eventuated in the independence of this country. By the treaty of 1783 our former right of fishing in British waters was acknowledged and continued, and hence until the war of 1812 American fishermen could take and cure fish on the coasts and in the bays and creeks of the British possessions at pleasure, and as freely and unrestricted as the inhabitants of the provinces themselves.

It might be difficult to determine upon what principle this liberal concession was made, but it is most likely that it was because the future value of those rights was not at the time foreseen.

We could not have claimed the privileges conceded as a right belonging to us under international law or national comity, and would not, I apprehend, have conceded such privileges to British subjects on our own shores and in waters lying wholly within our territorial limits. However, under that treaty we possessed and enjoyed the most ample fishing rights for more than a quarter of a century until they were interrupted by the war of 1812. England contended that that war abrogated, as it had suspended, the treaty of 1783, so far as fishing rights were concerned, and refused longer to acknowledge our rights in that regard. The treaty of 1814 left the matter unsettled, which led to the convention of 1818. The first article of the treaty agreed upon in October of that year reads as follows:

ARTICLE I.

Whereas differences have arisen respecting the liberty claimed by the United States, for the inhabitants thereof, to take, dry, and cure fish on certain coasts, bays, harbors, and creeks of His Britannic Majesty's dominions in America, it is agreed between the high contracting parties that the inhabitants of the said United States shall have forever, in common with the subjects of His Britannic Majesty, the liberty to take fish of every kind on that part of the southern coast of Newfoundland which extends from Cape Ray to the Rameau Islands, on the western and northern coast of Newfoundland; from the said Cape Ray to the Quirpon Islands, on the shores of the Magdalen Islands, and also on the coasts, bays, harbors, and creeks, from Mount Joly, on the southern coast of Labrador, to and through the Straits of Belleisle, and thence northwardly indefinitely along the coast, without prejudice, however, to any of the exclusive rights of the Hudson Bay Company; and that the American fishermen shall also have liberty forever to dry and cure fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbors, and creeks of the southern part of the coast of Newfoundland, hereabove described, and of the coast of Labrador; but so soon as the same, or any portion thereof, shall be settled, it shall not be lawful for the said fishermen to dry or cure fish at such portion so settled without previous agreement for such purpose with the inhabitants, proprietors, or possessors of the ground. And the United States hereby renounce forever any liberty heretofore enjoyed or claimed by the inhabitants thereof to take, dry, or cure fish on or within 3 marine miles of any of the coasts, bays, creeks, or harbors of His Britannic Majesty's dominions in America not included within the above-mentioned limits. But they shall be under such restrictions as may be necessary to prevent their taking, drying, or curing fish therein, or in any other manner whatever abusing the privileges hereby reserved to them.

It will be perceived that whatever rights of fishery we had hitherto enjoyed under the treaty of 1783 were renounced forever by the United States in the treaty of 1818, except such as were specifically reserved therein and confirmed to this country by the treaty of 1818. We therefore have now no other basis for any claim of right to fish in British or Canadian waters than the treaty of 1818, and the abrogation of that treaty by this Government would exclude us from all fishing grounds within the territorial jurisdiction of the British provinces absolutely. I have heard it said in this debate that the abrogation of the treaty of 1818 would remit us back to the treaty of 1783, and restore to us the rights we enjoyed under that treaty. I shall express no opinion upon the effect in that regard of the repeal of the treaty of 1818 by the British Government. That would be the deprivation of rights secured to us by the surrender of other rights we possessed or claimed under a former treaty, and might, perhaps, be justly held to restore the rights surrendered. But, sir, we could not claim that the voluntary relinquishment of our present privileges would restore such as we had formerly renounced. In the one case the contract would be broken by England, in the other by the United States, and the party in default might not justly take advantage of its own wrong.

The language of the first article in the treaty of 1818 has been understood by the two governments very differently, and has led to a contention which at times has threatened to disturb the peace of the two countries, and which it has been heretofore impossible to adjust. It would be unfair to assume that the contention on the one side or the other found no support or justification in the language employed in the treaty of 1818, and however firm the conviction on the part of any one that the American construction of the treaty is right, it will not be denied that the British view of the matter has been maintained with no little ability, and a persistence that evinces the sincerity of that Government in the position it has maintained so earnestly upon the subject.

It may be proper to state very briefly the character of the dispute between the two governments in order the better to understand the provisions of the treaty under consideration. This may be unnecessary so far as Senators and others who have examined the correspondence between the two governments on the subject are concerned, but many persons in the country who will read the debates upon this treaty have not had that opportunity, and are, perhaps, uninformed of the nature of the contention which the treaty is designed to settle.

On the part of this Government it has been contended that American fishermen have the right under the treaty of 1818 to take fish, not only in the open sea 3 miles from the coast, but in the bays and other waters within the territorial jurisdiction of the British provinces outside of a 3-mile limit from land. It is further contended on the part of this Government that the English and provincial statutes or commercial regulations relating to fishing vessels, under which seizures and other interference with our fishing vessels have taken place, is in contravention of the true intent and meaning of that treaty.

On the part of the British Government and her dependencies it is contended that we have no right under the treaty of 1818 to fish in any bays or other waters within their territorial jurisdiction, nor nearer than 3 miles to such bays and waters, and that the statutes and commercial regulations of which we complain are authorized by that treaty and necessary for the protection of their own fishing interests, and that the seizures and other interference with our fishing vessels have been for the violations of their statutes enacted for the protection of their own rights.

It is not my purpose to state the grounds or arguments by which this contention has been supported, on the one side or the other. That can be found in the published correspondence between the two governments, and will be found interesting and instructive to such as may examine that correspondence. It is, however, not necessary to a proper consideration of the pending treaty to recount the arguments urged in behalf of the views of the respective governments upon the matter so long in dispute, and which this treaty if ratified would forever settle.

It is not necessary to consume much time in observations upon the merits of the proposed treaty. The advantages which it secures to American fishermen are plainly set forth in the views of the minority of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and have been ably presented in debate by others who have preceded me, and need no further elaboration. Every one at all familiar with the complaints of our fishermen at the restrictions and limitations imposed upon them will, upon an examination of the treaty, find that it removes many of the causes of complaint and secures to them rights and privileges heretofore denied them and to which they were not entitled under the treaty of 1818; privileges which it has been heretofore contended were invaluable and the denial of which it was insisted disregarded that comity which should obtain among civilized nations and could only be refused by a violation of the dictates of humanity. These advantages have been secured by the proposed treaty to our fishermen without the surrender of any valuable privileges which they have heretofore enjoyed, and by this treaty they are placed in a position where they may pursue their calling free from annoyance or apprehension of molestation from any quarter.

It defines clearly and distinctly the enlarged rights and privileges they may enjoy in the ports and harbors of the British provinces so that no misapprehension on that point can hereafter exist. The merit of this treaty is not to be judged by the recognized principles of international law or national comity or the claim of humanity, but by a comparison of the rights and privileges which it secures with those to which we are entitled under the treaty of 1818. If our fishing rights depended upon international law or national comity we should be excluded absolutely from fishing in the bays and other waters lying within the territorial jurisdiction of the provinces, and also from the rights we now have of taking and curing fish and drying nets, etc., on the coasts of Labrador and parts of Newfoundland. We might perhaps be entitled under international law to greater commercial rights for our fishermen in the ports of the provinces than we now have under the treaty of 1818; but no one will contend that we could fish in the bays, creeks, and other waters belonging to England and her dependencies. Whatever rights we now have must be found in the treaty of 1818 and compared with the privileges and rights therein secured; the proposed treaty is much more liberal and advantageous.

The objections to the proposed treaty found in the report of the majority of the committee are based largely upon supposed undefined rights to which we are entitled independent of the provisions of the treaty into which we entered in 1818. It may have been unfortunate that we entered into that treaty, but having made it, we must abide by it or seek release from its restrictions by treaty modification of its provisions. We can not justly claim any right for our fishermen which it does not secure, and if we are not satisfied with its restrictions and inhibitions our remedy is to annul the treaty or obtain a modification of its provisions. It is folly to talk about rights outside of it or independent of it as is done in the report of the committee. Whatever rights we once had under the treaty of 1783 were given up and voluntarily renounced for the rights and privileges conceded to us in the treaty of 1818. We can not now claim enlarged rights under national or international comity or the recognized laws of humanity. We have entered into the bond and must abide by it, however narrow and restrictive its terms, or obtain some abatement of its conditions by treaty stipulations.

If there was any certainty or even a reasonable hope that a more favorable arrangement with England and Canada could be made, it might justify a rejection of the proposed treaty; but no such expectation can be entertained.

The concessions to our fishing vessels in the ports and harbors of the provinces contained in the proposed treaty is a relaxation in their favor of the regulations applying to the fishing vessels of all other nations. We sometimes hear it said that the Canadian and English statutes relating to fishing vessels are harsh and unfriendly regulations, enacted to hinder and perplex our fishermen; and there is no doubt that their enforcement has sometimes been not only harsh, but offensive and cruel; but the statutes themselves apply with equal force to fishing vessels of all other nations as well as to those of the United States. Whatever relaxations of those statutes have been obtained in this treaty for the fishing vessels of New England are exceptions in their favor. Many of the then statutes, both of Canada and the other provinces, as well as those of England, had been in existence for a long time, and although complaints had sometimes been made of the manner of their execution and the injury inflicted upon our fishing vessels under color of those laws, no relaxation of their rigid enforcement had been obtained by any previous administration; and now that modification of their provisions has been secured in the proposed treaty which will prevent further injury to our fishing interests, they are declared to be trivial and of no value by the majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations and other Senators who oppose the treaty, while they magnify the value of the bays and waters marked by delimitation, and in which we relinquish any claim of right to fish hereafter.

If the complaints of our fishermen for the last two years were not groundless, which no one suspects, then the concessions made in this treaty are invaluable, and will prove, if the treaty is ratified, of singular advantage to our fishing interests. Great, however, as may be the value of the proposed treaty to those engaged in fishing, it measures but a very small part of its importance when we consider it in a broader view as a settlement of a long-standing controversy which on several occasions has threatened the interruption of our friendly relations with England and her dependencies, and which, unless arranged, is liable to put in jeopardy the material interests and peace of both countries. We can not disguise the fact that the harmonious relations of the two countries, both anxious to maintain with each other the most cordial and friendly intercourse, is liable to be seriously disturbed by the injudicious action of those of their citizens engaged in the same occupation with mistaken ideas of their respective rights and interests.

He who is willing to continue a condition of affairs which, by the remotest possibility, may endanger the peace of the country, or even suspend commercial intercourse for a time with England or her American possessions, when such a calamity can be honorably prevented without the sacrifice of any valuable interest, is, to say the least, callous to the true interest of his country, not to say indifferent to the highest demands of patriotic duty.

This treaty, while securing to us valuable rights and privileges heretofore denied, and which no previous administration had been able to secure, gives up no undisputed right heretofore claimed or any privilege which can justly be regarded as of the slightest value. The objections to this treaty are captious and too insignificant to be interposed to prevent a settlement of a long-standing controversy which will be continued and aggravated by the rejection of the treaty, and the pretense that it secures no valuable rights to our fishermen is so absurd that it is surprising that Senators will venture to make such assertions.

No one who has heard the complaints of our fishermen in the past, or read the protests of the present Secretary of State in his vigorous correspondence with the British minister against the wrongs inflicted upon them, and then impartially examines the provisions of the treaty which guaranties them exemption from such wrongs in the future, can fail to see the great value of this treaty to that class of our citizens as well as the security which it affords to the future peaceful relations of the two countries. The value of this treaty to us is well understood in England and Canada, and I present a brief summary of the concessions made to this Government in the treaty announced in debate upon it in the Dominion Parliament by Mr. Ellis, a member of that body from New Brunswick, who declared himself in favor of the treaty because the concessions were right and proper to be made.

THE FISHERIES TREATY.

[From the Portland Advertiser.]

In the course of the debate in the Canadian House of Commons on the fisheries treaty, Mr. Ellis, of New Brunswick, enumerated the following list of concessions made by the Canadian Government in accepting the treaty:

First. We have by that very act of making this treaty receded from the position maintained so long in practice, that Canada and Great Britain could impose their own interpretations upon the meaning of the treaty of 1818, thus enlarging the restrictions of that treaty. By doing this we have given the United States a precedent upon which to base new demands for the amelioration of the regulations applied to their fishing vessels should the need arise.

Second. We have almost wholly abandoned the contention that fishing vessels are a class by themselves, and therefore not entitled to any commercial privileges.

Third. We entirely and forever abandon the 3-mile headland theory.

Fourth. We forever admit the right of United States fishermen to navigate the Straits of Canso.

Fifth. We no longer compel American fishing vessels to depart from our shores in twenty-four hours after arrival.

Sixth. We relieve them from the obnoxious operations of customs regulations enforced against them as fishing vessels, and which were specially severe, as the true intent of these laws was to regulate commercial trading only.

Seventh. We free them from harbor, pilotage, and other dues, which are sometimes inhospitably and often capriciously imposed upon them, even in cases where they sought shelter, dealing with them in these matters as commercial vessels, though denying them the rights of commercial vessels.

Eighth. We have practically abandoned the course of ordering them to depart if supposed to be hovering within our waters; and also the plan of putting an officer on board of them as a mature of course.

Ninth. We permit them under certain circumstances to purchase bait, to replenish outfits, to ship men, and to transfer cargoes.

Tenth. We issue to them, free of charge, permits which enable them to purchase supplies in ports of entry, on all occasions, just as trading vessels, except that they may not do it for barter, and this applies both to the homeward voyage and outward voyages. This section does not name bait, but there will be no difficulty whatever of purchasing bait under it.

Eleventh. By the fourteenth article we abandon our previous contention that preparing within Canadian waters to fish is evidence of intention to actually fish within Canadian waters, and we therefore recede from the position taken by the act of 1886.

Twelfth. We have limited and defined and reduced the severe penalties imposed by that act for violation of our exclusive rights of fishing. Forfeiture of the vessel is no longer a penalty except for fishing within Canadian waters, or preparing within these waters to fish therein. In all other cases $3 a ton is the highest fine which can be imposed.

Thirteenth. We have provided a summary process of law for dealing with arrested or captured vessels, instead of the old and slow process of the admiralty court.

Fourteenth. And lest the punishment of an infraction of the new treaty, or that of 1818, should seem to be unjust, and to prevent the danger of giving offense to the United States, the Government of Canada can reverse the judgment of the court.

Continuing, Mr. Ellis explained that he did not object to these concessions. He was glad the Government had learned a wholesome lesson. The petty annoyances practiced upon the fishermen of the United States were impolitic, and might perhaps defeat the treaty in the United States Senate. The spirit of the treaty should have been shown before, and he, for one, was in favor of a repeal of all the restrictions of the treaty of 1818.

By reference to the treaty it will be found that the advantages secured thereby to this country are not overestimated by Mr. Ellis, but that his statement of the concessions made to this Government is warranted by a fair and just examination of the provisions of the treaty. I shall not enter into a review of the various articles of the treaty, but content myself with the general statement that it secures to our fishermen valuable privileges heretofore denied them and exemption from the annoyances and interference of which they have heretofore complained without the deprivation of a single right enjoyed or claimed of any practical value whatever.

I will now notice some of the objections raised to this treaty, and will first refer to one suggested in the report of the majority of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. That report more than intimates that the President had no right to negotiate this treaty without first having obtained the advice and consent of the Senate as to the agents to be employed and the instructions under which they were to act. This is the second time the assertion has been directly or impliedly made by committees of this body within the last three years that the Senate of the United States has a supervisory power over the performance of executive duties by the President. It is an attempt to revive an obsolete idea exploded nearly a hundred years ago, and to assume for the Senate powers not conferred upon it or upon both Houses of Congress combined. We discussed this question, so far as it relates to the removal of executive officers, in the last Congress, and I shall not say anything upon that subject now; but the report of the majority of the committee advances a step further than was then claimed, and impliedly, at least, denies to the President the right to select agents to negotiate a treaty without first obtaining the advice and consent of the Senate as to the persons selected and the instructions under which they shall act.

This idea of senatorial supervision over the negotiation of treaties by the President had some advocates in the early history of the country, but had long since been abandoned, and has not been thought of for nearly a hundred years, until brought forward as one of the objections to this treaty. Mr. Pinckney, of South Carolina, in a speech at Charleston in July, 1795, advanced the same idea as one of the objections to the treaty of 1794. President Washington had nominated Chief-Justice Jay as envoy extraordinary, etc., to England, who negotiated that treaty without the Senate's having been informed of the instructions given him, which Mr. Pinckney thought ought to have been done. He advanced the same views which are suggested in the committee's report in favor of the right of the Senate to superintend the negotiation of treaties. This view was not sustained by the judgment of the country at that time or by the Senate itself, and its fallacy was demonstrated by a logical and lucid argument of Mr. Hamilton, in reply to the speech of Mr. Pinckney (Second volume American Remembrancer, pages 106–8.)

The speech then lays down this doctrine in positive terms, "that the Constitution gives no power to the President to commence a negotiation without previously submitting his intentions and instructions to the Senate, requiring their advice, and receiving their assent;" and the words of the Constitution, "to make treaties, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate," are the text for this strange commentary.

